Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.---NO. 23. CHICAGO, JANUARY 7, 1873. WHOLE NO. 454.

Advent Christian Times.

Contents of This Number.

First Page.

The Mormon Community of Wisconsin, H. V. Reed; Christmas; Who shall Preach?

Second Page.

Lord, Come Away, (poetry); Arminius and his Sentiments, (third article), A. A. Phelps; A Open Letter, Amos Sanford; Guilty or not Guilty? Wm. Branch.

Third Page.

Have I not the True Spirit? Martha Trask; Are We Right? P. Hitchcock; Effects of the 7th Vial, I. C. Wellcome; Immortal vs. Torment, O. D. Gibson; Pilgrim Standfast.

Fourth Page.

Brief Editorials; Editorial Gleanings; A Right Movement; Hades and Heaven, J. H. W.; From our English Correspondent.

Fifth Page.

Exposition of Mat. 24, Albion Ross—fifth article

Sixth Page.

A Question; The man was gone; Letter of Experience; Letters from L. Kerr, Mrs. W. B Taylor, L. R. B., J. D. Rogers, M. F. Taylor, C. C. Marston, N. Wheeler, H. L. Shepherd, N. Runquist, W. S. Corey, M. Tousley, and a brother in Michigan.

Seventh Page.

As a Thief and not as a Thief; Russian influence in Constantinople; The Children Saved; A Morning; The Poor Soldier at Flensburg.

Eighth Page.

Business Department; News; Appointments; Advertisements.

The Mormon Community in Wisconsin.

[From The Chicago Illustrated Journal.]

But few people now living have any recollection of the Mormon Community which located in the Territory of Wisconsin nearly thirty years ago, and fewer still have any idea of the way in which it was effected. A sketch of the originators, and the principal events connected with the movement, can but prove entertaining to those interested in early pioneer history.

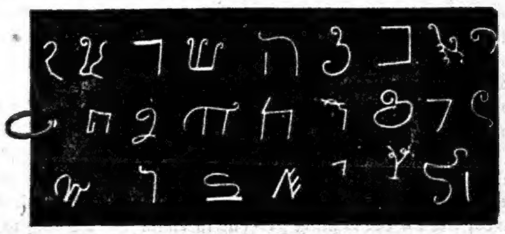
Designing men, in all ages, have taken advantage of those who are more or less superstitious in matters of religion, and it is a well-established fact, that whatever is mysterious, and has the claim of great antiquity, will attract a multitude of devotees, who are willing to sacrifice life itself for its promotion. Ambitious men are fully cognizant of this great weakness in human nature, and proceed to devise systems which will excite the marvelous to such a degree as to give them full sway over their dupes. A striking illustration of this statement is found in the Mormon Community which located in Wisconsin during 1844-6, People from Illinois, Missouri, Ohio, and, indeed, from all parts of the United States, moved into the territory with a view of founding a Zion, or Mecca, for earthly pilgrims. Many families moved from Nauvoo, after the death of Joseph Smith, which occurred June 27, 1844. In the month of July or August of the same year, a man by the name of James J. Strang promulgated his claims to the priesthood, and announced himself the prophet Smith's successor to the divine office. Moses Smith was sent, by Strang, to Nauvoo, Illinois, in the month of September, to proclaim to the Mormons the new prophet.

Mr. Strang moved into the territory of Wisconsin, from New York, in 1843, and opened an office for the practice of law at the house of Benj. C. Pearce, who erected the first frame dwelling on Gardner's Prairie, in 1837. The "Prophet" had but little practice, and hence much spare time in which to plan mischief. In this locality, which is between thirty and forty miles west of Racine, in Walworth County, he made the aquaintance of Miss P. W., a lady advanced in years, and who had lost all hopes of ever finding a congenial affinity, until the advent of our lawyer-prophet. Mr. Strang was a great lover of nature, and during the summer of 1843 he frequently strolled away with his new aquaintance, over the beautiful prairie, gathering wild flowers and picking berries, which grew in great abundance. Mrs. Strang, who was yet in New York, was informed by some "friendly Indian" how matters were moving out West; it was not long before this lady was on the spot, propria persona, to attend to the morals of her erring lord, but with what succes we know not. From this time until the death of Joseph Smith, matters remained in comparative quiet in the neighborhood. On hearing that the Nauvoo prophet was killed, Mr. Strang immediately announced himself as his successor. In order to confirm this high pretension, it was necessary for him to produce some sort of evidence, which should satisfy the skeptical as to his autnority, etc. The new "prophet" claimed that an angel from heaven visited him on Sunday evening, as he was strolling along on the east bank of White River, and that his spirit was taken out of his body and conducted, by the angel, to a ledge of rocks some eighty rods distant, which was covered with earth and trees. The angel informed him that under a certain oak tree, some four feet under ground, and just on the top of the rocks, there were deposited three copper plates, which were placed there by the last surviving prophet of the ten lost tribes of Israel. He was then informed what was written on the plates, and who to select as his apostles, and that they should be witnesses when he should take the plates from the earth. The angel told him where to erect the Holy Temple, and how to proceed with the latter day saints, when they should come together and acknowledge him as the great prophet and leader. His spirit was then taken back to its "house of clay," and the angel departed.

Strang called his apostles to the spot of earth containing the plates; the earth was removed, and, sure enough, there was found a box of blue clay, six inches square and twelve inches long. The box was duly opened, and the plates exposed to the astonished 'twelve" who subsequently swore to everything necessary to confirm the farce. On the announcement of this discovery, the people became much excited, and many substantial farmers and mechanics, became converts to the prophet, and left their occupations, were ordained as preachers, and went forth to proclaim the new gospel, claiming the power to speak with tongues, and perform such other miracles as were necessary to the confirmation of the word.

Mr. Strang gave notice to his chosen, that on a certain evening, at the house of Mr. Gaylord, there would appear cloven tongues of fire on the heads of his apostles. The evening came, so did the people. The room was darkened, and suddenly the heads of his apostles became luminous; but the amount of coughing done, and the strong smell of phosphorus, led the spectators to think that they were not far from Dante's lower world of sulphuric fire.

The copper plates were held in great veneration by those who became members of the new church, and were kept as sacredly as was the Ark of the Covenant in Israel. They were fastened together at one end by a copper wire, and had written on them certain Hebrew letters and cabalistic characters. The following cut represents quite nearly the appearance of the plates as seen by the writer when shown him by Mr. Strang.



The interpretation which Strang claimed was given him by the angel, was as follows: "It shall come to pass in the latter days, that my people shall hear my voice, and the truth shall speak from the earth [referring to his plates dug from the ground], and my people shall hear, and shall come and build the Temple of the Lord. My prophet, unto whom I send my word, shall lead them, and guide them in the ways of peace and salvation. In Voree the name of the Mighty One shall be heard, and the nations shall obey my law, and hear the words of my servant, whom I shall raise up unto them in the latter days."

It will be seen that an attempt was made to have the characters nearly all cut in square lines, so as to represent the Hebrew letters. Strang claimed they were written by one of the prophets of Israel, on this continent, before the Christian era. When he made the plates, therefore, they were cut according to his theory, and so constructed as not to be deciphered by the Gentiles. That Strang made and buried the plates there can be no question. The writer saw the "prophet" and two other men, some three months before the alleged discovery, on the identical ground, one Sunday evening, engaged with tools for digging, at which time, without the shadow of a doubt, the plates were buried. The three men were, James J. Strang, Benj. J. C. Pearce, and Aaron Smith. These men were the sponsors of the imposition, and Smith afterwards became one of Strang's chief apostles and witnesses.

A paper was started, called The Voree Herald, and things moved on successfully, until Orson Pratt and Sidney Rigdon came on from Nauvoo, and held a public discussion with Strang, and by superior talent and experience in Mormon theology, proved him to be not the successor of Smith, but an impostor. Strang was driven away from Voree; his Community, or most of them, left him, and he went to Beaver Island, in Lake Michigan, with a few of his followers, where he was shot in 1856.

Thus ended the Mormon Community in Wisconsin. Some of those who were followers of Strang are now with Brigham Young at Salt Lake; others are believers in Joseph Smith, the present head of the Mormon Church in Illinois; and still another class yet remain at Voree, in Wisconsin, and are honest, industrious farmers, having had all they bargained for in following the impostor Strang, who lived only twelve years after forging his imposition, and at last fell a victim to the jealousy of his own followers. H. V. REED.

Christmas.

For all the purposes of an annual festival in commemoration of the birth of Christ, the 25th of December is probably just as good as any other day of any other month, whether it be the true anniversary of the nativity or not. At any rate, the Romish church has decided that this day of all others is to be thus observed; and ever since the pontificate of Pope Julius I. who occupied St. Peter's chair from A. D. 337 to 352, it has been kept a sacred holiday by celebrating Christ's mass, making and receiving gifts, merry feast-gatherings, etc. After all, to many it seems a little singular, even if learned men differed as to the time, that it should have been placed at a season when it most evidently did not occur. The only method of gaining any knowledge as to the time of year when it occured, is that upon which was founded the expectation of the Jewish nation, namely, the weeks of Daniel, which, as Dr. Lightfoot and others have observed, was the ground of the coming Messiah at that time.

But of course, the "seven weeks and three score and two weeks," or sixty-nine weeks "unto Messiah, the Prince," would not afford them this knowledge without the event or period from which they should commence. This their scriptures furnished. It was "from the going forth of the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem," issued by Cyrus, the Persian king, whom the Lord by his prophet had long before named, and into whose hands he had given "all the kingdoms of the earth," and whose spirit he had stirred to make this proclamation for the return of the Jewish nation from their seventy years' captivity in Babylon and rebuilding their city, "that the word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremiah might be fulfilled," namely, "That after seventy years accomplished at Babylon I will visit you, and perform my goodword towards you in causing you to return to this place." It appears that the captivity commenced on the tenth month, and in the eighth year of Nebuchadnezzar, and ended in the first year of Cyrus, which would be, when adjusted to a correct chronology, in harmony with facts of history and astronomy —from B. C. 558 to 488. If, concerning this period, the word of the Lord was trictly fulfilled, as in other instances, to "even the selfsame day"—and there is no reason to doubt it—the 69 prophetic weeks, or 483 commencing 488, would end on the tenth day of the fifth month, B. C. 5,(now generally acknowledged by the best chronologers as the year of the nativity,) which in that year would fall on August 14th. It is evident that Paul referred to these 69 weeks when speaking of Christ being sent forth "when the fullness of time was come"—or the time completely and perfectly fulfilled—there being no other time given reaching to the birth of Christ.

It must be borne in mind, too, that Luke gives a chronological fact bearing upon this point, that cannot be set aside—of "shepherds abiding in the fields, keeping watch over their flocks by night," showing it to have been between April and September or October, the custom of Jews being to "send out their flocks to the desert about the passover, and return them at the commencement of the first rain." However, as "the church," which is "infallible in judgment," has fixed upon December 25th, it will never be changed, and we must be contented.—S. Hall, in Banner.

Who Should Preach?

We are fast coming to a truer idea of preaching than was once held by ministers and churches. It is no longer regarded as a professional act of an appointed functuary, but as a service to be rendered by all who love Christ, and who would make known his amazing mercy to men. And this view is supported by the plain language of the Scriptures, as the original terms were indited by the Holy Spirit. While recognizing the shades of meaning in the words translated by the one term "preach," it is yet evident that they are so used both in the original and in our common version, as to include all who in any way make known the truth of the gospel in the high vocation of preachers.

If systematic sermons be the only lawful or possible way of preaching Christ; or if an ordained and qualified order of men are the only authorized embassadors of heaven, then the command of the Savior must be restricted to our pupils and to our sermons. But whoever consults his reason, or his sense of propriety, or the word of God will be forced to the conclusion that any honest declaration of divine truth is, in fact, and is, also, according to scriptural terms and usage, genuine and lawful preaching.

Christ has laid the duty upon the entire church to set forth his gospel to men, and the delivery of orderly sermons is only one of the many appointed methods of publishing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God. All the saints, in all their ranks, ministers and people, male and female, old and young, according to their several capacities, and in their various ways, are to hold forth the word of life. In taking this position, we do not mean to ignore the special office of the gospel ministry. There can be no doubt that Christ intended to supply for all churches, and to the end of time, an order of authorized and qualified ministers, whose special work or vocation it should be to proclaim the gospel. But these were not intended to do all the evangelizing church. This was so great that every disciple must engage in it, and it requires that every member make known all that he knows and feels of the truth that it may thus spread, and prove to be the wisdom of God and the power of God to the salvation of the world.—The Baptist Weekly.

JOHN Wesley very piquantly and truly said that a "string of opinions, be they ever so true, and ever so strongly held, is no more Christian faith than a string of beads is Christian holiness."

Lord, Come Away.

Hand and foot are weary,
Brow and eye are weary,
Heart and soul are weary
Lord, come away!

Years are swiftly flying,
Heaven and earth are sighing,
And thy church is crying,
Lord, come away!

Broken lies creation,
Shaken earth's foundation,
Anchorless each nation;—
Lord, come away!

Kingly props all falling,
Boldest bosoms quailing,
Fear forlorn prevailing;—
Lord, come away!

Thrones of ages shaking,
Bonds of empire breaking,
Sullen priesthoods quaking;—
Lord, come away!

Evil darkly reigneth,
Nought of love remaineth,
And thy Bride complaineth:—
Lord, come away!

Might the right is wronging,
Sworded millions thronging,
Earth's misrule prolonging;—
Lord, come away!

Lonely hearts are singing,
Loyal souls are clinging
To the light upspringing;—
Lord, come away!

Calm, 'mid night winds blowing,
Long has faith been sowing,
See thy life-seed growing;—
Lord, come away!

'Tis no time for dreaming,
See the day-spring gleaming,
Though the darkness streaming;—
Lord, come away!

'Tis no time for sorrow,
See the glorious morrow,
Its gladness let us borrow;—
Lord, come away!

Sounds the last long thunder,
Bursts the day of wonder,
Glory, gladness yonder;—
Lord, come away!

—H. Bonar.

Arminius and his Sentiments.

[Third Article.]

The second theory of predestination having for its object, man created but not fallen, found numerous advocates in the days of Arminius. This theory is substantially as follows:

"God, from eternity, considering men in their original condition, determined to raise some to supernatural felicity. To this end he ordained certain necessary and efficient means. He also determined to pass by others, leaving them in their natural state, and refusing to furnish them those efficacious means above mentioned. He furthermore reprobated the individuals so passed by, whom he foresaw continuing in their original condition, but falling from it of their own fault; that is, he prepared punishment for them to the declaration of his own justice."

The discussion of this theory with Dr. Francis Junius, covers about 170 pages. Intermingled with much sound argument, we think we discover many hair-splitting niceties, and sometimes a distinction without a difference. The great out-posts of the argument, however, seem firmly set, and the conclusions eminently just. Arminius begins his attack upon the above theory by denying that man was created in the state of nature which that theory assumes. The theory supposes that the original condition of man was such, that a special act of election was necessary to salvation. He undermines the structure by showing that man was made "in the image of God," and in a state of "righteousness and true holiness;" hence he was already in a state of salvation, without any special decree of election.

The chief reason for rejecting this theory, is, that it compels the terrible admission that God is the author of sin! Thus the same point to which the first theory conducted us, is likewise established by the second. That leads us directly—this, indirectly—to the same result. According to the former, God decreed to illustrate his own glory by mercy and punitive justice: he could not effect this without the introduction of sin: hence it was decreed that man should fall, as a means for executing the preceding decree. This makes God, by the plainest implication, the author of sin. He shoulders the whole responsibility, and has no right to complain of human degeneracy and crime. According to the second theory, men were created in such a state that their natural powers were insufficient to observe the law imposed upon them. To some he communicated that supernatural grace by which their nature would be strengthened to the point of obedience. To the rest all such grace was denied. This was enjoining a law upon all, with grace sufficient for its observance freely imparted to some, and utterly denied to others. With the latter, sin was unavoidable. Why should they be charged with any blame? The Law-giver himself must assume the responsibility of disobedience, where the possibility of obedience, without any fault on the part of the subject, is absolutely precluded.

The third theory of predestination is thus expressed:

"Because God willed from all eternity to elect certain men and reprobate the rest, he viewed the human race not only as created, but also as fallen; and [illegible] that account, obnoxious to cursing and malediction. Out of this lapsed and accursed state God determined to liberate certain individuals and freely to save them by his grace, for a declaration of his mercy; but he resolved to leave the rest under the curse, for a declaration of his justice. In both these cases God acts without the least reference to repentance and faith in those whom he elects, or to impenitence and unbelief in those whom he reprobates."

Arminius considers this theory open to most of the objections that lie against the others. With all the explanations given by its advocates, who sought to free it from the charge of making God the author of sin, it is by no means satisfactory. He therefore most heartily rejects it. The reason of that rejection will be more clearly seen by an explicit statement of his own views, which we here subjoin:

The first absolute decree of God, concerning the salvation of sinful man, is that by which he decreed to appoint his Son, Jesus Christ, for a Mediator, Redeemer, Savior, Priest, and King, who might destroy sin by his own death, procure salvation by his obedience, and dispense it by his efficacy.

The second absolute decree of God, is that by which he resolves to receive into favor those who repent and believe, and to save in and through Christ, and for his sake, all such believers as persevere to the end; but to leave in sin and under wrath, all impenitent persons and unbelievers, and to damn them as aliens from Christ.

The third divine decree is that by which God resolves to administer such means for repentence and faith as are necessary, sufficient and efficacious; and this administration is according to the wisdom of God, by which he knows what is suitable to mercy and severity, and to the justice of God, by which he is prepared to adopt and execute whatever his wisdom may prescribe.

A fourth decree follows, by which God resolves to save and to damn certain particular persons. This decree has its foundation in the foreknowledge of God, by which he knew from all eternity those individuals who would believe and persevere; as also who would not believe and persevere.

The twenty reasons assigned for rejecting the first theory of predestination, are urged in support of the theory of Arminius, as above expressed. He appeals especially to the nature of man, the character of God, and the fundamental principles of the gospel, to substantiate his position.

With such views of God's decrees, it is no wonder that Arminius should denounce the following as "horrible affirmations," alike dishonorable to God and unjust to man.

"God has predestinated whatsoever men he pleased, not only to damnation, but likewises to the causes of damnation." (Beza.)

"Men are predestinated to eternal death by the naked will or choice of God, without any demerit on their part." (Calvin.)

"Some among men have been created unto life eternal, and others unto death eternal."

"Though God destined and created for destruction any creatures (indefinitely considered) without any consideration of sin as the meritorious cause, yet he cannot be accused of injustice, because he possesses an absolute right of dominion over them." (Gomarus.)

"By the light of GLORY we shall understand by what right God can condemn an innocent person, or one who has not merited damnation; as by the light of GRACE we now understand by what right God saves unworthy and sinful man." (Luther.)

"Man is bound to acquiesce in this will of God, nay, to give thanks to God that he has made him an instrument of the divine glory, to be displayed through wrath and power in his eternal destruction."

"God not only foresaw the fall of the first man, but by his own will he ordained it."

"I confess, indeed, that by the will of God all the sons of Adam have fallen into the miserable condition in which they are bound and fastened." (Calvin.)

Such sentiments may deserve a decent burial among the relics of the dark ages—they do not deserve the toleration, much less the sanction, of the Christian church to-day. Too long has this cruel dogma of unconditional election been pressed upon the attention of men, and, by a sort of spiritual terrorism, forced into their religious belief. Sad enough are the results which this doctrine has been working out! Grim-visaged despair spreads its mantle of darkness and desolation over many trembling souls who would venture to the fountain of mercy and be sweetly saved, but for the chilling persuasion that they are hopeless reprobates! Presumption ruins thousands more—thousands whose religion seems to consist in a self-persuasion, or at least a hope, that they are numbered among the elect. With this thought they often settle down, to dream of heaven and live for earth. If they are elected to be saved, they need give themselves no concern—God's will cannot be crossed. Thus they reason—thus they dream—thus they die. It is no wonder that moral death follows in the wake of fatalism. The sentiment is exactly adapted to dampen Christian zeal and foster spiritual sloth. O that God would dissipate the illusion, and wake us all up to a sense of our personal accountability! (To be concluded.)

A. A. PHELPS.

An Open Letter,

To Rev. J. Paulson, Presiding Elder M. E. Church, Fort Scott District, Kansas.

Dear Brother: At the last Methodist Quarterly Meeting, held at Columbus, Kansas, I had the privilege of listening to a discourse by you in which you urged the Christians present to do all they could "to save immortal souls from the death that never dies."

If the meaning you intended to convey by the use of the words I have quoted, was to do what they could to induce the wicked to "turn from all his sins that he hath committed and do that which is lawful and right," (Ezek. 18:21.) then I have no objection; to such an exhortation I can heartily say, "Amen."

But did your words convey that idea to the mindof an intelligent hearer? I think not. It seems to me that your statement was in perfect harmony with that contained in Gen. 3:4—"Ye shall not surely die."

You call sinners "immortal souls." If they are immortal, then they need no salvation, for the very word conveys the idea that they are "exempt from death." (See Webster.) How can I and other Christians, who listened to you upon that occasion, go out and urge sinners to believe in our Savior who "hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel," (2 Tim. 1:10,) telling them that "by patient continuance in well doing," if they "seek for glory, and honor, and immortality," their "reward" shall be "eternal life" (Rom. 2:7), when you tell them from the "sacred desk" (?), that they are inherently immortal?

You cannot induce men to "seek for" that which they already possess. The proposition carries upon its face its own absurdity. God nowhere in his Word commands such an unreasonable thing.

The word immortality is found but five times in the Bible; and no sacred writer uses it except Paul. I have already quoted two passages. Now turn to 1 Cor. 15:53, and we find Paul saying, "unto the church of God which is at Corinth," "this mortal must put on immortality." Paul is not addressing sinners but "them that are sanctified in Christ Jesus." (1 Cor. 1:2.) He says nothing about sinners being immortal or putting on immortality. On the contrary, he tells those who are "called saints" that "this mortal must put on" something—what is it?—"immortality."

Then if the "saints" are commanded to "seek for" and "put on immortality," they certainly are not now in possession of that quality, "and if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?" (1 Pet. 4:18.) Yet you tell us that we are all immortal, saints and sinners alike.

In the next verse Paul informs the "saints" that "when this mortal shall have put on immortality," then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written [in Is. 25:8] death is swallowed up in victory." Turning to the writing or Scripture referred to by Paul, we read, "He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from all faces." John (Rev. 21:3, 4), tells us that he "heard a great voice out of heaven, saying," 'And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain."

When will God do this? Paul says "when this mortal shall have put on immortality," which is yet in the future. But Paulson teaches a different doctrine. He says we are immortal now, and if that be true, then it is impossible for mortals to "put on immortality," and hence the saying "Death is swallowed up in victory," "shall," never "be brought to pass" as Paul said it would. Who is right, Paul or Paulson? "I am for Paul," in this instance.

But there is one more passage where this word immortality is found. Perhaps it will throw some light upon this question. Let us read 1 Tim. 6:16, where Paul, in speaking of the "King of king," "our Lord Jesus Christ," says he is the One "who only hath immortality." If "the man Christ Jesus" is the only man "who hath immortality," certainly all other men must be mortal. The word only is exclusive and not inclusive. Men may imagine themselves "equal with God," but it avails them nothing. The question is asked in Job 4:17, "Shall mortal man be more just than God?" And when God calls man "mortal man," I cannot think ministers of the gospel ought to call sinners "immortal souls."

Again, you want men saved from the "death that never dies." What kind of a death is that? Just no death at all. Death is the opposite of life. If it is proper to say, "the death that never dies," it is equally so to say, "the life that never lives." "Thus saith the Lord, Behold, I set before you the way of life, and the way of death," (Jer. 21:8), "choose ye this day whom ye will serve." (Josh. 24:15.)

The Bible gives at least two grand reasons for serving God: (1) to gain eternal life," and (2) to escape "the second. death," the "everlasting punishment" of the wicked; "for the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life." (Rom. 6:23.) The Bible says nothing about "the death that never dies," but simply death and not the death of the body only, for "the soul that sinneth it shall die." (Ezek. 18:4,20.) But you say there is no death. Therefore the wicked are in no danger, for if your proposition that the everlasting punishment of the wicked is a death that never dies, is true, then the reward of the righteous, which is eternal life, is not life, and there is nothing to be gained by serving God, and nothing to be lost by continuing in sin.

Spiritism teaches that man is immortal; that human beings congratulate themselves that they alone are immortal—I quote from their works—that there is no sin, and that there is no death. Is it true that Methodist preachers are teaching modern Spiritism? It seems that some are, and from the following resolution passed at a convention of Spiritists, it would seem that all who teach as you do are fully recognized as members of that church. I quote:

"Resolved, That Spiritualism, according to the modern acceptation of that term, embraces all those that believe in the immortality of the soul."

I do not believe that doctrine, because I cannot find it in the Bible. Hence the Spiritists do not claim me. If I did believe such a God-dishonoring theory, I would at once renounce Christianity, and go with the Spiritists, as did your brother, the Rev. Dr. Taylor, not long since.

You certainly must be aware of the fact, that the phrases, "immortal soul," "never-dying spirit," "death that never dies," etc., are not found once in the Bible. Then why do preachers use them? In so doing are they serving God, or are they serving the tempter by preaching the same doctrine he did when he said to Eve, "Ye shall not surely die?" I leave you to answer.

The word immortal is found in the Bible but once (1 Tim. 1:17), and there it has no reference to man, but to "the only wise God." I write this in the spirit of kindness and for the truth's sake, hoping that you may not continue long among those "who have changed the truth of God into a lie" (Rom. 1:25), but that you will soon commence "preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ" (Acts 17:31), as did brother Paul.

Yours in "blessed hope,"

AMOS SANFORD.

Guilty or not Guilty?

There are certain charges brought against Adventists by professed Christians, and even leaders and teachers. Are we guilty, or can we plead not guilty? Let us see. First charge: We teach that "man has no soul." Our plea: Man is all soul, for God tells us in his Word that, the man "became a living soul," and our orthodox friends must admit that living souls die or else tell us that men do not die. Paul says that "death passed upon all men;" and Job informs us that "man dieth and wasteth away." Now, according to orthodoxy, there is a mistake somewhere. Paul and Job were not correct in relating that man dies, or else God, very inappropriately, called man a living soul.

Orthodox description of the soul: It is "without figure, form, color, impenetrability, extension, divisibility, gravitation, attraction, or repulsion." (L. Lee, p. 33.) If the orthodox soul lacks all the above qualities and capabilities, pray tell us what qualities it does possess? Would it not be more sensible to tell us what the soul is rather than what it is not? Our description of the soul: "The man entire." Now, which soul is the largest?

One is something, the other absolutely nothing; and, I must say, reminds me very much of what the boy said about the "little end of nothing whittled down to a point."

Second charge: We believe in "going up." Our plea: "The meek shall inherit the earth," "and their inheritance shall be forever." (Ps. 37: 11–18.) The only time we expect to "go up," is at the time when Paul says we shall be "caught up in the air." Will our orthodox friends please take this short trip with us when the time comes (not before), or would they prefer to remain on "the earth," which they tell us is not the home of the saints, for fear they might be termed "go-upists."

We extend to them a cordial invitation, because we know the dear Savior himself will be there. (See 1 Thes. 4:16–18.)

Orthodox description of the home of souls: "It is beyond the bounds of time and space." Then again, as in the case of the soul, they tell us what is not their home, rather than what it is, and where it is not rather than where it is. Question: What is the home of the saints? Answer: "It is heaven." Where is that? "Above the skies and beyond space." How far above and beyond?

Echo answers "Above and beyond."

Adventists believe the saints will come down to earth again from their elevated position after the earth has been purified, and "inherit the land forever." Question: Who goes up the highest, or remains "up" the longest? It is said the greatest insult one colored person can show to another is to call him "nigger," and we are driven to the conclusion that our orthodox friends brand us as "go-up-ists" simply because they make the die with which the branding is done.

Third charge: We teach that there is "no punishment for the wicked." Our plea: "The soul (or man or person) that sinneth it shall die." (Ezk. 18: 4–20.)

Death is regarded as a punishment to those who break the laws of our land, and we believe it will be a punishment when inflicted by God upon those who have broken his laws. Orthodox review: The sinner will always be on the road to death and yet never arrive at his destination. God will always be trying to slay the sinner and yet never accomplish that end. Question: If it does not lead to death how can it be called the "road to death."

Right here I beg leave to examine that familiar hymn, the first line of which is:

"A charge to keep I have."

In the first verse we are told that we have a "never-dying soul to save." That which is "dying" is simply traveling upon the road to death but has not yet arrived at the end of the road. So if we have a never dying soul it follows that we shall never set out or commence traveling toward death. But listen! In the last verse of the same hymn we are told that we shall "forever die."

To die is to cease dying and we never can cease dying if we never commence. To die is to experience death, and how a man can ever reach his journey's end and "forever" remain there, having never started out upon that journey, is more than I can understand. Will our orthodox friends please explain?

Let us be careful that we do not wrest the Scriptures to our own or others' destruction, and when charged with that which is false, let us always be ready by God's own eternal Word as to whether we are "guilty or not guilty." Wm. Branch.

Since the generality of persons act from impulse much more than from principle, men are neither so good nor so bad as we are apt to think them. —Hare.

Have I not the True Spirit?

"Now if any man have not the spirit of Christ he is none of his. Christ so loved us that he gave his life for us." How many of us to-day love our neighbor so we would give our life for his, or deny ourselves even of a little superfluity for the sake of doing good in the world? Or do we even get the prejudice out of our hearts so we will be able to do something for the Master? It is high time, if we expect to receive our reward, to go to work. We do not find people willing to pay us for work we have never done. Just so with our Master. He will not pay us for labor we never performed. We all have a talent to improve, even though it be but one. Oh! let us go to work in good earnest, that when the Master comes we may hear the welcome plaudit, "Well done good and faithful servant, enter into the joys of thy Lord!"

"Come, let us reason together," saith the Lord, "though our sins be as scarlet they shall be white as snow; though they be red like crimson they shall be as wool." Then if Christ is so ready and willing to do for us, ought we not to have the spirit of our Master? "Therefore if thou bring thy gift to the altar and there remembrest that thy brother hath aught against thee, leave there thy gift before the altar and go thy way: first be reconciled to thy brother and then come and offer thy gift." Do we at all times go to a brother or sister and be reconciled to them? I think not. If we hear any slander going about a brother or sister, do we turn a deaf ear to it? I think not all of us do. Jesus teaches us to love our neighbor as ourselves. Ought we not then to go to a brother or sister we hear or think is doing wrong, and talk with them in the spirit of Christ, and lead them in the right way, or endeavor to, while we set a godly example for them? When Christ ate with publicans and sinners the scribes and Pharisees murmured against him, Jesus asked, What man of you having an hundred sheep would not leave the ninety and nine and go and find the lost one? How many of us go out and seek the lost sheep that have strayed from their Father's house? Oh! how much good we might do for the Master if we had on the whole armor of God, and practiced all his precepts. He that converteth a sinner from the error of his ways shall save a soul from death and shall hide a multitude of sins. I do not mean our preaching brethren and sisters particularly. Their hearts and hands are full. I mean the church as a whole.

Let us manifest the spirit of Christ to all; then we will wound the feelings of none. Jesus said: "Love thy neighbor as thyself." A certain lawyer asked Jesus who his neighbor was. Jesus told him, a certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho and fell among thieves, and they left him almost dead. And a Priest came down that way and when he saw him he passed by on the other side. And a Levite came along, too, and he also passed by on the other side. Then a Samaritan came along and took him up and bound up his wounds and took him to the inn, paid his fare and told the host what more he had need of to get it for him and he would pay for it. Who then is our neighbor? Those that do us an injury, or those that manifest the spirit of Christ? How much I can realize the truthfulness of the words—"Just as long as you have plenty of money or are in good circumstances, just so long you have plenty of friends." But let your circumstances become straitened, or let some idler that has nothing else to do, start a false report about you, and your friends flee from you, and will pass by you, as the priest and Levite did by the man who fell among thieves. These things ought not to be. If we expect our prayers to be answered, and to see sinners converted, we must be saved from our own sins first; we must put on the whole armor of God and be purged from all inbred sin, must be wholly sanctified to the Lord. Our hands, our feet, our tongue, our eyes, our ears, our mind, our will must be all sanctified to God. We must deny ourselves of all ungodliness and worldly lust, and refrain our tongue from evil speaking. Let our tongue be employed in telling of the goodness of God. Let us have the spirit of Christ reigning in our hearts. We can't be wholly the Lord's if we have hatred in our hearts, for hatred stirreth up strife, but love covereth a multitude of sins. Though we speak with the tongues of men and angels, and have not love, we are become as a sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal. Charity thinketh no evil, charity rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in truth; charity (or love) covereth a multitude of sins. Though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned and have not charity it profiteth me nothing.

"Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness, considering thyself lest thou also be tempted." We must not be desirous of vain glory, provoking one another, envying one another; but we must do good as we have the opportunity unto all men, especially unto them that are of the household of faith. I rejoice that I have this pure love of God in my heart, that I can forgive my worst enemy and love them with all my heart, and if it is in my power to do a good deed for them, by the grace of God I mean to do it. I can say with Jesus, "Father forgive them, they know not what they do." Oh! let us be faithful. We are looking for our King from glory, and we must have our lamps trimmed and burning if we expect to go in to the marriage supper. It is my great aim in life to be ready for that coming. When we have a dear relative that has been a long time absent, and we have word that at such a time he will be back, we go to the depot and wait and watch for the train to come that will bring our loved one to us. How anxiously we wait. Presently the train arrives and with what joy we receive him. Just so in looking for Jesus to come, who is to bring immortality with him for me. I want to be ready to meet him with joy, to behold him with my eyes, and to take his hand, the hand of the same Jesus whom the clouds received out of sight, who shall so come again in like manner as he went away. When I think of soon beholding my Savior as Martha and Mary did, it fills my heart with joy. It fires me up with zeal to be more faithful.

When I look over the papers and see the call for laborers in the field from the north to the south, from the east to the west, I feel oh, if I could only go and break the bread of life to perishing sinners, it would be the greatest boon of my life. But I will do the little work that God opens the way for me to do, and will love him with all my heart. Multitudes are perishing all around us, and is there not work for even the weakest one? Let us be filled with the Holy Spirit. Then we will have a desire to work, and that without excuses. The work of Jesus while here among men was to save sinners and to do good to all men. Without the spirit of Christ "we are none of his." Martha Trask.

Are We Right?

As a people we are either right or wrong. If we are not right, who is? I mean in preaching what we do and as we do. We believe and teach that the Lord Jesus Christ is soon to make his advent in this world, to end the long career of sin and sinners, establish an empire, bright as the cloudless sun at noonday, minus the ills of mortal life; when all of the good, from righteous Abel down to the last blood-bought soul which shall be sealed prior to the Messiah's advent, shall be gathered into one unbroken company, singing the glorious coronation song, "Thou art worthy." And as I ask the question, are we right in advocating this, as a motive to repentance on the part of the sinner, and to diligence on the part of the saint, I think a myriad of voices could respond, yes. These are truths as firm as the rock of ages; unmovable as the everlasting hills, and are "meat in due season" for the generation now upon the stage of action. And I have learned by observation that nothing effects the minds of men with a lasting impression equal to these truths, when energized by the Holy Spirit's power.

And with it must be preached a holy, godly life, and weak, fallen and sin-stained as we are, we can be saved from sin in this life. And the length of time it will take to do it depends perhaps on who does the work. If we are to save ourselves from sin, it will be sin to-day and repent to-morrow through life. But when we learn to believe that "without me ye can do nothing," and that "this treasure [the Holy Spirit] we have in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God and not of us," the work may be performed in a moment, and this work may last through life; as one retains their faith they "are kept by the power of God through faith."

Then if we are right, no compromise with error in any form, but give truth our whole energies for the sake of its Author. It is one thing to know we have the truth, and quite another to know our sins are forgiven. It is very good to preach the truth, or the right theory, but it is blessed to drink from the fountain of everlasting love, and sprinkle the truths we preach with the waters of that fountain. Then what a power there will be, not in us, but in the word that is preached "in demonstration of the Spirit and of power. Philo Hitchcock.

Effects of the 7th Vial.

Is there not some evidence that the seventh vial has poured its contents into the air? Many of the late events seem to favor the idea. The air pervades all space about our globe; the effects of pouring the contents of this vial into the air would be universal. Voices, thunders, and lightnings, would indicate tumults, revolutions, separation and explosion of political or civil elements, working destruction. Such is certainly the state of the nations all over the world. If the earthquake of Rev. 16: 18 be a symbol, then surely the civil revolutions in Europe during the last few years, within the old Roman earth, especially France, Germany and Italy, resulting in the destruction of the civil power of the most mighty of all earthly rulers—the Popedom—seems to answer fully to the language of the text. May not the terrible diseases which have during the last few years affected man, fishes, fowls and horses, forest and fruit trees, and vegetables, be the results of this vial. And may not the air be so agitated by the contents of this vial as to produce the many and mighty changes in temperature, sudden and terrible storms, simoons, typhoons, tornadoes on sea and land?

"The great city"—Mystery Babylon—was to be "divided into three parts." Surely since the Pope was declared infallible, the Roman church has been dividing into three distinct parts, the Infallibleists, Conservatives and Old Catholics.

If these events are the results of the 7th vial, then we shall soon see "the cities of the nations" fall, "and great Babylon drink of the cup of God's wrath," and our Deliverer, the Lord Jesus Christ will come to take his waiting bride to himself, to rest with him forever, Amen.

I. C. Wellcome.

Immortal vs. Torment.

Immortal—not mortal, exempt from liability to die, imperishable, lasting forever, having unlimited existence. (Webster.)

This is said to be the state, or condition of one part of man, in fact the main part, the man proper. This is called spirit or soul. Now on this supposed condition I wish to offer a few thoughts. Admitting the position correct, that the soul is thus imperishable, the next point I wish to raise is, can it be tormented, or be exercised with pain? I answer with an emphatic No, it cannot be.

My reasons I give thus. There is inexorable law in all God's works, which cannot be broken, which is that there is of necessity a cause for every effect. Without it there can be no effect. This law is inexorable.

Let us now inquire what is the cause of pain, or torment? Let us look close on this point, for if I am right, a weighty conclusion follows, which is that all pain is caused by decay or waste, and where there is none of this cause, it is utterly impossible for pain to exist. It is the only root or germ, from which pain can come. Now suppose we grant all this (and who can deny it?) What then? Why, this follows as a matter of necessity: That as there is neither germ, root or cause of pain in the soul, it cannot be tormented with pain. Read the definition of immortal over again and you will see there is no evading this conclusion. Hence the very term immortal applied to the soul, denounces the horrid idea of its eternal torment. Why then will men cling with such tenacity to such a debasing, and God-dishonoring doctrine? But the objection may be raised that this phase of the matter leaves no grounds for its immateriality. Of this, more anon.

O. D. Gibson.

Pilgrim Standfast.

A staunch old pilgrim he was as ever set out for the celestial city. No persecutions nor allurements of pleasure could turn him aside from the right way. Such a pilgrim was sturdy John Knox, who, when the lords of Queen Mary's court bade him stop his preaching, giving him but one alternative—"silence or the gallows"—would make answer: "My lords, you are mistaken if you think you can intimidate me by threats to do what conscience and God tell me I never shall do. Be it known to you that it is a matter of no importance to me, when I have finished my work, whether my bones shall bleach in the winds of heaven or rot in the bosom of the earth."

The same Standfast blood beat strong in the heart of the martyr Hooper when he went with a firm step to the fatal stake. "I am come hither to end this life," he said, "because I will not gainsay the truth I have formerly taught you." And when a pardon from the Queen was set before him he cried out with a determined voice, "If you love my soul, take it away, take it away!" The price of that pardon, he well knew, must be a denial of the faith. So Bishop Latimer, when summoned before "the bloody Mary," said, "I go willingly to London, to give an account of my faith, as I ever went to any place in my life." As he rode through Smithfield—that spot which had such a baptism of martyr's blood—he said:—"Smithfield has groaned for me a long time."

Perhaps it is quite as hard for Standfast to preserve his integrity amid the temptations and pleasures of the world as in the fires of persecution. Where persecution has slain its thousands, worldliness has slain its tens of thousands.

A poor woman in India, who had embraced Christianity, was offered back the jewels and money which had been taken from her, on condition that she would return to her old religion; but she replied: "O no! I would rather be a poor Christian than a rich heathen."

And still another, Mr. Judson tells us of, one who was very fond of her jewelry, yet desired to follow Christ. When he asked her if she was willing to sacrifice them for his sake, she was for a time disturbed; but at length, taking off the gay necklace, which was her special pride, said with sweet and touching simplicity, "I love Christ more than this."

Can we all, when the world holds out its glittering baits to us, lay them aside with the same steadfast spirit and say with her, "I love Christ more than these?"—Bible Standard.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, January 7, 1873.

AN Iowa subscriber says: "Although I am very much straitened this season in pecuniary matters, yet I shall deny myself, and thus, by the grace of God may be able to do something, if only a little, toward spreading the true light. And I believe God will bless the feeble efforts of all who do thus."

Amen! So we believe and teach. God will bless self-denial. It is like the ripe cluster of grapes: there is a 'blessing in it' in the very act of unselfishness. Would God there were more faith in self-denial. Taste it for yourselves, everyone. Repudiate the anti-Christian sentiment—'Look out for number one!' and instead cultivate the Christ Spirit of looking perpetually after the good of others. What! dare any of us claim to be Christians, and yet never deny ourselves for the sake of our Master or his people?

WE have forgotten to whom is ascribed the illustration which describes humanity as a pendulum—ever swinging to extremes; but the saying is a true one. Just now the tendency is to dwell upon the work of God in salvation, to the exclusion of man's own work. We are told we must not try to 'keep ourselves;' we must 'cast away our deadly doing:' and the idea of any active agency on our part is utterly ignored. Now the extreme of saying we have nothing to do in the way of 'keeping ourselves' is just as bad as any other error. The Scriptures represent that we are under obligations to ourselves do some 'keeping.' We are to 'keep ourselves' in the love of God (Jude 21); keep ourselves unspotted from the world. (Jas. 1: 5); keep ourselves pure (1 Tim. 5: 22); keep the unity of the Spirit. (Eph. 4; 3.)

If anyone would learn of the Lord, they must learn to take broad views, and look on both sides, yes all sides.

—"These shallow drafts intoxicate the brain,
But drinking largely sobers us again."

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

So far as we can learn the last 'time Conference,' at Worcester, did not result in strengthening faith in the '73 argument. Several correspondents have spoken of the meeting as interesting and attended by a revival spirit. Three souls were baptised.——Br. S. K. Gibson is engaged in a protracted effort at Brooklyn, Iowa. Prospect good.——We learn of the decease of two well known Adventists in Northern New York—Dr. E. S. Loomis and Br. John Clark, both of Perry's Mills. We shall expect obituary notices from both. Also, we learned last Saturday of the death of Father Kingsley, an old man and full of years, at DeKalb, Ill. He was, we believe, the oldest man in the ministry among us——We learn that the late visit of Sr. Mansfield to Auburn, Ill., was attended with a revival interest, so that she was detained a week longer than was expected.

A RIGHT MOVEMENT.

We observe that brethren in Iowa are agitating the question of the reunion of the elements which now form the Iowa Christian and the Iowa Advent Christian Conferences. The cause of the division was nominally "the name question;" though really we believe this was a small part of the difficulty, and of itself never would have effected the separation which occurred. It no doubt had its weight among the causes which led to the disruption of the older Conference, and may very likely prove a greater hindrance to reunion than it was a help to separation.

Our own position is well understood. We believe in being known as Adventists as well as Christians; and we do not believe in wasting time in an endeavor to mix oil and water, or to unite elements between which there is in the very nature of things "an irrepressible conflict." But we do believe in the reunion of the two Advent Conferences of Northern Iowa. Their members are in accord personally and in doctrinal views. They cherish the same "blessed hope," with a common faith in its speedy realization. They are all agreed as to the nearness of the Advent, the state of the dead, the doom of the lost and the future of the saved, and those practical questions and principles which relate to this present life. We therefore see no reason why such a convention as is proposed should not be followed with harmonizing results of a most beneficial character. Let everyone interested follow the things that make for peace.

HADES AND HEAVEN.

[Third Article.]

Aside from the main question, there are several collateral points to be considered, which constitute very grave objections to the orthodox theory. What we have called the radical view practically nullifies the doctrine of the resurrection by representing that the soul at death is invested with its appropriate spiritual body, in which it then ascends to heaven. It has long been taught in theological schools that all the dead are now existing as disembodied and immortal souls. But this shadowy notion is fast giving way to the more substantial theory that each soul is at death clothed upon with its own appropriate body. Prof. Bush, who holds that the resurrection or anastasis of each individual takes place at death, is not accounted orthodox. But Mr. Albert Barnes, of Philadelphia, who is an orthodox radical of the most approved stamp, has the boldness in his notes on 2 Cor. 5, to state the doctrine thus:

"The phrase 'to be clothed upon with our house' seems to be harsh and unusual. The sense is plain, however, that Paul desired to be invested with that pure, spiritual, and undecaying body which was to be the eternal abode of his soul in heaven....The word 'clothed' refers to the spiritual body of believers; the eternal habitation in which they shall reside. In that future state the soul will not be naked; i. e., destitute of any body or covering. The present body will be laid aside. It will return to corruption, and the disembodied spirit will ascend to God and to heaven. It will be disencumbered of the body with which it has so long been clothed. But we are not thence to infer that it will be destitute of a body; that it will remain a naked soul. It will be clothed there in its appropriate glorified body: and will have an appropriate habitation there. 'But clothed upon.' To be invested with our spiritual body. We desire to be clothed with that body."

Now this sounds like a very different gospel from that which Paul preached. If every Christian is invested at death with a spiritual body, which is to be "the eternal abode of his soul in heaven," what becomes of the doctrine of the resurrection? If the righteous dead are already in heaven; if they are already in the presence of God where there is fullness of joy, and pleasure for evermore; if they are already clothed with spiritual bodies; if they have already entered upon their reward, and are already equal unto the angels, the resurrection and the judgment-day are, to them, as though they had already been, or never were to be.

There is something extremely awkward, not to say absurd, in the notion that beings who have long since entered on a state of happiness or misery are to come from those abodes to be judged, and then to receive a formal award to the very condition which has long been familiar to them. To be in heaven or hell for ages, and then to stand at the judgment-seat of Christ to be judged; to hear the welcome—"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world," addressed to a class who had already entered upon their inheritance; to hear the dread sentence—"Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire," addressed to a class who had already entered upon their punishment, scarcely looks consistent, but has the appearance rather of a theological fiction which has not one syllable in Scripture to give it countenance. Such representations—come from what source they may—seems but little better than mockeries of the most solemn scenes of future retribution.

Let it be understood, then, that the radical theory as stated by Mr. Barnes is irreconcilably opposed to the New Testament doctrine of the resurrection. Dr. Carmichael has plainly but truthfully observed: "It cannot be too often repeated: If there be an immortal soul there is no resurrection; and if there be any resurrection there is no immortal soul." (Theology and Metaphysics of Scripture, vol. II. p. 315.)

Modern Spiritism is commonly thought to be false in theory and pernicious in practice, yet its chief cornerstone and that of Protestant orthodoxy is the same. The immortality of the soul is a fundamental doctrine in the creed of each. The orthodox as well as the heterodox Spiritism of the nineteenth century denies the necessity of a resurrection of the dead to enable them to communicate with the living. Dr. Fitch, a learned and venerable clergyman of the Episcopal church, in a recent work says:

"Abraham did not say it was because there was an impassable gulf betwixt the spirits of the just and the children of God in this world. There is no such barrier....Blessed spirits departed can revisit the blessed on earth.

'When spirits made perfect meet spirits on earth,
'Tis good to be there.'

The souls of the departed do exist—shall we not say in angel form?—and do sometimes act as ministering spirits, sent forth to 'minister to those who shall be heirs of salvation.'" (The Intermediate State, pp. 11, 12.)

The Scriptures nowhere give the least countenance to this kind of Spiritism, nor do they contain a promise to the righteous that they shall, in the intermediate state, be equal unto the angels. Our Lord said to the Sadducees: "They which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage. Neither can they die any more: for they are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." It is at the resurrection, then, and not at death that the righteous are to be equal unto the angels. Then shall mortality be swallowed up of life; then shall this mortal put on immortality; then shall David awake and be satisfied, and then shall all the saints triumphantly shout, "O death, where is thy sting? O hades, where is thy victory?"

The dead are not praising God in haven, nor cursing him in hell. They are asleep. They take no note of passing time. The voice of sorrow and the greetings of joy are alike unheeded by the inhabitants of the land of silence. The busy hum of industry and the ceaseless activities of life move on above them, but to them all is silent and unseen. The earthquake's shock and the thunder's roar send no sound within their narrow cell.

"The storm that wrecks the wintery sky,
No more disturbs their deep repose
Than summer evening's latest sigh
That shuts the rose."

The flight of time can no longer be perceived by the senses, for the ear is deaf and the eye is closed. The silent sleepers are at rest. Earth's commotions, the march of mighty armies and the rise and fall of empires are unheeded by those who sleep in the dust. With them, joy and sorrow, love and hatred, no longer contend for the mastery. In the land of forgetfulness the miser no longer remembers his avarice, nor the conquerer his ambition. There are no inequalities of station there. The emperor and the serf, the king and the peasant, the rich and the poor, the haughty and the humble, share alike the cold hospitality of the grave.

"There the wicked cease from troubling;
And there the weary be at rest.
There the prisoners rest together;
They hear not the voice of the oppressor.
The small and the great are there;
And the servant is free from his master"

J. H. W.

From Our English Correspondent.

The "Right Rev. Dr. Clifford," as the Universe titles him, has issued a "pastoral," which was read a Sunday or two ago in the different churches of the diocese of Clifton. Its subject was—"The signs of the times," and for one I felt very curious to know what a Catholic could say on the subject. The whole pith was—"The struggle going on between the church and the world." His sermon is so wonderfully substantiative of Scripture that I make extracts of some of the most striking sentences.

To many the position which the Catholic church at the present time holds in the world is a special source of difficulty and scandal, differing as it does in some respects from any held by her in former times. Persecution has oftentimes been the lot of the church, and hence there would be nothing extraordinary in the fact of her suffering persecution in our days. But this is not all. The great effort of the world at present is not so much to persecute as to ignore the church of God, and to exclude as far as possible its influence from society. Holy Job says of the wicked, 'That when they are advanced and strengthened with riches....they have said to God, depart from us, we desire not the knowledge of thy ways.' (Job. 21: 14.) Similar is the language which the rulers of this world now use towards the church of God. European civilization owes its origin and progress in great measure to the action of the church. The whole fabric of Christendom was her work. And now we see this work broken down throughout Europe, and a new order of things rising in its place. They who have risen to power and riches now seek to cast religion aside and to govern without it. They say to the church of God, 'depart from us, we desire not the knowledge of thy ways.' Depart from us in our schools, for we wish our youth to be brought up and trained in secular learning, but not in the knowledge of the ways of piety and faith. Depart from us in our family life, for we no longer wish that the tie which unites man and wife in one should be indissoluble, as you teach it to be; we prefer to hold that it may be dissolved by human agency. Depart from us in the government of the state, for we ignore the duty of giving to Cæsar the things that are of Cæsar, and to God the things that are of God, and we recognize instead one only source of authority, the secular power. And as we no longer wish the church to be the bond which unites in one, all Christian kings and princes; so do we wish that temporal power of the Popes to depart from us, which hitherto formed the keystone of Christendom Such are the aims of those who govern and direct society in these days, aims which they not only openly avow, but which they are able in a great measure to carry into execution. The result of this is that, in so far as appearances go, the position of the church in the eyes of the world is far less exalted now than in days when kings were her nursing fathers and queens her nursing mothers, she is surrounded with less of that worldly glory and prestige which tells so much of men who look more to appearance than to substance, and who while they wish to be religious are anxious withal to be so without forfeiting thereby the favor of the world, and of such as are thought much of by the world. The number of such men is great even among Catholics, men who, as our Lord says, 'have no root but are only for a time,' and therefore are easily scandalized....Many there are who, shocked at the sight of the evils which now afflict the church, seek comfort in the thought that this state of things cannot last long, and they promise themselves the early advent of times of great prosperity for the church. May God grant that their wishes be fulfilled. All things are possible to God, and he may at any time command the light to shine out of darkness. But if we look at the signs of the times there seems on the contrary every reason to fear that the present state of things will not be of short duration. ....If your faith be as firm and your hope as constant as that of these generous servants of God, you will not be alarmed at seeing now the church deserted and oppressed by the great ones of this world. You will deplore the wickedness and blindness of those who, wilfully shutting their eyes to the evils which threaten the very foundation of society if religion is banished from it, rejoice in seeing the head of the church despoiled, the Catholic church humbled, her ancient rights trampled upon and her ministers banished. But when, pointing to the state of Europe, they ask triumphantly, Whence is the aid to come that is to arrest this flood which threatens to devastate the church? and how can Catholics expect to see their church ever again hold that high position once held in Europe?—you will also reply: We have no occasion to answer you concerning this matter.

But in all this sorrow the Romish church seems to imagine God is with her, saying in the pride of her heart, "I sit a queen; and am no widow."

Another "pastoral" from the "Right Rev. Dr. Brown," as he is called, was read in the different churches of the diocease of Shrewsbury. The subject was—"Instead of obeying they rebel." And the report says: "After alluding to the Holy Father, his virtues and sufferings, his lordship says: 'Let us redouble our prayers before the throne of mercy, that these evil days may be shortened, and the efforts of the devil may be crushed by the over-ruling power of the Most High.' He then speaks of the Old Catholics thus:

"It we wish to see an example, which demonstrates most painfully the result of trifling with faith and of forsaking the principles on which the faith of every Catholic rests we have but to look at Germany at this moment. We there behold a man of ability and of learning, who was once a faithful son of the church and who devoted his talents to her service; and this man followed by a certain number of partizans, of whose position and acquirements we should wish to speak with every respect. But what is the attitude they have now assumed towards the church of which they were once members? They have flung off all allegiance to her, they have set themselves up, upon their own authority, as her judges, and they have presumed not only to question but to condemn her teaching. They have separated themselves from the great body of the faithful, they have rebelled against their bishops and the Holy See, and they have thus publicly proclaimed themselves schismatics and heretics. It is true that they seek to cover their disgrace with a name which they would fain have us to consider as honor and a security, they call themselves "Old Catholics." But with that knowledge of history, of which they especially boast, they must know that this name but expresses what had been the pretence of every heretic from the commencement of the church. There is not one among that unhappy number who has not made it his particular aim to show that the false doctrine which he inculcated was the real teaching of the ancient church, that he was the only true believer and that the rest were gone astray from the truth and from antiquity. When, therefore, Dollinger and the other heads of this party come forward with the like pretensions, and place themselves in this manner in company with all the heresiarchs who have dishonored the name of Chaistian from the beginning, we cannot but lament the sad fall of those whom we should have wished to have respected; and, at the same time, we have read in their unhappy rebellion the history of minds, and even of talented and enlightened minds, which have allowed the bane of self-conceit and self-sufficiency to work in them this fatal blindness, and to substitute within them the miserable, paltry glimmer of their own fancies for the clear and steady light which the Divine Spirit has set up in the church's teaching. With them, as with other heretics, their ruin has come from one simple cause, it is all the growth of one small but deadly seed—the spirit of secret pride. Instead of hearing, they fain would teach; instead of obeying, they rebel; instead of accepting the doctrines of faith from the lips of those who are commisioned to impart them, they reject the decisions of their spiritual guides, and claim a right to direct and to determine for themselves. Thus have they uprooted the very principles of faith; and to pretend to hold any portion of the Catholic faith, when they have thus destroyed the very foundation on which it rests, is as futile as it is dishonorable; it is employing a system of deceit, the hollowness of which they themselves must fully understand, and yet one which they are striving to impose upon their less learned and unsuspecting followers.

* * * *

We spoke in the beginning of the trials and sufferings which still press upon the heart of our Holy Father, the Pope; and amongst these there is, perhaps, no one which causes him a deeper sorrow than to behold those who were once his children tearing themselves away from his embrace and striving to stir up an unholy opposition, in the very midst of his family. Much as may be the grief and the anxiety which the temporal calamities that suround him may occasion him, still reater a thousand fold is his grief hen he beholds the desolation of the hurch and the ruin of souls which hese faithless men are causing every ay by their schism and their heresy.

A tone of sorrow tinges this letter. oss of spiritual ascendency over a reat number of Catholics, in addition o his "temporal calamities," and "the esolation of the church" is stripping he church of its former grandeur and educing him to the last extremity.

The state of the European nations ay be briefly summarised.

France has just got through her cri-is. But she is only slightly healed. Monarchists, Republicans, Radicals, nd Imperialists have all consented o be quiet. M. Thiers is speaking oneyed words and soapy compliments, ut the peace is only that of appearance. There is danger and difficulty et.

Spain. Of this country we read in he newspapers: "The state of affairs Spain is certainly grave. It is not vast rising, but it is one that is mak-g its appearance everywhere. The oops of Armadeus find it impossible o be everywhere, and thus, in spite of any defeats, the Spaniards are not fter all defeated. Murcia is rising; Andalusia is republican; Santander is r the present lost to Savoy; commu-ication with the capital is cut off at any points. The popular cry in Mad-id itself is, "Death to Zorilla! Down with the stranger king and the con-cription." The Province of Bada-oz may be said to be in arms; Gener-l Concha had to beat a precipitate re-eat from Malaga."

Germany is still troubled with re-gious discussions, while Prussia has nly just passed a crisis.

Other countries are swept by storm r inundated by floods. And the hole world seems in a state of confus-n and distraction.

Of England—our own beloved ountry—a question is raised by a weekly contemporary. But I have elected it that your subscribers may ead it for themselves. Here it is:—

"To what are we coming? Desert-rs from the army on the increase, re-ruiting on the decrease, insubordina-ion among the preservers of the peace, ur workingmen waking up to a full onsciousness of their power, Odger-sm and mob-law in the ascendent, he government set at nought. As many as 8360 men have deserted from he militia, the marines and the line during the last twelve months, and scarcely ten per cent. of them have een captured. Let there be no mis-ake, dear reader. We are not speak-ng of sadly disordered France or sad-y afflicted Italy. We are speaking of ur country. We are speaking of dear old England. Almost torn asun-der by numberless religious sects and eckless political demagogues, with public law and order treated as nonen-ities, we may well begin to ask our-elves to what we are coming."

An Exposition of Matthew Ch. 24.

[Fifth Article.]

Verse 29th. Here we have introduced signs which are to mark the last generation of the world's history, as follows:

"Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light; and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken." "Those days" must refer to the days of Papal reign, and the tribulation of those days has more special reference to the period of inquisitional tribulation, which commenced in the thirteenth century. Though the whole twelve hundred and sixty years are characterized by suffering to the church, yet there is a part of those days during which the Inquisition was in operation. This division of the twelve hundred and sixty years into two parts, and one more severe than the other, is recognized in Rev. 6th, under the opening of the fourth and fifth seals.

When the fourth seal was opened the prophet beheld a "pale horse, and his name that sat thereon was Death, and Hades followed with him. And power was given him over the fourth part of the earth, to kill with the sword, and with hunger, and with death, and with the beasts of the earth." The opening of the fourth seal I think brings us to the Justinian age, when, more than at any period before, the Roman empire was disgraced by a religious war against all whom the Bishop of Rome and Council of Chalcedon might pronounce heretics. "And when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls of them which were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held." In my humble opinion, the fifth seal brings us to the point in the reign of anti-Christ when the Inquisition was established; a time of greater trial than ever was realized before, when from those gory wrecks arose the cry—"How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth." It is said that when the Inquisition at Madrid was destroyed, this very language was found graven upon the walls of its cells.

When the sixth seal was opened, the same events are enumerated which are spoken of in Mat. ch. 24, as immediately to follow the great tribulation. Matthew says when the abomination of desolation stands in the holy place, there shall be great tribulation. John says when the fourth and fifth seals were opened, there went forth a rider on a pale horse, who had power to kill with the sword, and with hunger, and with death, and with the beasts of the earth; and from under the altar the blood of martyred ones cried for vengeance. Matthew says, immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven. John says—"When he had opened the sixth seal, there was a great earthquake, and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood, and the stars of heaven fell to the earth," etc.

All must see a perfect coincidence between the two portions of Scripture cited above. The Inquisition continued its rage, more or less, till about 1773, at which time the order of the Jesuits, who had done more to perpetuate its life and existence than any other class, was suppressed. In 1779 occurred the last Autodefee (public act of faith in burning heretics).

In the year following (1780), on the nineteenth day of May, occurred the memorable dark day, when the sun was darkened and the moon did not give her light. The darkness extended over New England as far south as Virginia, and north through the Canadas. A few eye-witnesses of the scene yet survive. Mr Gage says:

> "The sun rose clear and shone for several hours; at length the sky became overcast with clouds, and by 10 a. m. the darkness was such as to cause the farmers to leave their work in the field and retire to their dwellings; fowls went to their roosts, and before noon lights became necessary to the transaction of business within doors. The darkness continued through the day, and the night, till nearly day, was as unusually dark as the day had been."

The Rev. Mr. Tenney, of Exeter, N. H., said:

> "The darkness of the following evening was probably as gross as has ever been observed since the Almighty first gave birth to light. I could not help observing at the time, that if every luminous body in the universe had been shrouded in impenetrable darkness, or struck out of existence, the darkness could not have been more complete. A sheet of white paper held within a few inches of the eye was equally invisible with the blackest velvet."

Dr. Webster says:

> "That was a remarkable day. Candles were lighted in many houses; the birds were silent and disappeared, and the fowls went to roost."

The following graphic picture of the Dark Day of 1780, is copied from the pen of Elder D. T. Taylor:

"On the 19th day of May, 1780, the inhabitants of New England and the adjacent parts were the trembling witnesses of an event in nature which has never been fully described nor analyzed. The month of May was dry and cold. Previous to the 19th a vapor filled the air for several days. There was a smell of sulphur in the air, and on the day of the great darkness Etna discharged lava from a new month, and the eruption was accompanied with violent earthquakes in southern Italy. The morning of the 19th was overcast with some clouds, and rain fell over the country with lightning and thunder. The sun on rising shone not with its accustomed clearness. Its face seemed veiled, and the aspect somewhat lurid. Scarcely any motion was in the air; what there was of wind came from the south west; vanes were not stirred and sails and flags hung idle. By nine o'clock in the forenoon, without previous warning, the darkness stole gradually on, with a luminous appearance near the horizon, as if the obscuring cloud had dropped down from overhead. There was a yellowness of the atmosphere that made clear silver to assume a grass-green hue. Then a dense undefinable vapor settled rapidly and without ærial movements over all the land and ocean from Pennsylvania to the Gulf of St. Lawrence, the darkness it caused increasing by degrees until the sun-light was effectually shut out.

"Ordinary cloud it was not. The rapidity with which so large an extent of country was enveloped precludes the possibility of supposing this to have been a natural cloud moving laterally. Besides this, the day was too calm to imagine such a thing. Down came the darkness, thicker and thicker. By ten o'clock the air was loaded with heavy gloom. The heavens were tinged with yellowish or faint red; the lurid look increased; few, if any, ordinary clouds were visible. The sun in disappearing took on a brassy hue. The lurid, brassy color spread everywhere, above and below. The grass assumed the color of the sky, and all out doors wore a sickly, wearied and melancholy aspect, a dusky appearance as if seen through a smoked glass. Nature donned a frightful look. No one had seen the like before, and the hearts of thousands grew faint with fear. So low was the overhanging vapor that it appeared to rest upon the very earth, and the hills in some places could not be seen at the distance of one-half a mile. Especially was this true at Pepperell and Groton, in Massachusetts. By eleven o'clock it was as night itself, and from this time until three in the afternoon the darkness was truly extraordinary and frightful. Some reported that the sun's disc could be seen dimly through murky gloom at the period of the deepest darkness, but this seemed hardly probable. At sea the air was thick and had an unusual smell, and a most unnatural appearance. Generally there was a sooty smell prevalent, and in a few places some drops of rain fell. The extent of the darkness was greater than is related of any other similar phenomenon on record, not excepting the celebrated dark days over Egypt and Judea. It reached south to the northern half of Pennsylvania, and from thence along the coast northeast to the wilds of Maine, eastward to the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and out at sea 120 miles southeast of Boston, and undoubtedly much farther; west to the valleys of Lake Champlain and the Hudson River, and north unto the undefined regions of Canada. Portland, Boston, Hartford, New York, West Point and Albany were affected by it. But the degrees of darkness differed in different places, and the deepest night settled over New England. A tract of land and sea 800 miles in length and 400 miles in breadth, including an area of 320,000 square miles was known to be covered by the cloud, and so far as can be ascertained, a population of 700,000 souls sat for a portion of the day and night in a gloom more or less profound and inexplicable.

"Just how dark the day was is attested by indisputable evidence. The hour and minutes could not be discovered on the face of the clock or watch by persons of unimpaired eyesight. Candles became an absolute necessity both out doors and in, as it was impossible to transact ordinary business without them. Fires on the hearthstones shone as brightly as on a moonless November evening, and all dinner tables were set with lighted candles upon them as if it were the evening repast. The keenest eyes in doors could not see to read common print. So far beyond any ordinary fog was the effect that stages on the road either put up at the nearest hotel during the midday hours, or carried candles or lanterns to enable the perplexed driver to well see his way. This in many instances was performed as it invariably is at night.

"At Haverhill, N. H., at twelve at noon, a man could not be seen in the road at a distance of only twelve rods, while an hour or two later the captain of a ship forty leagues at sea, southwest of Boston, was compelled to light a large candle to enable him to perceive his instruments and thereby to steer his vessel. 'It was so dark at noon,' writes Dr. Adams, 'that we could not tell one person from another in a room with three large windows in it.' Connecticut went totally under the cloud. The journal of her House of Representatives puts on record the fact that 'none could see to read or write in the house, or even at a window, or distinguish persons at a small distance, or perceive any distinction of dress, &c. in the circle of attendance. Therefore at eleven o'clock adjourned the House till two o'clock afternoon.'

"Men were awe struck; all busy sounds of labor ceased; and a calamity of some kind, none knew what, was confidently imagined to be approaching. It seemed, says one, like a great roof closing down upon the earth and shutting out the glorious sunlight forever. The natural world was singularly affected. All the brute and feathered creatures seemed puzzled and agitated. The birds ceased to fly, and hid themselves in the branches of the trees. As the darkness increased they sung their evening songs as they do at twilight, and then became silent. Pigeons on the wing took to the shelter of the forest as they do at night. The whippoorwill, as if it were truly night, cheerfully sang his song through the gloomy hours. Woodcocks, which are night birds, whistled as they only do in the night time. Bats came out of their hiding places and flew about. Fowls marched solemnly too their roosts cackling for a while over the mystery of so short a day, became still. Cocks crowed as is their custom at night intervals and the early breaking of day. Frogs peeped their evening concert, and dogs whined or howled and ran away as on the approach of an earthquake. The herds of cattle on New England's thousand hillsides sought the shelter of the shed or barnyard, looing as they came to the gate, and sheep huddled around in a circle with their heads inward—the invariable token of apprehended danger. On the human family the effect was still more curious and terrifying. The mechanic left his tools in the shop, the farmer his plow in the furrow, and each moved in silent and marveling mood towards the barn or dwelling. On the home threshhold they were met by pale and anxious women, who tremblingly inquired, 'What is coming?' The alarmed traveler, seeking the sympathy of his fellow-men as one impressed with a sense of impending peril, put up at the nearest house and mingled his anxious questionings and forebodings with those of the family. Strong men met and spoke with surprise on their countenances, and little children peered timidly into the deepening gloom, and then sought the sheltering parental arms. Schools broke up in affright, and the wandering pupils scampered homewards with many expressions of childish fear. The inevitable candle shone out at the windows of all dwellings, every countenance gathered blackness, all hearts were filled with fear of an approaching unparalleled storm, or the occurrence of a terrestrial convulsion, but it was not the blackness of a storm cloud, such as sometimes with frightful agitation breaks over a single section; it was the silent spreading of the pall-cloth over the earth by strong, invisible hands.

"Many anecdotes of terror are related. Men well remembered the earthquake of a quarter of a century before, but this darkening of the earth at noonday—what could it portend? In Boston from the hour of 11 till 3 o'clock, business was generally suspended and shops were closed. Those who had the courage to continue them open, illuminated them artificially.

"At Groton, a court was in session in a meeting house, full of large windows, as was the old style of houses of worship, but at half past eleven all faces began to wear a sombre hue, when magistrate and people followed suit with all New England, and called for lighted candles—gas and kerosene being then unknown in the land.

"The predominating feeling on that day was awe and fear. At many dinner tables no food was eaten, the family were pale and often silent. Amazement hushed all boisterous sounds. If any spoke, it was with a low, subdued tone. Pious fathers took down the family Bible, read it reverently and then knelt and prayed. The bells were rung in large towns, and people in masses forsook their toils and crowded in the churches.

"Thousands sought the minister for an explanation of the darkness, who, in response, took Mat. 24:29, 30, or Rev, 6:12, or Is. 13:10, or Ezk. 32:7, or Joel 2:31, or some other sacred prediction of the darkening of the sun, and improved upon them in sermons upon the last day. The neighbors flocked around holy men, who calmly pointed them to the Lamb of God as their only refuge at all times. Some with lanterns went from house to house with warnings on their lips. The darkness was compared to that which overspread Judea at the crucifixion of our Savior, and it was asserted to be not a whit less divinely caused. Sober men, unaccustomed to such a freak of nature, deemed the day of doom at the door.

"The darkness of the day having succeeded for an hour or two before evening by a partially clear sky, and the shining of the sun, still obscured by the black and vapory mist, this interval was followed by a return of the obscuration with greater density, that rendered the first half of the night hideously dark beyond all former experience of the probably million people who saw it. From soon after sunset till midnight no ray of light from moon or star penetrated the vault above. It was pronounced 'the blackness of darkness.' Horses in numerous instances, when wanted for service, could not be compelled to quit the stable. Others on the highway, unable to see for the darkness, seemed to be seized with fear, and moved their feet cautiously and with bewildering hesitation, as if apprehensive of plunging into an abyss. Teamsters on foot, who supposed themselves acquainted with every foot of the road, lost their way in familiar localities. Some, totally bewildered, shouted for aid but a few rods from their own door. Lost persons in some instances felt their way home, being guided by the fence. Dr. Adams says almost everybody who was out that night got lost. Sharp eyes could not distinguish between the heavens and the earth, the light of the horizon was totally invisible; and quite large substances placed before the eyes could not be discovered either in their color or outline. At nine o'clock the moon rose in her full, but had not the least effect to dispel the death like shadow. At between nine and ten a sea captain, more than a hundred miles from the New England coast, ordered his men to take in some sails, but they could not find their way without light or candles from one mast to another. Like a chain this blackness bound the whole coast line for more than 200 leagues. It was compared to a solid wall, impenetrable and forbiding, and had an oppressive, choking, overpowering effect on all who tried to brave it.

"What was the cause of this darkness? Here the wisdom of New England was baffled. Newspaper men who are generally regarded as competent to explain all passing events, gave up in despair and said: 'It is to be desired that curious and philosophical gentlemen would favor the public with a solution of the phenomenon.' They said 'there was nothing terrible in it,' but nevertheless everybody was terrified. It was pronounced a lusus naturæ, past the vulgar comprehension, and which it was requested that the Royal Society of England should be consulted to frame a solution. But this learned body never explained it. Dr. Tenney, in 1785, wrote the Historical Society that the ability of the land had endeavored to present a cause, but, said he, 'you will agree with me that no satisfactory solution has yet appeared.'

"Many instances and traditions of the dark day are on record, and amid the general terror instances of individual coolness and heroism were not lacking. Abraham Davenport, of Stamford, Conn., was a member of the legisture then in session at Hartford. Amid the deepening gloom that wrapped about the city, darkened the rooms of the State House and set the law-givers trembling, and many of them to exclaim: 'It is the Lord's Great day,' and move to adjourn, Davenport refused to be frightened from his post, but when all eyes turned to him, boldly said: 'I am against the adjournment. Either the day of judgment is at hand or it is not. If it is not, there is no cause for adjournment. If it is, I wish to be found in the line of duty. I wish candles to be brought.' Men will lose nothing in the true line of present duty. In the words of the poet Whittier, in allusion to the scene we here describe: 'Simple duty hath no place for fear.' The line of duty is the true path for all to walk in come what may."

To the view that this was the fulfillment of the prophecy, it may be objected that there have been other dark days of a similar nature realized at different times, and why should the dark day of 1780 be selected from the others and presented as a sign? I answer, because the events of May 19, 1780, filled the picture of the prophecy, and no other dark day ever did. Although there may have been many other dark days of an extraordinary character before the one referred to in 1780, they did not fill the picture, because the prophecy takes into account night as well as day.

"The sun shall be darkened and the moon shall not give her light." May 19, 1780, the moon was within twenty-four hours of being full, and according to the foregoing testimonies, the darkness of the night following the dark day was as extraordinary as the darkness of the day had been. Hence I repeat, these events fill the prophetic picture, and no other darkening of the sun ever did before, for the prophecy anticipated the darkening of the sun and the moon at the same time.—(To be continued.)

Albion Ross.

The Christian Life.

"Begone unbelief, my Savior is near,
And for my relief will shortly appear.
By prayer let me wrestle, and he will perform;
With Christ in the vessel I smile at the storm.
Tho' dark be my way, since he is my guide,
'Tis mine to obey and he will provide.
Tho' cisterns be broken, and creatures all fail,
The word he has spoken will surely prevail,
His love in time past forbids me to think He'll leave me at last in trouble to sink."

A Question.

Just ask yourself this question, "On what am I resting for safety in the prospect of that day, when the Lord shall shake things to their very foundation?" If there be a mixture of anything with the work of the Lord Jesus—if there be a looking to any other atonement to make your peace with God but the precious blood of Jesus, you are standing upon a hollow foundation which will not bear you.

But if, on the other hand, you can, as before the Lord, answer that question satisfactorily; if you can say, "The Lord knows there is not anything which affords peace to my wounded conscience but the cleansing blood of Jesus;" then ask yourself another question, "Is my testimony clear and distinct before the world? Am I evidenced amongst men as a servant of the Lord? Does the world understand me?" For, you may depend upon it, the world is very sharp in its discernment. I do believe that the world has a much more accurate discrimination as to who are the Lord's people, and who are not, than we who profess to know a great deal of the things of the Lord. The world marks the inconsistencies of God's people; the world, which wallows in sin, can see a blot upon the character of a professor. The world is keen-sighted in these matters. We ask, what testimony do you bear before the world?

We live in a day when there is a great deal of profession. We live in a day when men love to put their religion on Sunday, and to put it off on Monday. We live in a day when men can speak of the things of the Lord in one breath, and of the the things which are antagonist to the Lord in the next breath. These are trying times, brethren; it behoves those who would honestly manifest to the world around them that they are the servants of God, to live very near to the Lord.

There is nothing which will give real support and comfort but the knowledge of our acceptance in Christ, and the looking for the supply of our spiritual health and strength from him.—Krause's Sermons.

"The Man was Gone."

There is great and frequently very awful danger consequent on delaying to act upon good intentions. A man was converted once by hearing a sermon on the text, 1 Kings 20: 40: "As thy servant was busy here and there, the man was gone." The verse in that passage so fastened itself upon his mind, as if it spoke of the sudden death of a man in the midst of busy occupations.

Thousands have been taken from the world in such a manner. They have risen and gone early on their business, they have formed their plans, and got midway in them, they have journeyed several miles on their road, they have dug and sown half their field, they have got warm in their work, and they intend, and intend, and intend, when their work is done, to seek the Lord. But the summons comes; they are missed, and looked for, and their corpse is found; and all that man can say, in hope of their salvation, is, "Well, they intended to turn to God." But, alas! the man is gone!

Many there are who intend to reform and repent, lead new lives and care for their souls, but they never get beyond the intention; and some day or night they "are gone," and their good intentions go down with them. Perhaps it is witnessed them that they knew their Lord's will, but did it not. (Lk. 12. 45.) Lord, lead us "to-day, while it is called to-day," to hear Thy say-ings, and to do them. (Matt. 7. 14.) "The night cometh when no man can work." (John 9. 4.)

A WISE man will desire no more than he can get justly, use soberly, distribute cheerfully, and leave contentedly.

EXAMPLE is the softest and least invidious way of commanding.

THE best christians have need to be warned against the worst sins.

THE way of salvation is the king's highway, and a highway is always free.

No affliction would trouble a child of God, if he knew God's reason for sending it.

Correspondence.

Letter of Experience.

It will soon be three years since I first heard the good news, the blessed news of the second coming of Christ to establish his kingdom in the earth. Br. A. A. Phelps, of Rochester, N. Y., came to our place, and being assisted by R. W. Wilson, begun a series of meetings in a school house of our city. I went to hear his first sermon. It was from Gen. 2: 17; 3: 4. "The Lord said in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." But in turn, "the serpent said unto the woman thou shalt not surely die." And Br. Phelps stated that man was mortal, and not immortal as we have been led to believe from childhood. I was astonished to hear such a doctrine, and at such a time and place, especially by one who seemed to be so prayerful and Christ-like; for him to say that we had no immortal soul, to me (at least) was very strange doctrine. But it was the true literal exposition of God's holy word. I at once saw the true light, and was convinced; and believed from that hour that man was only mortal and that God alone had immortality. I at once saw God's justice, which before this time I never dared even to consider. Yes, bless the Lord for he is just—and his mercy endureth forever. He can create, and why not destroy. Eternal life is promised through God's dear Son. He that is worthy of eternal life and the world to come—upon such the second death hath no power. I saw at once that to those worthy ones God could give life eternal; and that the wicked, or those not having made any good attainments, were not worthy of a place in the kingdom of his Son, whose dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom, that which shall not be destroyed. If unworthy to live in such a kingdom with Jesus king, what then is to be the portion of the ungodly? Eternal life in misery? God has never said so! No, but to the first gave he life eternal, and to the second, not worthy of life, the portion is eternal death.

Oh how blessed and powerful were those first impressions upon my mind. My Bible became, as it were, a new book to me, and if ever a soul was happy and made to rejoice and give glory and praise to God, 'twas mine. I've never been ashamed of the good news, for its the true light. 'Tis the gospel—the glad tidings of salvation, published to a fallen humanity by the atoning blood of Jesus. This gospel is my only hope. D. L. PALSGROVE.

From Luther Kerr, Highland Creek, Ontario:

I can say that I never before have taken such interest in reading the Bible as now. I have heard many doctrines preached and attended churches of various denominations, for the purpose of knowing the truth, and could never come to such decided conclusions as since I heard the Advent doctrine. It all seemed to me more like "a form of godliness" than the faith—hearing nothing of the great and precious promises, which God has given to them that have escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust, and of the coming and location of Christ's kingdom upon earth, which the Bible teaches so plainly; but to the contrary—hear of men going to heaven or to hell of torment when they die, and a sky-kingdom—things taught everywhere but in the Bible.

I never saw the absurdity of the immortal soul doctrine until I saw it in a work which fell in my hands. I wish that everybody could see a copy of that tract, and learn (as the Bible teaches) that unless Christ comes none will ever receive life everlasting; as the promise of that was the result of his mission to those who believe in him; and we read that when he comes again, he will fulfill his promise, his reward being with him to give every man according as his work shall be, it follows that the reward is not obtained until then, despite all the contrary ideas of men getting reward at death and independent of Christ's advent and the resurrection which Paul talked so much about.

Having got tired of sectarianism—what they call "Our Religion"—(and it well deserves its title, seeing it belongs to men), I resorted to Bibleism, where I now stand; and I wish every truth seeking person would do the same, and not pay so much regard to creeds and sects, but come right to the fountain of light—the Bible. And I am perfectly satisfied after my investigations that that is the Advent creed.

From Mrs. W. B. Taylor, Waterloo, Iowa.

Br. Himes, it is cheering to the lovers of truth to see any advance in the direction of gospel light in these perilous times, and whenever we can chronicle any important changes among those who are in error, it is truly encouraging. Truth struck to the ground will rise again, and is in its very nature indestructible. It will finally be victorious, and the day is fast approaching when all the errors of men will be exposed to the light of God's truth. A short time ago I att[illegible] services at the M. E. church and listened to an able discourse from Rev. D. Shaffer, of Cedar Falls, who maintained that God must of necessity have a local habitation and was a tangible being, although spiritual; and that heaven had location. Christ he affirmed went to heaven bodily, and Enoch and Elijah also went away with tangible bodies, and although it might be opposed to our prejudices, we can no longer suppose that the saints would go away as myths. Paul in the fifteenth of first Corinthians teaches that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; he meant by this that we would not have our fleshy natures in the kingdom, and quoted Job who declares that "in my flesh shall I see God, and my eyes shall behold him and not another." I heartily endorsed those sentiments and thought it was a great admission to make, and that it was a decided step in the right direction. His subsequent remarks that the earth was too small for the inheritance of the saints did not please me so well, but only convinced me that although truth is mixed with error it is still very precious. My prayer is that he may come out on the whole truth. I am somewhat isolated here, and do not have the privilege of hearing much preaching on these great subjects, but still maintain my integrity, and in my intercourse with those who differ with us endeavor to show them the truth, and believe some are effected favorably by it.

From L. R. B., Minn.

The Spirit is continually striving with the hearts of men, prompting them to do right, telling them that they ought to give themselves to God. The Spirit says, Come! Sinners feel that they are too wicked to approach the throne of grace; but Paul says, "the Spirit helpeth our infirmities," and again, "the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us, with groanings that cannot be uttered." "The Spirit and the Bride say Come!" The marriage of the Lamb is about to take place,and he has invited everybody to the wedding. "He that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." "Come unto me ye that labor and are heavy laden!" And the Bride [the church of God] asks men everywhere to come to Jesus, and thus be ready to go into the wedding as soon as the Bridegroom shall appear. And not content with this, she has sent printed invitations in the shape of books, tracts, papers, &c., all over the world. Still more, she has sent special messengers everywhere, inviting everybody to Christ and the marriage supper. And this is done by the authority of the Bridegroom and sanctioned by the Father. And more than all this, every one that heareth is commissioned to say come. Who are invited to come? "Him that is athirst," and "whosoever will." Thus the invitation is extended to everybody; it could not be any broader.

He has not told us the day nor the hour when the wedding will take place, but has given us signs by which we may know when the time is near. In the type, "they that were ready went in: and the door was shut." Oh! awful thought! that some will be shut out forever! We are commanded, "Be ye also ready!" not be getting ready! We know not how soon the door may be shut. Let us lose no time in the work of warning sinners and keeping ourselves pure.

From J. D. Rogers, Colorado.

We have a population here of about nine hundred; a Methodist society and house of worship, between fifty and sixty members; a Presbyterian society of about twenty members, with a very neat house of worship; a Baptist society of twenty-three members, who are now building a house; a few Episcopalians, and they talk of building a house next summer; and so far as my knowledge extends there are four of the Advent faith, besides one who heard preaching in Minnesota and imbibed enough of the truth to make him dislike the more popular theology of the church of which he was a member. This place has grown up within a year past. A great many of the people have come here for their health; a great majority of them are restored or greatly benefitted. Frequently they come here only to die. "All that a man hath will he give for his life," notwithstanding death is reputed to be "the gate to endless joy." Thank God for the better light, the blessed truth, the glorious gospel of the Son of God. I realize more fully as life advances that it is the truth that makes me free. "Thy word," says the Psalmist, "is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path." And how gloriously the lamp does shine, and the light radiate. And faith sees it reach that more glorious light of the coming of the Master, and then the reunion of the lost and the saved ones in the glorious land where none shall say I am sick, and where all tears shall be wiped away. I pray that God will direct some one who can handle the "sword of the Spirit" to come here and warn the people of the coming judgment.

From M. F. Wright.

Take heed! To what? To ourselves and to the doctrine. Take heed, lest ye fall. Take heed lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief. Yes, we must take heed, and always be watching and praying lest the tempter deceive us; for it was said the time would come when men would not endure sound doctrine but after their own lusts should heap to themselves teachers having itching ears, and should turn away their ears from the truth and be turned unto fables. This we see very often. Men do err, not knowing the Scriptures nor the power of God. Never was there a time that called for more self-denial than does the present time. Everything that is contrary to the spirit of the gospel should be abandoned. Nothing can be more appropriate now than the words spoken by the apostle: "Be ye also patient unto the establishing of your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." Christ said that in the last days perilous times should come; and when I read of the multiplying troubles and trials of earth, it makes me think that the time is at hand. We read of fire, and floods, and earthquakes, and famines, and all that was to come in the last days, and men's hearts do fail them. What next? It will be the sound of God coming with power and great glory. Now as we are looking for these things we must have a closer walk with God than ever before; and as we come to family prayers, let us pray for God to give us strength each day. If we ask for strength it will be given us. And we need to ask for we are a tried people. We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed but not in despair, for our light afflictions, felt for a moment, work for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. Let us take heed the coming year to live near to our heavenly Father, lest when finally weighed in the balance we be found waiting.

From C. C. Marston.

We had a large attendance and a fine interest during the meeting of eight days with the church at Clinton, Iowa. Quite a number became newly interested in the truth, and the church was greatly revived.

The special meeting at Rochelle, Ill., the first week of this month, was attended with happy results. The Lord was with us from the beginning, and eight souls were added to our number, such as we trust shall be saved when Jesus comes. The cause never looked so hopeful in this place as at present. The church has passed through some fiery trials, but they have only served to purify and make her white.

Coming to Galesburg, the 16th, we were kindly cared for at the pleasant home of Br. Robbins until the brethren from Ionia arrived to carry us to the latter place. The meeting commenced and has continued till the present under very discouraging circumstances. Such unsettled and very disagreeable winter weather I have seldom experienced. Snowing one day, blowing the next, and the third, 13° below zero. But blessed be God, although the elements seemed against us, yet the Lord is with us. A deep and solemn feeling rests upon the people. Thus far three promising young persons have come out on the Lord's side, while others are deeply moved. Pray for the cause of God at Ionia.

From N. Wheeler, Sugar Hill, N. H.

I fully sympathize with all God's faithful laborers in the vineyard. From the commencement of your work in the West, my prayers have followed you, and in your afflictions you have not been forgotten. That God has counted us faithful in putting us into the ministry, I have no doubt; but why he has put such treasures in earthen vessels, can only be explained by words of inspiration, "that the excellency may be of God, and not of us." The work of sounding out this last great truth of the coming Judge to a judgment bound generation, I seem to realize its importance more and more. God does bless in this part of his vineyard. Several have recently put on Christ by baptism. Our prayer meetings are well attended, and we are hoping soon to see the King in his beauty.

From H. L. Shepherd, Hancock Co., Ill.

I am still striving for that faith that was delivered to the saints, and still trying to give a reason for the same hope that Paul held, believing that we are in the perils of the last times; for evil men and seducers wax worse and worse, and the church is getting in a lukewarm state. Brethren, it behoves us to be up and doing while the day lasts. Well, when I think what God has done for me, it fills my cup full of joy. To think that poor mortal me will be heir with Jesus! I have an interest in the resurrection, too, for I have three little ones sleeping in Jesus under the covenant of contesting life. God hasten the day.

From N. Runquist, Henry Co., Ill.

I have been forcibly reminded of late of the necessity of depending upon the Lord Jesus for present protection as well as for blessings beyond the resurrection. We have had another fire at our place, next building to me. I escaped, owing to the direction of the wind, with but little damage; but have not forgot to thank the Lord for the lesson so forcibly impressed upon one of the vanity and uncertainty of all things earthly. This place has suffered severely, but few seem to lay the lesson to heart. It is build, sow, reap, business and pleasure, with but few thoughts of God. Heaven help us to learn the lesson of these troublous times.

From W. S. Corey, Missouri.

The papers and tracts you have sent are doing a great deal of good in this place. I have found several believers, among them a preacher of the gospel. When I first heard him speak I saw plainly enough that he had received the truth, though his audience might not understand enough to know it. One day I asked concerning his sentiments, and found he was an Adventist. I then showed him the paper, gave him some tracts. He is now preaching ever Sunday, and some have been baptised, rejoicing in the light. The truth is spreading as fast as could be expected.

From M. Tousley.

I bless God that I have been begotten to a lively hope. I am glad I am counted worthy to suffer persecution for his dear Son's sake. We believe and suffer. We obey and suffer, and still we have no reason to be discouraged. "If ye will live godly in Christ Jesus, ye shall suffer persecution." May God help us to go on our way rejoicing, for we know that at the end of the race lies the crown. He that endures to the end shall be saved. To the servants of the cause we would say: Dear brothers in Christ, be of good cheer. The Lord will never forsake those that put their trust in him. May he guide you in all truth, protect you from evil, and bless his cause in your hands, is my prayer. I am a member of the Advent Christian church in Gilead, Mich. Br. Preston preaches to us every two weeks. We are doing what we can. Pray for us that we walk worthy of our high calling before God.

A brother in Eastern Michigan writes:

I send the money for my paper. I would like to do something for the cause which I dearly love, but I have eight in my family, including some invalids, and nothing but my own hands to do with. But I can and do pray for the cause, and as God prospers me with health and means, all shall be consecrated to the truth. I bless God's eternal name that the truth was brought into these parts. I once strongly opposed it; as I had been told it lead to infidelity. Out of curiosity I went to hear; that led to investigation, which led to conviction, and a desire to so live that I may have the approbation of my Father in heaven, and receive a welcome from Jesus when he comes.

We are called to mourn the loss of our dear Br. Mackie, whose warning voice we have so often heard. He sleeps in Jesus, but will awake to a life of immortality and blessedness when Jesus comes.

AN ill-natured, fussy man is like a tallow candle. He always sputters when he is put out.

As a Thief and not as a Thief.

"The day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night." (2 Pet. 3:10.)

"But ye, brethren, are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief." (1 Thes. 5:4.)

A text of Scripture may contain the truth and yet not the whole truth that God has been pleased to reveal on a given point, and hence the importance in our investigation of a subject of bringing together all the Scriptures which have a bearing on the matter under consideration. One light in a room will measurably dispel the darkness, but several additional lights will do it to a far greater extent. The application is easy. It is undoubtedly true, as stated by Peter, that "the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night," and had we no other testimony on the point we might conclude that it would thus come to all the inhabitants of earth; but Paul brings in another light; he says precisely what Peter does—"The day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night." (1 Thes. 5:2,) but he proceeds to qualify the expression by showing that it will thus come upon the ungodly but not upon true Christians: "For when they [the men of the world, who know not God] shall say Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape. But ye brethren, [believers in Thessalonica and Christians generally,] are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief." vv. 3, 4.

The "day of the Lord" is obviously the period of judgment and reward introduced by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ in glorious majesty. Paul speaks of it as the time when the work of God in his people will be consummated: "Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ." "That ye may be sincere and without offense till the day of Christ." (Philip 1: 6–10.) Calvin's remark is not inappropriate here: "Although they who are freed from the mortal body no longer war with the lusts of the flesh, and are, as they say, beyond the range of the enemy; yet there will be nothing out of place in speaking of them as still in progress, because they have not yet attained to the point at which they aspired: they are not yet in possession of the felicity and glory for which they hoped; in a word, the day has not yet dawned which is to reveal the treasures hidden in hope. And on this account, whenever hope is spoken of, the eyes must be fixed on the blessed resurrection as their point of reference." Again, the apostle speaks of it as the time when he will rejoice in seeing the fruit of his labor gathered into the presence of the divine Master: "Holding forth the word of life, that I may rejoice in the day of Christ that I have not run in vain, neither labored in vain" (Phil. 2: 16); "We are your rejoicing, even as ye also will be ours in the day of the Lord Jesus" (2 Cor. 1: 14;) "For what is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoicing? are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming?" (1 Thes. 2: 19.) If the period—whatever its length may be—called "the day of the Lord," is introduced by the coming of the Lord, then we can see the force of these words: "So that ye come behind in no gift, waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ; who shall also confirm you unto the end, that ye may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ." (1 Cor. 1: 7–8.) "But we beseech you, brethren, touching [concerning—Whiting] the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and our gathering together unto him [so minutely described in 1 Thes. 4: 13–18], that ye be not soon shaken from your mind, nor yet be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by letter, as by us [pretending to be from us], to the effect that the day of the Lord is come. Let no man deceive you in any way; for [that day shall not come], unless there have come the apostasy first, and the man of sin shall have been revealed, the son of perdition." (2 Thes. 2: 1–3, Alford's Trans.) The day of the Lord and the coming of Christ being thus intimately connected, we can see how what is true of "the day" is equally true of the advent of him whose revelation brings the day: "Behold, I come as a thief," is his announcement. (Rev. 16: 15.)

The flood did not come as a thief upon No[illegible] his family: the secret of the L[illegible] with them (Ps.24:14), they be[illegible] the warning given, and prepare[illegible] the event. But it came as a thief [illegible] the rest of the world —they he[illegible] not the warning voice, they re[illegible] in their iniquity, and were [illegible] peace and safety" when "the flo[illegible] and took them all away." [illegible] shall it be in the day when [illegible] man is revealed." He will [illegible] upon his own people al[illegible] ectedly and disastrously, a[illegible] omes: for they "are not in da[illegible] in relation to the event; they have the "sure word of prophecy" announc[illegible] his approach and will be expecting him; and to them he comes as a deliverer instead of an enemy. But to the wicked—to the unready, whether in the church or out of it—he will come as a thief, though his descent to earth be as visible as was the approach of the deluge by "all the fountains of the great deep" being "broken up and the windows of heaven" being opened, and terrible indeed will be their consternation and overthrow, but bright and blessed the award of those who are found standing with their loins girded, their lamps burning and like men waiting for their Lord.

The above thoughts have been suggested by the desire of a correspondent to know how Christ can "come as a thief" if his coming is to be a personal, visible revelation, with the accompaniments of splendor, angelic beings, and the convulsions of nature. To us the matter is plain: it is illustrated fully by the flood—in its aspect to the few in the ark and to the multitudes that perish. Blessed is he that watcheth.—Advent Herald.

Russian Influence in Constantinople.

While Russia is reaching out its acquisitive fingers in the direction of Khiva, it becomes a matter of some importance that there should be a perfect understanding between the Czar and the Sultan. Constantinople is too important a point to be neglected in case of any collision between England and Russia. The Turkish question is at this hour a matter of more consequence to Great Britain than it was a score of years ago, when it seemed weighty enough to involve five nations in war. There is every prospect now that any conflict would be a single-handed one for the possession of Asia. There is at present only one object which could drag France into war, and that is an opportunity of revenge upon Prussia. It is as yet difficult to see how this would be possible in a collision arising from the Eastern question. But in any case the action of Turkey, in view of a conflict of English and Russian interests, is a matter of vital importance. It is now evident that the control of the Sultan has slipped entirely from English hands. In the time of Sir Stratford Canning, afterward Lord Stratford de Redcliffe, the ascendancy obtained by the English Embassy over the feeble and vacillating mind of the Padisha was the vexation and despair of the diplomacy of the Continent. Most people who give a cursory reading to the pages in which Kinglake has described this despotic control exercised by "the great Eltchi," regard his statements as tinged with exaggeration. But their literal truthfulness is confirmed by numerous other authorities. During all the negotiations which ended at last in the Crimean war, the Sublime Porte took scarcely one important step without the advice and consent of the Brittish Embassador. The Czar Nicholas repeatedly recalled his Envoys in a rage, for failing to get the advantage of the hated "Sir Canning," but this availed nothing. The Sultan remained as faithful to England as a hound to his master.

Among other strange revenges which the whirlegig of time has brought round, none is stranger than this, that Russia has completely supplanted Great Brittain at Stamboul. Gen. Ignatieff now gives the law at the Sublime Porte, with so exact an imitation of the manner of Lord Stratford de Redcliffe that he is usually called the "Russian Canning." It was Ignatieff who insisted that Farragut should pass the Dardanelles in his flagship; who suggested to the Sultan that Mr. Frederick Grant should be received with the honors due to a Crown Prince; all this, apparently with no other intention than to annoy Great Brittain. Russia has gained an important success by the abrogation of the restriction imposed upon her by the Treaty of Paris, in which, to the consternation of the Western nations, it was clearly seen that Turkey declined their protection and preferred that of her ancient enemy. In recent days the Russian influence has also made itself plainly felt. Halil Sherif Pasha has been dismissed from his post as Minister of foreign Affairs, it is said, at the direct request of Gen. Ignatieff. The removal is regarded as a decided victory over Sir Henry Elliot, the English Embassador. Raschid, the successor of Halil Sherif, is regarded as little more than a Minister of transition, and Mahmoud Pasha is generally indicated to succeed him, which will bring in a policy frankly hostile to England and friendly to Russia.

According to the English account, the secret of Ignatieff's influence with the Sultan is in his ardent and obsequious advocacy of the plan which has so long fascinated Abdul Aziz, to change the order of succession to the throne from the collateral to the direct line, thereby disinheriting his nephew Mourad for the benefit of his own son. This violation of the constitution could not be effected without serious trouble, and perhaps civil war. Mourad is more popular than the reigning Sultan, and carries with him the powerful party of "Young Turkey." The Sultan can count, however, upon his Cabinet, and probably upon the army to support his scheme. He has put at the head of the Church a Sheik-ul-Islam upon whom he can rely. And in this conjuncture, he is sure of the cooperation of the most independent and strongest of his vassals, the Khedive of Egypt, because this prince is preparing precisely the same change in the succession in his own family. The events of the immediate future in Constantinople are therefore likely to be full of interest and importance, not only in themselves, but in their relations to European politics. For the present, however, it seems clear that Russia, after her terrible defeat at Sebastopol, is again master of the situation. She has wasted no time in idle regrets, but has made use of every possible advantage. Even when she seemed most inactive, to use the famous word of Nesselrode, "She was not pouting, she was reflecting."—N. Y. Tribune.

The Children Saved.

Wm. H. Spencer, once an advocate of the "no life out of Christ" theory, in an apology for a change of view, says:

No doctrine is more clearly taught in the word of God, or more universally believed, than that children who have fallen victims to the cruel grasp of death before reaching the years of accountability, will "come again from the land of the enemy;" and no belief furnishes more comfort to the bereaved parent. The little flowers spring up in the family shrine, loved, aye, idolized for a little season; and though in their infant innocency and beauty they wither and fade from sight, they are not lost. Nay, they will live again. It would be difficult to employ language more potent to prove this than the words of Jesus: "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye cannot enter the kingdom of heaven." (Mat. 18: 3.) Again, Jesus shows conclusively that children will have part in the coming kingdom: "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven." (Mat. 19: 14.) Hence, in view of these facts of Scripture, and many more not necessary to consider in this connection, it must be accepted as a truth that in God's own time little children who have fallen in death will live again.

But acceptation of this fact involves us in an irreconcilable doctrinal conflict. The doctrine that "the righteous only will live again," logically consigns all children, dying in infancy, to eternal death; hence, accepting the fact of infant resurrection, and that God is a being of justice in dealing with Adam's children, the doctrine is held and advocated by so called "Non-resurrectionist" must, in some degree, be erroneous. I fully feel the weight of this allegation; and far be it from me to make it, were it not so well founded as to force this conclusion upon me.

An exposition of the doctrine in question, it is said: "To be quickened from the dead is a peculiarity which belongs first to Jesus, as the 'first fruits,' then to those, and those only, who have the same spirit dwelling in them that Christ had: which certainly EXCLUDES ALL OTHERS from living again, or from being quickened from the dead." This assumption that only those "who have the same spirit dwelling in them that Christ had" will have a revival from death, does "certainly exclude all others from living again, and hence it "certainly excludes" from living again.

That infants are thus consigned to eternal death by the doctrine in question, another extract will give ample confirmation. We read: "The resurrection of the dead to life belongs to Christ and his body, the church—all true believers, under whatever dispensation they may have lived; and from this revival into life all others, it seems to us, are absolutely excluded." If "all others" but "true believers" are "absolutely excluded" from a "revival into life," then a future life to infants is positively denied. But I cannot accept this conclusion as true, because, in view of the testimony of the Scripture and the revealed character of God, I cannot believe that the consequences of Christ's death and resurrection will in no way prove a blessing to little children, dying in infancy.

A Warning.

Let Americans read and ponder what Dr. Dollinger said in a recent conversation with an American citizen of high standing; "Do you in the United States comprehend what that doctrine (Papal infallibility) involves? It imposes upon those who accept it the solemn obligation to violate civil law, to set themselves up in opposition to the ordinances of your govenment, whenever the Pope shall pronounce his infallible judgment upon moral or relgious grounds. In a word, it is the assumption of power on the part of the Pope to proclaim a higher law, which, according to the dogma, his children must obey, though such obedience involves treason to the State, and the overthrow of your government."

According, then, to the Catholic doctrine as formerly declared, and as universally understood throughout the Catholic world, there is, and can be, but ONE SOVEREIGN in the world, and that, the Pope of Rome. Every true Romanist must acknowledge this. Whenever the authority of Rome and the authority of his own government, whether it be that of England, France, the United Satates, or of any other, come into conflict, Rome must be obeyed. A true Romanist cannot therefore be a good and loyal citizen. The Pope is his king. If any Catholic is a citizen, it is only by gross inconsistency, and by imperiling (according to Catholic doctrine) his salvation. The civil as well as spiritual supremacy of the Pope is what Catholic priests are so anxious to instil into the minds of Catholic children; hence their hostility to our public schools.—Chris. Era.

Our Young Folks.

The Poor Soldier at Flensburg.

Some years ago, at a time of peace, a detachment of soldiers was quartered at Flensburg, in Schleswig. Some of them had married, of whom a majority had large families and were very poor. Poverty is hard to bear when a man sees his little ones in rags shivering from cold, and crying for bread.

One of these soldiers, on a keen Autumn night, was sent with a dispatch, as an orderly, several miles across the country. As he returned, he passed, about midnight, a bleaching-mill, and perceived a quantity of linen placed upon a hedge to bleach, but which the owner had forgotten to take in at nightfall.

He rode very slowly. The air was very still; no sound was heard save the woodland stream shimmering in the moonlight, and the measured tread of the horse's feet.

He was tempted. He said to himself: "Could it really be any harm to take out of this great quantity of linen a single piece to sell for my poor children? The owner would scarcely feel the loss of it, and it would be a great help to me in my poverty; the injustice could not be very great."

He stopped his horse, and dismounted. But when he came to the hedge, a voice within him seemed to say, "It is a sin; till now thou hast never stolen; trust in God and do right, and thou shalt not starve."

He left the hedge, and quickly mounted his horse; but he soon looked round again; the temptation came upon him with greater power; the sorrow of his home and his hungry children rose before his mind. He again dismounted, and again stood before the hedge. All was silent save the crisp leaves dropping in the shadows, and the music of the stream silvered by the moon. He was about to put out his hand to take the linen, when his conscience again awoke. The conflict was a hard one; but the persuasive voice within again triumphed, and, without touching the linen, he again mounted his horse. He rode on, but presently drew the rein and looked back.

The tempter now approached him on an other side. "I am in misery," said the soldier, "and here is the opportunity to alleviate it. Is it not my duty to do so? I would not steal for the mere purpose of gain. God knows that I am not at heart a thief. Who can say that Providence has not placed this means of help in my way?"

He looked back again, and saw the linen still unwatched, lying in the moonlight. He again dismounted and climbed the hedge. He put forth his hand; but the good angels had followed him, and the inward monitor again asserted its power. It seemed to say, "what art thou doing? It is a sin."

Then he beheld his poor children again, whom in the previous Winter he had been unable to protect from the famine and frost. As a father, he reflected that he should care for his children.

He was now in a most painful state of excitement; the struggle was at its height.

He took off his hat and kneeled down with his forehead bared to heaven, and gazed upward for a moment on the calm moon and golden clusters of stars. The sublimities of the celestial scenery, like a vision, revealed to him the greatness and the goodness of God. The good angels were with him, and his triumph was at hand.

"O Lord," he prayed, "look down upon me, help me in my extremity, and control me. For the sake of Jesus Christ, thy beloved Son, have mercy on me, a miserable, tempted sinner, and save me. Be thou my strength in this my hour of weakness, and be thou my guardian in life, my helper and my portion forever."

His prayer was heard. No soul ever perished praying. The tempter fled, and the good angels were glad. With a joyous and free spirit he mounted his horse, inwardly praising God who had helped him out of this temptation, which would have brought a curse and destruction upon him.

As he came to the court-yard of the miller, he stopped and knocked at the door.

The miller opened the window, and called out:

"Who is there?"

"An orderly from Flensburg. I want a couple of words with you."

"What is it?" asked the miller opening the door.

"My dear miller," said the soldier, "as I was riding by, I perceived that you had forgotten to take in your linen which was left on the hedge to bleach. This is no business of mine; but I will conceal nothing from you. I am a very poor soldier, and have a wife and five small children, who are nearly naked and starving. My miserable condition induced me to stop when I saw the linen, and I was strongly tempted to approach it too nearly. Three times I dismounted my horse under the influence of temptation. I was assaulted on all sides, and it seemed as if I must submit. Then I looked up to heaven and prayed to the Almighty. He heard me and gave me power to resist. Friend miller, this is a high road, along which others may pass; others may come after me, and be similarly tempted and perhaps fall. This would be a bad thing; therefore I am come to ask you to take in your linen. And now I wish you a good-night."

"My good soldier," said the miller, "come in, and take a little refreshment. The air is cold to-night."

The offer was a most acceptable one to the soldier, for he was hungry and thirsty. A bountiful supper was placed before him. As he enjoyed the good fare, he said to himself: "O God, thou hast hitherto helped me. Thou helpest me now again, and thou wilt help me to the end."

As he was about to depart, the miller brought out a piece of linen and said, "My good soldier, this is the largest and best piece of all those which were left out to bleach. Take it as a remembrance; take it in honor, because you sought help from the Lord in prayer, and steadfastly resisted sin. If you are ever in great distress again, do not fail to come and see me."

The heart of the bearded veteran, was deeply touched, and the tears rolled down his sunburned cheeks. He could not speak; but he took the piece of linen, receiving it as a gift from the Lord.

"Thou, O Lord, hast saved me to-night," he said, as he stood beneath the moon and stars.

"So wilt thou keep me always."

He rode away a happy man. It was the battle of his life, and the victory was decisive. The good angels followed him to the end.—Youth's Companion.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, January 7, 1873.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.
Sent Three Months on trial for Thirty-five cents.

The officers of the Association are as follows.
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON,
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD,
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK,
Treasurer—AMBROSE W. TUCKER.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS,
A. S. CALKINS.
EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH,
A. E. BABCOCK.
BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications to Wm. L. Himes, 52 West Lake St., Chicago; and

☞ Make all Postal Orders and Drafts payable to him, and always state the amount of money enclosed plainly at the head of the letter.

☞ Give your Post Office address in full in every letter.

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions.

Business Department.

Accounts Due.

There is a large sum due on Book Accounts, in sums varying from one to fifty dollars and upwards. Prompt payment will greatly relieve our finances. It is only a little for each one; but the aggregate is large amount.

Some to whom we sent 'Statements of Account' last summer have never made any reply at all. We want to hear from you, and soon. These many little sums make up a heavy burden for us to carry. 'Let every one bear their own burden,' and our own will be very much lighter.

Renew Your Subscriptions.

We are sending notices to all our subscribers whose time expires this year. In some cases we receive remittances after these notices are prepared and forwarded to the postoffice. If any receive notices after they have sent in their renewals, they can keep the 'return envelope' for another occasion.

We have waited patiently upon hundreds of our subscribers for months, and, in some cases two years or more. We trust now every one will promptly remit for past dues, and for six months or a year in advance.

To Correspondents.

V. HUNT—Your letter was duly received. Thanks. .....E. BRALEY—Thank you. Will come some time. .....O. R. FASSETT—MS. received. Thanks.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

J Adrian
A Armour
I C Wellcome 2
J H Mills
H W Konkle
A Aldrich
C Benjman
D Engle
A Streeter
N Wheeler
W H Kingsley
A T Miller
H M Dubey
M A Tibbets
S E Gibson
G Kingsbury
T J Williams
R Viets
G W Sprague
L D Heath
S F Dimock
J Grinnell
A W Bowen
J H Bormey
D H Darnall
A Wilber
R Marler
P Lindner
G W Weeks
A Aldrich
J Leonard
R M Lampard
D Conklin
H Case
T Chittenden
J H Bruce
W H Flack
M B Hubbell
C W Briggs
P Pardee
O Eckhart
A C Long
W [illegible]
W Conklin
A [illegible]
G Hart
S E Cole
A C Manning
T Daily
S Barnum
W Golding
T W Raymond
W H Markland
C L Jones
P Hitchcock
E Urch
W Royce
J Griffith
S F Hunt
D Lester
L L Wilson
I I Martindale
G Dailey
N Collins
S F Bush
J R Mitchell
R Willard
J W Emmons
W McFall
G T Adams
J Bosser
G Harvey
S Abbey
W K Colling
J Marsh
P Decew
M A Patten
S G Hyatt
D D Chaffe
J C Dater
J Roberts
W O Hay
J Reed
B Norris
H Bightmire
D Bates
J H Frost
J L Callaway
W Woodarn
J H Laucks
J M Bilvin
W E Brown
J S Lawver
J Albertson
L P Collins
A L Ames
M Beck
P S Smith
N W Spencer
J Hamilton
A Moree
H Clark
E Mandlin
C H Humphreys
G I Denins
W J Brown
R Glen
W Cook
C Crowell
W F Ballard
I C Post
S M Adams
L Davis
H M Binehart
F M Morehouse
M J Houghton
Mary Smith
M J Safford
W H Danks
J Palmer
J Clark
J W Elliot
S E Sanphere
T S Hollis
O D Gibson
R Beardsley
S Borrett
A M Barnes
H A King
L A Burdock
Sheffield & Stone
E S Peawell
M G Dunham
P Hitchcock
J F Huber
J G Smith
W Sims
S Hewett
H Pettay
L Baholph
S Weese
J Dresser 2
J H Burkengams
P Fox
E Cheney
E Wolcott
D F Lake
L Holmes
E Williams
V Seaton
P W Hough
M E Niles
G Keller
G W Bush

Publishing Fund.

E Sanphere 2,50, S F Bush 2.15. L A Burdick 1,60 A J Peterson 2,00.

Books and Tracts sent by Mail.

J Chaiser E Haynes by exp O R Fassett 2 P Shaffer G E Lloyd D O Dutton J Setler O Benfer A J Tuttle J D Rogers P F Willoughby J Ridley S R Hood A T Gray J S Engterth H Robinson P C Marsh A Benjamin S E Gibson R Viets T Crittenden M B Hubbell P Pardee A C Long N H Young C Crowell 2 M J Safford J F Huber V Seaton H A King exp J H Pettay J Prosser.

The Times.

AT HOME.

" " " New York had forty-five fires in one week during 'the cold snap.'

" " " The present Protestant population of the world is estimated at 121,000,000. Of this number 33,000,000 are in the United States.

" " " Statistics of murder in New York show a prosperous development of that occupation. Year before last there were forty murders; forty-five the next year; and in 1872 there were fifty-six. No hanging.

" " " The New York Mail says the law just passed in Kansas, giving mothers control of their children, is a capital measure, and should be initiated in other States. Children have had control of their mothers so long it is time for a change. We believe in rotation in the domestic offices.

" " " About Chrismas, after a season of intense cold an immense snow storm covered the country from Canada to the Carolinas; from west of the Mississippi to no one yet knows how far out upon the Atlantic. New Year's was succeeded by a wide extending rain storm in the West and Southwest, with snow in the Northwest and intense cold in Canada and Maine. With such remarkable phenomena, the weather, usually a prolific topic, is more than ever discussed. And, What next? is the anxious inquiry of most, while some urge that we've had just such things before, but have forgotten about it.

" " " The ship R. C. Winthrop, from Antwerp, arrived at New York last week, and reports having seen, on the 27th of November, in latitude 34° 13', longitude 17° 19' west, Maderia Islands, bearing south half-east, distant 100 miles, a meteoric shower, commencing at dusk and lasting two and a half hours. The first hour, as near as could be judged, there were from 900 to 1,200 meteors in the air constantly; the second hour from 400 to 600, and in the last half hour they were gradually disappearing. About four-fifths of the meteors appeared like small balls of fire moving through the air leisurely, but others moved with great velocity, leaving in their track a trail of fire resembling that in the wake of an army rocket.

" " " The carnival of blood seems to rage as fiercely as ever in this ill-fated metropolis. We have a veritable "dance of death" in our midst, which whirls as fiercely at noonday as at midnight; and no arena is too busy, too public, or too sacred for its performance. To-day it is in a fashionable hotel, to-morrow in a luxurious brothel; and then it shifts it scene to the very precincts of the courts or the crowded thoroughfares of our busiest and most public business streets, and even the sacred privacy of the domestic home affords no security. Everywhere it is blood, and the most peaceful citizen is liable to be overtaken by fashionable ruffians in purple and fine linen, engaged in a deadly contest, whose gleaming knife or whizzing balls may make victims of those whose ill fortune has led them within the sphere of danger. That the people are deeply agitated and grieved at this fearful state of affairs is most natural, and there is a deep seated cry for a new order of things, whereby this reckless villainy may be brought to justice and intimidated. Horrible as hanging is, it is still more horrible to think that on the theory that it is "played out" no one's life may be considered safe.—Chr. Advocate.

" " " The year 1872, when it comes to be surveyed from a distance in time, will doubtless seem a commonplace year enough; but to us who have marked its passage as regarded with photographic accuracy and minuteness in the daily press, it seems to have been one of the most surprising and extraordinary years we ever experienced. This is because the incidents have been turning up in the strangest sort of way, even when they were not a startling character in themselves. All sorts of accidents have occurred, from colliery to steamboat and kitchen range explosions, from earthquakes to avalanches; strange railway casualties and shipwrecks have occurred; fires have broken out in every direction, beginning with the largest in the granite heart of our own city; every kind of disease known to humanity and animality has raged with peculiar virulence, while the number of sudden deaths, particularly among prominent persons, appears to have been unprecedented; the very climate itself seems to have become unsettled, for the coldest winter on record brought the rainiest summer, and inundations have been the rule from the Mississippi to the Po. In old times such a commotion of the elements, attended with such disastrous results to mankind, would have been regarded as evidence of the wrath of the higher powers, to be propitiated by every means which honest superstition or priestcraft could suggest.—Boston Journal.

ABROAD.

" " " Advices from South Africa relate that the universal story of disaster; in this case, heavy gales, also with shipwrecks.

" " " During a missionary meeting at Salford, England, the 26th, the floor of the building gave way, precipitating a hundred persons a considerable distance. Many were injured, some fatally.

" " " The Insurrectionists of Cuba seem to be gaining ground, though to just what extent it is difficult to define. Spain is like to find that island a financial burden instead of a treasury as in the past.

" " " We are told that there has been considerable political excitement in Europe over alleged evidence that Austria promised to join France in her attack upon Prussia. It does not appear however that Austria ever made any preparations for war.

" " " The closing of the American schools in Rome by the Government was recently made the subject of official inquiry, and the result shows they were not closed for political or religious reasons. The Minister of Public Instruction informed the chamber that the existing school regulations had not been complied with, that the schools were damp and overcrowded, that boys and girls were mixed together, and that the schools had been opened without authority. The parties having them in charge evidently went to work as they would have done in the United States, and supposed that they could do in Italy what they were allowed to do in this country, instead of doing as Romans do when you are in Rome. From this standpoint, the action of the Roman authorities was not only eminently proper, but, at the same time, eminently sensible. If our own educational officials had a little of the spirit of the Roman Minister, it might be better for the health of our school children.

" " " Diplomatic relations with other European Powers depend so much on the temporal power of the Pope that it is not surprising to observe that they decline together. The German Charges at Rome has shut up his bureau and gone home with "unlimited leave of absence." And so Germany follows the example of Switzerland in suspending relations with a potentate whose functions have become purely spiritual. The references to Germany in the Papal allocution seem to have created great heat in social circles of the Empire: even any quotation of these utterances is forbidden the newspapers under pain of confiscation. One of the German semi-official organs alludes to the Pope's remarks as "collossal impudence." So great a power as the German Empire could, one would think, afford to be less sensitive.—N. Y. Tribune.

Marriages.

COOK—CARR.—At Montfort, Wis., by Eld. Philo Hitchcock, Mr. Wm. Cook and Miss Sarah Carr, all of Montfort.

HIMES—HIMES.—In Norwood Park, Ill., Jan. 1, 1873, by Eld. Lorin C. Collins, Mr. Wm. L. Himes and Mrs. Addie A. Himes.

Obituary.

GEER.—In Forreston, Ill., Dec. 18, 1872, Gustus Geer, aged 73 years, 9 months and 11 days.

Br. Geer was well known to our brethren in Northern Illinois as a zealous Adventist, and he was also a consistent Christian. His only hope in life or death was in him who is the Resurrection and the Life; and when the hour of death came, he yielded up his spirit calmly anticipating the resurrection from among the dead. Amen.

BRIGGS.—In Sparland, Ill., Dec. 3, 1872, Br. Wm. Briggs, aged 66 years, 6 months and 27 days.

Br. Briggs was an 'old disciple,' having been converted in his sixteenth year. Thirty years ago he became an Adventist, and his love never grew cold nor did his zeal for truth and straight forward Christianity abate. He favored church order and a strict discipline of the membership.

For six months he was a great sufferer, and a few weeks before death he arranged all his business affairs, gave directions concerning his funeral, and then quietly awaited his end. He died in peace, without a doubt of his present acceptance with Christ and future salvation in him.

Services by Eld. Brace, discourse from 2 Tim. 4:6-8.

GINGER.—At Manchester, Iowa, Nov. 26, 1872, Martha Ann Ginger: aged 12 years and 3 months.

She was laid away to rest on the 28th, and that was a sorrowful Thanksgiving to the bereaved family. The writer endeavored to administer words of comfort to the mourning circle from thoughts suggested by John 16:33.

J. RIDLEY.

DUBEY.—In Northfield, Minn., Nov. 12, 1872, George Edward, youngest child of Hannah M. Dubey, aged 6 years and 10 months.

The funeral services were held in the Congregational church. Br. S. W. Thurber spoke words of comfort to us from Job 14:14. Br. Towle, pastor of the church, kindly assisted in the services.

The Infant School, where dear little George attended until the day he was taken sick, were all present, seated together with their teacher, thus manifesting their sympathy and love. Br. Thurber addressed them in a few loving words of comfort and advice.

H. M. D.

RAMER.—In Lewiston, Minn., Dec. 8, 1872, Ruth Ramer, wife of Eld. Philip Ramer: aged 52 years, 10 months and 5 days.

Sister Ramer, whose maiden name was Ruth Thackeray, was born in Cumberland, N. J. Feb. 3, 1820. She united in marriage with Eld. Ramer in Ripley Co. Ind. Jan. 25, 1838, and at once entered upon a life of arduous duties. The cares and trials that crowd so thick and come so often in the life of a preacher's wife, together with the lonely weary days and nights of watching and waiting for that absent husband's return, who is away ministering the bread of life to the famishing sons and daughters of a wicked world were her heritage.

But she met all these things with Christian firmness and resignation, never complaining of her trials nor shrinking from her duties, but bearing every trial or grief with meekness, and performing life's duties with diligence and charity. And when in process of time eleven children were born unto them (ten sons and one daughter, making with their adopted daughter twelve children), she moved among this large family as a "mother in Israel;" being not only careful for their many physical wants, but striving, with her husband, to rear them up in the "nurture and admonition of the Lord."

In April, 1855, they removed from Indiana to Winona Co., Minn., where she, with her husband, became familiar with and embraced the Advent views. Br. Ramer had formerly been a bishop of the Dunkard church. Her house was the Christian pilgrim's home, and her hands were ever ready to minister to their necessities. Her active, devoted life, seemed to be a continued fulfillment of 1 Tim. 5:10—"Well reported of her good works; if she have brought up children, if she have lodged strangers, if she have washed the saints' feet, if she have relieved the afflicted, if she have diligently followed every good work." Thus she filled up her life with usefulness until about eight days before her decease, when she was laid upon a bed of sickness which terminated in death.

She had her reason to the last, conversed with her husband and children about their temporal affairs and the disposition of her property, giving them words of tenderness and advice; gave directions in regard to her funeral, and who should preach the funeral discourse; bade them all farewell and calmly closed her eyes in death in the blessed hope of the "better resurrection." Truly

"The chamber where the Christian meets her fate
Is privileged beyond the common walks of life,
Quite on the verge of heaven."

Words of comfort were spoken to a large circle of mourners and attending friends and neighbors, at the home of the deceased, by the writer, from 2 Cor. 4:11; Eld. T. K. Allen was present and assisted in the services.

RUTH M. ROWELL.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Preaching in Hall in Stanley's Block, 619 West Lake Street, every Sunday 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening. D. R. & M. S. MANSFIELD.

Genoa, Oct. 27, and every other Sabbath until further notice. E. H. BURINGTON.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

Elida, Tuesday eve., Jan. 14.
Durand, Jan. 15, 17.
Elida, Jan. 18, 19.
Byron, Jan. 20-22.
Forreston, Jan. 23, 24. C. C. MARSTON.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, 3 p. m. July 21, and every four weeks until further notice

Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S H 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.

Round Grove, 10½ a. m. August 4, and every four weeks. ALICE E. RATHBUN.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co, at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Nov. 10, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.

Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Nov. 17, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

Amboy, Lee Co, preaching the second and fourth Sundays of each month.
C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

Plato, Jan. 7-11, as Br. McArthur may arrange.
Udina, 11 a. m. and 6 p. m., Jan, 12.
E. H. BERINGTON.

MICHIGAN.

To the churches in Branch County, Michigan, I would say that my appointments for the year 1873 will be as follows:

East Gilead, Jan. 5, 10 a. m, and every two weeks afte

California, Jan. 12, 10:30 a m and every two weeks after.

Algansee, every Sunday 2:30 p m and evening. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening.
J. R. PRESTON, Pastor.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.

Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

IOWA.

Preaching in Thompson's Hall, Delmar, Clinton Co., Jan. 5, and every two weeks until further notice. C. W. PITCHER.

The next Q. M. of the Manchester District will be held with the church at Boylan's Grove, commencing Thursday eve., Jan. 10, and hold over Sunday. J. RIDLEY.

Manchester, the first and third Sabbaths of each months, at 2 and 7 p. m.
J. RIDLEY, Pastor.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Bienny St.
JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y. 25, St. Joseph St.

WISCONSIN.

The second Q. M. for the Eastern District of the Wisconsin Conference, will be held with the church at Fairfield, Sauk Co., the Lord willing, Friday, eve. Jan. 17, and holding over the Sabbath. The cars run to Baraboo, within five miles of Fairfield; and provision will be make to carry with teams any who come by rail. Eld. Wm. Sheldon is expected to be present to preach the word. Let there be a general rally. Let those who can, work while it is day, and we who cannot, stay home and pray.
GEO. THOMSON, Sec'y.

LaCrosse, corner of Main and Sixth Streets, Dec. 1, and once in two weeks. JOB BROWN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.
A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

PENNSYLVANIA.

South Creek, Bradford Co., Jan. 6—8, and 11—12.
East Troy, Jan. 9—10.
JOHN T. ONGLEY.

Advertisements.

List of Books, Tracts, etc., kept on sale at the Advent Christian Times office.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—Unabridged, $6, by express. Condensed, sufficiently full for ordinary purposes, by mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occuring in the Holy Scriptures. With maps and useful tables. 40c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: with engravings, maps, and tables. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

BIBLE DICTIONARY: by Smith & Barnum. The best abridgment of Smith's larger work. Leather $6. cloth $5. By express.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $23 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDance. With Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. $7 50. by express.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock, $2 50, Post-paid.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo, 25c.

INFIDEL TESTIMONY to The Truth of the Bible. A valuable work, containing one hundred and seventy prophecies, which are proved to have been fulfilled by seventy quotations from the writings of Infidels. By H. L. Hastings, 10c.

*THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a re*ply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions to the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 30c. post-paid.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 45c, post-paid.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3:1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY of God; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 12c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The Phenomena of Modern Spiritualism. By N. Field, M. D. 16c.

*PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC meet*ings. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 5c. a hundred.

*THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; with a re*view of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabath By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added History, Statistics and Tables. Cloth, $2; leather 2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By Wellcome and Good. 400 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATTHEW, 24 and 25, 30c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen.

The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one adress, post-paid, for $4 00.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH; a history of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on earth during the past 2,000 years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth. $1.

LAST DAY TOKENS: by S. S. Brewer. 35 cts.

FUTURITY; by Wm. Sheldon. 20 cts.

THE INDEX BOOK MARK; 25c a dozen.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. Nothing so good on this topic. Cloth $1. Paper, 50c. 3 copies for $1, post paid.

GOOD TIDINGS; a general view of Advent doctrine. By an Association of Authors. 428 pages. Cloth 65c, Paper 40c. Post paid.

*THE NATURE AND DURATION OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT: By Henry Con*stable, Prebendary of Cork, 40c. Post paid.

THE FAITH OF ST. PAUL; showing it to have been neither Pharisaic nor Sadduccean, but Hebrew. By L. C. Collins. 10c.

*THE STATE OF THE DEAD; a Discus*sion between N. Field, M. D. and T. P. Connolly, Esq. pp. 300. 50c. Post Paid.

THE JUBILEE HARP. $1. $9 a dozen.

HADES AND SHEOL; By L. C. Collins. The best published exposition of the parable of Dives and Lazarus. 10c.

*THE ADVENT MINSTREL; a choice collec*tion of spiritual songs. Flexible cloth, 25c. $2.15 a dozen. Paper, 15c. $1.50 a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP; Cloth, 75c, *Leath*er $1.

HYMNS OF THE MORNING; A new and rich collection. Cloth 50c. Leather, 80c.

SCIENCE AND THE RESURRECTION; By D. T. Taylor. 5c.

PAULS EARNEST EXPECTATION and hope: (Phil. 1:21:25.) By O. R. Fassett. 5c.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1 00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address 71 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for sale for the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township 9, Range 3, West, Crawford Co. Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $500, or more.

Parties wishing to make an investment can address me at the ADVENT TIMES office. WM. L. HIMES.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE ADVENT TIMES and Banner, one year for $2.50 if pre-paid. Address Wm. L. Himes, 25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1873. Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.

Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee Keepers," (a 36 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York city.

☞ THE TIMES and Bee-Keepers Journal one year f $2.50. Address Wm. L. Himes 25 W. Lake St. Chicago.

The Ablest Tariff Journal in the U. S.

The American Working People.

Published monthly, is a welcome visitor to One Hundred Thousand firesides. Finely printed, handsomely illustrated, ably edited—has no rival! $1.50 per year. Sent on trial three months for 25c.

The Iron World

Is the largest and most valuable Metal Price Current in the world. $4.00 per year. Sent on trial one month for 25c. All the State Geologists are contributors.

Marion watches, fine silver plated ware, pen and pocket cutlery, and other desirable premiums to getters up of clubs for our monthly.
IRON WORLD PUB. Co.
—437. Pittsburgh, Pa

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.---NO. 24. CHICAGO, JANUARY 14, 1873. WHOLE NO. 455.

AURORA COLLEGE

Advent Christian Times.

Contents of This Number.

First Page.

Exposition of Mat. 24, Albion Ross—sixth article; Personal, O. R. Fassett; Boasting, A. Armour.

Second Page.

Tired Mothers, (poetry); Arminius and his Sentiments, (fourth article), A. A. Phelps; All Men drawn to Christ, I. C. Wellcome; Wherewithal shall we be clothed, W. A. Fenn.

Third Page.

The Glorious Keeping, M. A. Tibbets; Temptation, A. Armour; The Poetry of the Bible, C. L. P.; A Word to Parents, L. Willis; Immortal vs. Torment, O. D. Gibson; A hit at Skepticism.

Fourth Page.

Brief Editorials; New Editions; Louis Napoleon; Rule or Ruin, J. H. W.; Heresy Hustled Out; Enlarge the Heart; The Editor.

Fifth Page.

Smuggled; Editorial Gleanings; The Subject still pressing itself; News.

Sixth Page.

Christian Self-Culture; Letters from S. C. Wellcome, J. B. Carey, J. T. Ongley, J. W. Elliott, J. H. May, R. Tuttle, and C. C. Marston; Fire Proof.

Seventh Page.

Metropolitan Methodism Stirred up; A whole Dominion of Missionaries; The Sins of the Tongue; Will it Pay? My three little Texts, (poetry); An Infant's Prayer.

Eighth Page.

Business Department; News; Appointments; Advertisements.

An Exposition of Matthew Ch. 24.

[Sixth Article.]

"And the stars shall fall from heaven" is the next event in this series of signs spoken of by the Savior.

The following is the record of a scene that occurred in the night of Nov. 13, 1833.

"The Falling Stars.—The editor of the Old Countryman makes a very serious matter of the falling stars. He says: 'We pronounce the raining fire which we saw last Wednesday morning an awful type—a sure forerunner, a merciful sign of that great and dreadful day which the inhabitants of the earth will witness when the sixth seal shall be opened.

"'The time is just at hand, described not only in the New Testament, but in the Old. A more correct picture of a fig tree casting its leaves when blown by a mighty wind, it is not possible to behold. Many things now occurring on the earth tend to convince us that we are in the latter days. This exhibition we deem to be the type of an awful day fast hurrying upon us. This is our sincere opinion, and what we think we are not ashamed to tell. Men may and have called us enthusiasts. We care not if they call us mad, so that we feel they are mistaken. We will go on our way rejoicing. Nor would we go alone. Hence, we warn all to turn to the Lord while yet they may.

The following extracts taken from observations on meteors, by Prof. Olmstead, taken from a work by S. Bliss, will show the nature and extent of this phenomenon:

"The nature and extent of the showers of 1833 were such as to cover no inconsiderable portion of the earth's surface. From the middle of the Atlantic on the east to the Pacific on the west, and from the northern coast of South America to the undefined regions of the British possessions on the north, the exhibition of shooting stars was not only visible, but everywhere presented nearly one and the same appearance. The duration and maximum, or period of greatest display, were characterized by a similar uniformity. In nearly all places the meteors began to attract attention by their unusual frequency as early as eleven o'clock, and increased in numbers and splendor until about four o'clock, from which time they gradually declined, but were visible until lost in the light of day. The meteors did not fly at random over all parts of the sky but appeared to emanate from a point in the constellation Leo, near a star called Gamma Leonis, in the bend of the sickle.

"A similar phenomenon was witnessed on the 12th of Nov. 1799, and at the same season of the year in 1830, 1831, and 1832. The meteoric showers were repeated on the morning of Nov. 13 or 14 several years, but on a scale constantly diminishing until 1838, since which period the exhibitions have been too little remarkable to be worthy of particular notice.

"I feel assured that this is no atmospheric or terrestrial phenomenon, but these fiery meteors came to us from the regions of space, and reveal to us the existence of worlds of a nebulous or elementary nature existing in the solar system, and forming part of it. Nor are these considerations built upon mere hypotheses but are necessary inferences from certain facts. Those who were so fortunate as to witness the exhibition of shooting stars on the morning of Nov. 13, 1833, probably saw the grandest display of celestial fireworks that has been seen since the creation of the world, or at least within the annals covered by the page of history. This is no longer to be looked upon as a terrestrial but as a celestial phenomenon, and shooting stars are now to be viewed no more as casual productions of the upper regions of the atmosphere, but as visitants from other worlds, or from the planetary void. Subsequent inquiries have led me to the belief that the body was so distant as hardly to exhibit parallax, but was projected on very nearly the same part of the sky by all observers. This fact at once shows that the source of the meteors was far beyond the atmosphere, and confirms the preceding consideration that it was wholly independent of the earth."

This is the testimony of Prof. Olmsted, of Yale college, a man well versed in the history of science, and who has probably devoted more attention to investigations of this character than any other man in this country. If these meteors were not the predicted "falling stars," which were to be distinguishing signs of the coming of the Son of man in the clouds of heaven, it would be difficult to conceive of any celestial phenomenon which would fill the prophecy.

The objection that these were not real stars is of no weight, for the falling of one such to the earth would be not a sign of the end, but the end itself. It could not have been a planetary star which guided the wise men by going before and standing over where the child Jesus lay.

All luminous bodies having the appearance of stars have been thus denominated, hence these meteors have been called stars, and they are the only stars that could fall as a sign to man of the coming of Christ.

Luke describes our Savior as saying, "There shall be signs in the sun and in the moon, and in the stars, and upon earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring, and men's hearts failing them for fear," etc. (ch. 21: 26, 27.) All this has came to pass within the remembrance of the present generation. Well might the poet say

"When were the winds let loose
With such a general warrant to destroy?
When did the sea so haughtily
O'erleap its ancient barriers?
Fires from beneath and meteors from above
Portentous, unexampled, unexplained,
Have kindled beacons in the sky.
And the old and crazy earth
Has had her shaking fits more frequent
And foregone her usual rest.
The pillars of our planet seem to move,
And nature with a dim and sickly eye
Awaits the general doom."

But it is again argued that the darkening of the sun and moon of 1780, and the falling of the stars in 1833 could not be the fulfillment of the Lord's prophecy because they were not universal in their manifestation. But when we consider that all the signs that cluster around the first advent of Christ, (an event involving the interests of the whole human family as much as the second,) were local, yet of such a nature as to challenge the infidelity of the whole world, the argument disappears. We have no more right to say the sun and moon must be darkened all over the world to make such a sign of the second advent than we have to say that the star which guided the wise men to the babe of Bethlehem as a sign must appear all over the world. All must admit that these were signs peculiar to that generation. Said the Master to the Scribes and Pharisees of his day, "Can ye not discern the signs of these times?" And yet those signs were local, and seen by but few, comparatively; but the truth concerning these things was published broadcast through all the land of Judea.

So there are signs of the second advent peculiar to the last generation of the world's history, which, to be sure, have been local in their manifestation; but the proclamation of the near coming of Christ, based on those evidences, has gone abroad into all lands.

The "shaking of the powers of the heavens" is the last sign mentioned in v. 29. This is understood variously. Some look upon it as significant of a convulsed state of the political world, and others as a deranged state of our atmosphere, and still others as the literal departure of the heavens. If it refers to the political heavens, it has had a marked fulfillment, and if it refers to the atmospheric heavens, they are known to have been the scene of a wonderful phenomenon for years; and it is known that Prof. Silliman once made the remark, that such was the deranged state of the elements in our atmosphere, a few years ago, had it continued but a short time longer it must have resulted in a "general conflagration."

"And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn; and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." (v. 30.) I understand the sign of the Son of man to be the tokens of his visible majesty to distinguish him from false Christs, who had come in the desert and in the secret chambers showing great signs and wonders. Hence the elect were to look for the advent of their Master until they should see him come in person and glorious majesty as he had foretold.

"And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet; and they shall gather his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." (v. 31.) Here we have illustrated one great object of the Messiah's advent to earth the second time. It is the consummation of the great work of redemption; the gathering together in one all things in heaven, even in him. (Eph. 1: 10.)

"Now learn a parable of the fig tree: when his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh: so likewise ye when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, even at the doors;" i. e., when ye see the before-named precursors, know my day is near, as ye may know summer is near when ye see the tender buds appearing upon the fig tree and the other trees.

"Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my word shall not pass away." (v. 35.) Here our Lord asserts the immutability of his counsel. Earth in its present form must pass away. Its physical condition, like an old garment, must undergo a change, but the word of God remains the same. His counsel shall stand though man may devise against it. The assurance—"My word shall not pass away"—refers in this connection to all that our blessed Redeemer had spoken in reference to the signs and certainty of his coming. Every jot and tittle shall be fulfilled, and at the end of this grand drama Christ will come. Though the human dreams of national glory and flattering prospects of human enterprise, combined with the unbelief of an infidel age, may remonstrate against such an event, yet in its time and order it will come. When the day and hour arrives, no remonstrance of man can stay the chariot wheels of his terrible Majesty, who

"When sin hath aroused him and his wrath is hot
Shall visit earth in mercy, shall descend
Triumphant in his chariot, paved with love;
Then, what his storms have blasted and defaced
For man's revolt, shall with a smile repair."

(To be continued.) Albion Ross.

Personal.

I have been sick nigh unto death; but God has, in mercy, spared my life to see the incoming of another year, 1873. Thank him. Since coming to this coast I have endured much in the climatic change, and my health, which has been hitherto remarkably good for many years, has suffered materially by the transfer to this climate, so different from the eastern, middle, and northwestern States, where I have resided all my days until now, I am reduced where another acute attack might bring me to the grave. I have been hoping for a change for the better when I could rise superior to this climatic effect upon my constitution, and still hope.

Following the first symptoms experienced on coming here, of an indescribable chilliness, almost constant, and depression of spirits, most unusual for me, I had a siege of inflamed eyes. Diligence and careful usage saved a loss of sight and a chronic ailment, and my eyes are mostly recovered, though they are still weak, and great care has to be observed in their use still. All this time, from the beginning of my first landing on this coast, I have been actively engaged in work: preaching, lecturing, visiting, and writing, scarcely losing any time even during the infliction of my inflamed eyes. I have not been idle—my brethren will bear me witness.

A fortnight since I had a serious attack closely resembling the actual symptoms of the Asiatic cholera. A skilled physician came and injected into both arms, under the skin, morphine, which gave relief. Probably, in the providence of God, this was the means which saved my life. The Lord raised me up, I hope, for some good purpose. But living or dying, I am the Lord's.

I hope to remain on this coast and here finish up my earthly labors for Christ in his church, and in saving perishing men from the burnings of the great day. To this end I have moved my family, and my effects, what I could, to this land. However, if I find that I cannot endure this climate, and my life is spared, I may return and locate somewhere in the North-west. The Lord direct. I must be where I can have the physical and mental ability to work out what the Lord has wrought in my heart. Mrs. Fassett, at this time, has been compelled to suspend her labors to have her eyes (granulated lids) cured. They were again endangering her sight. She is now under the charge of Dr. Morgan, an oculist in San Francisco, who gives promise of a cure within six weeks. He has abundant testimonials to his skill and ability. We think a cure can be effected. In the meantime she is kindly cared for in the family of Br. and Sr. Dibble, in that city, who spare no pains nor expense to make her comfortable while undergoing a most severe treatment, attended with much suffering.

We need the prayers and sympathy of the faithful in our behalf, that we may have our infirmities removed, and that our lives and health be spared to us, so we may proclaim the coming and kingdom of our Redeemer, as in the past. O. R. Fassett.

Boasting.

Boasting is bragging, vaunting, vainglory, arrogance, ostentation. It is a prominent trait in the character of those whom God has given over to a reprobate mind. (Rom. 1: 30.) It is one of the perils of the last days that men are boasters (2 Tim. 3: 2.)—not only men of the world but also men in the church, having a form of godliness. The little member that boasteth great things is set in motion, and causes of offense come.

It pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe, and God chose the foolish and weak and despised that no flesh should glory in his presence. Where is boasting then? It is excluded, by the law of faith. He that glorieth let him glory in the Lord. Rejoice in the Lord and glory in the Holy One of Israel. Magnify the Lord and rejoice in God our Savior. Far be it from me to glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Job, a man perfect and upright, who feared God and eschewed evil, when brought into the presence of the Lord, said, "I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear, but now mine eye seeth thee, wherefore I abhor myself and repent in dust and ashes." Isaiah also had to say "Wo is me! for I am undone, for I am a man of unclean lips." So it might be now, so it will be when he whose eyes are as a flame of fire cometh. What is man that he should be clean? The heavens are not clean in his sight; his angels he chargeth with folly; and of the children of men he saith, "There is none that doeth good, no, not one."—Where is boasting then? If we say that we have no sin we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us.

Humbling, is it? It is only the great lesson that none is good, save one, that is God. None else are good except as they receive, and continue to receive their goodness from him. The only perfect righteousness is the righteousness which is of God [ek Theou—out from God] by faith [epi—upon faith]. (Phil. 3: 9.) This "everlasting righteousness" (Dan. 9: 24) is unto all, and UPON ALL THEM THAT BELIEVE. (Rom. 3: 22.) By grace are ye saved, through faith, and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God. Not of works, lest any man should boast. A. Armour.

The Christian Life.

Christian Self Culture.

Self-culture is held by many to be the true aim of a Christian; and so far as it implies the cultivation in one's self of Christlikeness under the guidance of Christ's Spirit, the position is valid. But there is a very common view of self-culture which is the direct opposite of this, and is the very quintessence of selfishness. It calls for education to enlarge and discipline the powers; for morality to insure self-respect; for adherence to certain standards of honor and taste; but it takes no account of the wants of the world, of the debt which each individual owes to his fellows, much less of work for God.

The wide contrast between this type of selfishness and the more ignoble and common sort often blinds us to its real nature. A man who is wise enough to see that truth and purity and high intelligence bring richer rewards than dishonesty and vulgarity and ignorance, may so train himself that his external conduct shall differ but little from that of another who is is truly in love with all the virtues for their own sake. He may be just in his dealings, courteous in manners, patient under vexations, and refined in tastes, even beyond many who are yet more truly Christian than he; for the mainspring of his conduct is selfishness, whereas the chief purpose and desire of the weakest real Christian are unselfish. The one professes and seeks to love himself supremely; the other to love God first and most of all, and his neighbor as himself.

So much has been said and written about being true to one's self that we have need to be on our guard lest there be some fatal error concealed in this plausible phrase, or in the popular interpretation of it. The old man's advice so often quoted, "To thine own-self be true, and it will follow, as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man," must be taken with certain qualifications. We must, indeed, be true to the best within us, to conscience, to the word written on our hearts, photographed there by the shining of the Sun of righteousness through the Word of truth: but when we reject all our own reasonings and are true only to our own prejudices and selfish wishes, these, however superior, will lead us astray.

Goethe was the great apostle of self-culture in his day, and professed, above all things, to be true to himself. But, although he rose to distinction as a philosopher and poet, his standard of honor and truth did not prevent him from the grossest dishonor in his social relations. He was refined in his very selfishness, but it was selfishness still. He could write finely about the law of his individual being, but he found in himself no law that deterred him from licentiousness. And if a man so clear sighted and so richly endowed as he could be thus deliberately false while being "true to himself," what reason is there to believe that less affluent natures will find in themselves a higher law of restraint?

The proper phrase in such a case would be, true to one's own weaknesses, passions, lusts, ignorance, and self-will.

We cultivate our own powers best by using them for the highest good of others. Nobility is earned by condescending to men of low estate. Christ was the Prince of Peace not because he maintained peace in his own soul, but because he brought peace to us. To work for the planting and cultivation of graces in others is the way to produce them in ourselves. Therefore the true Christian will not shut himself up to the selfish appropriation of spiritual privileges, but rather seek self-culture through the earnest, persistent giving of himself, as Christ did, for the life of the world.—Christian at Work.

Will you not stop calling for more laborers? Will you not stop saying, "Go work." No, as long as the presence of God Almighty goes with his words. As long as he adds, "Lo I am with you alway," so long will re-echo the tones, "Go work."

Never enough of life given, while his life is given for us; never enough of prayer, while he intercedes for us; never enough of thought, while he thinks of us; never enough of treasure given, while the best treasure is given us—Shall we give that which costs us nothing? Is this the sacrifice he demands,—is this all he looks for?

Give till you feel it. Labor till the body is tired. Pray till the soul finds rest in the received promise, and then ask, "Do I owe nothing more?"

Correspondence.

From S. C. Wellcome.

Having closed my labors for the present in the eastern part of the State, I came with my companion to Kasota, a little town on the Minnesota River, at the crossing of the Winona & St. Peter and the St. Paul & Sioux City Railways, about three miles from St. Peter, and on the border of "the big woods." Here is a little band looking for Jesus.

It was hard parting with the kind friends where I had been laboring the past two years, but duty seemed to call me west. Br. Bursell called on me on his return from a tour in Watonwau Co., where he had been holding meetings, and in accordance with his request I have been to Madelia, thirty-five miles from here, and held meetings over one Sabbath, and found that the good seed sown by Br. Bursell was springing up with the prospect of bringing forth fruit to the glory of God. Many there had for years been looking for the coming of Jesus, but they say they never heard the glorious truths of the Bible set forth as Br. Bursell gave them, and the people throughout that region are deeply interested, and like the Bereans of old are searching the Scriptures to see whether these things are so. I found an open door therefore and a whole-souled people. God bless them! I obtained six subscribers for THE TIMES, which is an evidence of their desire to read our views. I had stopped with Br. James Haycroft one night, and on Tuesday, Nov. 26, I took my valise and started for the station about one hundred rods distant. I arrived safely on the track, but suddenly there arose a terrible storm of wind and snow, hiding every object from view on the prairie. The train came thundering along, but so severe was the gale that the engineer would not stop for signals and sped onwards, leaving me to grope my way back to the only house for a long way on the prairie. And although it was but a short distance away, yet I lost my way in the hurricane of snow, and soon the fearful thought pressed itself on my mind that I was lost. I hallooed; but all in vain. The howling of the storm drowned my voice. I wandered on through the deep snow until weary and cold, I found a place where the snow was shallow, and here I left my valise so that I could be traced and my fate known, while I continued on, I knew not whither. The snow blinded me; my hands, face and ears were freezing, and I repeatedly gave up to perish. But at last, after wandering a long time, I gave up trying in my own strength, and calmly submitting myself into the hands of God, on my knees in the snow I asked his guidance. I felt that my work was not done. Hope sprung up in my heart, I arose from my knees and following my impressions, I after many a severe struggle against the wind, going contrary to the way I had been traveling, made my way to the house I had left before the storm, where we praised God for my deliverance. I was frozen slightly, but God had heard my prayer and delivered me.

From J. B. Carey, California.

For sometime past I have felt it a duty I owed to myself, to God and the cause of Christ to give publicity through the columns of THE TIMES a brief account of the marvelous work which has been wrought in me since I was led by the Spirit of God to recognize the grand truths recorded in his blessed word, which have been veiled from the world amid the fog-banks of Spiritism and false doctrine, but which have been brought once more to view by the aid of prophecy—a light clear and steady shining in dark places, and proclaimed to a dying world in these last days—days of signs and wonders and fearful sights which indicate our close proximity to the first resurrection,—days in which "men will not endure sound doctrine."

I once turned my back on these great truths presented in an appendix to a work entitled "Spiritualism Unveiled" by Elder Grant; and while I was perfectly bewildered at the array of Scriptural testimony adduced to show that man was mortal—not the half but the whole of him—yet I refused to recognize this great cardinal truth so clearly set forth, and still persisted in the opinion that part of man—the inner man—was immortal, contrary to the plain teachings of God's word.

I was at that time a lukewarm professor of religion, member of the M. E. church; but from that time on I withered and for three years I remained in a withered state, a lost condition. But, glory be to God, he has been pleased in his infinite goodness to show me "a more excellent way," and now I rejoice in the blessed truths of his gospel, in the assurance of Christ's coming kingdom and a bright immortality at the resurrection of the dead.

I came to Vallejo and was induced to attend a prayer meeting in the Advent Chapel, where the spirit of God was manifest with great power. I there saw a happy people, a people full of the Holy Ghost, and having on the whole armor of God. I there saw a lady soundly converted and made happy through the efficacy of the atoning blood of Jesus. This was all wonderful to me. I had never seen the like before. The Spirit began to work upon my heart. I became interested and went again and again. I heard Br. and Sr. Fassett, and then Br. Reed preach. Those sermons were accompanied with power. They weilded the weapon of the Spirit, sharper than any two edged sword. I soon began to be thawed out. Oh! how cold I found I really had been—no icebergs half so frozen. Now I am warm, thawed out by Advent fire; and I began to think that a people who kept such good fires must have good fuel: so I at once commenced investigating the truth or falsity of their doctrine, when to my great delight I found it was simply the Bible, without a single creed founded upon heathen dogmas or the teachings of "vain philosophy."

The truth was what I desired, let it come from whatever source it might, and I resolved to sacrifice creeds, early teaching and everything else that might be required for this "pearl of great price." And God helped me to see these grand truths which underlie, overtop and embrace the gospel plan of redemption. How brightly his truth shines when contrasted with the philosophy of Plato and other heathen dogmas. I soon found myself in a "broad place" with the light of his holy truth shining in dazling beauty all around me. I love to read God's Word; it is now so plain and beautiful, teaching me that I am mortal and must seek for immortality by "patient continuance in well doing."

From Jno. T. Ongley.

Another year is in the past, and our labors for the year 1872 are at an end, and no retraction can be made. The coming judgment will reveal how much of that time has run to waste. Some think that the judgment will take place the present year. If so, it will be a source of joy to some, regret and astonishment to others. To those that are so strong on the time of '73, I would say—In case of failure remember God is faithful, and able to perform all that he has promised, and at his appointed time his Son will be revealed. Perhaps there are trials before us, that will tax our greatest energy to hold us up, and the special interposition of our Heavenly Father to sustain us in the trying hour. Gold has to be put in the fire to try it, and I am satisfied that fiery trials await us, to wit, the hour of temptation that is to try the whole world. The mark of the beast, the assembling of nations to Armageddon; the great day of God's wrath, the earnest prayer of faith day and night, the great white cloud, the sharp sickle, and the question, "Who shall be able to stand?" His grace is sufficient! Praise the Lord!

The tarrying time will soon be over. The faithful ones will rejoice, the entombed arise and sing. The song of Isaiah will be heard, death swallowed up in victory, waiting ones changed, the King in his beauty sit on his great white throne, the redeemed sing redemption's song.

Some have spoken of my giving a synopsis of my travels for the year 1872, and I have consented to do so, hoping that others may have done more. Quite a number have put on Christ, partly through my instrumentality, and I rejoice; for he that planteth and he that watereth are one.

I have traveled in all by rail, on foot and by other conveyance, 11,173 miles; preached 203 discourses; attended 71 discourses by others, baptised 10 souls. Have preached in Penn., New York, Ohio and Canada. Attended 2 conferences, 1 campmeetings. Received for services $547. 56. Paid for Railway fare $242.68; leaving for support of self and family $304. 87 an average of 83 1-2 cents a day. Have sold about $100 worth of books, and gave away about $20 worth. I am trying to get a tent for N. W. Penn. Have received up to Dec. 31, 1872, pledges amounting to $240. Am't needed $350.

From J. W. Elliott, Iberia, Mo.

Herewith I send you my annual report, (as I now belong to no other Conference but the Western Association). Since I moved from Minnesota I have been isolated and alone. The nearest church of our faith is in St. Louis. I have preached the gospel of the kingdom the greater part of my time, and the good Lord has watered (or blessed) the seed sown, so that some is bringing forth fruit to his glory. I have baptised one, a man who had been a gambler and a very wicked man; but when he heard that "all the wicked would God destroy" by "burning them up root and branch," and that it was an act of love that God withheld from them immortality at the judgment, as much so, as it was for him to guard the Tree of Life in the Garden of Eden, he then saw that Christ came to give life, instead of giving burning to the wicked in hell forever; and to those that would not be reconciled to his gospel, it would be "a savor of death unto death;" and God could consistently place the unreconciled back to dust as they were, and do them no injustice.

He embraced with all his heart that Jesus who came to give life, and, also, the good news. Oh! how it did cause him to shout and cry out, "Let thy kingdom come. Yes, come and break in pieces these wicked kingdoms and establish thine own everlasting kingdom."

Last summer I held a protracted meeting in the grove for eight days. Sr. Mary Prescott, of St. Louis, helped. We had about a thousand in attendance, and I believe some seed fell on good ground. Two have requested baptism and say they got their convictions at that protracted meeting. Hundreds have given their testimony in favor of the doctrine of immortality in Christ and the coming of Jesus.

I feel weak and incompetent for the task, when I think of the troops and walls arrayed against me. But my faith in God's all sustaining power is all that induces me to battle against such a host, all marshalled against the faith of the gospel. I want some tracts. If I can't have any live preachers to help, do send me some of the silent ones, and I assure you I will put them where they will talk.

Several families of Baptists have embraced the faith and I expect to organize a church in the spring. I have consecrated myself to be faithful, working, praying and watching till Jesus calls.

From J. H. May, Arkansas.

Through kind providence of our gracious Father, myself and Br. W. B. Corey are still "contending earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints." By our public exhibition of the glad tidings concerning our King and his coming kingdom, we have influenced a considerable number to bow in obedience to the behests of the immortal King, who are continuing in the faith and thus preparing themselves to hear a welcome benediction when the Savior shall be seated upon the throne of his glory.

The truth is gaining ground rapidly, notwithstanding the opposition from all sects and parties. We have a very good meeting house almost finished, and are determined by the grace of God to keep before the world the speedy coming of our Master to reward his waiting people who have sought for glory, honor, immortality, with eternal life in his kingdom, on this earth renewed; and to punish the wicked with eternal death—not life in misery. May the Lord incline us to be daily cherishing the blessed hope, the coming of the Son of God from heaven to change our bodies and fashion them like his glorious body, for I am assured this was the hope of all the well informed of God's saints in all ages. David says: "As for me, I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." If David had had the hope of some modern saints that his immortal soul would go to glory in heaven or paradise, he would not have expressed himself in this way; for it seems that to be glorified at death ought to have satisfied him. But the fact is, David had no such faith and consequently could have no such hope. Paul's hope was not expected to be realized by him until the coming of our Lord, and by a resurrection from the dead. May we all be prepared to realize the hope of Daniel, David and Paul, at the judgment, is my prayer.

From R. Tuttle, Charlotte, Mich.

There are a few of us in Charlotte who are striving to live in such a manner that we may have a right to the tree of life and enter in through the gates into the city of our God. When Peter asked Christ "Are there few that be saved?" He answered: "Strive to enter in at the straight gate, for verily I say unto you, many shall seek to enter in and shall not be able." I think we can truly say we are striving to enter in amid persecutions and trials, amid the scoffs and frowns of the wicked and those who would seem to be "sanctified" and yet reject God's truth, which alone can sanctify.

I often think if all who believe the faith would withdraw from among those who are scoffing at it and take a stand on the side of God and his divine truth what a difference it would make and how much good they might accomplish. But they are like Peter, when he denied his Lord. He went in and sat down among his betrayers and murderers.

But why should we murmur? Jesus has declared he will have a tried people. The prophets and apostles were persecuted for the truth's sake, and when we pause and consider their trials our own sink into insignificance, hardly worth notice. Yet how natural it is for each one to think their own trials severe. Says Paul: "Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods. Once was I stoned. I suffered shipwreck: a night and a day I have been in the deep; in journeyings often, in perils of water, in perils of robbers, in perils by mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in peril among false brethren; in weariness and painfulness, in watching often, in cold and nakedness; beside those things that are without, that which cometh upon me daily, the care of all the churches."

And yet Paul could exclaim amid all this, "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." Thanks be to God, deliverance is nigh. Christ is coming, and his reward is with him to give to every one, according as his work shall be.

From C. C. Marston, Ionia, Ill., Jan. 6.

The meeting at this place is still in progress with a deep and increasing interest. The cold, stormy weather was much against us in the beginning; then came the holidays with their parties, festivals, etc. But these are now over. Our audiences are now larger and more constant. Last night the interest was intense. In the love feast more than forty testified for Jesus, in about half as many minutes—a part of them by simply rising. It was cheering to hear the converts speak boldly and with freedom for Christ. At the close nine penitents come to the altar for prayer. It was a grand sight to see those middle aged and young persons, breaking away from their old associates, and coming out decidedly and deliberately on the Lord's side. Br. and Sr. McCullock with the church here are much encouraged.

In the p. m. yesterday, it was my pleasure to preach at Spring Grove in the Winebrennarian chapel. The pastor of this society was the chairman of the committee that suspended me "from the functions of the gospel ministry.' Think of the absurdity of a man or se of men "suspending" another man from the work of Jesus Christ. It is the spirit of the Popery and Jesuitism, and not of pure Christianity. So long as God gives a man success in his work as a minister, no one on earth has any right to lay anything in his way. It was a great privilege for me to stand before this people, and give them a "reason for my hope." Three years ago I was pastor of this church. I was warmly and cordially greeted by my old friends, and kindly invited to return at my convenience. It was good to be there. The Lord gave much liberty in dispensing his truth.

From Anson Brown.

Perhaps the dear brethren and sisters would like to hear how the little vine at Pine River, (Wis.,) is getting along. We are trying, in our weakness, to sustain the glorious gospel of the coming and kingdom of our Lord and Savior. At our prayer meeting, last Wednesday eve., we covenanted anew to try to live nearer to Jesus in the future than we had in the past. At the close of the meeting I reminded the brethren of the necessity of a new supply of tracts to distribute in new fields of labor. They raised $1.25. Let every church procure a supply for themselves and their minister.

Fire Proof.

A Boston merchant, whose warehouse was surrounded by the flames of the late disastrous fire, and yet spared from destruction, thus related his feelings during the fearful night:—

"I stood on the steps of my store, during the hours of Saturday night and Sunday morning, and saw the flames rapidly approach, but I was not thinking so much of the apparently inevitable burning of my property that night, as of the greater and more awful fire, when the world and all that it contains shall be burned up, and how I shall stand that fiery trial."

The man was a Christian, and the scene before him, naturally led his mind, at such a solemn time, to that hour when,—

"Shrivelling like a parched scroll.
The flaming heavens together roll;
And louder yet, and yet more dread,
Swells the high trump that wakes the dead."

His earthly property was in danger, but the most valuable portion had been removed, and there was good insurance upon that which could not be carried elsewhere, so that he felt comparatively at ease respecting worldly loss. Was he equally secure against the fires of the great day? In the midnight, alone, though crowds were hurrying excitedly down the street, the glare of the flames deepening on the sight, and the roar of the fire breaking on the ear, the still, small voice of God was heard in the soul, saying: "The day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up." And the question which conscience asked from this thoughtful Christian, was doubtless the question with which the inspired apostle follows the statement of the great conflagration: "Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness?"

An important question, and one well suited to the beginning of a New Year. Events of daily occurrence give force to the inquiry made from this standpoint. Every day the telegraph reports fires—in cities, towns and forests. Churches are burned; fire proof warehouses are laid low by the devouring element; museums and art treasures are in a few hours transformed into a heap of ashes and a cloud of smoke. There is nothing material that will stand fire; and therefore, one day all the insurance companies will be bankrupt and every man a beggar.

But in that day character will abide, and it will depend upon "what manner of persons" we are, whether the day of fiery trial is to us a day of gain or loss. What kind of a character are we forming this New Year? Is it fire proof? Is it built upon the "Rock, Christ Jesus?" Is it framed "in all holy conversation and godliness?" Is it covered with the righteousness of Christ?

If it is of this sort, it will be such a a fireproof "building of God," that it will be fitted for a place in the "new heavens" or "new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."

The age is sceptical; it does not believe in a general world-burning. Many disciples of Christ think that "the day of the Lord" is so remote that it is not important to give much time or thought to a subject so far removed from "practical work." But the apostle Peter says, that all that prevents the earth's destruction by fire, is the "long-suffering" of God, and his desire that "all should come to repentance." There is a limit to the long-suffering of God, as we know from his dealings with mankind; and when that is reached, the fire will come. The wonder is, not that it is delayed, but that it has not come sooner upon a world as ready for destruction. Last summer I drove through the long, paved street of a Swiss village, between ruined walls and heaps of cinders and rubbish. One short night had laid a wealthy village of one hundred and fifty thousand houses in ashes. Most of the inhabitants had found homes in other neighboring towns, but a few were digging among the ruins. Talking with one of these about the fire, he said, "We ought to have known that it would come to us at last; all our towns are built so carelessly, that they are sure to burn sooner or later."

"Sure to burn sooner or later." That is the truth about "the earth and the works that are therein;" it is so inflammable, and its works are so carelessly built, that we are accustomed to alarms of fire, and few think as seriously of a conflagration as did the Boston merchant; but it would go far toward making us fire proof for the "day of the Lord," if we asked ourselves the question, every time the fire bell sounded, "Seeing all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of person ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness?—C. A. Stoddard, . Observer.

Metropolitan Methodism Stirred up.

ANNIHIALTIONISM ANNIHILATED.

Yesterday, by invitation, the Rev. M. S. Terrey, of Poughkeepsie, read an essay before the Methodist preachers on the doctrine of conscious existence after death, in which he handled the annihilationists' theories so effectually that it seemed, both logically and theologically, they could have no foundation to stand upon. He took up the Scriptural texts relied upon by the advocates of annihilation in support of their theories and so dissected them or placed them in their true relations to each other that the very opposite of annihilation was proved by them. He took up also the originals of such words as, in our translation of the Bible, are rendered "life" and "death," "everlasting" and "eternal," "hell" and "grave," "soul" and "spirit," "flesh" and "body," to show the varied meaning of those words and then, examining the theories of annihilation founded upon the words he showed the utter absurdity of giving to every such word the same meaning in every relation. As an illustration, among many others which the essayist gave, was this, where the words "wind" and "spirit" in our translation have the same Greek word in the original:—"The wind bloweth when it listeh, * * * so is every one that is born of the spirit." By substituting wind for spirit the absurdity of the text and the translation will be apparent. [!!!!] Mr. Terry then examined the passages of Scripture in which the doctrine of conscious existence after death is taught, and answered the annihilationist objectors to the parabolical teachings of Jesus Christ, in which the doctrine is mainly found by showing that the parables of the Savior are all based upon matters of fact or of common belief among the Jews of history. He who was the Truth would not teach so important a doctrine as this by any other than methods of truth and illustrations of facts. The so-called parable of the rich man and Lazarus, recorded by St. Lk. (16.) was examined and found to contain all the elements of fact and none of fiction, and it is not treated as a parable either by Jesus Christ or by evangelist Luke. A comparison of it with other parables will demonstrate this position. But, for argument's sake, he admitted the parabolic character of the narrative, and from that basis also drew the conclusion that conscious existence after death is taught thereby. Mr. Terry then went on to prove the absurdity of very many passages of Scripture, if we admit that physical death brings with it the extinction or annihilation of conscious existence. Paul declared that to him to die was gain, but the speaker failed to see what gain he could have in view if death brought annihilation to him. The promise of Christ to the thief on the cross was mere mockery if he simply meant that that day he should be with him in the Grave instead of Paradise. And so also of many other Scriptural passages. The duration of this conscious existence, whether in bliss or woe, was next examined, when from various texts it was shown to be "eternal" "everlasting," "for ever and ever," "without end," &c., and that the bad as well as the good have this conscious existence was also demonstrated from Scripture.

The Rev. Dr. True, being known to have some peculiar views on the subject, was invited to speak. In his preface he acknowledged himself a "destructionist," but not an annihilationist." His theory is that God has given his law to mankind through three representative person—Adam, Moses and Jesus Christ. That with the promulgation of that law in each case the penalty of death was connected, and that it would not have been law had not a penalty been attached. That death to Adam meant destruction or nothing, but that the interposition of Christ postponed the day of judgment and of punishment, and that we are now living under a dispensation of mercy, and not of judgment. That as the fires of the valley Hinnom, from which the idea of Gehena or hell is taken, consumed the refuse of the sacrifices, so the fires of the latter, which the Doctor believes to be material, will eventually consume the souls and bodies of the wicked. That the wicked dead are "reserved in darkness," or, as the Doctor otherwise expressed it, locked up in Ludlow Street jail, as it were, until the day of trial and final judgment shall take place, when they shall be turned into hell, and that, while the soul as a substance shall exist, the destruction of all its functions and faculties will take place probably gradually until all are destroyed. The Doctor did not seem to be clear in his own mind as to whether the wicked dead are now suffering any fiery punishment or not; nor did he seem to see the injustice of God locking up a criminal in prison for 4,000 years before trial. But as between God and the sinner he deems the judgment settled at death. Nor could he satisfactorily explain to the brethren, on the principles of his own theory, how a just God could continue to inflict punishment upon a being whom he had previously robbed of all his functions and faculties.

Dr. True's theories were considered so heretical that Dr. Curry courteously dissented from them and called him to order, while Mr. Corbitt fired up and declared that the utterance of such heresies should not be permitted in a body of Methodist preachers and the utterer thereof should be hustled out of the Methodist church. Mr. Corbitt was severely rebuked by several brethren for his discourteous language toward the Doctor and also toward the presiding officer, whose call to order he refused to obey. Drs. Brown Crawford and others favored the fullest liberty of speech in their meetings. Dr. Crawford thought if Methodist doctrines could not bear to have the plowshare of criticism struck deep into the subsoil they ought to know it. He did not think the meeting was at all responsible for the views of Dr. True. He knew them beforehand, and it was upon his motion that the Doctor was invited to speak; but he did not subscribe in a single particular to them. He thought that the "circumstances" were unfortunate, because reporters and others besides preachers were present. But still he was content to have such persons present, though he was himself so often restrained from speaking because of the knowledge that representatives of the press were in their meetings.

Dr. True explained that he did not try to hold the brethren responsible for anything he had said. He thought he had been very roughly handled after having been invited to speak. He had reason to know that his views were held by a very large portion of thinking men of British Wesleyanism and by very many in this country, and he did not think they could be successfully refuted. He was none the less a Methodist for holding those views.—N. Y. Herald, Dec 31.

A Whole Denomination of Missionaries.

Of all the sects in Christendom the Moravians are the weakest in number. Their membership in this country is but six thousand, and in all Europe only fifteen thousand. And yet this mere handful of Christians have been the poineers of the modern missionary movement, and have set an example which, if followed by the other denominations with a zeal proportinate to their numbers, would build up Christianity in every portion of the globe. The Moravian Society for propagating the gospel among the heathen was eighty-five years old the ninth of last September. Their field of missions is very extensive, embracing sixteen provinces, in various and widely separated countries. Their provinces are; 1, Greenland; 2, Labrador; 3, North American Indians; 4, St. Thomas and St, John's, West Indies; 5, St. Croix; 6, Jamaica; 7, Antigua; 8, St. Kitts; 9, Barbadoes; 10, Tobago; 11, Mosquito coast, Central America; 12, Surinam, South America; 13, South Africa and West Africa; 14, East Africa; 15, Australia; 16, West Himalaya. In these provinces there are 100 mission stations and out-stations. In these there are 3757 laborers of all classes. These have established and sustain 310 schools of all grades. The number of converts is 69,401, which is more than three times the number of church members in the whole denomination in Europe and America!

Wherever their missionaries have penetrated they have manifested the same devotion, self-sacrifice and courage. Arctic cold and torrid heat, wild beasts and savage men have had no terrors for them. Their record is one of which any Christian denomination might well be proud; and it will remain a perpetual rebuke to the listlessness and weak endeavors of some more numerous and powerful sects.

The Sins of the Tongue.

In all the disorders of the world the tongue hath a great share. To let pass those irruptions of infernal furies, blasphemies and cursing, lying and uncharitable speeches, how much have we to account for as unprofitable talking! It is a lamentable thing that there is nothing, for the most part, in common entertainments and societies of men together but refuse and trash; as if their tongues were given them for no other end than to be their shame, by discovering their folly and weakness.

But for all the disorders of the tongue, the remedy must begin at the heart. Purge the fountain, and then the streams will be clear. Keep thy heart, and then it will be easy to keep thy tongue.

It is a great help in the quality of speech to abate in quantity; to ponder what we are going to say. "Set a watch before the doors of thy lips." Ps. 41 : 3. He bids us not build up like a stone wall, that nothing may go in nor come out, but he speaks of a door, which may sometimes open, and oftimes shut, withal to have a watch standing continually. A Christian must labor to have his speech as contracted as can be in the things of this earth; and even in divine things our words should be few and wary. In speaking of the greatest things, it is a great point of wisdom not to speak too much. The Apostle James makes it a great character of a Christian's perfections: "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man." But where is that man? Seeing we find men generally, and most of all ourselves, so far from this, it cannot choose but work this, to stir up ardent desires in us to be removed to that blessed society where there shall never be a word amiss nor a word too much.—Archbishop Leighton.

Will it Pay?

Weigh well the practice of sin, and ponder the question, remembering that "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." (Rom. 6: 23.)

Will you live in sin, and persist in gratifying your passions, regardless of consequences?

Or, will you curb with firm purpose, and in reliance on Divine help, unlawful indulgencies, manfully resist temptation to evil, and trust to God to enable you to live to him!

"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." (Rom. 12: 1.)

To disregard consequences is not wise. What must be the end of a life without God?

Are you so foolish as to risk this consequence?

What! die hopeless! Plunge into eternity without a ray of light?

"There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest." (Eccl. 9: 10.)

The Watchman and Reflector puts in the following plea for the profession:—"An editor is rightly considered no more infallible than other men; but like man in other callings it may well be supposed that he best comprehends the special and peculiar claims of his situation in the relations and responsibilities which it involves. He makes mistakes continually, doubtless. Yet, after all he might make more if he had to follow the suggestions of other minds rather than the enlightened dictates of his own. He is, or ought to be at least, 'master of his own situation.' Like a given pastor in his given sphere, he has a knowledge of what claims his particular consideration, which another cannot, in the nature of the case, so clearly and so well comprehend. With all the facts of any one case pressing on his mind, facts which an outsider can know only in part, he may and will err; but still he must decide questions of expediency, and it may be principles, from his own special standpoint. These he should commonly be able to dispose of intelligently and conscienciously. Let him, at least, be judged with a degree of Christian charity accorded men in other responsible callings."

"By what authority do the Protestant churches change the fifth petition of the Lord's Prayer from 'Forgive us our debts,' etc., to 'Forgive us our trespasses,' etc?"

On the authority of the freer rendering of the older versions of the Bible, which translations are yet followed in the "Book of Common Prayer" of the Episcopal churches in England and America. Chaucer's rendering in the Persones Tale is curious—"Foryeve us our gifts as we foryeve hem that have agilted us." We very much prefer the rendering of our present translation of the Bible to that of the Prayer Book "Debts" includes more than "trespasses." And yet we have known many a man who talked to God about having forgiven his debtors who yet foreclosed mortgages, and levied executions against men in distress without pity. When God shall answer the prayer, and forgive his debts as he forgives his debtors, such a man will have a rough time of it.—Christian Union.

"Two Rabbis," says a Jewish legend, "as they drew nigh to Jerusalem, saw a fox running upon the hill of Zion. At the sight Rabbi Joshua wept, but Rabbi Elizer smiled. 'Wherefore dost thou smile?' asked the one who wept. 'Nay, wherefore dost thou weep?' said the other. 'I weep,' replied the Rabbi Joshua, 'because I see fulfilled what is written in the Lamentations: Because of the mountain of Zion, which is desolate, the foxes walk upon it.'" "'And therefore do I smile,' said Rabbi Elizer, 'for in the sign that God hath fulfilled his threatenings, I see a pledge that not one of his promises shall fail!'" —Truly, to the heart that lays hold upon the promises, the darkest "cloud" has "a silver lining."

Our Young Folks.

My Three Little Texts.

I am very young and little;
I am only just turned two,
And I cannot learn long chapters,
As my elder sisters do;
But I know three little verses
That ma has taught to me,
And I say them every morning
As I stand beside her knee.
The first is, "Thou God, seest me."
Is not that a pretty text?
And "Suffer the little children
To come unto me" is the next.
But the last one is the shortest:
It is only "God is love."
How kind he is in sending us
Such sweet verses from above!
He knows that chapters I can't learn,
So I think he sent those three Short easy texts on purpose
For little ones like me.

An Infant's Prayer.

A gentleman whose business detained him from home the greater part of the time, always looked forward to the Sabbath, not that he might receive spiritual help in waiting upon the Lord, but that he might amuse himself listening to the artless prattle of an only child, a bright boy of three summers.

The little one was standing on his papa's knee, with his arms clasped about his neck and his curly head nestling upon his shoulder, when his mamma said, "Come, Charley, it's time to go to bed."

Charley bade his papa good-night, but just as he was leaving the room, turned back, saying, "papa won't you come, too, and hear me say my prayers?"

The fond parent thought his little one had never looked so sweet as when kneeling with his hands clasped beside his mother.

"You must kneel, too, papa, just as mamma and I do."

The father knelt. There was no petition in the simple prayer which touched his heart: "God bless my dear papa." How sweet the words sounded coming from the child's sweet lips.

"Now you must pray, too, papa. This is what I learned to say first: 'God bless me' Say so won't you?"

The father said "God bless me."

"For Jesus' sake, Amen," added the child.

The next evening, about the same hour, as the father was walking in the street, the vision of the darling child kneeling and praying for him presented itself to his mind. Just at this moment a friend touched his arm saying, "Come with me, and let us have something to drink."

"No," said the father, "I shall never touch any intoxicating drinks again."

"Why, how is that? I never knew you to be so scrupulous before."

"I have a darling boy at home, and I want him to honor his father. If I go on drinking occasionally, by-and-by the habit will become fixed. God forbid that I should ever bring disgrace upon my boy."

"You are right," said the friend. "I am glad you reminded me of my responsibility as a parent. Not every one has the courage to refuse. I know that I have indulged more than I ought, but, like you, I resolve from henceforth to abstain from all intoxicating drinks."

"God bless you my dear papa!" The words had sounded like a benediction, and the remembrance of them had given the father courage to do his duty. How could he do wrong when he knew his little one was kneeling at home praying for him?

At night when he retired to rest he thought of his resolution, and that he might have strength to heed it, prayed, "God bless me"—a very simple petition, but one which led the father to the Savior.

Truly, "A little child shall lead them."—American Messenger.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, January 14, 1873.

WE have several times alluded to Dr. Louis Buchner, the celebrated 'Jerman materialis'. He is a ranting infidel; yet nevertheless, in his system of philosophy holds some truths which all the ingenuity of immaterialism can by no means evade. We observe that one of the points of his faith which is strenuously objected to is, his opinion that 'We return in death to the dust of the earth!' Is that an infidel sentiment? We remember where in a very ancient work, ascribed to Moses, we found this very sentiment uttered by the lips of God himself. 'Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return!' We wonder the Doctor does not turn the Scriptures of his opposers upon them. Perhaps, however, like them, his eyes are blinded to what they really do teach.

THE friends of the eternal misery dogma have always found it difficult to locate the place where it should be endured. In looking over a file of the Advent Herald we find this suggestion from S. Bliss, the editor:

> We have often thought that the moon may prove to be the great prison house of the lost from this planet. How that may be, eternity alone can reveal.

—Another thought the planet Mars would be the home of immortal wo, while Whiston taught that a comet of long period would be the prison house of the damned. Now-a days orthodoxy is taking refuge in the idea that 'hell is a state, not a place;' and every sinner carries or will carry his own gehenna in his own bosom. The Bible doctrine relieves us of all those absurdities. It plainly says the wicked 'shall be rewarded in the earth.' Why not believe it?

> THE soul of man shall never end. Passing unharmed through the ordeal of death, it lives still; and, reasoning, thinking, feeling, it soars or sinks for ever. Its existence—becoming greater by death, and more real—God will not destroy, and nothing else can. Progress through infinite duration is before it, like Alp above Alp, or deep under deep.
>
> But there are some things that shall never end. One of them is the wrath of God. Like a sea it will roll its waves of fire on and on forever. When countless millions of ages shall have run their agonizing circle of wo and despair, it will still be the wrath to come.
>
> The love of Christ shall never end. The solace of earth, it will be also the happiness of the glorious future. The water of this living spring fails not. Human loves, like the stars of morn, pale and disappear; but the love of Jesus, like the dawn gradually brightening into perfect day, shall grow brighter and brighter as eternity rolls on.

We hear sometimes about 'putting that and that together.' We find the above put together, to all appearance in cool blood, in an essay in one of our exchanges. We have put them together in a kind of disjunctive way, that our readers may see the absurdity of the premise fully established in the horribleness of the one conclusion, and the flat contradiction between the two.

OCCASIONALLY a mild-mannered brother of orthodox connection meekly suggests that poetic sentiment may—if allowed unrebuked away, if it be not strictly conformed to the principles of the Scriptures, it 'may subvert primitive truth.' One, for instance, thinks there is danger when Christian journals are used to teach such 'poetic sentiment' as this:

> And who knows but she who had been taken away from that very parlor, and who was now with her lord, came bending over them and touched their souls with celestial fire.

—'May subvert the truth,' indeed. Why such things have subverted the truth, already, until it is cast out as offensive, worse than infidelity; while error is cherished and delusion hugged to the heart. Heathen fables are readily adapted to Christian ideas, and no one is shocked to find the story of Charon and his ferry over the Styx, in our Sunday School hymn books. But let one say that he believes the Scriptures—that 'the dead know not anything,' that they are asleep, and the Christian world is scandalized. Away with the rule of unsanctified fancy. Let not our religion be without sentimentalism; but let sentiment and Scripture agree; only the true, whether in thought or fancy be deemed beautiful. What! shall we desire a different truth from that which really exists? Shall we substitute human for the divine standards of correct taste in the play of imagination?

THE most solemn scenes have sometimes a most ludicrous side. For instance—this extract from an obituary in a Methodist paper:

> "The funeral exercises were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Woods, Methodist, and were very solemn and affecting to the numerous relatives and friends present. The Doctor looked perfectly natural as he lay in his coffin, seeming to say to his old friends, 'What's all this confusion about? I am happy.'"

—As we read we could not help thinking of the prayer offered in one of the Chicago churches last Thanksdiving day The petitioner, in summing up his subjects and reasons for thankfulness, remarked, in effect, that while some in the past year had been called from labor to reward, taken from earth's toils to heaven's fruition, removed from the prison house of clay to the liberty of unfettered spirits in the presence of God; 'We thank thee O Lord that we are still permitted to live!'

If Paul had possessed a mind of that stamp, one could easily believe that he desired to both die and to live, each more than the other, while he really chose neither of them, and yet above all things was anxiously wishing for death. (See Phil. 3; v 1-23 and ordinary expositions of the same) But Paul had a clearer head. His logic, sometimes involved, never involves an absurdity. Consistency is the adorning jewel of all his work. A little more of that Pauline grace would rid us of a deal of chaff in prayers, hymns, doctrine and practice.

NEW EDITIONS.

A new edition of Eld. L. C. Collins' exposition of the parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus is now ready. This edition contains all the wealth of the original work, with sixteen pages of new material, containing new arguments and illustrations of the subject, and additional demonstrations of the heretofore popular glosses of this passage.

We have not yet seen an attempt at a reply to Br. Collins' exegeis. Many consider it irrefutable, and we confess that we are of the number. We commend it to all, heartily and unreservedly. Price, post-paid, 15c.

We are arranging to issue a new and large edition of "The Faith of St. Paul," by the same author, the second edition being exhausted, so that we are unable for the present to fill orders. Due notice will be given when the new edition is ready, and orders will then be promptly filled.

LOUIS NAPOLEON.

This remarkable personage died at his home in Chiselhurst, Eng., Thursday morning, Jan. 9, at 10:45 a. m. His death caused a considerable sensation, but appears to be but little regretted. At one time he occupied a position of commanding influence, being generally regarded as the most sagacious and powerful sovereign of the European continent. But after the Italian war his political power commenced to wave, and spite of his every effort to retain the position he had held by virtue of his successful wars with Russia and Austria and his notably able administration of the domestic affairs of the French empire, his reputation as a man of ability steadily decreased, until it was swallowed up in that gulf of disasters to France, the late war with Prussia. His failure there was so enormous that it has been somewhat tenderly judged by reason of a prevailing sentiment of pity for the fallen emperor.

His death leaves a somewhat numerous class of prophetic expositors in the lurch. What new peals they will give their 'alarm bells,' or in whom they will find the antitype of the two horned and other beasts, we will not attempt to predict. We refer to the matter merely to express a faint hope which we cherish that the lesson may not be altogether lost, but lead to the adoption of sounder and more consistent rules of interpretation.

The family of the deceased seem to be deeply stricken with grief. His wife, especially, seems to have cherished the fondest affection for her none too faithful spouse. His son, a youth of seventeen years, recalled from his military school only too late to see his father alive, was also deeply affected. He falls heir to his father's pretensions to the imperial throne, and may, very likely, hereafter cut some figure in European politics among the many claimants of "the divine right" to govern France.

RULE OR RUIN.

This is the devil's own motto, and a favorite text with many of his most devoted followers. That this should be the darling precept of many wicked—openly wicked men, is not to be wondered at. Unfortunately, the number of those who seem to have adopted this Satanic motto is not confined to non-professors of religion. In many places ecclesiastical politics are as fiercely conducted as are those of the world. There are men in the church to-day, who are determined to rule or ruin. They have lost, if they possessed, the spirit of the Master. The worship they most delight in is 'will-worship,' the will that they worship being their own. By their acts, though never by their words, they say "We'll have our own way or we'll make you sorry for it, we'll crush you and break you down if we can."

Any man thoroughly bent on having his own way right or wrong is capable of doing a vast deal of mischief in a church. The secular partisan says, 'My party right or wrong;' the 'rule or ruin' man says, "My way right or wrong." If he is not consulted about everything in the church, if he is not allowed to have his own way about everything, he becomes disaffected at once, and begins his rule or ruin policy. It is some satisfaction to good men to know that peace makers and peace breakers, though together in this world, will be eternally separated in the world to come. They who seek to make this earth a paradise will one day find it such; while they who are determined, right or wrong, to ruin what they cannot rule, shall at last find their own appropriate inferno in company with the master whom they have served. "Blessed are the peace makers; for they shall be called the children of God." He who would be a true follower of the Prince of Peace, must himself be a peace maker.

J. H. W.

HERESY "HUSTLED OUT."

We trust none of our readers will fail to read the report of the late "Methodist Ministers' Meeting" of New York city, which we republish from the Herald. It reminds us of a Ministers' Meeting in Chicago, not many weeks since. Br. F. Burr happened in one day when the subject of the intermediate state was up. The upshot of his call was an invitation to read them an essay setting forth the Adventist view of that subject, which he accepted. The scene which followed its reading was very similar to that which ensued upon Dr. True's remarks in the New York meeting. Some tried to be patronizingly wise, and with a sort of dignified authority "squelch" the truth by an ipse dixit. Others were filled with vexation that the question was ever allowed to be mooted—except their side of it. The only serious attempt at a reply was not able to support its own weight, and no one would volunteer, neither would any suffer themselves to be forced forward against the David who with sling and stone of Scripture modestly defied them all to assail his position.

The meeting finally broke up in confusion, the subject being postponed in an exceedingly indefinite manner. Probably in Chicago, as in New York, a committee will now be appointed to take charge of "subject," and see to it that "topics not in accordance with the doctrine of the Methodist church" are summarily buried in some of the Hadean dungeons so accessible to Committees, and hereafter the "Minister's Meetings" will not be troubled with living, vital issues of the day.

Very well, brethren: take your own course. But if you do shut your own eyes now, you will open them by and by in wonder upon the fact that while you have been blinding yourselves these truths have been obtaining a mighty grasp upon the public mind, both in and out of the church. The days of the eternal misery dogma are numbered. People are looking for some probable solution of the mysteries of the hereafter. If the simple truth of the Scriptures be hidden from their eyes, and they be left in the fogs of immaterialism, then be sure you will see in your churches a plentiful harvest of restorationism. The seed for it is sown, and is springing up. These are fast times, and we may see a revolution in the theology of America sooner than the most sanguine would think. When it comes it will be restorationism, as the popular and soul deceiving, because the more attractive view, against 'annihilation,' so-called—which is the doctrine of the Scriptures. It appears to us that the pendulum of public opinion is gathering force and speed in its return swing from the horrid extreme of the teachings of Edwards and others concerning the future punishment. Happy they who are not carried to the opposite extreme of Originism, in any of its varied forms.

ENLARGE THE HEART.

When new calls are made for help, we should not withdraw our donations from benevolent work already in hand, but our hearts should be enlarged, and our purses opened wider, according to the necessities of the case. We speak of this because of the evident tendency to throw all donations into the treasuries of the newest and latest benevolent enterprise. We remember that while the country was pluming itself upon the virtue displayed in the wonderful response to Chicago's call for aid after the great fire, that the managers of various benevolent institutions were obliged to tax their energies and ingenuity to keep up their revenues. This was true to a sufficient extent to prove that in many instances the new call did not lead to new and special sacrifice to meet the special case presented, but individuals gave to distressed Chicago what formerly they had given in other directions.

We see the same thing developed among ourselves. When the Missionary Society was organized, it was not designed to supplant any other good work among us, but, rather, to supplement them all. Yet one has but to watch the columns of our Eastern contemporary in which the acknowledgements are made, and compare them with the reports of a few years since, to see that the Missionary work is absorbing the donations formerly applied for the Tract Fund, to send the paper to the poor and like work.

Now this ought to be done, the Missionary work already undertaken should not only be supported, but the number of missionaries in active service should be greatly enlarged: but at the same time these other things should not be left undone. The fact that we are doing less than what we should, that we neglect a portion of our duties while running zealously in some particular direction in faith or practice, is a crying sin among us, and demands immediate and hearty reformation.

A church thinks to build a chapel; straightway it is mooted whether it were not best to dispense with the services of the minister while the house is going up. And in some cases the minister has been discharged—and preaching, church and house have all gone by the board together, as might have been expected.

Hard times come on. The first thing is to stop the paper—the very visitor you need to cheer the household which the clouds hung darkly over, and to save the trifle of four cent's a week, some shut themselves off from communication from the body, from the news of the churches, from the words of consolation and comfort administered by able ministers of the word. The heart is contracted; the range of the sympathies is narrowed, and the result of a declining spirituality is almost certain to follow.

We center a hearty protest against this fashion of "robbing Peter to pay Paul." Let us do what needs to be done in a manly as well as Christian way. And when new requisitions upon our charity are uttered let them be honored not in the dishonor of other claims, but in the enlargement of our bounty, a greater abnegation of self. Instead of throwing the new burden upon the needy; instead of taxing the minister's scanty support; instead stopping the visits of one of your best and least expensive friends, your paper, tax your appetite, your pride, the lust of the flesh, and of the eye, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." And it is generally true that it is more blessed to give than to retain, and hoard up our gains. To give is to live. Make the enlargement of the heart a life work; giving systematically from principle, and not acting from impulse of the moment, and you shall find it true, not only that the more you give the more you can give, but also that there is a pleasure akin to the divine in enlarging the heart.

O brethren of Advent faith! let us not become narrow in our sympathies nor contracted in our benevolence, lest by unwisely witholding we impoverish ourselves, and wither and die with the dry rot of selfishness.

THE EDITOR.

The readers of THE TIMES will perhaps pardon a few allusions to myself personally, and to my relations with them. There have been many inquiries why the editor's name is not given each week in THE TIMES, and not a few friends have insisted that I should "fly my name" at the head of the editorial department of our paper. Now while I am greatly obliged for the esteem displayed in the anxiety that, as some have said, I "should have the credit for what I do," my own conviction is that the way I have chosen is the best way. And although if there were any especial honors or emoluments connected with the office of editor of THE TIMES, I might justly set up the claim of having fairly earned them all. I am free to confess that my ambition has never been in this direction. I have felt it a privilege to toil by day and by night, out of the reach of the public eye, and if I could have controlled events, should at the present time be prosecuting my work out of sight, as formerly. But when circumstances seemed to demand that I should publicly accept the place of editor of our paper, I determined that so far as possible THE TIMES should be an impersonal journal, standing upon its own merits, itself occupying the foreground, as a teacher and advocate of certain great principles of religious truth, while the editor should show himself in the arrangement, quality and amount of his work rather than by obtrusion of his personality upon the public.

These views may not be correct, but they are my convictions, and I shall endeavor to carry them out. I am by no means insensible to the honor of being the quite nearly unanimous choice of those interested to fill the place of editor of THE TIMES, but I should be sorry indeed if the place should become more attractive to me than its work; or I be led to covet the honors of the position rather than its opportunities for service. Being accredited with some degree of fitness for the place, my highest ambition is to so fill it that I may secure a reward, not in the praise or disapproval (for the dissatisfaction of some men is really a commendation) of men, but an enduring reward, that cannot be marred by time or circumstances, in the life to come.

I have been in doubt whether I should retain my office in the Association. I am desirous of remaining in the cause I love, and there is no advantage or pleasure I would not freely forego for its sake. And I felt it a duty at the meeting of the board of officers last month to give in my resignation as business agent and editor. After a careful consideration of all my reasons for this step they unanimously declined to excuse me from service in such terms of confidence and esteem that I cordially consented to still coöperate with them in the work of our Western Association. And now I trust I shall not be left to the difficult task of "making brick without straw." Let our brethren all abroad cheer up. There are better days before us. "Hard times" are the Lord's times; the time for him to show himself—for then the people have the best opportunity to show forth all the graces of the gospel. When the vineyards are fat and flourishing; when the corn not only overflows the cribs but represents a high purchasing value; when the wheat bins are bursting; when labor commands high prices in a ready market; then it is easy to trust the Lord, and joy in him. But when the fig tree has no blossoms, and there is no fruit on the vines; when the labor of the olive fails and the field yields no meat; when the flock is cut off from the fold, and in the stall there is no herd (Hab. 3); when the product of labor brings but little cash return, when wants and debt press, and money is, in the expressive phrase, "tight," then it is that true faith is tested, and it is proved whether our rejoicing is in the Lord, and our joy is the God of our salvation. It was easy to give for the Lord and sacrifice for his cause out of our obedience; but a greater blessing awaits those who pour into God's treasury the [illegible] fruit of a stern self-denial.

It is my firm conviction that Go [illegible] s in the movement respecting this p [illegible] r, and though our work be hindered for a time, if we will but sink all personal aims, all considerations of individual honor and advantage and unite in the work of establishing a paper that shall, in the spirit and power which endued John the Baptist to proclaim the near approach of the kingdom of God, while pressing those neglected truths then to be demonstrated, and calling attention to the momentous events then to occur, he will bless us as never before, and enlarge our borders on every side.

And as to the editor, let the question not be, Who is he? but Are the proper means for his work provided? and, Is the work well and faithfully done? Heaven help us upon this broader plane of action, and to higher aspirations for usefulness. W. L. H.

SMUGGLED.

The advent of the New Year was celebrated by an event, in which, we have no doubt, the readers of THE TIMES will be interested. We refer to the marriage of our editor, brief mention of which was made in last week's paper. Thinking that an event so notable as this, and in which our Chief is so intimately connected, was deserving of more than a mere mention, we, as co-laborers in the office with our brother, have assumed the responsibility of inserting this article without his knowledge.

The wedding was a plain and simple one, and the number of guests present was not large. The ceremony was performed by Eld L. C. Collins. The bride, Mrs. Addie A. Himes (widow of the lamented Eld. Edwin T. Himes), is an intelligent, accomplished unassuming Christian woman, and in her our friend and brother William has found a helpmate, one to cheer him, soothe him, sympathize with him; one who will share his troubles, which, God grant, may be light and few—one who will partake of his prosperity, which, we sincerely hope, may be unbounded and lasting. Truly, he has our warmest congratulations, and our fervent prayers. Seldom has it been our lot to become acquainted with one whose purity of motive, high-toned principle and unselfish sincerity are more thoroughly exemplified than in William L. Himes. Amiable, kind and dignified, withal possessing a practical mind adapted either to business matters or theological controversy, he is eminently fitted to succeed in life. A few days ago he was plodding alone—all lonely and alone. He found that

"Eden was a desert, the garden was a wild,
And man, the hermit, sighed 'till woman smiled."

In conclusion, we cannot refrain from extending our sincere expression of good will to our friend and his bride. May their future course in life be happy, and if occasional clouds of sorrow must shadow their pathway, may they speedily disappear, and they continue "on their way rejoicing."

A. W. TUCKER,
I. L. GABRIELSON,
W. H. HORNADAY

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

A friend writes us how a brother, a student at Oberlin, has been brought into the faith by reading Whitmore, Constable and others. The seed sown in books and tracts is not lost.——The daily Times of this city, on Monday week, gave a very fair report of the services at Green St. chapel the previous forenoon, including a resume of an interesting sermon by Br. Burr.——We are informed that Eld. Grant purposes a speedy return to California, and will spend the remainder of the winter in that State.——The church in Vallejo is prospering, rejoicing in the evidences of the presence of the Holy Spirit in their midst.——Among the needy flocks—there are oh! so many of them—we have lately received appeals from the churches in Moline, Ill., and Winona, Minn. We lately heard of five ministers gathered at one Sunday service in an Eastern city—not a special meeting either. There is room West, and no danger of crowding.——Eld. S. G. Mathewson has accepted a call from the Worcester, Mass., church, and will remove to that city in the spring.

THE SUBJECT STILL PRESSING ITSELF.

In another place we have given the New York Herald's apparently fair report of the discussion of "annihilation" by the Methodist ministers of that city at a late meeting. Since that was in type, we find a report of a second discussion of the same topic, from another source, which, as it cannot fail to interest our readers, we here subjoin:

The Methodist preachers of New York and vicinity held their regular weekly meeting in the Mission rooms. The following questions were proposed for discussion at the next regular meeting: Shall the wicked be finally saved? Will the wicked in hell finally become extinct? Are the future punishments of the wicked permanent? Are the conscious punishments of the wicked endless, or are the punishments of the wicked in hell parallel to the eternal bliss of the righteous in heaven?

An elderly gentleman said that there was a disposition to ignore this subject of hell. The foundation of the church stands upon this question. If there is danger let the people see it. Why shut out the light? During the past week I have been approached by the members of my congregation, saying, "I see that the Methodists are dropping their eternal damnation." If the punishment of the wicked is not endless, then the joy of the righteous is not. One doctrine stands with the other. If the views promulgated by Dr. True be allowed to go unanswered it will make me desperate. My very soul is absorbed. It's an awful thing with me. I propose the following; Do the Scriptures give hope that the wicked shall finally exist? [Cries of "Put him out!"]

Dr. True said that it was without any intervention on his part that he was called upon to speak. He had been patient to present his views to the public. For seven years he had taught them to his flock with good results. I did not think that when I spoke I endangered the souls of those present. If you want to reach the point, I propose that the following proposition be discussed: "That the eternal future of the wicked is not the eternal consciousness of sin and misery;" or, "Is eternal death eternal punishment?"

Mr. Corbett asked how punishment could be eternal, if the soul ceases to exist.

Dr. True—There must be a difference between utter nothingness and destruction. For instance, a house can be destroyed, or a tree, but it is a something. I am so sanguine of my views that I believe that the whole Christian church will sooner or later embrace them. If the other question does not meet your approbation, try this: "Does the future punishment of the wicked imply their eternal consciousness?" [Hisses.]

An excited member here sprang to his seat, saying: "We have had too much of this at the last meeting, and the notices of the press have occasioned considerable talk. There is danger. [Cries of 'Amen.'] We are now to startle the religious community for ten weeks to come, when we should devote our efforts to something higher. The devil is rubbing his hands gleefully; he has never had a better chance than the present. If this question be adopted I must read up on hell instead of warning sinners from the wrath to come. Are we to begin the year with this devilish or hellish excitement? I have no objection that this theme be discussed in March. I see reporters present from this city, from Brooklyn, Jersy City, Newark, and other neighboring places. I am not in favor of the discussion of this question with open doors." [Sensation.]

Mr. Corbett said there was no use ignoring the subject. It will not interfere with the salvation of souls. Mr. Wesley did not hesitate to speak of hell and damnation; why should we? Perhaps there may be greater ones here than he. I think this question should be discussed for the salvation of souls. If the doctrine of destruction be accepted I go about carelessly; but make punishment eternal and I go along carefully. I do not pretend to be an angel—[laughter]—I am liable to err, but when the doctrines of the church are assailed, I rise to arms for its defence. You tell me to be calm. I cannot when that which is so dear to me is wronged. I know that the discussion will do good. The reason why we do not get along any faster is because we do not have enough hell in our religion.

A vote was then taken on Mr. McAllister's motion to lay the question on the table, which was lost.

A tall gentleman addressed the assemblage. He was sorry that it was said that the church was ambiguous. It would be unfortunate, if a question of such moment be not discussed. He was not in favor of having the reporters admitted. The press to-morrow would have the proceedings of this meeting, and the world at large would see that we are afraid to touch this subject of hell. If a brother is so low as to be afraid of altering his views by a discussion, I recommend that he stay at home and pray. In Wesley's time they preached sermons on subjects like these: "A few groans from hell." "A nut for damned sinners to crack." I hope we will act like sensible men, and not like children, we should not shrink from this question. I go in for fair play. [A voice, "Hallelujah!"]

The next speaker said that if a little intellectual investigation be denied they would go where it would not be denied. One of the greatest hindrances in the cause of God is that people are not impressed enough with hell. This preachers' meeting should speak with no uncertain sound. We want truth. [Cries of "Glory!"] I want this question discussed next Monday, and to be continued until finally disposed of. [A voice, "Put him out!"] I shall not be frowned down.

An other reverend doctor did not think that this question was one of the doctrines of the Methodist church, neither did he know that he was in a manufactory of Methodist doctrines and creeds. The house built by those shining lights of our church, he said, was built. Shall we take out the foundation stone and show it to the world? [Cries of "No!"] We owe something to our people. They have their convictions fixed. Are we authorised to alter them? [Cries of "Yes!"]

The motion to postpone the debate until the first Monday in March was lost—21 to 19.

A gentleman moved that when they do adjourn it be to meet the first Monday in March. [Laughter.]

Rev. Dr. Roach asked, Wh [illegible] we propose to discuss the question at this time? Is it proper to doubt that the future happiness of the pure be everlasting? I have no doubt that Mr. Corbett will do the subject justice. Hell was preached three or four years ago, and discussed with avidity. It is now settled. The wicked shall be turned to hell. I believe that nothing but evil will come by the discussion of this theme. Have we the authority to discuss questions like these in public? [A voice, "Sit down."] These meetings have been reported and sent broadcast. We are not justified in these open proceedings.

The motion to lay the whole on the table was lost by a vote 27 to 28.

Rev. Mr. Merwin, the Chairman, said that he could not afford to allow so much waste of precious time.

Rev. Dr. Curry said that he wanted to waste a little. [Laughter.] I express myself decidedly against the discussion. That a representative body of Methodists should gather together and act so unwisely was to be deprecated. It is humiliating to view this question in the light of the profane. That a body of ministers unknown as to their ecclesiastical polity should here discuss the very foundation of Methodism is horrible. If this discussion be allowed, I desire to have my name stricken from the rolls. It should most certainly not be in public, but should be done in private, logically and learnedly. I confess that people have been educated by these meetings through the press. But we do ourselves a serious harm by crudely discussing such a momentous question without due deliberation. I believe the reports as given by the press of these meetings are substantially correct. But this question will damage ourselves and those who look to us for influence.

Mr. Buckley said he did not attach any importance to any member who says he would be influenced by these qustions, which are sometimes spoken of gravely, other times in ribaldry. We are not afraid to grapple with this question. I hail this glorious time. Many things have been said against me. I fall back on my reputation to save me from the false reports circulated against me. [Laughter.] Several years ago a question of similar import was discussed in Boston. It lasted three or four months and was very exciting. But when completed it was found that but two members dissented from the orthodox views.

Dr. True said that he appeared before them by accident—providentially, perhaps. [Jeers.] At the last meeting there was but one who stood by me. [A voice—"You brought him in."] I have not advanced a principle contrary to Methodism, but only a modification. We are not stereotyped in the principles of John Wesley. We live in an age of reform—in a progressive age. I, too, doubt whether this is the proper place to discuss. I want no angry controversy. During the seven years that I have accepted this thory of distruction I have converted 450 souls. I have not lost an iota of my interest for the salvation of mankind.

A motion was here made that the whole subject be postponed, and cries, of "we want no gag-law here."

The motion was lost by a vote of 30 to 12.

The question will therefore be taken up for discussion next Monday.

The Times.

AT HOME.

„ „ „ Lewis Napoleon died at 10:45 a. m. and the news was received in Chicago at 9 o'clock the same forenoon—apparently nearly two hours previous to the event.

„ „ „ An attempt to form a monopoly to raise the price of coal in the Eastern States, is not only feared but predicted. The cries of the oppressed poor will go up to heaven against the extortioners.

„ „ „ The full vote of the States for President and Vice President at the last November election gives Grant and Wilson an actual popular majority of 759,137, which is more than double the majority Grant received in 1868.

„ „ „ An earthquake shock alarmed the people of Central Ohio on Saturday night. At Columbus and at Dayton it caused the dishes and the furniture of the houses to dance, and made a low, rumbling noise like that of distant thunder. What next?—Journal, Jan. 6.

„ „ „ This country is rapidly being covered with a net work of railroads. During the year 1872 no less than 6,511 miles of road were built, at a cost of $424,000,000. The total number of miles of railroad now in operation in the United States is 67,363. The railway building mania is confined to no particular section of the country, but the West is making the most rapid progress in actual construction.

„ „ „ Orson Pratt, one of the brightest lights of Mormonism, has just published a letter in which he expresses the opinion that the fires, shipwrecks, railway disasters, etc., of last year were visitations of Divine Providence for the sole purpose of softening the hearts of the rulers toward the Latter-Day Saints. He calls to mind the plagues of Egypt, and by implication compares President Grant to Pharaoh. According to his idea the Almighty has lost all interest in everything but the revival and perpetuation of polygamy! Such a belief must have a far more demoralizing effect than downright atheism. A more degrading idea could hardly be conceived.—Chicago Journal.

„ „ „ It was to be hoped that the flood tide of crime and disaster which seemed culminating with 1872 would not overflow into the New Year. But the new year brought its new horrors, some of them of the most startling character. Among them we note the murder of an apparently inoffensive young man in Chicago by a youth of fifteen years, who, it is said, seemed 'proud' of the notoriety thus achieved, and resolutely crushing down his better feelings 'complacently' exhibited the fashions and ways of sinners of many years. It is said there is a gang of boys in the vicinity where the crime occurred as vicious as young Dwyer himself. Whether any efficient steps will be taken for their repression remains to be proved.

ABROAD.

. . . The total revenue of the religious corporations siezed by the Sardinian Government is 7,192,000 francs.

„ „ „ A Protestant church was 'consecrated' at Rome the 8th. The world is moving; but how many understand the true import of the signs of the time?

„ „ „ If Russia does not take India from England before many years it will be because she cannot, for she is most assuredly aiming at this goal. For this she is making the Volga navigable all through her own confines to the Caspian Sea, and covering these mighty waters with swift steamers, which are ceaseless agents in founding Russian settlements all over these shores; and no petty tribes need expect so resist her colossal tread.

„ „ „ The exact amount which will accrue to the Italian Treasury from the secularisation of the Roman church property still seems to be a mooted point, for the Papal authorities have always been very reticent on the subject. But if the Opinione's computation of the property owned by the church in Rome alone is anything near the truth, the sum will be a material help to the monarchy. According to its statements there are in Rome 125 monasteries and 92 nunneries, whose united net revenue is £2,978,409.

„ „ „ A recent official investigation into the condition of the people of Ireland has disclosed a decrease of 134,815 acres in the extent of land under cultivation in 1872, as compared with 1871. The decrease of acres sown in cereals is 33,861 acres. Mr. Froude insists that the condition of the Irish people is improving under British rule, and that home rule would ruin them. Emigration is on the increase, and the labor of the country is compelled to abandon it. If home rule could make things worse than they are, then it would indeed be deplorable

„ „ „ From all sides continue to come reports of the magnificent meteoric display which was witnessed on the night of the 28th of November. Father Secchi counted from his observatory in the Collegium Romanum no less than 14,000 of such meteors within five hours. They were most numerous about 8 o'clock when 492 were counted in five minutes. Father Deuza claims that be had counted in Mousaleari, Sicily, 30,000 meteors within the space of six and a half hours. He also reports a northern light

„ „ „ The disastrous effect of the hurricane which recently swept and partly submerged the islands and coasts of the Baltic can hardly be realized by those who live at a distance. Especially hard seems to have been the fate of the commune of the small town of Allinge, or Bornholm, a Danish island. Since a number of years they have made the greatest sacrifices to lay out a port among the rocks, not only for the benefit of the town and the island, but also as a refuge for the vessels of all nations in distress. The hurricane and the sea swept away every vestige of the works, while the poor commune is left to stagger for decades under the debt contracted for this purpose.

„ „ „ The India Times contains some extremely interesting particulars concerning the African slave trade, from which it appears that the inhabitants of India have the greatest share in this business, and that there are large numbers of Parsees and other classes of Hindoo merchants in Zanzibar, Mosambique, Madagascar, and other places, living with African mistresses, who are doing a thriving business with the western coast of India. It is stated that these Indian traders proceed secretly into the interior of Africa to catch their slaves. Ivory being a commodity commonly received on the coast, these traders carry on the slave trade under cover of the ivory trade. It flourishes best in the districts under Portuguese dominion. As Great Britain is now moving rigorously to suppress this trade, we may reasonably expect that she will first of all bring her Indo-African subjects to a speedy reckoning, and that the specious ivory business will soon begin to wane. It is estimated that their slave traffic has cost for some time not less than 100,000 lives a year.

„ „ „ One of the greatest scandals connected with the English Established church is the way in which the clergy are introduced to their parishes. The members of the parishes have nothing at all to do with the matter. A large number of benefices or livings, as they are called, are in the gift of individuals, who hold the right of presentation as personal property, which they may sell at their pleasure; and which, if they become insolvent, may be sold for the benefit of their creditors. Hence the church newspapers abound with advertisements offering these "advowsons," as they are called, for sale; and in addition to these newspaper advertisements, lists of livings for sale or exchange are circulated privately. Of course the advertisers desire to [illegible] erty as valuable as possible, [illegible] ivings are recommended on [illegible] of the good society," and others because of "good fishing," "good shooting," "duty light," "no poor" or "no dissenting chapel in the parish." As the present incumbent cannot be removed without his consent, these advertisements often contain reference to the age or health of the incumbent. Thus in a list now before us, we find that in one case it is stated that the "present incumbent is eighty-four years old;" and in another that "the incumbent is aged fifty-three, but we understand he is in a very precarious state of health." There are many of the members of the Established church who wish to have this state of things changed, but it is not likely to be effected except through disestablishment.

Tired Mothers.

A little elbow leans upon your knee,
Tired knee; that has so much to bear;
A child's dear eyes are looking lovingly
From underneath a thatch of tangled hair.
Perhaps you do not heed the velvet touch
Of warm, moist fingers, folding yours so tight,
You do not prize this blessing over-much,
You almost are too tired to pray to-night.

But it is blessedness! A year ago
I did not see it as I do to-day—
We are so dull and thankless, and too slow
To catch the sunshine till it slips away.
And now it seems surpassing strange to me,
That while I wore the badge of motherhood,
I did not kiss more oft and tenderly
The little child that brought me only good.

I wonder so that mothers often fret
At little children clinging to their gown;
Or that the footprints, when the days are wet,
Are ever black enough to make them frown.
If I could find a little muddy boot,
Or cap, or jacket on my chamber floor;
If I could kiss a rosy, restless foot,
And hear its patter in my home once more,

If I could mend a broken cart to-day,
To-morrow make a kite, to reach the sky—
There is no woman in God's world could say
She was more blissfully content than I.
But, ah! the dainty pillow next my own
Is never rumpled by a shining head;
My singing birdling from its nest is flown;
The little boy I used to kiss is dead!

The Aldine.

Arminius and his Sentiments.

Fourth Article.]

We have designedly devoted most of our space to the subject of predestination. Let us turn our attention to a few collateral subjects, and dispose of them in a more summary manner.

II. GRACE AND FREE WILL.

From the writings of Arminius we collect the following statement of his views: "In his primitive condition, man was endowed with such a portion of knowledge, holiness, and power, as enabled him to understand, esteem, consider, will, and perform the true good; yet not without the assistance of divine grace. But in his lapsed and sinful state, man has no ability, of himself, either to think, will, or do that which is really good. I ascribe to grace the commencement, continuance, and consummation of all good; so that a man, though regenerate, can neither conceive, will, nor do any good at all nor resist any evil temptation, without this preventing and exciting, this following and co-operating grace.—Whence it is evident that I do not, as I am charged, attribute too much to man's free will. The whole controversy reduces itself to the solution of this question: Is the grace of God a certain irresistible force? I believe, according to the Scriptures, that many persons resist the Holy Spirit and reject the grace that is offered. If so much is attributed to grace, 'what then does free will do?' it may be asked. I reply, it saves. Take away free will and nothing will be left to be saved. Take away grace and nothing will be left as the source of salvation. God is the author of salvation: free will only is capable of being saved. No one, except God, is able to bestow salvation; and nothing, except free will, is capable of receiving it. That teacher obtains my highest approbation who ascribes as much as possible to divine grace; provided he so pleads the cause of grace as not to inflict an injury on the justice of God, and not to take away the free will to that which is evil." (Vide vol. I. pp. 252-3, 523; vol. II. p. 472.)

III. THE FALL OF ADAM.

1. "Adam was able to continue in goodness and to refrain from sinning; and this in reality and in reference to the issue.

2. "Adam sinned freely and voluntarily, without any necessity, either internal or external.

3. "Adam did not fall through any decree of God, either of ordination or desertion, but through the mere permission of God, which is placed in subordination, not to predestination but to providence."

This subject is amplified in a very interesting discussion on "Permission," found in vol. III. pp. 418-451. The conclusion of the whole matter is, that man's free agency was recognized at every step in the divine procedure. Adam, in the free exercise of his God-given powers, chose the path of disobedience, darkness, and death. It is therefore a sad but truthful confession that we are

> "Sprung from the man, whose guilty fall > Corrupts his race, and taints us all."

IV. FINAL PERSEVERANCE.

On this point Arminius does not seem to have been fully settled in his own mind. In vol. III. pp. 491-509, he discusses with considerable minuteness and force the possibility of falling from grace. He is not exactly prepared to admit it, and certainly not willing to deny it. He admits that the Fathers mainly believed in the possibility of finally losing saving grace. He then proceeds to answer the objections brought against this doctrine, and in so doing makes out a very strong case in favor of such possibility. At the close of the argument he seems much more confident than at its beginning. The light of truth shone brighter as he went out to meet it. Had he continued his march, the haze in which he was enveloped would doubtless have given place to meridian sunlight. As it was, he reached substantially this conclusion: "Real Christians possess sufficient power to fight against the world, the flesh, and the devil, and to gain the victory, through the assistance of grace. Jesus Christ always stands ready to help. When they implore his aid, and use the grace they have, they are preserved from falling; and not all the power of earth and hell can force them out of the hands of Christ. But it is still a question whether they may not so neglect to apply for help as to fail of receiving it, and thus be overcome by their enemies and be lost. I do not affirm it. Some passages of Scripture wear that aspect. But even if it be conceded that believers may thus fall away, it is still a question whether they ever do fall away in fact."

V. WITNESS OF THE SPIRIT.

It was the opinion of Arminius that a Christian may be assured of his adoption into God's family; that this persuasion arises from the direct testimony of the Holy Spirit in the believer's heart, and from the fruits of the Spirit as exhibited in the believer's life; that it is possible for such a person to die without any anxious fear, though he should never do so with a feeling of rashness and presumption; and yet he dared not place this assurance on an equality with that by which we know there is a God, and that Christ is the savior of the world.

VI. THE DESTINY OF INFANTS.

The Calvinistic sentiment of the times was expressed thus: "All the infants of those who are strangers from the covenant are damned; and of the offspring of those parents who are in the covenant, some infants that die are damned, while others are saved." Arminius dissented from this doctrine, and thereby incurred the displeasure of his cotemporaries. He argued that this sentiment charges God with greater severity towards certain helpless and harmless infants, than he exhibited towards the devils themselves. To both he refused pardon. But the apostate angels were voluntary offenders, while infants are held responsible for the sins of another, without any volition of their own. Nor was he better prepared to agree with that dogma of Rome which makes the salvation of infants turn on their water baptism. Turning away from such cruel creeds, he gathered into his arms of faith and charity the entire infant race, and bore them to paradise by way of the atoning blood.

There are many subjects of interest and importance discussed in the works of Arminius which we do not even mention, as the views set forth are in harmony with the generally received opinions of the Christian world. Before closing, however, we can hardly refrain from alluding to a somewhat extended letter of Arminius on "The Sin against the Holy Ghost," for the purpose of commending it for its ability and suggestiveness. See vol. II. p. 511. In the same volume, beginning on page 217, the reader will find an exposition of the noted 7th chapter of Romans, covering 235 pages, and full of interest to the Bible student. The chapter under discussion has been constantly referred to by Calvinists as describing the religious experience of St. Paul. And hence it is that so many of that class aspire to no higher state in the present life. They verily believe they must hug the same chains and endure the same conflict as there described, constantly running into sin, necessarily breaking the law that goads them, and thus dragging out a dubious and wretched existence, till God shall terminate at once their sinful bondage and their earthly probation, and take them up to heaven! Alas, that the standard of piety should be so degraded! Arminius brought order out of confusion, by making the chapter in question descriptive of an awakened sinner. This is the only disposition of the case that makes it consistent with other parts of Scripture, and with the facts of Christian experience. The same view is taken by many Bible expositors.

Our sketch is ended. We have tried to do our subject justice, though our limits obliged us to dispose of him at wholesale. Under other circumstances a narrower inspection might be both pleasant and profitable. On the whole, we find in our friend Arminius many features to admire. He delved deep and brought out many valuable treasures. If the gold he exhumed was not altogether without alloy, let us remember that one faithful laborer is not expected to do everything. And if at times he exhibited special weaknesses, it may be well to reply in his own expressive language: "A good philosopher is not always a philosopher, and our Homer himself will sometimes nod."

A. A. PHELPS.

All Men Drawn to Christ.

"And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me. This he said, signifying what death he should die." (John 12: 32 33.)

Christ was lifted up—was crucified, therefore all men will draw to him. As certainly as the one was accomplished the other must follow. It is not optional or conditional, it is absolute. And because it is so, many have come to the strange conclusion that all will become his disciples, either in this world, or in the one to come, and be eternally saved. Others have tried to convert the text into a promise that all the inhabitants of the earth, in some favored generation in the future, shall be converted to Christ. What saith the word?

That there were circumstances and influences connected with Christ's earthly history, calculated to more powerfully attract the attention of man to him than to any other personage is true. That the aggravated circumstances of his betrayal, condemnation, crucifixion, the miraculous rending of "the veil of the temple," and of "the rocks" of earth, the conclusive evidences of his resurrection from the dead, were calculated to give Christ greater fame and more notoriety than any other, is evident. Then the facts of his divinity, his fulfillment of prophecy, his sympathy, pity and love for the race of man; together with the sacrifice he made, and the offer to give eternal life to all who come to him, as told in the gospel, set home to the hearts of men by the Spirit, and repeated in a thousand forms by the faithful servants of Christ during eighteen hundred years, have accomplished in drawing men to him, more than all the events connected with any other could do.

But all these attractions combined never yet fulfilled the promise, nor can they do it in this world. No one generation has been drawn to him; only a portion of each ever heard of him. Yet in the aggregate an immense multitude have been drawn to Christ. But Christ says—"No man can come to me, except the Father which sent me draw him, and I will raise him up at the last day." (John 6: 44.) It is the Father, then, who now draws sinners to Christ. But in our text Christ says—"I will draw all men unto me." Just above he had used an illustration which develops the subject, showing what is meant: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit." (John 12: 24.)

Christ did die. He says—"And the bread which I will give is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world." (John 6: 53.) Man was dead—the race sentenced to death because of sin. "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that [or in whom] all have sinned." (Rom. 5: 12.) Christ came to save that which was lost, that which Adam lost. To do it, he must die with man, "give himself a ransom for all; to be testified in due time." (1 Tim. 2: 6.) This gives a universal atonement, reaching the condition of all the race in the grave. Jesus went where man was—in death—to bring him out of death. Thus Paul says that "Jesus tasted death for every man." (Heb. 2: 6.) Consequently, Jesus has bought the race of man, and put them under law to himself. "Therefore, as by the offence of one, judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life." (Rom. 5: 18.) All have a resurrection to life by Christ.

Again, Paul states it thus—"For to this end Christ both died, and rose, and revived, that he might be Lord both of the dead and living;....for we must all stand before the judgment seat of Christ. For it is written, As I live saith, the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God." (Rom. 14: 9-11.) Therefore, all must be drawn to Christ, at his second coming, to acknowledge his right to control, to command, and to judge the race.

Again, Paul states the same fact thus—"And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Therefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." (Phil. 2: 8-11.) It is better to be drawn by his love and mercy, to become his disciples and heirs of his kingdom, than to wait until he shall come to summon all nations to judgment, to reward every man according to his works. When he sits upon the "great white throne," Adam and his race will be drawn from death in earth and sea, and stand before him to receive reward. (Rev. 20: 12, 13.)

I. C. WELLCOME.

"Wherewithal Shall We be Clothed?"

(Mat. 6: 31.)

In the above inquiry we behold the essence of the spirit of our age. The text constitutes a part of the great sermon of the great Teacher to the world. There are sermons for the times: but this sermon was for all time, and its inspiring and elevating, as well as its reproving and correcting sentences, are to-day ringing from the lips of thousands of preachers as perfectly applicable to the conditions of men as when they fell from the lips of Jesus on the mountain. Christ's sermon was a sermon of sermons, and in each sentence there is material for a sermon of inestimable value.

"Wherewithal shall we be clothed?" In this saying we see Jesus anticipating the nervous and anxious spirit that is running rampant at the present day. Go into the higher circles of life at the central points of fashionable society, and hear the wasp-waisted, sickly apologies for women, saying—"What shall I wear this afternoon?" "I don't know whether to put on my cinnamon colored silk, my blue satin, or lavender, or 'Moon on the Lake,' or drab. Oh! dear! what shall I wear? There will be the Smiths, and Joneses, and the Shepherds, and Clarks, and many more very refined people, and I really don't know whether I have appeared before them in all my dresses or not. What do you think? Have I? Pa has got to get me a new dress now: that is all there is about it. I can't wear the same dress so soon again."

The above would be the essence of the conversation in many a dressing-room of these days. This is the extreme that the Savior was after in his sarcastic saying, for the saying is sarcastic, "Wherewithal shall we be clothed?" He anticipates the words of the unthankful, restless, unhappy victims of pride and vanity and popular circles; and catches the words they would use, and throws them in their faces. Each dart hurled from his bow is aimed at these extremes, and calculated to bring us down to the level of wholesome and modest style, if we are above it: and he knew very well that the tendency would run in that extreme.

At the same time the devil has preached from the same text, and got many below a decent level. The devil is not very particular which extreme he gets people into; and if he can't get us to climb his false ladder of fancy, where he can push us down and endanger us, he will try to get us to play serpent and crawl amid the slime and filth and rags of barbarism. He will say to that Parisian belle—"You should let about two yards in length of your dress drag in a trail." That is one extreme. Then he will say to that conscientious Christian woman, "You can't be a Christian unless you cut your dress off up about to the knee and put on pants." That is the other extreme. Christ strikes at these extremes in his teachings; and we are not to conclude that because he tells us to "take no thought for the morrow," we are therefore to sit down like a savage and say here is an example of Christian meekness and trust and humility. No, not that at all; but dress in a sweet, wholesome style, so that when you speak your words shall not be eclipsed by the dazzle of superfluities about your person, or fantastics in your appearance. There is at all times a style that is appropriate to the times, that stands between the extremes of fashion and oddity, that is of a medium character. The Christian can use this and not be at all prominent in dress, and no one will go home from church to comment on what he or she wore, but only can say what they said, if they said anything; and good Christians almost always have something to say. A few years ago large hoops were all the rage; and many good ladies refused to put on hoops at all, because they were all the rage; and so they by the other extreme appeared to the world in the most noticeable form, and they were more the subjects of remark than the others.

The straight forward, go ahead, every day people, that buy a new stove that is nice, convenient and durable, and buy a cloak, or coat, or dress on the same principle, irrespective of "who got it up," are the people for Christian example in this matter. But what about the men? How is it with their dress? Well they do not seem to come within the range of gospel shot on dress so much as the women; but the devil has got the biggest part of them tangled up in his net, nevertheless. He has got them daubed over with tobacco, and whiskey, and beer, and opium, and you can hardly get near one of them but some of these contaminating ingredients of the devil's drug shop assail your senses, and they are brought up with as severe strokes by the gospel hamm[illegible]s are the most vain and frivolous wo[illegible]n.

I used to know a man who gloried in a sixteen-year-old coat, and who could not see a gentleman come into church with a new coat on without giving him a round of coat comment. And I believe he committed more sin in the line of coat wearing than a half dozen of those whom he lectured. A straight forward attend-to-your-own-business man, with an old or new coat on, in church or out, is the man who can best honor God.

God made the first clothes worn by mankind, (Gen. 3: 21), and made them out of the material that was at hand. We have the example, and let us follow it, and see to it that we glorify God in dress by so adorning our persons as not to violate the rules of decency, as it is measured to-day, and we shall then fulfill our duty in dress; and while the world is surging to and fro in the restless spirit of licentiousness, and whining about what they shall or shall not "put on," let us be content with such things as are convenient, and be willing to wear a wholesome coat or dress till we need a better one, and can get it and pay for it.

Wm. A. Fenn.

The Glorious Keeping.

"Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth."

A place of safety in time of danger has been the inherent desire of all human beings since the world began. Adam, the great prototype of mankind, when conscious of his guilt in disobeying the law of God, sought at once to hide himself from the searching glance of the being he had offended. But no place of safety was offered; his flimsy covering of fig leaves and his temporal hidingplace could not secure him from the God that made him. Hence he was bidden to come forth and endure the scrutiny of him who can by no means clear the guilty, or look upon sin with any degree of allowance. And thus it has ever been in all ages of the world with sin and sinners—seeking a place of safety to hide them from their guilt and its attendant consequences; and thus it will ever be until the heavens shall depart "as a scroll, when it is rolled together," "and the elements shall melt with fervent heat." Then the wicked of every name and grade, shall "hide themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains," saying to the mountains and rocks fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth upon the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb; for the great day of his wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand."

But while this will be the language of the wicked, the finally impenitent, thanks be to God for his unspeakable gift. The righteous, those who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honor and immortality," God will render eternal life. This will be the inheritance of every true child of God. The precious promises recorded in his blessed word are all his own, not one of which will fail him in his time of need. The Christian not only enjoys the life that now is, but the joyous promise of that which is to come. And though we live in "perilous times" long ago foretold by holy men of God, when "the perplexity of nations" has come and men's hearts fail them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth, and though wickedness of every grade and name steps boldly forth, and equity and justice seem fallen in our streets, "and because iniquity shall abound the love of many shall wax cold, ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief." Oh no! These signs of our blessed Savior's coming only serve "to make us look up, and lift up our heads; for our redemption draweth nigh." "The putting forth of the fig tree's leaves" does not more fully indicate the coming of summer, than do the signs all around us in pestilence, flames and floods, in the convulsions of old mother earth reeling to and fro from center to circumference, show the expected deliverance of "the whole creation that groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now."

Then to us who believe in and "love his appearing," will appear the glorious keeping, the precious hiding place, the sure retreat from gathering storm; "the munition of rocks" to all "those who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit." Hear the blessed Savior saying—"Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I also, will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth."

Oh! As Advent Christians just commencing another year, let us examine ourselves, to know whether we be in the faith or not. Let us trim our lamps afresh that they may burn more brightly than ever amid the moral darkness that surrounds us. Let us have purposes of holiness, decision of religious character that we may be able to stand against the jostlings of this time-serving age, and be ready to go in to the marriage supper of the Lamb.

Mary A. Tibbets.

Temptation.

Man, during this life, is on probation. This seems like a truism, not requiring proof. Accepting it as true, it follows that man may stand, or fall, while probation continues; at the beginning, middle, or end of his probationary life, for probation supposes two alternatives and liberty to choose either. And it also follows that temptation is co-existent with probation, for probation is trial, and supposes something to try, just as really as something to be tried. There can be no probation without temptation. No proof without trial. No trial without test. Probation and temptation are inseparable: but Temptation is not sin. The meaning of the word itself shows this, it is testing, trying or proving. It is not necessary to think a person must be guilty because he is to be tried, nor that failure is the necessary result of testing; it is clearly wrong to think so.

The nature of temptation shows us that it has no essential connection with sin. A master may test the honesty of a new servant, he may place money where the servant will find it and think it lost, the servant may be in great need of money, it may prove a strong temptation to him, but he may resist it and restore the money, and his character is not only unstained, but his honesty is confirmed and strengthened.

The temptation of Jesus need only be mentioned to prove that temptation is not sin. But, further,

Temptation is not an unmingled evil.

As we saw above, virtue is strengthened by overcoming temptation, and character is confirmed both inwardly and outwardly. It is enough to debar one from a position of trust that he is an untried man, for such cannot be as strong in principle as one who has been tried.

The Lord has said "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation, for when he is tried he shall receive the crown of life." (Jas. 1: 12.) So far from being an unmixed calamity temptation is a means of "blessing," and the crown of life is promised to them that "endure" it, not them who escape it.

Temptation is not incompatible with perfect holiness. I do not refer alone to the case of Jesus. Our first parents in their first estate of innocence and purity were subject to temptation. Then it cannot be regarded as only a calamity, or an evidence of God's displeasure, or the outgrowth of a polluted mind. We may reasonably believe that the angels, and all God's moral creatures in the universe, have been put on probation, and so have endured temptation. But

HOW ARE WE TEMPTED?

"Everyone is tempted when he is drawn away by his own lust, and enticed." (Jas. 1: 24.) It is not necessary to temptation that there be a being to present the enticement; but it is necessary that there be a desire for the tempting object. In other words, the temptation must be congenial to the mind of the tempted one, it must be, or appear to be, a desirable thing, there must be a response awakened in the mind by the object presented, there must be actual desire or there is no temptation.

If there is no desire there is no temptation.

But, remember, the desire is not sin. Man's constitution is, to a great extent, the work of God; the desires, many of them, are of his implanting. It is the yielding of the will, the consent to the suggestion, that is the sin. It is not necessary that the desire be for wrong things. Eve desired knowledge; Christ desired food, and the kingdoms of the world, and to trust in God; all these desires were right, they were entertained by holy beings, yet they were made the fulcrum of the tempter's lever, and the fulcrum,—the desire is within.

Peter writes (1 Pet. 1) to those "elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience," as if they had not escaped from temptations, but on the contrary were "for a season, if need be,....in heaviness through manifold temptations." There may be as much "need be" now as then, for God's design in our temptations is not that we should sin and perish, but that "the trial of your faith ....might be found unto praise and honor and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ."

A. Armour.

The Poetry of the Bible.

Poetry is the language by which all deep, earnest natures express their thoughts. It is the native language of man, of his imagination, his intellect, his passions, and his devotion. The Bible therefore is written in the expressive language of poetry; it is a collection of beautiful figures, the words and thoughts are all alike poetical. It has almost the charm of fiction. The noble lion spurning the sands of the desert, the gentle, meek lamb, "led to the slaughter," the rose blossoming in Sharon, the beautiful lily drooping in the valley, the great rock casting its shadow over a weary land, the dew of the morning, the rainbow gladdening the landscape, the "Morning Star;" all these represent the Son of God, the great hero of the poem. It throws around us the charm not only of fiction but of truth, although sometimes concealed by the garb of allegory or fable.

The poets of the Bible were earnest, devoted, true, and noble men. Many of them lived amidst the scenes of nature. The sun looked upon them lovingly, and they drank in poetry from the brooks, the stars, and the very air of the eastern clime. Although the poetry of the Scriptures does not follow the rules of rythm, still is it not filled with music? There is harmony in the sound of the rain as it patters against the window pane, in the low wailing, or shrill shriek of the wind, in the deep pealing thunder which echoes from hill to hill; then should not God's own work contain harmony? Some sentences have in themselves a world of poetry. "God is love," contains poetic beauty as well as divine truth, and there is a whole reverberating chorus in "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain." The whole book of Job is sublime. The author, whoever he might have been, had genius and power wonderful and startling. You are not only interested as you read, but you hear the thunder and feel the bre[illegible] the war horse. The poetry of th[illegible]salms is majestic. The 29th contains in its beautiful figures both simplicity and grandeur. The New Testament is a poem from Christ's sermon on the mount to his Transfiguration and Ascension.

The Bible is the Bible of the world, all can appreciate, can understand its poetry; it is the eye of the blind, light to the dying. Children weep over the story of Joseph, every woman remembers the history of Ruth, and the figure of Mary is engraven on her heart; the dream of the Christian is of the glories of the heavenly inheritance, and the terrors of the Lord haunt even the infidel. Many of the characters of the Bible are poets. The first man Adam is filled with dignity as we remember the sentence, "Let us make man in our own image." And sweet Eve, mother of mankind, had all the beauty, symmetry and grace, we find in the loveliest character of our modern poets. Poetry simple or sublime, beautiful or terrible! do we not see it in the flowers? do we not hear it in the rolling thunder? do we not behold it in our life, in the lives of all about us? And still more beautiful, still more majestic is poetry, because God has made it the language of his own word.

C. L. P.

A Word to Parents.

Do you ever pause to consider the importance of training up your children in the "way they should go"? It is truly a deeply solemn thought as we look into it and consider that we whom God has intrusted with the training up of children, should do it in his fear, ever calling for divine assistance in order that we may know and do what is best for them. Certainly in no sphere that we are placed does it behove us more to fulfill that passage of Scripture which tells us to "let patience have her perfect work," than in training up our little ones. Their limbs are so active, as also are their minds, that unless we procure some proper occupation for both, they are almost invariably led to do something that is not right or useful for them. They must have plenty of play and out door exercise, that they may become strong and healthful; and the same with the mind. We cannot expect them to have strong healthful minds if we buy them fictitious and idle tales. Therefore, let us strive to give their young minds pleanty of food, and that which will do them good. I think that every family should have a child's paper. Then there are many pretty Bible stories which with a very little explanation children will understand and be greatly interested in. And to the overburdened mother I would say, If you can't find time to read to your children, you can tell them stories. There are plenty. Tell them of the good child Samuel, or of the children of Bethel and, best of all, tell them how Christ loved the little ones and took them in his arms and blessed them, and that he still lives and is just as ready now to bless them as he was then. It not only leaves a good impression, but a deep one. It fills their minds with something high and holy. They will soon come to love the Bible and become much better children than they would otherwise have been. And when they come to years of maturity (should time last) they will take great comfort in looking back to childhood's days, and thinking that then it was that their young minds were inclined to the highway of holiness.

One thing more. It grieves me much that it is often the case that parents who are followers of Christ go to church without their children, when no good reason can be given for leaving them at home. Too often it is simply from a want of interest on the part of the children, and a neglect of their welfare on the parent's side. It is our duty to teach them early the necessity of loving Jesus. Tell them of the great prize that lies at the end of the Christian race in such a way that they can understand it.

God help us to do our whole duty to our children.

Lizzie Willis.

Immortal vs. Torment.

Mr. Objector seems to think that my argument in my other article does not take into account the fact of the soul's immateriality. But I claim it bears with equal strength against any position that can be taken. The claim for materiality or immateriality does not effect the force of my position; for I assert it again that "decay is the root and cause of all pain." This, you say, may hold good with all material substances, but not so with immaterial.

Now I wish to say right here, that there are no such substances in existence among real things. They are found only in the imagination—"like castles in the air." It may appear vividly to the mind; but when you look, it is not there. Immaterial is only another form of the word nothing, which will shape the thing thus. The soul is a nothing substance. Again, the word substance is but another form for the word material, hence, it will read thus. The soul is an immaterial material—no substance substance.

"I do not know how to word it, but the soul is that which thinks. Now is thought material?"

No, of course not; but it is the effusion, or product of that which is so; and it could not exist without an organization to evolve it. These attributes are not, strictly speaking, material of themselves, and yet they are so closely allied to the material, as to seem almost part of the same, being the result of its combination and action. We must not separate that which God has made one, not catch at the result or effect, and run off wild, as if there were no cause for all these things; but let us prove all things, and then hold fast that which is good, and we shall love God more, and serve him better.

O. D. Gibson.

A Hit at Skepticism.

The Methodist has an editorial article of marked ability on the arrogance of modern skeptics. After showing the different guises in which the skepticism of the day appears, and disputing especially the right of "pure scientists," whose own theories are merely provisional, to set up any arbitrary tribunal, the editor goes on to say:

"We have a right to insist that skeptics shall study the history of Christianity. We claim that this history proves it to be a divine, renovating life for mankind. We have a right to demand that they shall examine, with candor, the original records of the Christian religion. Unfortunately for them, the records of Christianity and its general history are the departments of knowledge with which many of them give themselves the least concern. They apply to our religion the principles of some favorite scheme o philosophy, and dismiss it with contempt. But contempt is not wisdom nor is an oracular tone demonstration. In searching for the foundations and the limits of its knowledge, the human mind has exhausted itself again and again. It has never, however, rested permanently in the denial of possibility of some form of cognizing the supersensual, and we may believe that it never will. The human race swings away from Christianity only to return afresh to its allegience. Men may deny the spiritual world, but their necessaties compel them to recognize that world again, and Christanity as the clearest revealer of its facts."

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, January 14, 1873.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.
Sent Three Months on trial for Thirty-five cents.

The officers of the Association are as follows
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON,
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD,
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK,
Treasurer—AMBROSE W. TUCKER.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS,
A. S. CALKINS.
EDITORIAL COMMITTEE
W. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH,
A. E. BABCOCK.
BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications to Wm. L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago; and

☞ Make all Postal Orders and Drafts payable to him, and always state the amount of money enclosed plainly at the head of the letter.

☞ Give your Post Office address in full in every letter.

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions.

Business Department.

Post Office Address.

George W. Miller, Monticello, Minn.
S. C. Wellcome, Kasota, Minn.

THE WESTERN RURAL.—To any one paying us $2.50, we will send the Western Rural, the popular and excellent Rural and Family Weekly of the West, for one year, and credit one year's subscription paid to our own paper. The Western Rural, alone, is worth $2.50 per year, and every family in the West ought to have it. [tf

To Correspondents.

T. W. RAYMOND. Keep at work. You will see the ripe fruit of your labor by and by. Your letter is decidedly encouraging.....J. LOWRY. We will give you such a series of articles if we can possibly take time to prepare them ....J. J. REABURN. Have forwarded your order. Glad to oblige you.

Publishing Fund.

L. C. Collins $50.00; J. W. Graham 40.00; A Friend 2.00; Ann Story 1.00, J Roberts 1.00; J. W. Johnson, 1.00; E. L. Marsh. 1.00. Mrs. L. Prince, 4.00. Mrs M. Newberry, 1.25; James Langley, 1.00. John Hunt, 2.00.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

E E Mabey
H F Whittaker
W H Mitchel
B Preston
J L Madill
F Koss
J B McLane
J Walker
J G Alexander
J H Paton
E Hall
E Everett
C L Douglas
L J Raynor
C Anderson
F Seller
G Lamb
J B Hunt
J Culver
C Dunn
E E Monroe
A Gilmore
A B Stetson
H C Williams
C E Williams
H Nelson
S Floyd
K C Williams
J Bendall
E Davis
Wm Bendall
E F Brownell
W H Horneday
W H Brown
J A Burlingame
E J Hayden
J B Cook
C B Livingston
J McKinley
W Wilson
O M Turner
J J Walter
J V Parker
A J Eldson
C W Bird
D A Foster
H Bertrum
J Lyon
J F Woodward
J J Reaburn
P W Hough
A Brown
W W Onstott
C W Conolly
R Tuttle
E Luce
T Barnwick
D C Bowin
M Burk
C Combs
C Wilson
T C Purington
P Pilkington
E Ross
E Talford
J Carver
S Hamer
L S Conner
J Thayer
J D Dunham
W Craper
J D Scofield
O D Eastman
A Stery
J Roberts
E S Penwell
J A Primood
M Vibbard
B H Spencer
E G Kingsbury
C Morse
L Davis
F Alling
G W DeLong
M A Freed
J H Sloan
J P Powell
J M Durnam
C Nelson
D W Griffin
C D Brooks
M S Allen
S P Gould
J Thompson
M A Tomlinson
L Lang
W J Mann
H B Baldwin
J M Stouffer
C A Higgins
M A Tibbits
K W Macomber
G H Campbell
J Nelson
M A Folsom
P Allbright
E C Andrus
W Cummings
A Cooke
C H Stouffer
O A Loomis
J Raymond
C I Russel
C F Benton
R V Philip
T S Thomasson
J F Adair

Books and Tracts sent by Mail.

W K Collins J Hamilton W Johnston F Koss G Lamb J L Madill E S Penwell M Vibbard F Alling S M Closser T McDonald W Cummings J J Reaburn E A Rowe J W Elliott P W Hough xp S Doolittle S A Brown S Hamer J Sloan W Royce 2 J B Brown E Gee H Bilfing W Kile P A Smith P M Libby W H Horneday J E Ellis exp C A Russell J H Paton.

Marriages.

JOHNSON—HOLROYD—At the residence of the bride's father, Genoa, Ill., Jan. 1, 1873, by Eld. E. H. Barington, Mr. George W. Johnson and Miss Elizabeth Holroyd. All of Genoa.

HALLECK—OLMSTEAD—At the parsonage, in Genoa, Ill., Jan. 1, 1873, by E. H. Barington, Mr. Eugene Halleck and Miss Caroline Olmsted. All of Genoa.

GREENWOOD—TOUMAY—Christmas eve., Dec. 25, 1872, at the house of the bride's father, in Jackson, by Eld. J. M. Snook, Mr. Martin Greenwood, of Leonidas, St. Joseph Co., Mich., and Miss Emma P. Toumey, of Jackson.

Obituary.

HURD.—Fell on sleep, Jan 7, 1873, our little daughter, Emily Jane, aged 13 years, 1 month, and 1 day.

She was a great sufferer. We have the hope that Jesus, when he shall appear will claim her as his own. G. W. HURD.

RICE.—In Chicago, Ill., Dec. 11, 1872, after a protracted illness, Emma Allaretta, daughter of Dr. L. C. Rice, formerly of Clinton, Mass., aged 13 years.

Etta's illness was caused by a cancerous tumor on the right limb. During all the months of her sickness she was very patient. The Lord graciously spared her from suffering much severe pain, such as is usual in similar cases; and from the peculiar manifestations in answer to prayer, some supposed the Lord would heal her. On one occasion the Lord restored her appetite which had been gone for many weeks, and it was preserved up to her death. At another time, while praying by her bedside, weak and emaciated as she was, yet she arose and placed her feet upon the floor, a thing which she had not done for months before. But it pleased the Lord to let her pass away. She trusted in Jesus. We hope to meet her in the bright morning of the resurrection.

FRANK BURR.

LOOMIS.—Went to his death sleep in the Lord whom he loved, on Dec 21, 1872, Ezra S. Loomis, M. D., of Perry's Mills, N. Y.

Our brother was born at Weybridge, Vt., 1794, graduated at Castleton, Vt., in 1827, and settled in Perry's Mills the same year, and was at the time of his decease the oldest physician in town. While as yet he was a prominent and active member of the Presbyterian church, he heard the Advent proclamation, and joyfully went forth, lamp in hand, to meet Jesus. For thirty years he has stood in this expectant attitude and with uplifted head believed and announced the Lord at hand. While apparently in full mental and bodily vigor, suddenly he was cut down with paralysis, and passed away with no word of tender, final parting. He read THE TIMES, and his faith bordered upon its teaching, and no man loved Christ's coming better. The community will miss him; the little church will miss him. One sad heart will miss him at home, but hopes to rejoin her beloved in the happy morning. I spoke at his funeral, Jan 4, from the words "But after this the judgment," and the devout attention and wet eyes bespoke the universal respect. We mourn at our great loss, and sigh, and ask, "When will Jesus come?"

He now sleeps, but not forever:
There will be a glorious dawn!

D. T. T.

ABROAD.

---- Whether England has formally protested against the Russian advance into Asia, and promised to sustain the Afghanistans against the Czar may perhaps be doubted; but the indications certainly are that 'the Eastern question' is liable to be opened at any time in a conflict involving the control of the Indies. The Khan of Khiva has commenced a hopeless conflict with the great Northern power, which can have but one result, adding some thousands of miles of territory and millions of inhabitants to the possession of the Czar.

---- There is something pathetic in the protests of the Roman Pontiff against rapidly evolving events. The Spanish Cortes, the Italian Parliament, the German Imperial Government, and the American schism alike fall under the ban of Papal displeasure. Yet in no one of these instances does anything like retrogression seem possible. In Germany, to be sure, there has possibly been an excuse of hostile zeal on the part of the Government; a needless acrimony has been fostered. But Spain and Italy have both gone far beyond a period when great religious corporations can hope to receive support and shelter from the government. The Pope's allocution is dignified and consistent; but it is a futile protest protest against the march of events.—N. Y. Tribune.

---- The Pall Mall Gazette, London, says there has been an extraordinary, and, it may be added, singularly unpleasant atmospheric phenomenon near Banbury. About 1 o'clock in the afternoon "something in the shape of a haycock and of great size," was seen revolving through the air. It was accompanied by fire and smoke, and sometimes was high in the air and at other times close to the ground. Its noise was terrible, and resembled that of an express train running with extreme rapidity. It tore up no fewer than seventeen trees, injured thirty six more, and threw down 116 yards of stone wall, besides frightening everybody out of their wits. For a mile and a half this disagreeable thing, whatever it was, pursued its destructive career, and was accompanied in its progress by a whirlwind almost as mischievous as itself, for this latter nuisance, it is stated, swept everything before it—dried up a pond over which it passed, carried stones for a distance of forty yards, and knocked down hosts of railings. Altogether, a more troublesome couple than the thing like a haycock and its attendant whirlwind have rarely visited a quiet neighborhood, nor are we surprised to hear that the inhabitants thought "the earth was about to open and swallow them up." It is a touching trait in the character of this simple folk that in the hour of peril they were fully prepared to share the Banbury cakes which have made their district so famous.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Preaching in Advent Mission Hall, 619 West Lake Street, every Sunday 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening
D. R. & M. S. MANSFIELD.

Genoa, Oct. 27, and every other Sabbath until further notice. E. H. BURINGTON.

Elida, Tuesday eve., Jan. 14.
Durand, Jan. 15, 17.
Elida, Jan. 18, 19.
Byron, Jan. 20-22.
Forreston, Jan 23, 24. C. C. MARSTON.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, 3 p. m. July 21, and every four weeks until further notice

Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S H 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.

Round Grove, 10½ a. m. August 4, and every four weeks. ALICE E. RATHBUN.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co., at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Nov. 10, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.

Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Nov. 17, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

Amboy, Lee Co., preaching the second and fourth Sundays of each month.
C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

MICHIGAN.

To the churches in Branch County, Michigan, I would say that my appointments for the year 1873 will be as follows:

East Gilead, Jan. 5, 10 a. m., and every two weeks after.

California, Jan. 12, 10:30 a. m and every two weeks after.

Algansee, every Sunday 2:30 p. m and evening. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening.
J. R. PRESTON, Pastor.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.

Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

The third Q. M. of the Southern District will be held in Rives, Jackson Co., commencing Thursday, Feb. 13, and continue over Lord's Day. A full representation is desired, and we trust that all our preaching brethren will be present. We cordially invite all who can, to come filled with the Spirit, and to work for the salvation of the perishing. C. FOX, Sec'y.

INDIANA.

A Q. M. of the Nothern District of the Indiana Conference will be held with the church at Sumption's Prairie, commencing Friday eve., Jan. 24, and continuing as the interest may seem to justify. The lovers of Jesus are invited to attend. There will be teams at the Niles and South Bend R. R. morning trains on Friday, the 24th, and also at the day trains of the Michigan Southern R. R., and also the Peninsular day trains on Friday, to take all that come to the meeting.
L. C. ANDRUS.

KANSAS.

The Kansas Advent Christian Mission Association will hold its annual session at Bero, Cherokee Co., Feb. 10. Officers for the ensuing year are to be chosen, and other business of importance transacted. A general attendance is desired. T. BOZLEY, Sec'y.
H. J. MUNSON, Pres't.

ARKANSAS.

The first Q. M. of the Batesville District will be held at Matthew's S. H., Saturday, Feb. 1, and continue over Sunday. S. ROSENBAUGH.

The first Q. M. for the Blue Mountain District will be held at the Turkey Creek Meeting House, Richwood Township, Saturday, March 1, and continue over Sunday. J. B. BROWN.

IOWA.

We, the undersigned, members of various churches of the Iowa Christian and the Iowa Advent Christian Conferences, realizing the obligations we are under to God and his truth and his people, and realizing, too, that in our present divided condition we cannot possibly accomplish as much good as we might if all the elements among us were heartily united in concerted action and with undivided front, do hereby propose and call a convention, to be composed of two delegates from each church, to convene in the city of Manchester, April 15, to take into consideration the matters which now divide us, with a view to an arrangement which shall once more unite us in a single, undivided conference organization.

Signed:—T. E. Cook, J. Ingalls, J. Gildersleeve, Dr. Banton, and many others.

Preaching in Thompson's Hall, Delmar, Clinton Co., Jan. 5, and every two weeks until further notice. C. W. PITCHER.

Manchester, the first and third Sabbaths of each month, at 2 and 7 p. m.
J. RIDLEY, Pastor.

MINNESOTA.

The Annual Meeting of the Minnesota A. C. Conference (the eleventh) will be held in Monticello, commencing Wednesday eve., Feb. 5, and hold over Lord's day.

Churches throughout the Conference are requested to report by delegate or by letter. All ministers of the Conference are requested to attend personally, as business of importance will be transacted.

Church officers will please forward to the Conference Treasurer (L. C. Collins, Monticello,) the contents of the Mission Boxes, and collections from other sources for the Conference.

Churches reporting will direct to the Secretary at Monticello, Wright Co., Minn.
S. C. WELLCOME, Sec'y.
GEO. W. MILLER, Pres't.

WISCONSIN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.
A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

Celaburgh, [illegible] Feb. 1, and once in four weeks.

Norris S. H., 11 a. m., Feb. 2, and once in four weeks.

Warner Creek, eve. Jan. 25, and 11 a. m., Jan. 26.

Pine River, eve. Feb. 2, and once in four weeks.
ANSON BROWN.

The third Q. M. of the Western District will be held with the church, at Gilmanton, Buffalo Co., Friday eve., Feb. 7, and hold over Lord's day. All the friends of Jesus are requested to make this meeting a special subject of prayer, that God may make his power known at that time in strengthening believers and converting sinners. Why should we not expect it? God is unchangeable. He gave his Son to save the perishing, and will he not hear prayer to that end? Let us not be straitened in ourselves. God will hear prayer. P. W. HOUGH.

The second Q. M. for the Eastern District of the Wisconsin Conference, will be held with the church at Fairfield, Sauk Co., the Lord willing, Friday, eve. Jan. 17, and holding over the Sabbath. The cars run to Baraboo, within five miles of Fairfield; and provision will be make to carry with teams any who come by rail. Eld. Wm. Sheldon is expected to be present to preach the word. Let there be a general rally. Let those who can, work while it is day, and we who cannot, stay home and pray.
GEO. THOMSON, Sec'y.

La Crosse, corner of Main and Sixth Streets, Dec. 1, and once in two weeks. JON BROWN.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Bleury St.
JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y. 25, St. Joseph St.

Advertisements.

List of Books, Tracts, etc., kept on sale at the Advent Christian Times office.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—Unabridged, $3, by express. Condensed, sufficiently full for ordinary purposes, by mail, $1.75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occuring in the Holy Scriptures. With maps and useful tables. 65c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: with engravings, maps, and tables. $1.50. By mail, $1.75.

BIBLE DICTIONARY: by Smith & Barnum. The best abridgment of Smith's larger work. Leather $6, cloth $5. By express.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $22 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDance. With Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. $7.50, by express.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock, $2.50, Post-paid.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions to the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 30c. post-paid.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c.,

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 45c, post-paid.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY of God: and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 12c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble, 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The Phenomena of Modern Spiritualism. By N. Field, M. D. 10c.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC meetings. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 5c. a hundred.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; with a review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabath By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added History, Statistics and Tables. Cloth, $2; leather 2.50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By Wellcome and Good. 460 pp. $1.25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATTHEW, 24 and 25, 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen. The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one adress, post-paid, for $4.00.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH; a history of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on earth during the past 2,000 years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth. $1

LAST DAY TOKENS: by S. S. Brewer. 35 cts.

FUTURITY; by Wm. Sheldon. 20 cts.

THE INDEX BOOK MARK; 25c a dozen.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. Nothing so good on this topic. Cloth $1. Paper, 50c. 3 copies for $1, post paid.

GOOD TIDINGS; a general view of Advent doctrine. By an Association of Authors. 429 pages. Cloth 65c, Paper 40c. Post paid.

THE NATURE AND DURATION OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT: By Henry Constable, Prebendary of Cork. 40c. Post paid.

THE FAITH OF ST. PAUL; showing it to have been neither Pharisaic nor Sadducean, but Hebrew. By L. C. Collins. 10c.

THE STATE OF THE DEAD; a Discussion between N. Field, M. D. and T. P. Connolly, Esq. pp. 300. 50c. Post Paid.

THE JUBILEE HARP. $1. $9 a d zen.

HADES AND SHEOL; By L. C. Collins. The best published exposition of the parable of Dives and Lazarus. 10c.

*THE ADVENT MINSTREL; a choice collec*tion of spiritual songs. Flexible cloth, 25c. $2.15 a dozen. Paper, 15c. $1.50 a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP; Cloth, 75c, Leather $1.

HYMNS OF THE MORNING; A new and rich collection. Cloth 50c. Leather, 80c.

SCIENCE AND THE RESURRECTION; By D. T. Taylor. 5c.

PAULS EARNEST EXPECTATION and hope: (Phil. 1: 21: 26.) By O. R. Fassett. 5c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By M. L. Hastings. 15c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT: containing the original Greek text of the New Testament with an interlineary word for word English translation and a new emphatic version, 484 pp. Cloth $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1.00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for sale for the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township 8, Range 2, West, Crawford Co., Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $400, or more.

Parties wishing to make an investment will address me at the ADVENT TIMES office. WM. L. HIMES.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE ADVENT TIMES and Banner, one year for $2.50 if pre-paid. Address Wm. L. Himes, 25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1873, Movable Comb Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.

Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee Keepers," (a 36 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York city.

☞ THE TIMES and Bee-Keepers Journal one year for $2.50. Address Wm. L. Himes 25 W. Lake St. Chicago.

The Ablest Tariff Journal in the U. S.

The American Working People.

Published monthly, is a welcome visitor to One Hundred Thousand firesides. Finely printed, handsomely illustrated, ably edited—has no rival! $1.50 per year. Sent on trial three months for 25c.

The Iron World

Is the largest and most valuable Metal Price Current in the world. $4.00 per year. Sent on trial one month for 25c. All the State Geologists are contributors

Marion watches, fine silver plated ware, pen and pocket cutlery, and other desirable premiums to getters up of clubs for our monthly.
IRON WORLD PUB. Co.
—467. Pittsburgh, Pa

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Rich Man and Lazarus.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.

LOUIS REIMER,
1008 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

POCKET HYMN BOOK

With Music.

COMPILED BY CHAS. C. BARKER.

"Hymns of the Morning"

Is for sale at THE TIMES Office, at the following
REDUCED PRICES:

Cloth Binding...60c
Morocco "..75c

Sent postage free on receipt of price.

TWELVE COPIES FOR $4.75.

A liberal discount to agents.

This book is suitable for all religious occasions, containing the sublimest of religious songs, and the cream of musical composition.

For special terms for quantities, address the publisher,
C. W. SARGENT,
Box 496, Concord, N. H.

☞ For sale at THE TIMES office, in large or small quantities.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which every one should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey, and a little care taken in examination of Routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R.," running from Chicago through Galesburg to Burlington, has achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading Passenger Route to the West. At Burlington it connects with the great Burlington Route which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories; and passengers starting from Chicago on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the C. B. & Q. and Burlington Route.

This Line has published a pamphlet called "How to go West," which contains much valuable information; a large correct map of the Great West, which can be obtained free of charge by addressing the General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. Burlington, Iowa.

THE CHRISTIAN:

A LARGE, LIVE, MONTHLY, RELIGIOUS, Family Paper, containing anecdotes, sketches, records of Providences and answers to prayer, true stories, poetry, music, etc. No sectarianism, controversy, politics, puffs, pills, patent medicines, novels or continued stories, allowed in its columns.

Each subscriber receives a large and splendid bible reader's map, free. This map exhibits not only Palestine, but all Bible Lands. It is printed on a sheet, 58x 39 inches, is beautifully colored, and contains—

(1) View of the Land of Canaan, with its valleys, mountains, rivers and lakes, as seen at a glance from Pisgah, where Moses stood to behold it, before he died. (2) Jerusalem and its Environs, the holy places, valleys, streams, pools, "the mountains round about Jerusalem," etc. (3) St. Paul's journeys, and the world as known to the ancient Hebrews. (4) A view of Jerusalem, as seen from Olivet, where Jesus beheld the city and wept over it. (5) Map of Palestine, "from Dan to Beersheba," giving the inheritances of the different tribes of Israel, colored separately. (6) Peninsula of Mount Sinai, and the journeys of Israel from Egypt to the Promised Land. (7) A Chart of the Seasons, months, productions, weather, and temperature of Palestine.

Besides all these, the map contains the ancient and modern names of all known places; the heights of the mountains; and references to the texts of Scripture where the different places are mentioned

This map is given to subscribers for The Christian. Terms—in advance: with the map on paper, beautifully colored, One Dollar a year; with the map varnished and mounted on rollers, a Dollar and a Quarter.

Four copies of The Little Christian, a child's paper, to one address, sent at the same rate as one copy of The Christian.

Ten thousand agents wanted to get subscribers for this map and The Christian.

Honest, intelligent, energetic men, women and children, can have pleasant and profitable employment, without risk or capital. For specimens and instructions, address
H. L. HASTINGS,
20 Hanover St., Boston, Mass.

☞ The Times and Christian one year for $2.40. With map on paper, $2.70. With map on rollers, $2.85. Address W. L. HIMES,
25 West Lake St., Chicago.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.---NO. 25. CHICAGO, JANUARY 21, 1873. WHOLE NO. 456.

Advent Christian Times.

Contents of This Number.

First Page.

The Advent of Christ, O. R. Fassett; What is it to be Like Christ? C. C. Marston.

Second Page.

The Lowest Place, (Poetry); An Exposition of Mat. 24, Albion Ross, seventh article, concluded; Speaking of Things which be not as though they were, S. Morrett.

Third Page.

Is Baptism a Saving Ordinance? P. Hitchcock; "The Days" of Dan. 12:11-13, J. B. Cook; Time and the "Timeists," Will Adam Live Again? I. C. Wellcome; A Cheerful Response, W. A. Tibbets; Preparation for the Ministry, T. G. Bowman; Minor Selections.

Fourth Page.

Brief Editorials; Indebted Friends; Modern Spiritism; Editorial Gleanings; My Journal, J. V. H; "That's Old Testament," W. Kellaway.

Fifth Page.

Surprise Visit, W. Morphy; Questions, P. W. Hough; News.

Sixth Page.

"I Meant to Do More;" A Child's Rebuke; No Want; An Odd Person; From Our English Correspondent; From South America, P. B. Livingston.

Seventh Page.

Letters from D. W. Favor, G. W. Hurd, J. B. Brown, A. Cooke, C. C. Marston, and S. Nye; Minor Selections; Good Night, (Poetry); Poll and the Crows; Conference Minutes—Michigan, W. New York, S. New York, Iowa.

Eighth Page.

Business; Appointments; Advertisements.

The Advent of Christ.

The Old Testament Scriptures abound in the prophecy and promise of the two comings of the Messiah—the one in which he was to suffer and die; the other to be his triumph and reign.

The Jewish church at the first advent, overlooked the sufferings and the cross, in the contemplation of the glory and the crown, and were unprepared for, and rejected their Lord in his humiliation. The Christian church now, at the time his second coming is due, are overlooking the glory and crown to be revealed, in the sufferings and the cross, and are most assuredly to repeat the mistake of the Jewish church, and be unprepared for, while they reject their Lord in his second coming. "And so both houses of Israel" (of the Old and New Testaments) are to "stumble" at that "stumbling stone."

During the mission of Jesus to our world, he often alluded to, and predicted his return again after an absence to his Father in heaven. And near the close of his mission among them, and as he was about to depart and go to his Father, he gives to his disciples the heart cheering and soul inspiring promise—"I will come again!" (Jno. 14:3.) Angels repeat this promise also, at the very time of his ascension, in this remarkable language: "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." (Acts 1:11.) There is no mistaking the nature of that advent then. It is the same Jesus with whom they had been familiar both before and after his crucifixion and resurrection, and whose ascention they had witnessed, whose promised return is to be looked and hoped for. Nothing less than his personal coming, in visible glory, is promised.

Accordingly the attitude of the early Christian church, and the first disciples subsequent to our Lord's ascension, was that of expectation and waiting for the return of Jesus, the absent One. That promise of his—"I will come again"—together with others of like import, and the angelic repetition of the same promise at the time of his departure, was ever kept in fresh and lively remembrance by the first Christians.

Wherever the chosen apostles preached, and whenever among Jews and Gentiles, they taught the doctrine of the Lord's return in person, "at the time appointed" of the Father.

The apostle Peter urged "repentance" upon the part of the Jews who had "killed the Prince of Life," in view of the fact that God would "send Jesus Christ, whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things," etc. (Acts 3:19-21.) Paul, the apostle of the Gentiles, affirms that "the Lord himself shall descend from heaven." (1 Thes. 4:16.) "Appear the second time without a sin offering unto salvation." (Heb. 9:28.) And the beloved John declares this coming to be the purifying hope: "It doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him, purifieth himself, even as he is pure." (1 Jno. 3:2, 3.)

Hence the church planted by the labors of the apostles, expected the Lord's coming again, as the period of the consummation of all their hopes and reward for a faithful adherence to the Christian faith and practice. The church at Corinth was commended in that they "come behind in no gift; waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Cor. 1: 7, 8); and the church of Thessalonica, because they had "turned unto God from idols to serve the living and true God; and to wait for his Son from heaven." (1 Thes. 1: 9.)

Indeed, so apparent is it that this was both the hope and attitude of the early and apostolic church, that it is admitted by both the friends and foes of Christianity. M. Renan, who denies the divinity of our Lord, acknowledges that Jesus taught his coming again in his royalty and kingdom, at an appointed day of judgment anticipated by the Jews; and that so the apostles taught, and Christians of the first century believed; but affirms, that the faith and hope expired with that generation. This however was not true.

But a great change has come over the Christian world as the centuries have passed away bringing no returning Christ. And as his promise is long delayed, unbelief prevails almost universally, and it is suspected and denied that he will ever come. Alas, my Savior!

"So long hast thou now tarried, Few thy return believe."

Jesus declared that this incredulity would prevail, in the following striking language: "Nevertheless when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" (Lk. 18: 8.) Also in Mat. 24: 37, 39 and elsewhere.

The apostle Peter declares that "Scoffers shall come in the last days—saying, Where is the promise of his coming?" And there are many now in these days, both in the church as well as without. Who could have conceived this? That in the Christian church, professedly loving Jesus with the supremest love, there should be found any who would scoff and jeer, and be found in the seat of the scorner, denying his glorious advent! And yet it is too true. Ministers and their flocks, are dull to the voice of the chief shepherd "announcing his advent near by unmistakable evidence, while they readily follow the voice of strangers.

The church says of the long absent Christ, as did the Jews of Moses when he tarried beyond their expectation. "As for this man we know not what has become of him." And hence they have given up looking for the return of "the man Christ Jesus," and gone into idolatry, feasting, dancing and play, being "lovers of pleasures, more than lovers of God;" and will be so found when he, the mediator of the new covenant, comes down from the mount of ascension to judge the world by his law.

The fact that "faith" is dying out, and almost dead in the great body of the Christian church respecting the return of the real Christ, and that "scoffers" abound within her body, ridiculing and making light of "the blessed hope," are glowing evidences that the Lord will soon appear to the confusion of an unprepared people.

That there are prophecies and promises given in both the Old and New Testaments relating to Christ's coming to judgment, and in his kingdom, none dispute. But the professed church in her infidelity and presumption, misinterprets them. They are made to be fulfilled, by the church in this age, at the death of the saint in the capture of his spirit or ghost by the Lord! the destruction of Jerusalem by the Roman army! or other calamities, or visitations of judgment on other cities, or nations! the outpouring of his Spirit on the church, and the world, etc, etc., etc. So that there are a thousand ways in which it is alleged, and maintained, through human ingenuity, that Christ makes his advent and fulfills his promise. By what right has the professed church to give the Scriptures predicting Christ's "second" coming such an interpretation? There is not the shadow of a consistent reason for it found in argument, or human sophistry. What propriety would there have been for the Old Testament church before the first advent, to have given such an interpretation to the prophecies relating to Christ's coming to suffer and die? Did not saints die? Why not make it appear that no other coming of the Redeemer was at death? Was not Jerusalem sacked, pillaged, and destroyed by the Assyrians, too, before Jesus came in his humiliation? Why was not Christ then crucified, in the person of his church carried captive to Babylon? And were there no calamities and judgments, and giving of his Spirit, in which it could have been well said Christ came in them all? But suppose some of the Rabbies and the Jewish church at large had given such an explanation of these prophecies they "read every Sabbath day:" would that have proved that Christ would not come in person after all, as a babe "born of a virgin," "a man of sorrows," the "preacher," "the victim of the cross?" Nay, verily. Misinterpretation of prophecy does not "make the word of God of none effect." Nor will it now, though the whole Christian church apostatize in her faith, and "corrupt" and "handle the word of God deceitfully." The greater their confusion when God's prophecy and promise is really and truly fulfilled in the coming glory of his Son from heaven.

This method of exegesis, and explaining away God's promise relating to his Son's second advent to earth is heresy! We denounce it as heretical, though preached, advocated and taught in high places, and by the dignitaries of the church in this age of boasted knowledge.

God's promise concerning his Son's return will not fail of fulfillment. Jesus' words: "I will come again," will be realized in due time, though the whole church and world combine in infidelity, saying: Where is the promise of his coming!

But there are believers and waiters and watchers looking for his advent still, though comparatively few in the mass of the professed church. Like Simeon and Anna, and those "waiting for the consolation of Israel" at the first coming, so now there are some, and thank God, they number even thousands, who now believe Christ will soon as visibly and personal appear in the clouds of heaven, as he ascended to his Father's glory; and that "this generation," too, will witness the advent and majesty of his glorified person, to which he is giving so many evidences unmistakable in character that his coming is "at the door." And why not now come? Since here converges all prophecy,—terminate all numbers,—and concentrate all the signs premonitory of his grand and triumphant apocalypse! "Glory to God in the highest!" The Lord's coming is "at hand." His chosen word "quickly" has a significance now it has never had, and gathers force exery hour we verge and draw near the amazing period when "The Sun of Righteousness" shall, like the orb of eternal day, rise in full splendor on our sin and curse be-clouded earth! (To be concluded.)

O. R. Fassett.

What it is to be like Christ.

"Peace" is the next fruit of the Spirit specified by the apostle. In Rom. 5 he discourses at length of this peace. He represents it as the condition into which we are introduced by being reconciled to God. It is not a condition to be sought for by the Christian, but it is something enjoyed by one when he becomes a Christian. Paul says; "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." This peace begins to flow when a sinner repents and gives himself to Christ. It is not peculiar to what some style Higher Life, but it is enjoyed by the humblest followers of Jesus from the very first step in the Christian life. An emminent writer says; "Peace is the first sensible fruit of the pardon of sin."

"Longsuffering." Dr. Clark thus comments on this: "Long-mindedness, bearing with the frailties and provocations of others, from the consideration that God has borne long with ours; and that, if he had not, we should have been speedily consumed." This is a characteristic of genuine Christianity. We cannot expect it from the world. But Christians will be longsuffering; they are willing to bear with the mistakes and failures of their brethren, and not anxious to ruin every erring brother they can find.

"Gentleness." This is a precious fruit of the Spirit. Few possess it by nature, but all who are in Christ have it in all fullness. They are gentle, benign, kind, courteous. The opposite of harshness. The crabbed disposition of nature is all supplanted by the mild and sweet spirit of Jesus. Gentle with all. The debased; the vicious—a kind word or act may raise them up and lead them to Christ.

"Goodness." Jesus has set the example in this, and it is equally the mission of all who are his followers. No one under the influence of the Spirit of God can willingly injure another. But says one if this be so how can we account for the conduct of those who are always ready to fetch and carry evil reports of the character or reputation of their fellows in the gospel? Perhaps they are jealous of their usefulness or influence, in which case they have not the spirit of Christ, and, of course cannot be expected to bring forth its fruits. It matters not how much they may profess to be Christians if they do not bring forth the fruit of "goodness," they are not, and that is the end of it.

"Faith." This does not mean belief it means fidelity. The Christian according to this is a faithful man. He cannot be turned; is worthy of confidence. He can not be put in the wrong place; is faithful wherever you find him.

"Meeknes." Barnes says; "meekness is patience in reception of injuries. It is neither meanness, nor a surrender of our rights, nor cowardice; but it is the opposite of sudden anger, of malice, of long harbored vengeance. Christ insisted on his rights when he said. "If I have done evil, bear witness of the evil, but if well, why smitest thou me." (John, 18;) 23. Paul asserted his rights when he said. "They have beaten us openly uncondemned, being Romans, and have cast us into prison; and now do they thrust us out privily? nay, verily; but let them come themselves, and fetch us out." (Acts 16; 37.) And yet Christ was the very model of meekness. It was one of his characteristics. I am meek. (Mat. 11: 29.) So of Paul. No man endured more wrong, or endured it more patiently than he. Yet the Savior and the apostle were not passionate. They bore all patiently. They did not press their rights through thick and thin, or trample down the rights of others to secure their own. Meekness is the reception of injuries with a belief that God will vindicate us. [Note on Mat. 5: 5.]

"Temperance" is the last of the nine "fruits of the Spirit" alluded by Paul in Gal. 5: 22, 23. We are not to understand by this simply that the saints are to refrain from the use of intoxicating drinks, which is certainly one of its applications, but it is to be understood as referring to all the life and deportment of the person. Christians are to be temperate in all things. This is one of the fruits of the Spirit.

These fruits are brought forth by the child of God from conversion onward as long as the fellowship of the Spirit is enjoyed. How absurd it is for a person who has for years been producing this fruit to come forward for prayers as a candidate for preparation to meet God! If we are not the Lord's, when we have the spirit of Christ, and bringing forth its fruits, whose are we? Ah! says one, "we are part the Lord's, and after a while we seek the blessing of sanctification and become wholly the Lord's." I would remind such an one of the fact that the Lord does not do his work at the halves. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon," is the language of the Great Teacher from heaven.

C. C. Marston.

The Lowest Place.

Not that I may be chiefest, Lord,
But that I may obey
More closely thy most sweet commands,
Teach me to serve, I pray.

Not that I may be honored more
Who am indeed the least,
I would the lowest place like one
Grace bidden to the feast.

But that thy smile, my blessed Lord,
Might reach that lowest place,
And show me, though the last and least,
The fullness of that grace.

—Harriet M. Kimball.

An Exposition of Matthew Ch. 24.

[Seventh Article—Concluded.]

"But of that day and hour knoweth no man; no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only." (v. 36.) It is claimed by critics that the proper rendering of the text is, "Of that day and hour maketh known no man, no, not the angels, neither the Son, but my Father only." From this the following conclusion may be drawn: That the day and hour of Christ's coming is no part of the dispensation of the gospel committed to man. Here he does not make it known, or does not publish it. It does not come within the provine of angels to make it known, neither was it a part of Christ's own ministry to publish it when he was on earth.

To me there is nothing inconsistent with this in supposing that the Lord Jesus, when he was on earth, knew the day and hour of his second advent, and, in like manner, angels might entertain the same knowledge. But Christ and angels did not make it known to the world, neither hath he licensed any of his servants to do so. But, although the day and hour are not to be published to the world, there is nothing in all this that would forbid a prayerful investigation of the prophetic periods, and the probable knowledge of their beginning and end.

"But, as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." (v. 37.) I understand by this that the moral condition of the world in the time of the end will be as it was a hundred and twenty years during which Noah was engaged in building the ark.

"For as the days that were before the flood, they were eating." Not that it was wrong to eat and drink to meet our temporal wants, but they ate to gluttony and drank to drunkenness. They made life a carnival. It was one scene of festivity and carnal gratification. They also married and were given in marriage to gratify the carnal mind, regardless of the design of the institution as it was originally established by a wise Creator.

The demoralized state of society in the antediluvian age, is referred to in Gen. 6. "And it came to pass, when men began to multiply upon the face of the earth, and daughters were born unto them, that the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all which they chose," or, "as many as they chose," which implies the practice of polygamy. And it was in reference to this that Noah was found more righteous than any of that generation. Said God: "Him only have I found perfect in his generation;" i. e., he had and desired but one wife, according to the arrangement of the great Creator, who, in the beginning, said it is not good that man should be alone, and made for him a helpmeet. And said our Savior, in his ratification of the marriage institution: "In the beginning God created them male and female. For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother and shall cleave unto his wife; and they twain shall be one flesh." But the antediluvians, like the present generation, corrupted their ways upon the earth until God could endure their wickedness no longer. Prompted by lust and pride, they cast off all divine restraint. A perfect parallelism may be drawn between the antediluvian age of violence, lust for gain, sodomy, and the gratification of every vile passion of the human heart, and our own day.

What meaneth this waking up the mighty men of earth? Why this alarming increase of crime and violence the world over? Why is every moral obligation, political and social, ignored, or, if not altogether ignored, so shaped as to give wider range to the selfishness of man? There is something fearfully ominous in all this. It is but the world's preparation for God to arise and shake terribly the earth, and execute his strange work of judgment. As it was in the days of Noah, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

"Then shall two be in the field; the one shall be taken and the other left." "Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken and the other left." (vv. 40, 41.) In these two verses we have illustrated the truthfulness of our Lord's previous testimony, that no man will make known his coming. Hence, there will be good and bad in the various associations and avocations of life when the day and hour of our Lord's coming shall have come. Some in the field, some at the mill, and some locked in the embrace of sleep, when a light more radiant than the sun, penetrating the dark caverns of hades, and a trumpet sound, such as until then earth shall have never heard, arousing the tenants of death's charnel-house, and turning the visions of all the living to him who now, to fulfill his ancient promise, is seen descending from heaven to earth in power and great glory.

But how diversified the scenes among the children of men! Some with radiant countenances and joyful hearts cry out: "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation!" Others who have set at naught and pierced him, will call for rocks and mountains to fall on them and hide them from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb. One (the righteous) shall be taken, and the other (unsaved) left. "Watch, therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." (v. 42.) Here, again, we have the oft-repeated duty of watchfulness urged upon the church. This is to be her peculiar attitude all the while her Lord shall be away.

(1.) Carefully inspecting her own conduct and attitude.

(2.) Looking forward prospectively to the day of coming deliverance and glory.

(3.) Looking for her Lord now, when certain precursors of the event shall be manifested.

"But know this, that if the good man of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched, and not have suffered his house to be broken up." "Therefore, be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh." (v. 43.)

It is plain that the readiness of the church enjoined is implied in her watchfulness. The good man of the house would have watched had he known the hour of the thief's coming. But you must watch for the coming of the Lord, although you do not know the hour of his coming.

From v. 45 to the end of the chapter we have presented two classes of servants in the church as we approximate the end; viz., the good and faithful and the evil. "Who then is that faithful and wise servant, whom his Lord has made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season?" "Who then," when the signs of the advent are seen, is wise to understand them, and faithful to proclaim them to the household of faith? "Blessed is that servant whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing." How doing? Why, giving meat in due season. What is meat in due season? Proclaiming the signs of the Lord's speedy coming. Some tell us that the signs mentioned in Mat. 24 are all to transpire in connection with Christ's personal coming.

If that were so it neutralizes the utility of the events as signs. It is impossible to confound a sign, or a premonition of some coming event, with the event itself. Again, the signs will be the occasion of faithful servants to say, "My Lord is coming." And that proclamation will constitute the meat in due season to the household of faith.

"Blessed is that servant whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing. Verily I say unto you, that he shall make him ruler over all his goods." (v. 47.) "But and if that evil servant shall say in his heart, my Lord delayeth his coming." (v. 58.) The good servant is known by his proclamation of the evidences of the Lord's coming, and the evil servant by his opposition to the proclamation, and those who make it.

"And shall begin to smite his fellow-servants, and eat and drink with the drunken;" i. e., he says hard things against those who are faithful to their work and calling, and joins and commingles with the unbelieving rabble of this world, as did the apostate priests of Jeremiah's time. (Jer. 18: 18.) "Then said they, come, and let us devise against Jeremiah; for the law shall not perish from the wise, nor the word of the Lord from the prophet. Come, and let us smite him with the tongue, and let us not give heed to any of his words." Jeremiah had been telling them that, on account of their wickedness and worldly conformity, the administration of the law should pass from the hands of the wise, and the word of the Lord from the prophet, which stirred up the opposing element.

So our Savior teaches it will be when the time has come for his people on the strength of the signs of the advent to lift up their heads because their redemption draweth nigh. The faithful one proclaims the near approach of the judgment. The evil servant says the vision is for many days, and he prophesieth of times afar off. He says my Lord delayeth his coming. But how fearful and overwhelming the predicted judgment!

"The Lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of. And shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with hypocrites; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth."

"Cut him asunder" is a form of speech used to represent a terrible punishment that will overtake the hypocrites of the last days, a punishment more severe than that which will be realized by the common unbeliever.

His portion with the hypocrites. This must refer to those mentioned in the last part of Mat. 23, which portrays the moral condition of things in the Jewish church in the closing hours of their dispensation. "Wo unto you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites; ye shall receive greater damnation;" i. e., your punishment will be greater than the common unbeliever, who has not enjoyed like advantages with yourselves. Concerning the evil servants in the church at the time of the second advent, it is said they shall have their portion with the hypocrites. What hypocrites? Evidently those who infested the Jewish church at the time our Lord manifested himself among men as the Way of Life, and who did not discern the signs of their time. So the evil servant who does not discern the signs of these last times, but is in darkness, that that day should overtake him as a thief, shall, like the hypocrites of the previous dispensation, receive the greater censure and condemnation.

How fearful the responsibility of the minister of Christ whom the Chief Shepherd hath ordained to feed his flock!

Dear reader, is this your calling? And, if so, are you heralding abroad in faithfulness the coming of that Just One? If not, look well to your ways!

The Lord will be here in a little while and call thee to an account for thy stewardship. We cannot treat this subject indifferently without incurring the greatest guilt.

ALMON ROSS.

Speaking of Things which be not, as Though they Were.

(As it is written, I have made thee a father over many nations,) before him whom he believed, even God, who quickeneth the dead, and calleth those things which be not as though they were. (Rom. 4: 17.) Here God called Abraham something which he was not (yet) as though he were (already) it.

He declared that he had made Abraham a father of many nations, because it was his fixed purpose so to do in the future. This kind of speaking of things which be not, and do not yet exist, as though they did now exist, seems to me to be very common in the Scriptures. I will notice a few passages in which God by his servants speaks of things which were not, as though they were.

Jesus is said to be a Lamb slain from the foundation of the world. (Rev. 13: 8.) "He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter. (Ps. 53: 7.) Christ by the mouth of David says, "The assembly of the wicked have enclosed me, they pierced my hands and my feet. They part my garments among them, and cast lots upon my vesture." (Ps. 22: 16, 18.) This was speaking of things which were not then, as though they were. Paul says, "For if through the offence of one, many be dead." (Rom. 5: 15.) Again, "Because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead." (2 Cor. 5: 14.) Here all men are said to be dead, the fact is, all were not dead when Christ died for them, but were declared dead because all were sure to die; because the sentence of death was upon all. But some one may say all were spiritually dead. I simply ask, how was it with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, the apostles and others at the time Christ died? Were they then spiritually dead? No, physical death is the subject here; and just as all men are said to be dead because of the certainty of their dying, so also are men said to be alive because of the certainty of their resurrection to life. This is evidently the case in Luke 20: 38. Here in speaking of the resurrection he says: "For he is not the God of the dead but of the living; for all live unto him." In v. 37, speaking of the dead that they are raised, he says: "Now that the dead are raised, even Moses showed at the "bush." How did Moses show that the dead are in a raised state? Ans. By declaring that God is their God, which could not be true if they were not raised to life. Why not? Because God is not the God of the dead. And if they are not raised to life, then they are still dead. But if they are living, then they are raised, for Jesus gave the Sadducees to understand that they ought to have known that the dead are raised, because Moses showed this at the bush by saying something that proved them alive. He clearly taught them, that if Abraham Isaac, and Jacob were alive, then they were raised.

Is it not clear that the resurrection state and life, which were not then, are spoken of as present facts, when really they did not exist, except in the purpose of God?

Again. "Buried with him in baptism, wherein, also, ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead." (Col. 2: 12.) Here again the believer is declared to be risen from the dead; while in 1 Thes. 4: 19, Paul declares that they shall rise at the coming of Christ. Evidently he spake to the Colossians concerning the resurrection, which was not yet, as though it was.

Just so in regard to salvation. He says: "By which [illegible]spel] also ye are saved." (1 Cor. 15[illegible].) Here he declares that they are saved, provided that which they believed was true. But he says again, "For we are saved by hope. But hope that is seen is not hope: for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not then do we with patience wait for it." (Rom. 8: 24, 25.) Now if they had to wait for salvation, it must have been still in the future. To be saved by hope or by faith, is no more than having a desire, an expectation and an evidence of being saved sometime in the future. Is it not clear that salvation is spoken of which is not present, as though it actually were so?

Peter in speaking of things that be not, as though they were, says, "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." (1 Pet. 1: 23.) He then adds, in way of explanation, (v. 24): "For all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass: the grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away." He compares man born of the flesh to grass. He shows as the grass withers, so man dies and his glory fades away. Hence the necessity of a reproduction and a second birth. But says Peter, "The word of the Lord endureth forever." Now why does Peter after speaking of this birth say, "For all flesh is as grass, but the word endureth forever?" &c. Does he not contrast between the natural state of man before the resurrection and the spiritual state of man after the resurrection. Is not the subject matter under consideration the flesh, which like the grass dies? "That which is born of the flesh, is flesh," corruptible, and temporal; "but that which is born of the Spirit, is spirit," incorruptible and eternal. But Peter says, "being born," that is now. How about this? says one. Ans. The word is that believers shall be born from the dead; and having faith in the word, we are born by faith, but only by faith. The fact that we are childen by faith, is evidence that we are born only by faith. Faith looks into the future for its fulfillment. We cannot be children of God by faith and at the same time be his children in reality. I understand to be children by faith, is to have the assurance that we shall be children. To be saved by hope, or faith, is to have an expectation and evidence that we shall be saved. If it is true that believers are children of God by faith only, then the birth Peter speaks of is only a hope produced by the evidence or word in regard to the real birth.

This Peter declares to have taken place with those he was addressing. He says, Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who, according to his abundant mercy, hath begotten us again unto a lively hope, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you." The hope produced by the resurrection of Christ from the dead, is the hope of the change from corruption to incorruption, from mortal to immortality when Christ comes again. So they were born again by faith, by the word. They were the children of God by faith, and faith is the confidence of things hoped for; and that which is hoped for is evidently in the future. Hope that is seen is not hope. Christ died and was raised again. This resurrection is called a birth. So also will the resurrection of believers be a birth. Now if believers are said to be raised with Christ because his resurrection insures theirs, then believers can be said to be born again be-

The Lowest Place.

Not that I may be chiefest, Lord,
But that I may obey
More closely thy most sweet commands,
Teach me to serve, I pray.

Not that I may be honored more
Who am indeed the least,
I would the lowest place like one
Grace bidden to the feast.

But that thy smile, my blessed Lord,
Might reach that lowest place,
And show me, though the last and least,
The fullness of that grace.

—Harriet M. Kimball.

An Exposition of Matthew Ch. 24.

[Seventh Article—Concluded.]

"But of that day and hour knoweth no man; no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only." (v. 36.) It is claimed by critics that the proper rendering of the text is, "Of that day and hour maketh known no man, no, not the angels, neither the Son, but my Father only." From this the following conclusion may be drawn: That the day and hour of Christ's coming is no part of the dispensation of the gospel committed to man. Here he does not make it known, or does not publish it. It does not come within the provine of angels to make it known, neither was it a part of Christ's own ministry to publish it when he was on earth.

To me there is nothing inconsistent with this in supposing that the Lord Jesus, when he was on earth, knew the day and hour of his second advent, and, in like manner, angels might entertain the same knowledge. But Christ and angels did not make it known to the world, neither hath he licensed any of his servants to do so. But, although the day and hour are not to be published to the world, there is nothing in all this that would forbid a prayerful investigation of the prophetic periods, and the probable knowledge of their beginning and end.

"But, as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." (v. 37.) I understand by this that the moral condition of the world in the time of the end will be as it was a hundred and twenty years during which Noah was engaged in building the ark.

"For as the days that were before the flood, they were eating." Not that it was wrong to eat and drink to meet our temporal wants, but they ate to gluttony and drank to drunkenness. They made life a carnival. It was one scene of festivity and carnal gratification. They also married and were given in marriage to gratify the carnal mind, regardless of the design of the institution as it was originally established by a wise Creator.

The demoralized state of society in the antediluvian age, is referred to in Gen. 6. "And it came to pass, when men began to multiply upon the face of the earth, and daughters were born unto them, that the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all which they chose," or, "as many as they chose," which implies the practice of polygamy. And it was in reference to this that Noah was found more righteous than any of that generation. Said God: "Him only have I found perfect in his generation;" i. e., he had and desired but one wife, according to the arrangement of the great Creator, who, in the beginning, said it is not good that man should be alone, and made for him a helpmeet. And said our Savior, in his ratification of the marriage institution: "In the beginning God created them male and female. For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother and shall cleave unto his wife; and they twain shall be one flesh." But the antediluvians, like the present generation, corrupted their ways upon the earth until God could endure their wickedness no longer. Prompted by lust and pride, they cast off all divine restraint. A perfect parallelism may be drawn between the antediluvian age of violence, lust for gain, sodomy, and the gratification of every vile passion of the human heart, and our own day.

What meaneth this waking up the mighty men of earth? Why this alarming increase of crime and violence the world over? Why is every moral obligation, political and social, ignored, or, if not altogether ignored, so shaped as to give wider range to the selfishness of man? There is something fearfully ominous in all this. It is but the world's preparation for God to arise and shake terribly the earth, and execute his strange work of judgment. As it was in the days of Noah, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

"Then shall two be in the field; the one shall be taken and the other left." "Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken and the other left." (vv. 40, 41.) In these two verses we have illustrated the truthfulness of our Lord's previous testimony, that no man will make known his coming. Hence, there will be good and bad in the various associations and avocations of life when the day and hour of our Lord's coming shall have come. Some in the field, some at the mill, and some locked in the embrace of sleep, when a light more radiant than the sun, penetrating the dark caverns of hades, and a trumpet sound, such as until then earth shall have never heard, arousing the tenants of death's charnel-house, and turning the visions of all the living to him who now, to fulfill his ancient promise, is seen descending from heaven to earth in power and great glory.

But how diversified the scenes among the children of men! Some with radiant countenances and joyful hearts cry out: "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation!" Others who have set at naught and pierced him, will call for rocks and mountains to fall on them and hide them from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb. One (the righteous) shall be taken, and the other (unsaved) left. "Watch, therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." (v. 42.) Here, again, we have the oft-repeated duty of watchfulness urged upon the church. This is to be her peculiar attitude all the while her Lord shall be away.

(1.) Carefully inspecting her own conduct and attitude.

(2.) Looking forward prospectively to the day of coming deliverance and glory.

(3.) Looking for her Lord now, when certain precursors of the event shall be manifested.

"But know this, that if the good man of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched, and not have suffered his house to be broken up." "Therefore, be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh." (v. 43.)

It is plain that the readiness of the church enjoined is implied in her watchfulness. The good man of the house would have watched had he known the hour of the thief's coming. But you must watch for the coming of the Lord, although you do not know the hour of his coming.

From v. 45 to the end of the chapter we have presented two classes of servants in the church as we approximate the end; viz., the good and faithful and the evil. "Who then is that faithful and wise servant, whom his Lord has made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season?" "Who then," when the signs of the advent are seen, is wise to understand them, and faithful to proclaim them to the household of faith? "Blessed is that servant whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing." How doing? Why, giving meat in due season. What is meat in due season? Proclaiming the signs of the Lord's speedy coming. Some tell us that the signs mentioned in Mat. 24 are all to transpire in connection with Christ's personal coming.

If that were so it neutralizes the utility of the events as signs. It is impossible to confound a sign, or a premonition of some coming event, with the event itself. Again, the signs will be the occasion of faithful servants to say, "My Lord is coming." And that proclamation will constitute the meat in due season to the household of faith.

"Blessed is that servant whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing. Verily I say unto you, that he shall make him ruler over all his goods." (v. 47.) "But and if that evil servant shall say in his heart, my Lord delayeth his coming." (v. 58.) The good servant is known by his proclamation of the evidences of the Lord's coming, and the evil servant by his opposition to the proclamation, and those who make it.

"And shall begin to smite his fellow-servants, and eat and drink with the drunken;" i. e., he says hard things against those who are faithful to their work and calling, and joins and commingles with the unbelieving rabble of this world, as did the apostate priests of Jeremiah's time. (Jer. 18:18.) "Then said they, come, and let us devise against Jeremiah; for the law shall not perish from the wise, nor the word of the Lord from the prophet. Come, and let us smite him with the tongue, and let us not give heed to any of his words." Jeremiah had been telling them that, on account of their wickedness and worldly conformity, the administration of the law should pass from the hands of the wise, and the word of the Lord from the prophet, which stirred up the opposing element.

So our Savior teaches it will be when the time has come for his people on the strength of the signs of the advent to lift up their heads because their redemption draweth nigh. The faithful one proclaims the near approach of the judgment. The evil servant says the vision is for many days, and he prophesieth of times afar off. He says my Lord delayeth his coming. But how fearful and overwhelming the predicted judgment!

"The Lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of. And shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with hypocrites; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth."

"Cut him asunder" is a form of speech used to represent a terrible punishment that will overtake the hypocrites of the last days, a punishment more severe than that which will be realized by the common unbeliever.

His portion with the hypocrites. This must refer to those mentioned in the last part of Mat. 23, which portrays the moral condition of things in the Jewish church in the closing hours of their dispensation. "Wo unto you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites; ye shall receive greater damnation;" i. e., your punishment will be greater than the common unbeliever, who has not enjoyed like advantages with yourselves. Concerning the evil servants in the church at the time of the second advent, it is said they shall have their portion with the hypocrites. What hypocrites? Evidently those who infested the Jewish church at the time our Lord manifested himself among men as the Way of Life, and who did not discern the signs of their time. So the evil servant who does not discern the signs of these last times, but is in darkness, that that day should overtake him as a thief, shall, like the hypocrites of the previous dispensation, receive the greater censure and condemnation.

How fearful the responsibility of the minister of Christ whom the Chief Shepherd hath ordained to feed his flock!

Dear reader, is this your calling? And, if so, are you heralding abroad in faithfulness the coming of that Just One? If not, look well to your ways!

The Lord will be here in a little while and call thee to an account for thy stewardship. We cannot treat this subject indifferently without incurring the greatest guilt.

ALMON ROSS.

Speaking of Things which be not, as Though they Were.

(As it is written, I have made thee a father over many nations,) before him whom he believed, even God, who quickeneth the dead, and calleth those things which be not as though they were. (Rom. 4:17.) Here God called Abraham something which he was not (yet) as though he were (already) it.

He declared that he had made Abraham a father of many nations, because it was his fixed purpose so to do in the future. This kind of speaking of things which be not, and do not yet exist, as though they did now exist, seems to me to be very common in the Scriptures. I will notice a few passages in which God by his servants speaks of things which were not, as though they were.

Jesus is said to be a Lamb slain from the foundation of the world. (Rev. 13: 8.) "He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter. (Ps. 53: 7.) Christ by the mouth of David says, "The assembly of the wicked have enclosed me, they pierced my hands and my feet. They part my garments among them, and cast lots upon my vesture." (Ps. 22: 16, 18.) This was speaking of things which were not then, as though they were. Paul says, "For if through the offence of one, many be dead." (Rom. 5: 15.) Again, "Because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead." (2 Cor. 5: 14.) Here all men are said to be dead, the fact is, all were not dead when Christ died for them, but were declared dead because all were sure to die; because the sentence of death was upon all. But some one may say all were spiritually dead. I simply ask, how was it with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, the apostles and others at the time Christ died? Were they then spiritually dead? No, physical death is the subject here; and just as all men are said to be dead because of the certainty of their dying, so also are men said to be alive because of the certainty of their resurrection to life. This is evidently the case in Luke 20: 38. Here in speaking of the resurrection he says: "For he is not the God of the dead but of the living; for all live unto him." In v. 37, speaking of the dead that they are raised, he says: "Now that the dead are raised, even Moses showed at the "bush." How did Moses show that the dead are in a raised state? Ans. By declaring that God is their God, which could not be true if they were not raised to life. Why not? Because God is not the God of the dead. And if they are not raised to life, then they are still dead. But if they are living, then they are raised, for Jesus gave the Sadducees to understand that they ought to have known that the dead are raised, because Moses showed this at the bush by saying something that proved them alive. He clearly taught them, that if Abraham Isaac and Jacob were alive, then they were raised.

Is it not clear that the resurrection state and life, which were not then, are spoken of as present facts, when really they did not exist, except in the purpose of God?

Again. "Buried with him in baptism, wherein, also, ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead." (Col. 2: 12.) Here again the believer is declared to be risen from the dead; while in 1 Thes. 4: 19, Paul declares that they shall rise at the coming of Christ. Evidently he spake to the Colossians concerning the resurrection, which was not yet, as though it was.

Just so in regard to salvation. He says: "By which [illegible]spel] also ye are saved." (1 Cor. 15[illegible].) Here he declares that they are saved, provided that which they believed was true. But he says again, "For we are saved by hope. But hope that is seen is not hope: for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not then do we with patience wait for it." (Rom. 8: 24, 25.) Now if they had to wait for salvation, it must have been still in the future. To be saved by hope or by faith, is no more than having a desire, an expectation and an evidence of being saved sometime in the future. Is it not clear that salvation is spoken of which is not present, as though it actually were so?

Peter in speaking of things that be not, as though they were, says, "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." (1 Pet. 1: 23.) He then adds, in way of explanation, (v. 24): "For all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass: the grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away." He compares man born of the flesh to grass. He shows as the grass withers, so man dies and his glory fades away. Hence the necessity of a reproduction and a second birth. But says Peter, "The word of the Lord endureth forever." Now why does Peter after speaking of this birth say, "For all flesh is as grass, but the word endureth forever?" &c. Does he not contrast between the natural state of man before the resurrection and the spiritual state of man after the resurrection. Is not the subject matter under consideration the flesh, which like the grass dies? "That which is born of the flesh, is flesh," corruptible, and temporal; "but that which is born of the Spirit, is spirit," incorruptible and eternal. But Peter says, "being born," that is now. How about this? says one. Ans. The word is that believers shall be born from the dead; and having faith in the word, we are born by faith, but only by faith. The fact that we are children by faith, is evidence that we are born only by faith. Faith looks into the future for its fulfillment. We cannot be children of God by faith and at the same time be his children in reality. I understand to be children by faith, is to have the assurance that we shall be children. To be saved by hope, or faith, is to have an expectation and evidence that we shall be saved. If it is true that believers are children of God by faith only, then the birth Peter speaks of is only a hope produced by the evidence or word in regard to the real birth.

This Peter declares to have taken place with those he was addressing. He says, Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who, according to his abundant mercy, hath begotten us again unto a lively hope, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you." The hope produced by the resurrection of Christ from the dead, is the hope of the change from corruption to incorruption, from mortal to immortality when Christ comes again. So they were born again by faith, by the word. They were the children of God by faith, and faith is the confidence of things hoped for; and that which is hoped for is evidently in the future. Hope that is seen is not hope. Christ died and was raised again. This resurrection is called a birth. So also will the resurrection of believers be a birth. Now if believers are said to be raised with Christ because his resurrection insures theirs, then believers can be said to be born again because Christ being born from the dead by the Spirit, will insure them a birth by the Spirit in the future, also.

Now in conclusion I will say: The sentence of death passed upon all men, therefore all are said to be dead. It was in the purpose of God that the Son of man should suffer; hence he was called the Lamb slain. It was predestinated by God, that many should be conformed to the image of his Son by a second birth. Therefore he was not only called the Son of God, but "the first born among many brethren." The time will come when all of the many brethren will be born, and will enter the kingdom of God; not only by faith, as now, but in fact. Then the things hoped for will have come to pass. Now we walk by faith, not by sight. Then we shall walk by sight, and not by faith. Then the things which be not now will be. The sons of God will then be manifested, and glorified together with Christ, for we are "joint heirs with Christ," if so be that we suffer with him.

S. MORRETT.

Is Baptism a Saving Ordinance?

I answer, yes; otherwise Peter would not have said, "The like figure whereunto even baptism doth even now save us." There are two senses in which baptism is saving. (1) As an act of obedience. The salvation of the world depends upon their obedience to the commands of God. The command of an inspired apostle is, "Be baptised every one of you," and Christ says, "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." Any individual who knowingly disregards this or any other command of Jesus, is not a friend of his.

There are circumstances, no doubt, in which the salvation of certain ones depends entirely upon their obedience in this direction, as far as present acceptance is concerned. For instance: a man has repented of his sins and resolves to lead a new life in the future. He opens the book of God for instruction, and finds this statement: "We are buried with him by baptism into death, that like as Christ was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." Others, perhaps, are "sprinkled," or "poured" who started when he did; but this says buried. But it appears very humiliating to him, and he reasons like this: If I am buried or immersed I shall be a laughing stock; and if others can be saved without immersion, I may. Or some other excuse equally absurd is cherished until he loses all peace, which he can find again only by obedience in this direction. "He knew the Master's will," but hitherto had not done it.

This principle will apply to any other requirement in the gospel; and baptism has no more to do in the sinners pardon than any other of God's requirements. In fact, I think a man is not properly a subject for burial by baptism until he is dead to sin· then he is prepared to represent that fact by being buried.

The second is in a figure. Figures are representative characters. Peter tells us that baptism is a figure, and that figure represents the resurrection of Jesus Christ. Our eternal salvation depends upon the fact of his resurrection. "If Christ be not raised, our preaching is vain and we are yet in our sins: then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." (1 Cor. 15: 17, 18.) In baptism "we are buried with him," by living faith "planted in the likeness of his death and raised in the likeness of his resurrection." Baptism is a figure representing the "salvation to be revealed in the last time." And while it is true that the individual dies unless raised from the watery grave, this represents the fact that without a resurrection from the dead all men are "perished."

Here also is a lesson to be learned regarding the mode of baptism. Sprinkling or pouring will represent the foolish vagaries of immaterialism as well as anything else. But to represent our "hope and the resurrection of the dead," for which Paul was "called in question," we must be buried.

PHILO HITCHCOCK.

"The Days," Dan. 12: 11-13.

WHAT IS THEIR GRAMMATICAL VALUE?

The word for days has its usual import in all ordinary cases. But its use in special cases determines its special import. The context and subject demonstrate the propriety of the special use.

In my Hebrew Lexicon the fourth definition of days (yomim) is a year. This definite signification is found also in the Aramean (Syriac and Chaldaic). See Gibb's Gesenius. He refers for proof to Lev. 25: 29; Jud. 17: 10; 1 Sam. 1: 3, 21; 2: 19. "The yearly sacrifice [or] from year to year." Also 2 Chron. 21: 19. "At the end of two years"—yomim, the word for days, in our text. Hence the days (Dan. 12) express 1290 and 1335 years!

The definition given by Calasius—in his great work—the Lexicon and Concordance of the Hebrew language, in four folio volumes—reads thus: "Yomim, invenitur pro anno integro; Qui, apud Judœos, diebus integris, constat." I quote this for the few who will grasp the emphasis of the definition in this form. Then I transiate it for all: "yomim (the plural of day) is taken for a full year—a year in its integrity, completeness or fullness!" The last clause confirms this, hence, again we have 1290 and 1335 years.

The reference above to six texts can not be made to mean daily—from day to day, or the like; but all is plain when applied to the yearly sacrifice, or the great day of atonement; the yearly wages of Micah's Levite; or from year to year when Hannah went with Elkanah to take "a little coat" to the youthful prophet. No one would imagine that Hannah made and took her son Samuel a little coat daily! No, no!

But understand the term as defined, a full year, then we have authority to read 1290 and 1335 years in Dan. 12. Then, further, the time is commensurate with the range of the prophecy! The symbols and the measures of time must be consistent; for they are employed to express the grand, all comprehending scheme of God's providence over the world on to the end! Of course, the time embraces all duration from the prophet's own day, on to "the resurrection and judgment—the great and appearing day of the Lord." (Dan. ch. 11; 12: 1-4; 8: 11-19; 7: 17-18; Acts 2: 13-20, 30; 2 Tim. 4: 1-8.)

Therefore, "the 1335 days" are not our natural days, but the Bible expression for so many full years. For proof, we have Bible usage, applying the phrase to the annual atonement offering; the time within which a house might be redeemed—a full year; the yearly wages of the Levite, who served Micah; and the yearly worship and sacrifice and little coat by Elkanah and Hannah.

(2) We have the range of the prophetic arch; which extends through "the times of the Gentiles"—the times of "the kingdom of men"—to the yet future coming and kingdom of "the Son of man;" and this prophetic expanse requires that we take "the days" in the light of the special Bible usage for full years!

(3) We have the confirmation of this [illegible]nded tally of days with [illegible] day for a year"—from [illegible] days [illegible] to those of "Daniel the prophet." (Gen. 5: 4, 31; 20: 27-36; Num. 14: 34; Ezk. 4: 6.) "The days [space] of the seven sabbaths of years shall be forty-nine years." (Lev. 25: 8.)

Thus we have far more than "two or three witnesses" to justify and require us to understand the 1260 and 1335 days (yomi, the plural of yom, a day) as years.

J. B. COOK.

Time and the "Timeists."

Regret it as we may, yet there are even among Adventists a few—we fear many—who deride the claims and teachings of the timeists; and there is an evident disposition to "cry them down," styling their teaching as fanaticism, saying they are a detriment to the cause, etc. Now we do not recognize it as the office of an intelligent and charitable Christian, because heretofore some Bible students may have advocated an error as to the time of the coming of our Lord—may have made a miscalculation of prophetic time and periods—to brand as fanatics those who now claim to know from careful and diligent study of the prophecies and their periods, the exact time of the second advent.

If these timeists' claims are no[illegible] strict harmony with our settled vie[illegible] why not have Christian spirit enough to wait the demonstration of their truthfulness or falsity. Surely should they prove true it would be an event of great rejoicing with all the faithful watchmen.

Certain it is that we have testimony from the sure word of prophecy that the time is "near at hand." The great prophetic chain which we are able to trace through its literal fulfillment, and by which we also know that the "time of the end" is near, the signs in the sun, moon and stars, distress of nations, men's hearts failing them for fear, and the powers of the heavens being shaken—all portend the soon "coming of the Son of man in a cloud with power and great glory," "but the day and the hour of which knoweth no man, no, not even the angels in heaven, not the Son of man, but the Father only."

A faithful servant, when his master is absent and soon to return, is always found full of watchfulness. Our Lord and Master is absent—gone to receive for himself a kingdom and to return. Whether he appear this year, '85, or '98, we should be found watchful—filled with joyous expectation, and thankful that we have wisdom which the world have not, whereby we can "discern the signs of the heavens."

Now instead of pronouncing quick judgment upon the cause and teachings of the timeists, let us hope their predictions may prove true, and watch lest his coming overtake us as a thief in the night, and we be shut out into utter darkness. "The morning cometh, so also the night." The morning to the diligent watchers, and the night to the unfaithful who cry "my Lord delayeth his coming."

"Be ye also ready; for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."

W. H. H.

Will Adam Live Again?

The above question has been asked me by several brethren. I reply, yes, he must be raised from death, or the Scriptures be broken. "But," it is suggested, "did not Adam die under the penalty of the law he violated? die for the sin he commited?" He certainly did. "Why, then, should he be raised up?" Because Adam was put on probation a second time, under new law. He had failed under the law of works, do and live, and fallen under sentence, with Eve, of death. In this condition, God gave the promise of "a ransom" in the declaration to the serpent, that the seed of the woman "shall bruise [crush] thy head." (Gen. 3: 15.) This was a prophecy, and in it was the germ of the "new covenant"—"the law of faith." Under it Adam and Eve could not find forgiveness for their first crime; they had violated a law which knew no mercy—they must die. But they could believe the promise of God to redeem them by the seed of the woman; and laying hold of that, they could be kept from sinning more, and obtain pardon if they did, and obtain divine help to walk with God, as well as did Enoch.

That the law of faith in a coming Redeemer was instituted immediately after Adam sinned, and typical sacrifices offered, is shown in the fact that God clothed them with skins of animals (Gen. 3: 21), representing the clothing with righteousness of those that believe. Those animals, doubtless, were offered as sacrifices to God, and constituted the first sacrifice ever offered. Abel had evidently been instructed in this law, and seen sacrifices offered by faith, typifying the coming Savior. So Abel offered his sacrifice. (Gen. 4: 4.) There was the same probation for his father and mother as for Abel, or as for any of us. As therefore they enjoyed probation under the provisions of the new law, [illegible] must of necessity be raised to re[illegible]ve judgment—reward according to [illegible]hat law. Paul says Christ "gave himself a ransom for all" (1 Tim. 2: 6.); that "he died for every man." (Heb. 2: 9.) Christ said, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." (John 12: 32.) Adam is one of the "all men," and of the "every knee" that "shall bow," and "tongue" that "shall confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the father." (Phil. 2: 10, 11: Rom. 14: 10, 11.) Let God be true.

I. C. WELLCOME.

A Cheerful Response.

Last evening the ever welcome TIMES that we expected last Saturday, came in our Wednesday mail. And as usual after tea we all gathered around our warm and cheerful fireside, while one read aloud the contents of the new paper. The journal being among the first selections, we all soon entered into the spirit of the appeal in behalf of the Publishing Association. And as the article progressed, we saw at once the arguments used by the ever appropriate and timely writer, were such as to commend themselves to the notice of every interested and candid reader. I am truly glad that he let us all know that the Association, while it needed much help, would not "despise the day of small things." That those who could not give a large sum to help forward the noble work of sending forth, broadcast in the land, the blessed Bible truths we so dearly love, can give a small one, and many small sums put together will make a large sum.

Therefore, at the conclusion of the article, we all resolved to do something aside from the other demands that are upon us in this blessed cause we are trying to build up in this place. You will therefore please accept three dollars as our New Year's gift to the office, with our regrets that the sum is not larger at this time, hoping to do something again when your necessities shall be made known. May many hearts be moved to help you in your arduous and much needed work, is the wish and prayer of us, your humble co-workers in the glorious cause of our soon coming Savior.

MARY A. TIBBETS.

Volga, Jan. 9, 1873.

Preparation for Ministry.

If we are to receive our inward qualification and disposition from on high, to successfully preach the gospel of Jesus Christ, is it not therefore our bounden duty to avail ourselves of everything that we have on earth to enable us so to divide the word of life that every class and condition of mankind may receive their portion in due season? I am in favor that something should be done to prepare our young men who are looking to the ministry for the utmost efficiency in that most important work. We are living in the last universal apostasy of the Gentile church, and we want men of power—power from on high, and every means earth can afford to grapple with the giant errors of this generation, and to call out a people for our blessed Lord at his appearing and kingdom. Paul was learned in all the wisdom of his age, whence his great power for good.

PEYTON G. BOWMAN.

Pillow Prayers.

He who knows nothing of pillow prayers is ignorant of one of the sweetest modes of prayer practicable on earth. The day with its engrossments being gone, it is a most favorable time for the gathering in of our thoughts upon ourselves—our sins, our wants, fears, and hopes, and then the turning of them up towards heaven. This is what the Psalmist is apparently referring to in his words, "When I remember thee upon my bed, and meditate upon thee in night watches." That he uttered many a pillow prayer is a thousand fold more than probable. "I have remembered thy name, O Lord, in the night." I prevented the dawning of the morning and cried." Those cries were prayers before the dawn of day.

If these prayers of the pillow, however, be begotten only of sheer evening sloth, we may say of them that they are "bastards and not sons." But if they are the legitimate children of anxiety, excessive weariness, sickness, or other similar circumstances, then they are of the true house and lineage of heaven, coming down in kindredship all the way from Bethel, where the over jaded Jacob had his angelic vision on his pillow of stones.

Never Enough.

JESUS says, "He that commiteth sin is the servant, (slave) of sin." Nothing is truer than this, as all ages of experience prove. Sin is exacting and cruel. There is no soul-play, no liberty of one's better-self in evil-doing. For evil-doing is an enthroning of the lower nature over the higher, and so a reversal of the divine order of things. Thus is there a colliding of one's self with one's self; and this is bondage with fear. Thomas Carlyle, addressing the drunkard, puts it in this graphic and terrible way:—"No man oppresses thee, O free and independent franchiser! but does not this stupid pewter pot oppress thee? No son of Adam can bid thee come or go, but this absurd pot of heavy-wet can and does! Thou art the thrall, not of Credic the Saxon, but of thine own brutal apetites, and this accursed dish of liquor. And thou pratest of thy "liberty," thou entire block-head!"—Stirring Christian.

The Baptist Union gives words of caution to religious boasters:

"We always shudder when Christians magnify their doings, their victories, their graces. Satan loves to trap them here. He leads them so adroitly that they often verily think they are honoring Christ when really boasting over self. Self-trust is the deadly foe of trust in Christ, and it clings to our hearts like a cunning, greedy, evil one, bent on our delusion, and ceaseless in his wiles. It comes in the garb of humility; it is zealous, in words, to ascribe all honor to Jesus, while it suffuses the soul with complacency, and turns it within for assurance and strength. Then holiness unto self, by self, for self, overshadows, leads, takes precedence of holiness unto, in, and from the Lord. There has been so much of this: so many who talk of holiness are caught in this snare, that the meek and sincere are disheartened and repelled. And well they may be, for those who doubt and stumble, and fear the most are sweeter, truer, and bring more honor to our Lord than such glaring champions of the 'higher life.'"

THERE is nothing better for a human being sometimes, than a little hearty praise. Many good people conscientiously act on the directly opposite, and seem to think nothing better than a little hearty blame. They are mistaken, being conscientious in their blame as they may. There are sore burdens enough in life, bitterness and pain enough, hard work enough, and little enough for it, enough to depress a man and keep him humble, a keen enough sense of failure, succeed as he may, and a word of hearty commendation, now and then, will lighten his load and brighten his heart, and send him on with new hope and energy, and if he have any reasonable amount of brains at all, will do him no harm. Sincere commendation is the wine of life. He who withholds it, when he can give, it, is a churl; a churl from the best of motives, but he is a churl nevertheless.—H. M. Thompson.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, January 21, 1873.

HAVE you read Erwin on "The Destiny of Man"? An elegant, well written book. Sent post paid for $1.50.

OUR friends in Minnesota will observe the call for their Annual Conference at a later date than was generally expected. The original call, mailed the first week in December by the Secretary, did not reach us until the sixth of January. This is what has delayed the call and the meeting. It may be there is a providence in it.

WE have received and read with interest, C. A. Sumner's second letter upon phonography, devoted more particularly to the popular use and benefits of that important art. Mr. Sumner is at the head of his profession, and what he has to say upon the subject should fairly command the attention of every one at all interested in the short hand method of writing. The price of the published lecture is 15c.—at this office, or procured of A. Roman & Co, 11 Montgomery St. San Francisco, Cal.

AN astute writer upon 'soul sleepers' says that 'the want of harmony in the disposition' of the parable of Dives and Lazarus 'is fatal to their doctrine.' 'Fatal' is quite a strong word, especially as the objection urged is of equal force against immaterialism; for as the advocates of that system are not, strictly speaking, a happy family in their interpretations, the fact that they disagree is by parity of reasoning 'fatal to their doctrines.' If soul sleeping and immaterialism are both 'fatally' wounded, where, pray, shall we find 'sound doctrine?'

THE Church Advocate is giving an interesting series of articles upon 'the Resurrection of the Body.' Evidently carefully studied as well' as carefully written, we wonder it does not see that the title it gives its essays is certainly unscriptural. The unvarying Scriptural term is 'resurrection of the dead,' that is the dead persons. 'Resurrection of the body' is a phrase that has grown out of the false notion that the body and the man are two different things. The Scriptures give not the idea of rebuilding our house, but of resurrection of the individual

WE have been requested to give a series of articles upon "the National Sunday School Lessons" for 1873. We would be glad to do so; but those who are aware of the amount of time necessary to properly carry out such an undertaking, will readily excuse us. We have sought some competent person to take charge of a Sunday School Department for THE TIMES, and trust that before long we may favor our readers with something of this sort. For the editor to credibly keep up such a department is simply an impossibility, unless other departments of his work should be neglected for that.

IN a neighborhood where a few Adventists recently established themselves, a Calvinist brother undertook to create a prejudice against them. Among the rest a Methodist friend was approached. 'Why, they teach that when a man is dead he is unconscious until the resurrection!'

'Indeed! and what else?'

'Why, they claim the wicked will not live forever, but be destroyed!'

'Well, that is a great deal better doctrine, to my mind, than the idea that God has from all eternity predestined some men to eternal torments.'

The prejudice-monger immediately subsided.

WON'T the good brother who is dilating so extensively on 'the Nature of Man' in the Church Advocate put a little more of logic, consistency and coherency into his essays. For instance: what does he mean by saying —A figure must be based upon a reality—something that has been, or something that is, or something that is to be.'

Was there ever, is there now, or will there ever be such a thing as the trees holding a convention to choose a king? Did, or will ever a beam and a stone in a building talk to each other? Was there or is there, or will there ever be such animals and such scenes as are described in figure by Daniel and John?

Is it worth while to overthrow the Scriptures or render them absurd for the sake of an untenable point against 'soul sleepers?'

THINK of one being 'indignant' at the charge that he believed all infants would be saved. Yet Prof. Warren, of the Boston Theological Seminary, affirms that 'Henry Alting, an influential member of the Synod of Dort, and one of the most eminent authorities of his time, indignantly repudiates the allegation that his co-religionists held to the salvation of all dying in infancy. He declares that no one of their theologians, reputed orthodox, ever said or wrote any such thing. He affirms that they all discriminate among dying children, holding to the salvation of those of believing parents, but leaving the others to their merited fate. He even pronounces the charge of holding to the salvation of all dying infants in a baseless slander, a calumnia, noticing it in a series of such false charges. (Theologia Elenctica, 1674, page 377.)' —Infants 'meriting' eternal misery! Could there be a more insanely horrible thought?

CALVINISTS sometimes undertake to deny that they have ever taught the eternal misery of infants in hell. Dr. Hodge of Princeton, in his great work, 'Systematic Theology' ingeniously whips the devil around the stump on this topic, and baptism, and perhaps some others, by silence, or half silence, as the case may demand. But others have not been so discreet. The Helvetic Fathers at the Synod of Dort said: "That there is an election and reprobation of infants as well as adults, we cannot deny against God, who tenderly loves and inculpably hates them before they are born."

Twisse, prolocutor of the Westminster Assembly, says: "Many thousands, even all the infants of Turks and Saracens, dying in original sin, are tormented by him [the Deity] in hell-fire." Calvin himself says that God "precipitates into death harmless infants torn from their mothers' breasts." And again, "What other than the good pleasure of God is the cause why the fall of Adam involved in eternal and remediless death whole nations with their infant offspring."

MR. H. W. BEECHER being asked—

"How can a father who has hard work to punish his child half an hour, preach that God, who loves us infinitely more than our earthly parent, will ever shut his heart in this world or the next from the returning sinner?"

Replies:

It is not that God will ever shut his heart against a returning sinner. It is that sin, in its very nature, tends to shut our hearts against God. It is not that God will punish the sinner, but that sin will in the next world, as in this, work the ruin of him that sinneth. God, who is the author of our nature, established this law in it, and, in so far, is he the inflictor of punishment in eternity.

—That is to say: Having created us immortal, eternal sin and its consequent suffering are unavoidable. The eternal conscious agony of a portion of the race is the price of 'the pleasures forever more' of the remainder. Is not this impeaching both the divine wisdom and goodness?

IF therefore, we cherish the principles of heaven, and carry in our hearts the peace and joy, and elevation that are felt by its glorified inhabitants, we are now as truly subjects of the Kingdom of God, as though we were disembodied, and surrounded by the beauty, brightness and gladness of heaven itself. We do not mean to disparage, or in the least to detract from the sensible glories of the upper world. They must be great—exceedingly great.—For aught we know there may be crowns of material splendor there may be trees of unfading loveliness, there may be pavements of emerald, and canopies of brightest radiance, and gardens of deep and tranquil security, and palaces of proud and stately decoration, and a city of lofty pinnacles—through, which flows unceasingly a crystal river; and where loud jubilees are ever sung, with a concord of seraphic voices. All this may be; but this is not heaven. Such beauties and charms are only accessories of its bliss. Its highest and most rapturous delights consists in the perfect sympathy, and the full communion of the soul with God. If, then, this be in any sense, our state or condition on earth, we have reason to rejoice in a good evidence that "the Kingdom of God is now within us."—Baptist Weekly.

—Among the astounding misapplications of Scripture there are none more so than the perversion of the words of Jesus to the Pharisees—'the kingdom of God is with you.' The language addressed to a class denounced in as strong language as could well have been pronounced, hypocrites, whited sepulchers full of corruption and uncleanness, devourers of the portions of widows and orphans, the embodiment of selfishness and ungodliness—such were the class to whom Jesus spoke the words—'the kingdom of God is within you!' But reckless interpreters tell us the language means—'perfect sympathy and full communion of the soul with God.' It is morally impossible that the words contain any such idea. There was neither fellowship nor sympathy between the class addressed and their Maker.

INDEBTED FRIENDS.

Our friends who are in debt to us for books and papers will please take this notice as a request that they make an effort for immediate settlement. Times are hard, and no one knows that any better than ourselves. We feel it. But if every one owing us will pay up, we shall be placed in easy circumstances at once. Please do not put us to the expense of postage to write a special dun. Help us soon, and freely.

Modern Spiritism:

An Examination of the

ORIGIN, CHARACTER AND TENDENCY

Of Modern Spiritism.

BY C. C. MARSTON.

This work will bring out in its true colors the system of modern Spiritism, and show its corruptions and immoral tendencies from its own testimony, and also, in the light of God's word. It is an entirely new arrangement of ideas, and to a large extent new collection of facts. And will be read with interest and profit by all who are interested in sensible truth as related to this subject.

EXTRACT FROM THE PREFACE.

I am often asked the question, "Do you believe there is anything in Spiritism, or is it simply a humbug." My uniform answer is, "Certainly there is something in Spiritism—SATAN IS IN IT." The object of the following treatise is to demonstrate the correctness of this answer. That the system is of Satanic origin, and carried on by Satanic influence and destined to the ruin at last that awaits Satan himself, will undoubtedly appear in the evidence here submitted.

Paul's description of Spiritism is found true in every sense of the word, when he says, "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their conscience seared with a hot iron." (1 Tim. 4: 1, 2.)

The above work is now being stereotyped, and will be hastened to publication as rapidly as possible. We anticipate for it a large sale as a reliable and convenient hand book of the subject indicated.

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

Br. Wm. Branch has returned from Minnesota to Michigan. Churches in want of a faithful laborer or pastor can address him at Laingsburg, Mich.——The brethren in the vicinity of Hinton, Mich. are building a chapel 28x40 feet. They hope to have it ready early in the spring.——Four have united with the Manchester church (Iowa) as a result of the late meeting. Others will join soon, and encourage Br. Ridley and the church.——Br. and Sr. Dunand are doing a good work at Saratoga Springs, N. Y. But they are struggling as missionaries and need a help for the Sabbath School and for other purposes. The Lord's stewards we trust will remember them

MY JOURNAL.

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 25. An English work has been put into my hands today with the title, "Everlasting Punishment not Everlasting Pain." By Robert Reynoldson, for nearly forty years a minister of Upper Hill Street Chapel, Wisbeach, England.

This work contains five sermons. The first from Mark 9: 43-48. Death in gehenna, or hell not a state of eternal torment. Second, from Mat. 25: 46. Everlasting punishment not everlasting pain. Third, (second part) Mat. 25: 46. Fourth, Rev. 20: 14, 15. The second death. Fifth, Is. 53: 6, Sufferings and death of Christ, the penalty of the law for sin.

These sermons were published at the special request of the church, with a preface from one of the congregation. The work has had a good circulation in some parts of England.

In the first sermon Mr. Reynoldson says: "For some years I had considerable doubts respecting the commonly received tradition that the state which the judge of the whole earth will assign to the unjust at the judgment day, will be one of never ending torment. That a great portion of the human race, with all the sensation of living men, should suffer torment without end by the judgment of the Most High, is a thought so repugnant to our cherished idea of his character, that a question involuntarily arose in my mind—can this doctrine possibly be true? entertaining this doubt, I have not preached the doctrine of eternal torment for several years. I have satisfied myself with saying, that beyond the plainly declared truth, that 'tribulation and anguish will be upon every soul of man that doeth evil,' we know not what the state of the wicked will be, though we have the fullest assurance, from the perfections of his character, that 'the judge of the whole earth will do right.'

"In the early part of the present year however, I advanced a step beyond this, and arrived at the conclusion that the 'second death,' cannot be a state of life, of consciousness, of sensation; and believing that the doctrine which assigns eternal punishment to millions of human beings, is both contrary to the character of God and injurious to the souls of men, I have a conscientious conviction that I ought not any longer to keep silence.

"The popular theology holds a strong position as a theory in most minds, and most persons have a feeling that it is wrong and dangerous to doubt the dogma of eternal misery. And often as they doubt, they have fears, lest after all they are running into error, dangerous error. But adhering to the faithful word and renouncing tradition we are soon assured that 'eternal torment' has no foundation in the word of God. And a right view of the Scriptural retribution of the lost, will remove from the mind a cloud which obscures the brightness of God's righteousness and justice, and will enable us to behold more clearly his most excellent glory."

It is pleasant to know that God is showing his servants the truth in these last days. Thousands are being enlightened in all parts of the world, who now reject as unscriptural the dogma of the eternal pain of the lost. They see clearly, like Mr. Reynoldson, that the "second death" is not a condition of consciousness, sensation or life.

To-day the Christian world celebrate the birth of Jesus of Nazareth, the Savior of the world. This may not be the day, but no matter as to that. Jesus was born. The angel declared to the shepherds, in the plains of Bethlehem, "Unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Savior, which is Christ the Lord." And more, the angel said, "Behold I bring you glad tidings of great joy, which shall be unto all people." And while Jesus came to preach "good tidings to the meek," he came also to declare "the day of vengeance of our God." But "the day of vengeance" is the "day of the perdition of ungodly men." (2 Pet. 3: 7; 2 Thes. 1: 7, 8), not eternal torment. This could not be good tidings to the universe; while the "second death" for the wicked, would be, as it would put an end to both sin and suffering, by executing the penalty of sin, in destroying the sinners. The seed of the woman will yet bruise the serpent's head. And till all sin and sinners are put away and cease to be, the universe will not be cleansed. But Christ will complete his work in the entire restitution of all the holy prophets have spoken,

"That's Old Testament!"

Sometimes when we refer men in our conversations to what is written in the Bible on subjects of truth, they repel us by saying: "That's Old Testament!" The scorn of the Old Testament betrayed in this remark is undisguised, and the contempt in which its testimony is held is evident.

But it belongs to a past dispensation, and is therefore obsolete. True, many of the ordinances, yes all, as far as I can now remember, have ceased to be law, and instead of carnal ceremonies, there is now substituted the true worship in the Spirit. The types, the shadows of that age are obsolete, made so by the living substance; but there are truths in the Old Book that will ever be truths; that shall never be made void or obsolete as long as the world stands, or eternity endures. A statement of a fact in the Old Testament is an eternal truth; as much so as a statement of a fact in the New. Take the account of the creation. "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." This is a fact; an eternal truth. It can never grow obsolete; it cannot be transmuted into a lie; time does not affect or change it. It cannot alter; but is just as true today as it was in the day when God made the heavens and the earth; and a thousand years hence it will be still the same. So the record of man, as to his origin and substance, or a statement about him, being a truth, cannot be altered forever. Truth is not mutable. A fact is an eternal fact; not affected or changed by dispensations. God's mode of dealing with men may vary and change a thousand times, but a fact is not weakened, removed, or destroyed by such changes.

But that was the twilight of revelation, and that which is more perfect has come. Yes, but things can be seen in the twilight; and they are not seen to be exactly different when the sun has risen; they are only placed before the vision in clearer light and glory. All that can be argued from this objection is that some things are more distinct now than when they stood in twilight, and not that they are changed by the more brilliant light.

Besides, I do not grant that all things were seen in twilight in the past dispensations. If we consider the ages for a minute, this will be plain. There was the age of man, or creation. The revelation made in that age was one of creative wisdom and power. Will that revelation ever grow brighter with age and distance? Did it appear more clearly in the times of the law and the prophets that God created all things, than it appeared when he performed the work? Does it appear more clearly to-day? Will it ever be clearer, that God is the Creator? Then there is no twilight about creation. Age does not make it a truth more apparent or distinct.

The time of the law next claims our attention. The law as of God will never appear more of God. Those who stood at Sinai had clearer demonstration even than ourselves that that law was of Divine origin. They were not in the twilight concerning this fact. They knew, too, what it was to have the law applied to their every-day life. They knew it could never make them perfect. They knew the curse of the law. They know that it ministered death, through the weakness of the flesh. Were they in twilight on these matters? Nay, verily: though they did not understand them in the full light of the gospel, they were not in darkness. The knew the condemnation and death they ministered. That was the age of death.

Omitting the prophets, and coming to the gospel day, we find it to be an age of promise and mercy. It is the age of life: for life and immortality have been brought to light through the gospel, which preached not only the death but the triumphant resurrection of our Lord. Will resurrection ever be plainer? Never. Do we stand in the twi-light of that "wonder!" Nay, resurrection is as plain to us as it ever will be.

The next age is the age of glory. But we are in the twilight with respect to that. Saints have ever been in the twilight with respect to the ages ahead; but never with respect to their own. What revelation has been made in their midst has been the revelation of God for their day specially, and God will not make it clearer to future ages, whom it does not concern nearly as much. Whatever then is revealed in one age is never subverted by a further revelation in the next. Should it be so, God would be divided against himself, there would be inconsistencies in revelation, and the worship of Jehovah would cease.

I said the first age was the age of man; the second the age of death; our own the age of mercy and life; the one soon coming, the age of glory.

· if we want to know about man ·s origin, composition, parts, nature, ·ibutes, life, it appears to me reasonable that we should go back to the ·rds of the first age, treating on ·an origin. This then will lead us ·onsult God about the creature at ·beginning; we shall have to study at his creation, and subsequently ·is fall. Thus we shall certainly · to use the Old Testament as our ·book.

·' we desire to know about death, ·shall not only have to consider the sentence, but we must extend our ·lies into the age of death. We ·t go back to the days when it was ·ll blast, and but a faint dawn of relieved the gloom. This carries ·ack to the times of the law, when ·th brooded over earth with its jet ·gs till it seemed only as the valley ·leath, his wing stretched over it ·a end to end. Then mortality was ·er under-stood. Then the dark· could almost be felt. But, thank ·l, the light of the promise of life ·mered occasionally through the ·m, its beams being the tokens and ·mises of, life ahead. To study ·h, then, we are at once in the Old ·tament, reading Job and David, ·ah and Daniel, and all who have ·ten of it. And all they said about · far as they went, is true, and ·thy of our confession also.

·ut if we want to know of resurr·ion and life, we must learn at the ·ty tomb, in the clear light of a Sa·'s resurrection. We can see it in ·age of life. We can know it ·ugh Christ, and so our fear of ·h's mortal stab is scarcely felt; ·e, it is jubilantly triumphed over in hope of resurrection, as we prove hope in the shout of the apostle, death, where is thy sting! O hades, ·re is thy victory! Thanks be unto ·l who giveth us the victory through Lord Jesus Christ."

·ad if we would know glory—which ·l so soon flood and fill all the earth, can only dimly anticipate it, and · for it to be revealed, that we may, ·ing into that blessed and desired ·summation, know it in its own ·t, by participating in it.

·hus then when I bring from the · Testament passages on man, show· what he is; and descriptions of ·th, and the state of man in death, ·n only wisely fetching out the facts ·n their proper places—taking them ·n from the shelves of time on ·ch it has pleased God to place ·m. I cannot get them from the ·w as I can from the Old, because ·y are not placed there by God— ·ugh where the New Testament ·aks of them it does so in perfect ·ord with the Old, since our God is a yea-and-nay God. The New ·tament contains more advanced ·th. It teaches a farther-on lesson. ·rims with the victory of life over ·rtality, and treats of corruptibility ·llowed up in incorruption. Oh! sweet and rich grace it revels in. ·t only does it tell of dead men liv·; fallen men rising; corruptible ·n becoming incorruptible; but it ·s, "There's another age yonder," ·l gives us a peep through its glass, ·which the light yet burns faintly, so ·t we see things but darkly.

·o, in respect to man and death. I free in God to say, the Old Testa·nt is not twilight revelation. What·r else it is twilight to—whatever ·er facts and truths—it is incorrect ·ay it only glimmers on man and ·th. On these subjects we do not ·l facts growing in distinctness; a ·n gradually developing, but we see ·eing at once, and read of his com·ition, etc. The facts, like the man, · whole and perfect for our contem·tion. Nor do we see the solemn, ·ll truth of death being revealed by ·rocess, only a fact or two being ·own at a time; but we find the truth ·ly known and realized; and if the ·thors wrote by the aid of the Spirit, ·perly expressed. (To be concluded.)

W. KELLAWAY.

Questions.

1. Do the Prophetic Numbers in Daniel and John represent literal days, or does each day stand for a year?

2. Do any of those numbers reach to the coming of Christ, the resurrection or the judgment?

3. Was anything in the prophecy closed up and sealed until the time of the end; and if so, was it the prediction of events, or the prophetic time?

4. When did the time of the end commence?

5. Are all the antecedents of God's dealings in visiting our race with judgments, in favor of our knowing the time of the final judgment?

P. W. HOUGH.

Surprise Visit.

Our hearts were made glad on Christmas day last, by a visit from a number of our brethren and sisters of this section, who showed their regard for us, and their appreciation of our humble labors, by presenting us with a new Howe sewing machine, worth $102, a large English Bible, flexible cover, was presented me also, by one of the brethren. Our hearts were made glad, not because we counted these valuable gifts, though they were very much needed—the sewing machine in our family of children, and the Bible to take the place of an old one somewhat smoky and very small print, too. The appropriateness of these gifts shows the good sense of the givers, the costliness shows their generosity, while the giving itself shows their interest in the cause, and their confidence in us as laborers in that cause. We feel all unworthy to receive such costly gifts, feel that our abilities are small and that our faith and courage are sometimes much less than we could desire. Yet we feel new obligations resting upon us. We consider this as a token that the Lord would have us still labor in his vineyard. We view the matter as we are sure our brethren would have us; we receive these gifts as coming from the Lord through his children, consequently we thank God and take courage.

I feel it duty at this time to publicly acknowledge, that on Christmas day, 1871, I received as a gift from a beloved brother and sister in Illinois, a complete set of "Gibbon's Decline and Fall of Rome," a work which I long desired but could not obtain.

And now let me say a word to the brethren at large. Remember those who labor among you in the gospel, show them that you believe in their mission in a way that they cannot misunderstand. It need cost you but little to let them know that you are willing to help bear the burden of the Lord, you will receive a present blessing from the Lord, and a well done from him in the day of judgment. I often think of a dear brother who labored a year in one section, and received in all a "straw hat and fifty pounds of flour." How could he know that any one truly sympathized with him or really bid him God speed. I know how his heart longed for sympathy and encouragement, and yet it was withheld and some one was to blame. How can our hearts be otherwise than touched when every one of our Advent brethren and sisters within the circle of our labors, as in this instance and in many others, have shown their good will for the cause by contributing of their substance? We have in the past, doubted at times our calling to the ministry even though some have been blessed under our labors. We hope and pray it may be so no more.

And while I would admonish the brethren of their duty to pastors, I would say, forget not that our paper must be sustained, and that by material aid. Forget not your duty in this matter, you know that the "Lord loveth a cheerful giver." Do you know that God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work? (2 Cor. 6: 7, 8.) Why then be afraid to give? Please read at your next hour of worship 2 Cor. 9, and may God bless you and help you to imitate the Corrinthian brethren, and my brethren in this respect.

WILLIAM MORPHY.

Lewis, Iowa.

I THINK it best not to dispute where there is no probability of convincing."—Whitefield.

THE least act of self-renunciation hallows for the moment all within its sphere.—Margaret Fuller.

HE who reforms himself, has done more towards reforming the public than a crowd of noisy, impotent patriots.—Lavater.

HYPOCRISY, of course, delights in the most sublime speculations; for never intending to go beyond speculation, it costs nothing to have it magnificent.—Burke.

DOCTRINES are of use only as they are practiced. Men may go to perdition with their heads full of truth. To hold the truth and fight for it is one thing. To be sanctified through it is another.—H. L. Hastings.

CAN CHRIST ever fail to satisfy? Does he not satisfy the heart of God? Does he not fill the heavens with his glory? Is he not the one grand subject of everlasting counsels and purpose? Doth not the history of his ways overlap eternity.

MULTIFARIOUS reading weakens the mind more than doing nothing, for it becomes a necessity, at last, like smoking: and is an excuse for mind to lie dormant while thoughts are poured in, and run through a clear stream over unproductive gravel, on which not even mosses grow. It is the idlest sorts of idleness, and leaves more of impotency than any other.—F. W. Robertson.

BE PATIENT with men who make mistakes. The best men step aside without meaning to. A kind, strong word then is the help and blessing they need. As long as the deliberate choices are not turned downward toward the evil, and the motive is not colored with a bad purpose, the man is essentially on the good ground of hope, and is open to the dew and light of love. Help that man!

DOST thou really find Christ insufficient to satisfy thy heart? If so, thou art in a very alarming condition. Get down on thy face before God, in honest self-judgment. Pour out thy heart to him. Tell him all. Own to him how thou hast fallen and wandered. Have it all out in secret with thy God, and take no rest until thou art fully and blessedly restored to communion with himself.

JOHN WESLEY always preferred the middling and lower classes to the wealthy. He said: If I might choose, I should still, as I have done hitherto, preach the gospel to the poor." Preaching at Monktown church, a large, ruinous building, he says: "I suppose it has scarce had such a congregation during this century. Many of them were gay, genteel people, so I spoke on the first elements of the gospel; but I was still out of their depth. How hard it is to be shallow enough for a polite audience!" And the statement is good this day. The style and show which clamor for a "star" preacher would be utterly bewildered under anything like a blaze of Gospel sunshine.—Meth. Recorder.

LET US hear all that geology has to say about the formation of the earth, and the deluge: all that science can tell us of its discoveries in caves, or lakes, or ancient ruins, bearing upon the antiquity of man; all that the most ancient writings, monuments, and traditions furnish in regard to the period under our view. Of all men the believer in the Bible has the least cause for apprehension lest his faith shall prove without foundation. The discoveries of science are doing far more to confirm the record of Genesis than to refute it, and any apparent discrepancies we can afford to wait until we get all the facts.—Chris. Advocate.

The Times.

AT HOME.

– – – In Lansing, Mich., a man was "broken on the wheel" of an engine he was inspecting, and suffered a terrible death.

– – – A hard-working clergyman suggests that church pews should be put on pivots, so that persons in front may examine the toilets on the back seats.

– – – 'Popular Piety' is the heading the N. Y. Herald gives to its reports of Sunday services. The genuine article is not, however, very 'popular,' nor has it ever been so.

– – – A Lincoln paper claims that a seventeen foot vein of lime has been discovered in Nebraska. The lime is said to be so free from carbon and other foreign substances as to be ready for use without burning.

– – – We understand that cars are being built for mail trains between New York and Chicago, to consist of three cars and a locomotive. The trains are expected to make the distance between the two cities in twenty-four hours, running at the rate of about forty miles an hour.

– – – A Georgia paper relates the case of a colored man who was overpaid one hundred dollars on a check by a bank. The man returned the money: and another paper commenting on the incident, says, with something more than irony in it, that this is another evidence that the race can never be civilized.

– – – In 1870 there were 70,755 freedmen and colored children in attendance at the schools in Virginia; in '71 the number reached 157,841, and it is safe to estimate that 250,000 freedmen and colored children attended school in that State during the past year. An estimate can be made from these figures of the extent of the work of educating the colored race throughout the South. The outlook is a very promising one.

– – – The Sun's Pottsville, Pa., correspondent says the man who is engineering the great coal corner is Frank B. Gowen, President of the Reading Railroad. Mr. Gowen's first great move was the purchase of vast coal tracts, to accomplish which he negotiated millions of capital in England. To own and control all the anthracite coal in the United States is what Mr. Gowen desires for his Company, and if he can effect alliance with Mr. Parker, and one or two other magnates (the consolidation has been perfected between himself and the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad) then will they hold the keys to the anthracite coal mines of Pennsylvania, and be able to "bull" or "bear" the market at will. In Philadelphia the coal dealers are threatened with utter ruin. The heaviest dealers are trembling in consciousness of Mr. Gowen's power, and their utter helplessness to save themselves. Mr. Gowen has gone into the coal business on a mammoth scale in that city. He has opened yards, and having his coal mines and railroad to transport his coal, no private parties can compete with him. The same projects will be carried out in Reading, Lancaster, Harrisburg, Allentown, and such other cities as he chooses, until finally the whole of Pennsylvania and adjacent will be under the control of the Reading Company as far as the supply of coal is concerned.

– – – The way to ensure the burning of a building is easy. Put hot ashes in a wooden box and leave it near the wood work. Let matches be used liberally, and scattered about where people can tread on them. Wherever there is a flue, let the floor-beams be set in as near the heat as possible. Carry up as many thin iron smoke pipes as may be, and let them touch the wood as often as is convenient, and if a joint or two can be left loose, all the better. An iron pipe with zinc, and the zinc with boards, has been found to answer well. There is no need of putting incendiaries to the trouble of starting a flame. Provision can be easily made for the burning of churches, warehouses, or houses, while they are building. But all this will fail, unless one secures the right kind of watchman, janitor, or sexton If one has a prompt fellow, who at the first sight of fire runs to the police or the fire alarm the whole blaze will be apt to fail. The proper thing is to watch the flame a moment in a dazed state, then arouse and run round the storeroom, or church, for lost buckets and water that won't run. If you have hose and donkey engine, see that the engine wont work, or that the hose is burst. After a little, the sexton might go out after a Trustee, or the porters run half a mile to let the merchant know. If the fire companies can can be kept down for a half to three quarters of an hour, almost any building can be successfully burnt. There are some persons that don't want to be burned up. Let them reverse these directions.—Christian Union.

ABROAD.

– – – The French Assembly is trying to tinker up a satisfactory form of Government for France.

– – – The Emperor and Bismark have had a falling out—at least so it is reported; and certain it is that the latter has resigned some of his positions of trust.

– – – Grammont again insists that Austria promised to help France in her war with Prussia. It seems, at least, that Austria had no time to fulfill her promises if she made any.

– – – The disasters of 1872 are to be continued, it seems. At Yarmouth, England, a few days ago, fifty-nine fishermen were drowned during the prevalence of a violent gale.

– – – The experiment has been tried in the Wolverhampton (England) Council Chamber of placing wire across the room, and has been found so far successful in preventing an echo. The plan will also be tried in adjoining courts belonging to that town.

– – – The measures of the German government to repress emigration are said to have excited the fears of the people that another war is at hand, in which they are to serve as 'food for powder.' In consequence of this feeling immense numbers are using every endeavor to be ready to leave for America in the spring.

– – – The progress of Christianity in Madagascar is attracting attention. During the last year the increase to the Christian community was 63,000 persons, including 18,000 church members. In three years the total addition has been about two hundred and fifty-eight thousand converts.

– – – The quantity of spirits entered for consumption in England as a beverage in the first three quarters of the year 1872 was 10,109,041 gallons, being 1,162,449 gallons more than in the corresponding period of the preceding year; in Scotland, 4,594,771 gallons, an increase of 579,741 gallons; in Ireland, 4,253,692 gallons, an increase of 331,107 gallons.

– – – A dispatch from Bombay says a report has reached that city that a terrible earthquake has occurred at Soonghur, a town of India, in a detached district of the Baroda dominions, one hundred and fourteen miles north of Bombay. Fifteen hundred persons are said to have been killed in that town alone. Nothing has been heard from the surrounding country, but it is feared that there has been much additional loss of life.

– – – A distinguished Austrian officer, Baron von Scholl, who wrote about the defense of England in the November Macmillan: "Really, there was a sort of grim humor in the thought—if it were not so sad—that a nation which proffesses to believe in the Sermon on the Mount should be reproached by other nations who profess to believe in the Sermon on the Mount because, in the financial year 1872-73, it is only devoting to the destruction of human life a sum of $200,971,500.

– – – A recent calculation relative to the principal European languages shows that English is spoken by ninety millions of persons, inhabiting Great Britian and Ireland, North America the Bermudas, Jamaica, Cape of Good Hope, Australia, Van Dieman's Land, Newfoundland, and the East Indies; German by fifty-five millions in their own country, Switzerland, Austria Hungary, Russia, North and South America, La Plata, Australia, and the East Indies; Spanish by fifty-five millions in Spain, Cuba, Mexico, the republics of South America, Manilla, &c.; and French by forty-five millions in France, Belgium, Switzerland, Canada, Cayenne, and North America.

– – – Valuable additions to the knowledge of Nova Zembla and the adjacent seas have been obtained during the cruises of the Norwegian fishing vessels. They have proved the Arctic Sea navigable for five months in the year, especially along the northwest coast of Nova Zembla. Up to latitude 77 north and longitude 82 east, that part was not only free in September, 1872, but had a temperature of above forty-three degrees Fahrenheit. Another interesting discovery due to the same source is that of the Gulf Stream islands, in the very place where the Dutch expedition of 1594-97 located a sand bank, with eighteen fathoms of water over it. A rise in the bottom of that region of more than 100 feet, even in three hundred years, is very remarkable. According to Mack, these islands lie six miles from the coast, the north point in about latitude seventy-six degrees twenty-two minutes north, longitude sixty-three degrees thirty-eight minutes east. They consist of sand and rock, being bare, without any traces of vegetation Petrified shells are found on the firmer part of the surface.

– – – On the 6th of July, 1871, a law of public safety was passed by the Italian government, the results of which have just appeared in a report presented to the Italian Chamber by Signor Lanza. The principle object of the law was to check crimes of bloodshed, which have long been the reproach of Italy; and, according to this report, there were 2,286 murders committed during the first nine months of the year 1871, and the number of assaults with intent to kill not fallowed by death was 1,486. In 1872 these numbers were reduced respectively to 1,633 and 1,132, showing a reduction of twenty-five per cent on both classes combined. In 1871 there were 33,352, and in the next year 29,512 cases of wounding, a reduction of eleven and one half per cent. During nine months of 1872, in Sicily, there has been one murder for every 3,928 inhabitants; in Sardinia, one in 4,780; in Neapolitan provinces, one in 3,044 and in other provinces the average has been one in 18,347.

– – – In the Pope's recent allocution the persecutions in Germany, Switzerland, and Spain are alluded to. In reference to Germany, it is set forth that, adding calumny and derision to agony, the rulers of that country do not hesitate to attribute their cruel persecution to the faults of the Catholics, forsooth that these prelates and priesthood refuse to prefer the laws and will of the civil empire to the holy laws of God and the Church. The civil authorities of some of the cantons of the Swiss Republic, the Holy Father goes on to say, have entered upon the same path as the German Empire, and not less grave is what the Church suffers in Catholic Spain from the hands of the civil powers. There a law concerning the endowment of the clergy has been proposed and ratified, which is calculated to increase the destitution and servitude of the clergy Sadder things are also to be told of that small but impudent band of Armenians, who, especially at Constantinople, have endeavored, by audacious fraud and violence, to overwhelm the much greater number who remain faithful in their duty and faith. In conclusion, the Pope reviews the situation. "The Lord," he says "has truly smitten, us venerable brothers, with his sword, hard, great, and strong, but let us endeavor to appease the Divine anger in this acceptable time of the advent of our Lord."

– – – A recent telegram from Russia stated that the expedition to Khiva had been abandoned for the present, an announcement which occasioned considerable comment on both sides of the Atlantic. The opinion was generally expressed that Russia had given up the expedition for fear of exciting ill feeling in England. It does not appear who was the authority for this telegram, but it certainly afforded much satisfaction to the English, a feeling which has been somewhat dampened by the later intelligence that the expedition, instead of being abandoned, has made excellent progress, having already penetrated to the steppes of the Turkomans, inspiring a perfect panic in Khiva. The accounts received of the movements of the Russian troops are vague and mysterious; but it is said that the officers in command conducted their operations as though they intended to hold whatever territory they invaded, even going out of their way to pierce and occupy mountain passes hitherto only traversed by bridle paths. The army of the Khan of Khiva is said to be composed of some hundreds of badly armed slaves, who could make but a poor stand against well-appointed and disciplined troops. All this creates not a little uneasiness in England, as the presence of Russians in Central Asia is regarded as a menace to British domination in India.

The Christian Life.

"I Meant to do More."

Such will be the excuse of many an unfaithful steward in the great day of final reckoning. "Oh yes, I meant to do a great deal more—I knew I was not doing enough, but then I had so many objects that I desired to accomplish—land to buy for my children—houses to build and to furnish—stock in banks and railroads to purchase—debts and mortgages to clear off, &c., it really seemed as though I always had use for every farthing, and more I than could get. But I did not think it would always be thus. I thought these matters would all be arranged by and by, and then I would redeem the time—then I would give all I could make. But alas! at a time when I thought not the messenger came; and here I am to give an account of my stewardship. Oh that I had been wise! Oh that I had labored to lay up treasure in heaven, as diligently as I did on earth! But now my riches are corrupted: my garments are moth-eaten. My gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them is a swift witness against me, to eat my flesh as it were with fire.

Now is the accepted time. Now is the day of salvation. Let us work while it is called to-day, for we know not what an hour may bring forth. Take thy bill quickly, sit down and write, lest the Master come and find thee eating and drinking; wasting or hoarding, as so many before thee have done, who meant to do great things by-and-by; but to whom the convenient season never came. Not those who "meant" to do their duty, but those who did it, will be justified in that day. —Gospel Trumpet.

A Child's Rebuke.

A baker who was a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ, was one day hurrying along with a tray in his arms, when just as he passed through a side door he accidentally ran against his little girl, a child of about three years of age. Annoyed and irritated at the moment because he had, as he supposed, hurt the little one, he shouted in a loud, angry voice, "Get out of the way!" and passed on. More frightened at the father's stentorian shout than by the trifling accident, the child went whimpering down the yard, and meeting her aunt, was asked if she was hurt. "Ess," replied the little creature, "but Jesus didn't 'peak in dat way to 'ittle child'en—he took 'em up in his arms, he did." What a rebuke from the mouth of a child!

No Want.

A good man shall have what he needs, not always what he thinks he needs. Providence intends the supply of our necessities, but not of our desires. He will satisfy our wants, but not our wantonness. When a thing is not needful, a man can not properly be said to want it. When it is needful, a good man shall not be without it. What is not bestowed upon us, may not be so beautiful at that time wherein we desire it, for everything is beautiful in its season. He that doth not want God's kindness to renew him shall never want God's kindness to supply him; his hand shall not be wanting to give where his heart has been so large in working—Charnick.

An Odd Person.

Some young ladies were one day in the house of the Rev. B. Jacobs, talking about one of their friends. As he entered the epithets "odd," "singular," and the like, freely applied to somebody. He asked and was told the name of the young lady they were speaking of.

"Yes," he remarked very gravely, "she is a very odd lady; she is a very odd young lady; I consider her extremely singular;—she was never heard to speak ill of an absent friend."

The rebuke was not forgotten by those who heard it.

John Newton says, "Satan seldom comes to a Christian with great temptations, or with a temptation to commit a great sin. You bring a green log and a candle together, and they are very safe neighbos; but bring a few shavings and set them alight, and then a few small sticks and let them take fire, and you will soon get rid of your log. And so it is with your sins. You will be startled with the idea of commiting a great sin, and so the devil brings you a little temptation and tells you to indulge yourself. 'There is no great harm in this,' 'no great peril in that;' and so by these little chips we are first easily lighted up, and at last the green log is burned. 'Watch and pray, lest ye enter into temptation.'"

From Our English Correspondent.

Christmas day has come and gone, and it was one of the best and most peaceful days ever spent by your correspondent in this tumultuous world. You know, or I would tell you that this season in England is one of the most festive seasons of the year. The very mention of Christmas quickens the English pulse, and seems to be considered as a nomenclature of all that is bright, joyful and happy. Christmas brings family reunions, festal enjoyments and home decorations. Brothers and sisters separated for the long year meet around the family board which is graced by the presence of father and mother. Pleasant talk concerning the past year goes round the table, and when after meal they all gather about the hearthstone and the family Christmas log, it seems as if the top of happiness is reached.

But I did not so spend the day which commemorated the birth of our Jesus. We had heard that a number of persons—four in all—wished to enter into the name of our God and Savior, and that Christmas day was the most convenient and suitable for them, and had therefore held ourselves in readiness to serve them in Christ. They were from Pulham, the place I gave you an account of in a former letter.

They came by an early train, and after a little refreshment, we proceeded to the Preston road—a beautiful road going around for the most part by the way of the Bay of Weymouth. The sea was rolling heavily and breaking in foam as it tended to the beach. And the ground was a loose pebbly bottom, which was drawn away from under one by the retreating waves. The majesty and roar of the elements nearly drowned the voice of your correspondent as he sought to speak words of wisdom and comfort to the brethren about to be baptised. I forgot to say that my youngest sister joined those from Pulham, for baptism into Christ. She was the first who came forward; and Br. Hardy and myself immersed her in the billowy wave as it sought the shore. Another sister and three brethren were then "buried in baptism into death," all I trust understanding and believing according to the Scriptural faith and hope. It was a blessed season, and we obeyed under difficulties, but our Lord's approval and spirit which led us there, waited on our steps to bless us.

After changing and partaking of dinner, we had a profitable meeting in the reading room, at which we were led specially to speak of the priesthood of believers. We rejoiced in being made to our God a holy and royal priesthood, taking the place of the old Aaronic order, that we might enjoy in the service of God in his temple, which is his body, the church. For this we were prepared as the priests of old by (1) washing, (2) clothing, (3) anointing. And we gladly anticipated the day when we should be "a kingdom of priests" reigning on the earth.

So the truth prospers, and we rejoice and will rejoice. Five more living stones built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus himself being the chief corner stone! Five more 'in Christ!' Five more 'added to the church!' Five more members of Christ "in continuance being fashioned!" Five more scions grafted into 'the Vine, the true Vine!' It is blessed to realize all this! To God be thanksgiving for his mercy and Spirit which led them to die that they might henceforth live unto God! Brethren pray for them.

THE JUDGMENTS OF GOD.

The "Right Rev. Dr. Comthwart," bishop of the Roman Catholic diocese of Beverly, has written a pastoral to his charges, which was read on the 8th inst, at the church of Atley, by the "Rev. M. Kelly." In it he states the unparalleled distress of the nations, the visitations by "act of God," as judgments on increasing wickedness. He also remarks on the state of the Roman Church, and its sorrows. It is nothing but a dilation on "miserables"—torment, which God has commanded to be given to the wretched apostasy, a tale of woes, disastrous, thickening omens of the approach of the King of Righteousness. I make the following extracts:

His lordship, at the outset of his pastoral, did not hesitate to affirm that for the last eighteen months and more the calamities, the disasters, the ruin and devastation that had afflicted the nations were little less than appalling. The wild rage of the elements on sea and on land; the wholesale destruction of life and of property; inundations, exceptional in their magnitude and number; the wide-spread misery of which they were the cause, distributed with a terrible equality of mischief over many portions of the globe; fires, the gigantic energy and extent of which had no known parallel in the past, their origin often a mystery, and their measure of ruin to life and property never fully realized. Earthquakes, wrecks, destruction of crops, accidents in mines and on railways were of frequent occurence. The catalogue of wo and of ruin indicated the hand of an offended God, who governs the universe, who controls and guides the elements. Considering the widespread and terrible calamities that have literally been pressed into that short space of time, what was there in the history of the past, or in the nature of things, to check the conviction that they were the visible evidences of the anger of God—that they were the instruments of his will for the chastisement of the sins and crimes of these modern days? But what, some might ask, had the modern world done? The church was suffering grievious persecutions in several countries, and was scorned, despised and trammeled in most....The Vicar of Christ has been despoiled of his estates contrary to the law of nations and in violation of every right; his capital, the capital of the Christian world, was occupied by an invading host and desecrated by the refuse of the revolution. Our own country had followed in the wake of the enemies of the church and of all authority abroad, and in loosening the marriage tie had brought a stain to many a house, while the revelations of her Divorce Court flung daily a moral pestilence over the length and breadth of our land. To please a noisy, infidel, revolutionary party she had allowed the Christian, God fearing portion of the population—the immense majority, thank God, as yet—to be wronged and oppressed by an education bill which interferred directly and mischievously with the inalienable right of parents to educate—religiously educate—their own children. After speaking mainly of the crimes of nations and of governments, and of the scourges that were following them, his lordship's next allusion was to 'a reigning scandal, a master sin, the root and origin of a multitude of others—the vice of intemperance, the crying evil of the day, that had invaded both sexes, young and old, and every rank from the highest to the lowest. To see the indulgence with which it was treated, the carelessness with which the habit was contracted, the rashness with which it was festered, and the recklessness with which its victims abandon themselves to it, would seem to be thought but a light matter. Drunkenness was a willing devil; it was the very mother of malice and the enemy of all virtue; it turned the brave man into a coward; the temperate it made lustful; it knew no justice and was fatal to prudence."

Surely, the world is going to ruin, and the nominal and heretical church to perdition! Wo is upon all, but those who are in Christ Jesus.

ITEMS.

The Pope has written a letter to Mrs. Maguire, wife of a late member of parliament, of the same name, in which among other things he says:

"Your piety must see and acknowledge that the anxious labors which had no slight share in causing his death prove that his heart always burned with zeal for God's glory and his neighbor's good, and that he was wholly devoted to the attainment of those noblest objects; and therefore that his merit on this twofold score must have won for him the most ample recompense in heaven. You can have no just doubt, then, that in the kingdom where charity is perfect, your husband, though parted from you, is more than ever united to you by the closer bonds of the spirit, and extends to you and to your children the most effective care and guardianship. Raise your heart, therefore, for thoughts like these, trust in God's clemency, and offer him the sacrifice of your grief; that if any stain of earth still clings to him that has passed from you it may quickly be wiped away, and his participation of the glory he has earned may be hastened."

The errors in the foregoing of spirit guardianship and purgatory are distinct.

Clergymen's Mercy.—The Leicester Chronicler reports a conviction for which three Lutterworth magistrates—all of them clergymen—are responsible. A woman named Cook, between seventy and eighty years of age, and of good antecedents, was charged, at the instance of a policeman, with having maliciously to have done damage to a fence to the amount of one penny, (two cents). The owner of the hedge, a farmer, had been sent for, but would not appear in court, and, under the circumstances, the policeman was the only witness. It is said that the woman, being very deaf, could not hear a word of the evidence, and was therefore unable to question the witness. When the policeman first charged her with the offence she denied it, and said she had merely broken a bit of dead wood with her foot; and some words, warm on both sides, appeared to have passed between them. The magistrates required the woman to pay 1d. for the damage done, and 5d. as fine, besides costs, which amounted to 13s. 6d., or suffer seven days' imprisonment: and a correspondent of the Chronicle alleges that, as the reverend gentlemen knew that the accused and her aged husband were in receipt of parish relief, they must also have been aware that, by this sentence, they were consigning her to prison for a week.—The Echo.

A Wealth-making Age.—We live, ladies and gentlemen, in a wealth-making age. It may surprise you to hear, but I believe it to be true, that more wealth has, in this little island of ours, been accumulated since the commencement of the present century—that is, within the lifetime of many who are still among us—than in all the preceding ages from the time, say, of Julius Cæsar, and, again, at least as much of it within the last twenty years as within the preceding fifty Liverpool has had even more than her share in this great, this almost portentous activity. Since I knew her she has scooped four miles of solitary shore into teeming docks; and now I am told she is about to add other miles to these. Out of the mere overflow of her wealth and energy the little hamlets which faced her in Cheshire have grown into a great town district, larger, I suppose, in population than she herself was at the commencement of the century. Her opulence, I think, has grown in still greater proportion than her numbers. If we ask where is this to end, when will this marvelous process be arrested, when will this floodtide begin to ebb, I for one know not. I am by no means sure that we are even near highwater. But with the impetuosity of this galloping career, with the wonderful development of such arts of life as bear directly upon enjoyment, there grows up continually a correlative class of dangers and temptations. "The world is too much with us; late and soon, getting and spreading, we lay waste our powers."—Speech of Mr. Gladstone, at Liverpool.

THE "ROCK" ON HENRY WARD BEECHER.

We do not profess to understand Mr. Ward Beecher's theology, which is the more to be regretted as a very high value is evidently set upon it in New York, where his chapel boasts a rent roll of some fifty thousand dollars a year. Preaching there on the day of the National Thanksgiving (Nov. 28), he took his text (we quote from the New York Times) the famous passage in the second chapter of Isaiah, in which we are assured of the coming of a time when "Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." That time, Mr. Beecher admits, has not yet arrived, indeed, "at present the main business of European nations is to teach their people war," to force artizans to kill and maim each other in the name of patriotism," and take for that purpose "2,000,000,000 dollars a year from the laboring classes." Here is a depressing picture, and we ought, therefore, to rejoice to be told, on Mr. Beecher's authority, that "the day is coming when there will be an organization to preserve the peace of nations," the same being "brought about by the suffrage of working men." But as the working men of America failed to retain their own model Republic from plunging into the most protracted and sanguinary contest of modern times we have but little hope of their ever effecting an "organization" that will preserve the peace of the world at large. We must look to a higher power to accomplish that, as Mr. Beecher might have discovered had he read attentively the whole chapter from which this text is taken, and which contains a glorious prediction of the Second Advent and kingdom of Christ. When he, the Prince of Peace, appears, we shall be able to dispense with armies and navies, but not before.

From South America.

My Dear Brother Himes: — On the 6th of September I laid my Edwin in the grave by the side of his mother in his 30th year; thus we both expect an "Edwin" from the grave as the fruit of Christ's death and resurrection—I hope very soon.

On my arrival here, October, 1845, I preached from house to house, all over the island, there being, of course, no meeting house. Some eighteen months after, conversions began to result among the slave population; the poor and the lowly being always the most ready to receive him who preached the gospel to the poor, and who himself became poor that he might make many rich; and became a corn of wheat sown that he might not abide alone, but that many should arise and live out of the dust from which he arose as the first-fruit.

God did not limit himself, however, and about a year after conversions began to take place among the slaveholders, and in 1849 a church was organized, a temporary chapel built, and one of the most intelligent and best educated men on the island, son and brother of slaveholders, was ordained as deacon of the church. There had been opposition from the slaveholders from the beginning, chiefly in consequence of my teaching the children of the slaves and some of the elder slaves to read which they feared would cause them to rebel. After the organization of the church it increased, seeing that some slaveholders were coming out on the Lord's side. At one time it assumed very serious dimensions, but the Lord's arm appeared stretched out for his own cause to frustrate Satan's wicked devices in stirring up his people against it.

The authorities had determined to take away our chapel, to turn it into a political meeting house. The next day was appointed for the purpose. That afternoon I was summoned to appear before the magistrate for the sake of the truth. Was ordered to deliver up the key of the chapel. I told him it had no key, and it was only a temporary house, that we would not oppose them, as the servants of Christ are as their Master, and do not fight; but we could not "give it up" to them, neither would I deliver the key if I had it. At twilight a group of us were talking over the event expected to come off next day, when we heard the report of a gun. The Prefect had shot himself. The opposers were crest-fallen at this event, and abandoned the persecution for the time, while the truth continued to have free access and to increase its influence.

Some time after the persecution revived. I was to be fined $50, put in the stocks, and the government was to be informed that I preached a sedition. A union of the Bowie family, Abrahams' family, who married one of the Bowie family, and Castello, the Prefect from the continent, were the chief combination. Abrahams was very wealthy, and influential in consequence. Abrahams had a Miss Bowie, a sister-in-law staying with himself and wife, of whom he was very fond. Castello gets in love with her. Abrahams is violently opposed to it. The Bowie's consent to the union; and the Bowie's, Castello, and Abrahams become bitter enemies. Abrahams soon sides with us so as to oppose Castello and the Bowies, and gave us $25 to assist in building our contemplated new chapel. Castello fears the influence of Abrahams wealth with the government to injure him, especially as Abrahams could report wrong doings on the part of Castello. Castello also, now seeks our favor, so as to get me to speak in his favor in case Abrahams injured him with the government, and offers money to aid in our contemplated house of worship, though he never gave any.

Thus, God wonderfully and mysteriously appeared for his infant and increasing church in this place where Satan had long reigned supreme and undisturbed. There have been three hundred and seventy-six members in the church from that time till now. One hundred and twenty have died, and thirty have backslid en, some of them totally apostatized and became bitter enemies to and persecutors of the truth and Christ.

While I was in the States, in 1855, my father's spirit got stirred up at my success, and he followed me out after I returned, to labor in Providence, fifty miles to the north of this island. Having made some converts to the faith, he requested me to come over and organize a church. Myself and Dea. Bowie went over and we ordained him over a small church, the members of which I baptized previous to the ordination. On his leaving, he ordained Mr. Davidson, one of his converts; but he has not the gift of preaching, and Providence is not properly supplied with the preaching of the truth.

At Bluefields the Moravians have a missionary station about ninety miles to the west of this island, on the continent. They have a small vessel and sail along the coast to various stations along the Mosqueto shore. They keep a large store, and carry goods about in the vessel. The missionaries being paid from the profits of the sales of said goods, they being the salesmen. My daughter, who was there, informs me that they speak mostly about the soul going to heaven at death, not noticing the resurrection. I have had Mrs. Ingraham, one of their members with me for several months under medical treatment, and I have plied her with the doctrines of the kingdom and the resurrection at our family devotions, and will give her a supply of The Advent Times to circulate there.

There is a missionary station (Presbyterian) at Bogota, the capital of this republic, and one in Venezuela. I expect soon to have communication with the brother in Bogota, as I have given him, at his request, the outlines of the history of this mission and asked him for information in return.

The idea of the soul being immortal as a separte entity I could never understand, though I received it as a Scriptural doctrine from the texts discussed in the "Good Tidings." Not being able to understand it, I preached Jesus Christ and the resurrection which were quite plain to the unprejudiced mind, and only alluded to the soul in expounding The illness of Mrs. Bent, one of our members, and a mother in Israel, brought the subject very solemnly before my mind. She had consumption, and was, to all appearance, in the very last stage of the disease, and I am satisfied a very large portion of her lung is excavated, yet she got well. At one time, during the progress of the disease, which lasted two years, she became quite insane, and had to be locked up, yet seldom did anything that was really sinful. But whenever she did do or say anything sinful the effect of the dread of it brought her instantly to sanity, and she would remain perfectly sane for from three-fourths of an hour to an hour, when she would become insane again. After her recovery she would relate this circumstance frequently.

In view of this, I asked myself: Does the soul get insane? If it does, it can get insane after it leaves the body. Or does the soul leave the body when the brain is insane, and return to prevent the body from committing sin? We are usually told that the soul dislikes to be imprisoned in the body and would not return at all after being free. It appeared to me altogether an affection of the brain; and after all I could get no light about the existence of the soul as a separate entity. Yet, as those texts appeared to allude to the existence of something (or a nothing) after death, when the point was forced on me, I frankly explained that I did not know positively, but supposed that at death the souls of the righteous would know that they were sure of their future reward at the resurrection which constitued their happiness; and the souls of the unbelievers would be sure of, and believe its doom after the judgment to be certain; hence, its misery, as figured by the torment in the flame in the parable: since the fact of a future judgment being positively declared in the Scriptures, rewards and sentences to damnation would be quite out of place at death.

Love to the brethren. I hope I am remembered now and then, though far away, on an island of the sea.

Your brother and fellow-laborer for Christ and his kingdom,

PHILIP BEEKMAN LIVINGSTON.

From D. W. Favor, Vernon Co., Wis.

We are like all of like precious faith, few in number; but we are seeking earnestly for "the faith once delivered to the saints." At present we have no minister. Br Hough has labored with us for the last year and a half, more or less. We expected his services during the present winter, but his health being poor, the distance great and the weather cold, he cannot supply us. We have a good meeting-house of our own, that we built one year ago. We have prayer meeting every Sunday, and also Bible class, which I think is as profitable as too much preaching, for at such meetings we are more self reliant, and all become laborers, while we can exchange views with each other, while we investigate and search into the great Bible truths. And a most important help in the way to eternal life is the regular and devout perusal of the sacred Scriptures. For we read: "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly, with all wisdom." We should make the word of God our sole guide, and reject all human traditions. The Lord taught his disciples how to treat human traditions on religious subjects when he condemned a regard to those of the elders. "To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word it is because there is no light in them."

From G. W. Hurd.

Our meeting at Buckhorn, Brown Co., Ill., everything considered, was a success. Some fifteen or twenty were either reclaimed or converted, five were baptised, and several others will probably attend to this rite soon. Prejudice was to a great extent removed, and several members of other churches took an active part with us. We had, however, as usual, opposition, rabid and fierce. One preacher was moved to an especial effort in this direction. The usual means were resorted to—viz., misrepresentation. But he signally failed, his own members in many cases turning against him. The old dodge was resorted to (in order to destroy the revival interest), and a young lawyer, a man who made no profession of godliness at all, sent us a challenge to debate—thus becoming the cat's paw to draw coveted "chestnuts" from the fire. I replied that with any Christian minister I would be ready at any proper time and place to debate the whole subject.

Sr. Alice Rathbun was with me and labored to the glory of God. After this meeting closed she began another at the Logan Creek Baptist chruch. while I returned home to find my little daughter on a bed of suffering and death.

From John B. Brown, Independence, Ark.

I have been trying to preach when I could get a hearing, but there is so much opposition, and it is a difficult matter to collect a congregation. Still we are not much discouraged, but hope that we may see the day when opposition will give way, and the cause of Christ prosper. We met in Conference, and did the best we could. I felt impressions in my youth to search in order for the truth; tried different sects, among the rest, I went to hear the Adventists. I watched their ways and rules at first, with much suspicion and mistrust. But found their doctrine was the best, and I became an Adventist. Some prophesied they'd come to naught, and in some years would be forgot. But still their numbers have increased, and God has blessed the Adventists. I love God's people, everywhere; all who my Savior's image bear. Among them all I've been refreshed, and so among the Adventists. And when the last loud trump shall sound, and wake the nations under ground, I hope to enter into rest, with thousands of the Adventists.

From Adrian Cooke, Fond du Lac, Wis.

As a church it has been our prayers that God would send some minister of his to wake up the slumbering minds of his people, that backsliders may be reclaimed, and that those also who have been about persuaded to become Christians might be led out into the glorious light of the gospel to see the truth as it is in Jesus, and be prepared for the things which must shortly come to pass. A little while, we believe, and we shall see the King of Glory! A little while, and then all sorrow and sighing shall have passed away. A little while, and all that love his appearing shall receive a crown of glory.

From C. C. Marston., Jan. 9.

To-night closes my labors with the Iona church. The Lord has given us a most gracious revival. Eighteen have been converted and reclaimed. Up to this date twelve have been baptised and the same number added to the church. Several more are waiting baptism. Br. and Sr. M. McCullock, the pastors, will continue the meetings as the interest may justify. I have found it very pleasant laboring with these servants of God, and the best of all is God was with us.

From S. Nye, Syene, Wis.

THE TIMES has come regular every week laden with meat in due season—thus I have been cheered. Never did I feel more determined, by the help of God, to endure unto the end than I do to-day. We are five miles from Madison, the capital of the State, with nine or ten thousand inhabitants, and a large number of churches, and not an Advent preacher to move his tongue all through this region. We hope for some better days.

NO MAN is good unless others are made better by him.—Welsh proverb.

IT IS an evidence of great hardness to be more concerned about our sufferings than our sins.—Anon.

HE THAT will believe only what can fully comprehend must have a very long head or a very short creed.—Colton.

WILT thou seal up the avenues of ill?
Pay every debt as if God writes the bill.
—EMERSON.

NO GOOD that the humblest of us has wrought ever dies. There is one long unerring memory in the universe out of which nothing good ever fades.—Woolsey

THERE is a whole sermon in the saying of the Persians; "In all quarrels, leave open the door of reconciliation." We should never forget it.

WISDOM and truth, the offspring of the sky, are immortal, but cunning and deception, the meteors of the earth, after glittering for a moment, they must pass away.—Robert Hall.

THE want of consistency in professing Christians has done more har Chistianity than all the ravings o dels from the days of Cain to the time of Paul.

ONE of the saddest things about human nature is, that a man may guide others in the path of life without walking in it himself; that he may be a pilot, and yet a cast-a-way.

SLANDERS besmear those who traffic in them. A noble life is a strong bulwark against which the fiercest storm of lies shall not prevail.

SOME men are like cats. You may stroke the fur the right way for years, and hear nothing but purring: but accidentally tread on the tail, and all the memory of former kindness is obliterated.

IF one could pluck a fixed star from its place, its light would stream down on us still for ages. And if a good man die, he lives on in the power of beautiful character, even after his name has slipped the memory of men. For the grave only takes the body, one's character, walks the earth forever.

IT is sometimes hard to maintain even a little faith, we are so double minded, so unstable, so hot, so cold, so earnest and then so negligent; we are everything except what we ought to be, that we may well wonder that Christ allows us to do the least thing for him.—Spurgeon.

TO PUNISH ourselves for others' faults is superlative folly. The arrow shot from another's bow is particularly harmless until our thought barbs it. It is our pride that makes another's criticism rankle; our self-will that makes another's deeds offensive; our egotism that is hurt by another's self-assertions.—Anon.

IT is a fine illustration of cheerful piety which makes the best of everything, that in the early settlement of New England, when provisions were scarce, and the people did not know, from day to day, where they were to find food, one of them inviting his friends to dine, had only clams to set before them, and at the table gave thanks to God, who "had given them to suck the abundance of the seas, and of the treasures hid in the sands!"

WE all speak and write too many hard and bitter words. We try to break, not to mend the bruised reed. While we strive to be strong in faith, let us not despise the faith of the weakest; for there will come a day to all of us when, in giving way of the powers of nature and the pouring in of the great water-floods, we may grasp at something which may hold up and carry us over. And then, not how much we have searched out and know, not how much we have disputed and prevailed, will help us, but how much we have lived on Christ and imbibed of his spirit.—Dean Alford.

THE SAD fact of sin is still in the world. And by sin, we mean, not a mere mishap that ensues upon a lack of knowing; not the inconvenience that follows, as a necessity, from the inabilities of a finite intelligence, but the actual loss that comes to souls by willful and positive wrong-doing. Sin being still here and having the race and the individual in its death-grip, we still need a Savior, who, by renewal in us, makes us able to break out of its fetters and be free. A real, tender, strong Savior is still the most quickening and blessed tidings announced among men. Law is good, Science is good, but Personal Love and Help are better. We understand quite well why so great a spirit as Paul could say, "Jesus Christ is all and in all." For if it were not for this ever replenishing Christ, humanity would be neither equal to utter a science nor obey a law.

Dr. South has said, "Wherefore, since the poorness in spirit spoken of by our Saviour is neither to be understood of meanness or timorousness of spirit: it is much that some should make the badges and characters of such a pitiful temper the proper indications of piety, and the marks of a more improved Christianity. For do not many, by a sneaking look, and whining voice, affect the reputation of pious and devout persons? Do not many behave themselves so, as if there were no going to heaven but by creeping, no passing through the strait gate but upon all fours? But such persons understand not the nature of the Christian religion, if they think that such ignoble qualities can be any part of it. Christianity is a superstructure upon, and an addition to the excellence of nature, and therefore, if a pusillanimous spirit debases and degrades a man, considered but as a man, it can neither adorn nor improve him in the capacity of a Christian."

Our Young Folks.

Good Night.

Good night, dear child, good night,
Sleep in thy little bed,
So soft, so lily white,
Beneath thy golden head.
Good night.

Like sunshine on a flower,
Thy tresses stray adown
The pillow in a shower,
And gild thy snowy gown.
Good night.

Feet, restless as the rain,
Your patter dies away
Till morning wakes agian,
And calls you out to play.
Good night.

Good night, dear child, good night,
Breathed is thy evening prayer;
Thy watch of angels bright,
Comes through the silent air.
Good night.

We yield thee to their care
Until the shadows flee,
Content that they should share
In our felicity.
Good night.

Poll and the Crows.

One morning Mr. Herbert went out into the field near his house and shot at some crows that were pulling up his corn. He killed two of them, and when he went to pick them up, lo! on the ground he beheld Poll with a broken wing and leg. He had got out and had got into the company of the crows, and was walking about among them very grandly at the moment Mr. Herbert, while trying to kill the crows, shot and wounded him. When he carried the crows to the house, the children all said:

"But how is this, father! Here is poor Poll, (the parrot) all covered with blood and nearly dead!"

"Ah, yes!" said Mr. Herbert; "bad company has got poor Poll into trouble. If he had not been between the thievish crows, he would not have got hurt."

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert bandaged up the limbs of poor Poll, and it was weeks before he got well.

"What hurt you, Poll?"

"Bad company," he would reply in solemn tones. And if he ever heard the children quarreling, or too noisy and ill-tempered in their sports, he would scream out, "Bad company!" and instantly good temper would prevail. Let children remember that almost always, evil occurs from going into bad company.—Kind Words.

Conference Minutes

MICHIGAN.

EASTERN DISTRICT Q. M.

The second Q. M. of the Eastern District was held with the church at Brockway Center, commencing Thursday, Dec. 19, and closing Sunday evening. During that time ten appointments for preaching were filled, and the Conference held two business sessions. The following ministers were present all or a part of the time: Elds. Geo. Wright, E. H. Durand and J. H. Paton. Licentiates: Francis S. Morgan and John Matin. These all shared in the work of preaching. Br. Smart of Forest Bay assisted also. Churches were represented by delegates as follows: Lapeer, by James Sloan; West Elk, by Nathaniel Vannest; Speaker, by Charles Locke; Brockway Center, by Alexander Bartlett; Riley Center, by William Sharrard. The churches of Forest Bay, Port Sanilac and Almont were represented by their pastors; Durand, Wright and Paton. All visiting brethren were invited to a sitting.

The following committees were appointed:

Devotional: Brn. Bartlett, Heebner and Rix, officers of the Brockway Center church.

On Resolutions: Brn. Paton, Wright and Sloan.

On Ordination: Brn. Wright. Paton and Durand.

The reports from ministers and churches generally favorable, but none any better than they ought to be.

The death of Eld. Mackie, deeply felt by all, was specially mentioned by the delegates from Lapeer and West Elk churches, of which he was pastor, Marlett not being represented.

The committee on resolutions introduced the following, which was accepted and by vote incorporated with the minutes:

WHEREAS: We have been called, in the providence of God, to give our beloved brother Eld. Adam D. Mackie into the hands of the enemy—death, and to lay him in the silent grave:

Resolved, That we hereby express our deep sorrow that the strong ties of affectionate nature have been thus ruthlessly torn by the power of disease, and that we are thus compelled to endure a loss, which leaves a vacant place in our hearts and in the field of labor difficult to fill; realizing as we do that "the harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few." But while we deplore our loss, and the fact that he is a prisoner, we feel that he has fought a good fight, and would express our appreciation of his earnestness, his work of faith and labor of love; and we rejoice in confidence that he is a "prisoner of hope"—hope, not of a resurrection merely, but of "victory"—a resurrection to "glory and honor and immortality;" and that when the Conqueror comes, he will receive the promised reward—Eternal Life. Also:

Resolved, That we hereby express our deep sympathy for our dear sister, the wife of the deceased, in her loss of the companion of her life; and would commend her to God, the widow's support, and to the earnest sympathy and friendship of the whole brotherhood, especially those among whom they went in and out proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom.

The committee on ordination considered and presented to conference the case of Br. Francis S. Morgan of Lapeer as a candidate for the gospel ministry. It was unanimously voted that he be ordained; accordingly this solemn ceremony was performed after preaching on Sunday evening, by prayer, and the "laying on of hands" by the committee.

Conference voted that our next Q. M. be held with the church at Marlett, the time to be decided by a committee appointed for that purpose, Elds. Wright and Paton.

There were gathered together a good many brothers and sisters from various place the benefit of social intercourse among ... who love the appearing of Jesus was experienced; but on account of the extremely cold and stormy weather, the effect of the truth we think was somewhat hindered. The preaching took what some would term a "practical turn," but not without holding prominently before the mind the great facts of the plan of redemption, as incentives to godliness. The Lord's supper was celebrated on the "Lord's Day" in the afternoon, and Christ was present in many minds, by virtue of the appropriate emblems. This is a solemn feast daugned to bring us into conscious communion with our Savior, and in order to success, other subjects of thought should be laid aside and unmentioned. It was a good time of remembrance. Many friends not associated with us as a denomination, kindly opened their hearts and homes to us in the entertainment of visitors, for which they deserve and have our warmest gratitude. Liberality in entertainment was manifest also by the friends of our cause. "The liberal soul shall be fat."

JOHN H. PATON, Sec'y.

NEW YORK.

WESTERN DISTRICT Q. M. REPORT.

Met with the church at East Shelby, Dec. 12. Although it was our first meeting since the division of the State Conference into three Quarterly Districts, and was a sort of experiment, yet we had a very good meeting. The attendance was rather small, five ordained ministers present, viz: A. C. Newell, W. Vreeland, C. F. Sweet, C. P. Greenman, and A. P. Moore. It seemed lonesome to meet together and miss so many we have been wont to meet at our regular quarterly meetings. We arrived Friday p. m. just in time to listen to a sermon by C. P. Greenman from 1 Cor. 16: 22. Preaching in the evening by A. C. Newell from Heb. 12: 12. Saturday 10 a. m. business meeting. Business Committee: C. F. Sweet, B. C. Simonds, and Perry Grinnell. Devotional Committee: Samuel Reed, Henry Hey, and F. Carpenter.

The following resolution presented by the Business Committee was passed after some discussion:

Resolved, That it is the duty of the Western Division of our Annual State Conference to provide a tent for public use in the coming tent season within its own limits.

The following resolution was then passed:

Resolved, That each church of this District bring in their pledges for a tent to our next Q. M., to be paid when a tent is purchased.

The following Brn. were appointed a committee to solicit pledges and report at our next meeting: Perry Grinnell, E. Shelby; B. C. Simonds, Darien; C. W. Kimball, Linden; B. F. Brownell, Brockport; C. Pennoyer, Lockport; C. Gridley, LeRoy; L. Hitchcock, Knowlesville.

Voted to have Protracted Meeting Committee, and B. C. Simonds, C. Pennoyer, and B. F. Brownell were appointed. Br. Warren Vreeland was appointed to deliver the opening address at our next meeting in March, and A. P. Moore his alternate.

Saturday p. m. preaching by C. F. Sweet from Ps. 1: 1. In the evening by A. P. Moore from Heb. 9: 27, 28. Sunday, preaching in a. m. by C. F. Sweet from Heb. 2: 9–18. 1 p. m. by A. P. Moore from Amos 3: 7 and in the evening by A. C. Newell on the "Ten Virgins" of Mat. 25th. The social meetings were spirited and love prevailed. Much feeling was manifested during the meetings and we hope some may be saved through the influence exerted. The Conference accepted the invitation of the church in LeRoy to meet with them in March.

A. P. MOORE, Sec'y.

SOUTHERN DISTRICT Q. M.

Met Dec. 6, with the church at Honeoye. The first eve was spent in prayer and conference, the Lord manifesting his approval by the influences of his Spirit in our midst.

There were two business sessions during the meeting. As the District was poorly represented all form was laid aside and each believer took part in the proceedings. O brethren of Southern New York, do remember our quarterly meetings. Come and unite with us. We need your advice and help, for we are the weaker district, and it is necessary that we be as one man. After some discussion of the question, "What can we do to further the cause of truth in this Southern District?" A Protracted Meeting Committee was appointed as follows: C. Armstrong and N. T. Withington, with power to select a third, which resulted in the choice of W. J. Hobbs. The work of this committee was to select suitable places for protracted meetings, procure efficient help to dispense the word, and obtain means as far as practicable. May the Lord bless their efforts.

The ministering Brn. present were W. J. Hobbs, A. C. Newell, Ira Allen, and H. H. Brown. The preaching was excellent and timely, and upon the whole our meeting was a success. There was a little cloud which seemed to rest over the little church at Honeoye, but the conference, which seemed to be a God-send, was the instrument that cleared it all away, and the truth never shone clearer in Honeoye than it does to-day. Surely God is good and his mercy endureth forever.

H. H. BROWN, Sec'y.

IOWA.

DEEP CREEK DISTRICT.

The second Q M. of the Deep Creek district convened at Deep Creek S. H. Thursday, Dec. 19. The weather being very unfavorable we adjourned to Delmar Junction. Conference called to order Sunday Dec. 22, M. Chandler in chair. Officers elected for ensuing year, P. S. Buck, Pres't., W. R. Chandler, Sec'y. and Treas. Preaching by Br. C. W. Pitcher and Sr. Plank of Manchester. Meetings good although but few were out on account of inclemency of the weather.

W. R. CHANDLER, Sec'y.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, January 21, 1873.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.
Sent Three Months on trial for Thirty five cents.

The officers of the Association are as follows
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON,
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD,
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK,
Treasurer—AMBROSE W. TUCKER.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS,
A. S. CALKINS.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH,
A. E. BABCOCK.

BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications to Wm. L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago; and

☞ Make all Postal Orders and Drafts payable to him, and always state the amount of money enclosed plainly at the head of the letter.

☞ Give your Post Office address in full in every letter.

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions.

Business Department.

Post Office Address

George W. Miller, Monticello, Minn
S. C. Wellcome, Kasota, Minn.

To Correspondents.

C. RICE—That will be right. Do as you say.... S. E. MABEY We received a notice from another source, which was published before yours came.... W. H. KENDALL—Received your favor. Much obliged.... M. C. GILLISPIE—Please give us your P. O. address. J. BOWER I will endeavor to attend.

THE WESTERN RURAL.—To any one paying us $3.50, we will send the Western Rural, the popular, and excellent Rural and Family Weekly of the West for one year, and credit one year's subscription paid to our own paper. The Western Rural, alone, is worth $2.50 per year, and every family in the West ought to have it. [tf

Irregular Mails.

We are not disposed to charge more upon the Post Office clerks than they really deserve, but the following remarks from an exchange have certainly some force.

But there is a cause for the failure of our subscribers to get their papers on time, which is utterly beyond our control. This is the irregularity of the mails. It appears from the last report of the Post Master General that in spite of all he can do, there is great irregularity in carrying the mails between the large cities of the country. How much greater, then, must be the irregularity of the mails to points off the main lines of railroads. According to the report above named, there were carried during the year, from Cincinnati to Washington, 618 mails, of which only 442 were on time, 176 behind time, 58 half a day or more behind, and 11 miscarried; while on 17 days no mail arrived. From Cincinnati to New York there were carried 700 mails, of which only 548 were on time, 212 behind time, 61 half a day or more behind, and 8 miscarried; while on 8 days no mail arrived. Thus it appears that nearly one-third of all the mails from Cincinnati to New York and Washington are behind time. It may be fairly estimated that one half of the mails to less important points are deranged. In addition to all this, there is to be considered the careless and sometimes reckless handling of bundles of papers by Post Office clerks.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

M A Tibbets
T S Thomason
O Fields
H C Welty
C Boyd
M C Gillispie
G Wright
S Pope
W A Frazer
A Watson
T Rines 2
R Hunt
H Miller
A D Hearn
R P B Curtiss
G W Cline
D Q Kent
J H Stannard
I Day
P A Cummings
W McAbbott
C Palmer
H M Lewis
J Luttrell
D McAffee
W Johnson
W M Cunningham
W J Griffin
H D Clark
D T Fleshman
M Hively
J B Castle
R Polley
J Thompson
J Merrill
L A Benson

P C Marsh
N H Reed
J Hamilton
S Burns
J Fellows
M B Hubbell
W F Storms
D P Kendall
A Emory
W H Jarvis
J Daws
F W Haskell
E L Marsh
J W Johnson
J H Anderson
H Noyes
P Bonnell
S T Crawford
F Dalton
J Ives
D W Favor
S Nye
S Sharp
S A Bechtel
A Cordray
J Langley
S Taggart
R S Langley
J Henderson
A Funk
D A Steele
N Coons
W H Macomber
W M Wells
J Hunt
T E Corliss

Z Wood
J P Combs
W B Combs
R E Huff
W Brookins
J F Adair
G L Thompson
C W Turner
J Williams
H Briggs
C Rice
R G Fletcher
J McMichael
P Baker
J C Overstreet
W A Tyng
H E Fury
M A Waite
R Mead
J Bower
R Martin
C Beagle
B Learned
E Holgate
G W Turner
S P Geehr
W J Hobbs
D R Drenkel
I Allen
J A Overend
D R Stoddard
G B Congdon
J C Wright
H W Ruble
S W Owen
J Shaw

Publishing Fund.

R Polley .75 D Q Kent 8,00, J T Darwin 1,00, M Burlagame .50 M A Waite 1,00 M A Tibbets 1,00.

Marriages.

BAXTER—BABCOCK. In Jonesville, Michigan, on Thursday, Jan. 2, 1873, by Eld. A. E. Babcock, Mr. Charles E. Baxter and Miss Marion Babcock, all of that place.

SMITH—GRINNELL. At the dwelling of John S. Smith, Elmira, N. Y., Jan. 14, 1873, by Eld. J. T. Ongley, Wm. H. Smith, of Elmira, and Miss Hannah M. Grinnell, of Jackson, Pa.

HOGARTH—MONTGOMERY. At the residence of the bride's father, in Marion, Mich., Dec. 30, 1872, by Eld. Geo. Wright, Cyrus Hogarth, of Brooklyn, C. W., and Agnes Montgomery, of Deckerville, Mich.

"How blessed the sacred tie that binds
In union sweet, accordant minds;
How swift the heavenly course they run
Whose hearts, whose faith, whose hopes are one."

Obituary.

McDONALD.—Fell asleep at Brooks, Adams Co., Iowa, Dec. 29, 1872, Maria M., wife of A. B. McDonald, and daughter of Thomas and Mary A. Hook; aged 36 years, 9 months and 26 days.

She was born in Warrensburg, Green Co., Pa. She was loved and respected by all who knew her, and leaves a loving husband, six children, and a large circle of friends to mourn her loss. Yet we sorrow not as others who have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so also them which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. Words of comfort by the writer, from 1 Cor. 15: 26.

A. F. DUGGAN.

DEAN—Sr. John Dean, Hartford, Conn., deceased Dec. 5, 1872.

Sr. Dean embraced the Advent faith in 1842, on hearing Father Miller and myself in that city. She was an earnest Christian, and became a full believer in the speedy personal coming of the Lord. She often said she believed she might live until he should come, though she was an invalid, suffering much with asthma. She had great hope, and love of life, and often times in sickness when all her friends gave her up to die, she told them she should live; and she did live many years beyond the expectations of her family. She was a burning and shining light in the Advent church in Hartford from the first. She was constantly talking of Jesus and the resurrection, and his coming kingdom, and to all classes, believers and unbelievers, she was alike faithful. Her house was a house for the preachers, and the pilgrims, and her husband sympathized with her fully in this as well as all her active labors in the Advent cause. She will be greatly missed by all. She died an easy death, like the going out of the candle, or the innocent child going into sweet sleep, and after the weary toils of a long, laborious life, she sleeps in Jesus.

Before she died, she told her husband to have the minister preach her funeral sermon from Tim. 4:6—8. No Advent minister being in town the Methodist minister officiated. He had seen Sr. D. in her sickness, and heard her views of the Lord's coming and resurrection, and gave an Advent sermon, to the edification of the family and friends.

It was my privilege to enjoy an acquaintance with the deceased for over thirty years, and I shall miss her words of cheer should I visit Hartford again. Nearly all the old believers there now sleep. But the "morning cometh" when we shall see them again. "Blessed hope."

Crisis please copy. J. V. HIMES.

Notices.

Discussion.

I have arranged a discussion with J. H. Hanson, a Mormon Elder of Council Bluffs, Iowa, to be held in or near Amboy, Ill., commencing Feb. 26, and continuing eight consecutive week-day evenings, on two propositions, involving the nature of man, and the validity of Mormon revelations. C. C. MARSTON.

What is Needed.

Many are anxious to aid in the contemplated history of the Illinois Conference, but do not exactly understand what items are needed. I would say: I want every item of interest connected with either conference, church or minister from the earliest stage of the Advent movement to the close of 1872. When was your church organized; by whom, and with how many members? The number converted, baptized and received during each year. The Sabbath school and prayer-meeting—how well attended and with what interest. Also the place of worship—if chapel, when built, etc. I desire a condensed account of the ministerial experience and labor of each preacher. But the most difficult will be to get correct items concerning the early conferences. It is hoped that brethren connected with the cause from the beginning will review their early experience, and write out any items that may be of interest in this work. My desire is to make it valuable as well as interesting to every Advent believer in Northern Illinois.

C. C. MARSTON, Amboy, Ill.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

Ackerman's S. H., 11 a. m. Feb. 9.
White Rock, Union Chapel, 2½ p. m. same day.
Rochelle, Ogle Co., eve. of same day.
New Rutland, Feb. 10-21 and longer as the Lord may direct. C. C. MARSTON.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Preaching in Advent Mission Hall, 619 West Lake Street, every Sunday 10: 30 a. m. and 7: 30 p. m. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening.
D. R. & M. S. MANSFIELD.

Genoa, Oct. 27, and every other Sabbath until further notice. E. H. BURINGTON.

Forreston, Jan. 23, 24. C. C. MARSTON.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co., at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, 3 p. m. July 21, and every four weeks until further notice.

Hope S. H., Broughton [illegible] m., and Center S. H. 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.

Round Grove, 10½ a. m. [illegible] 4, and every four weeks. [illegible] E. RATHBUN.

Shabbona, Union church [illegible] ½ a. m. Nov. 10, and once in two weeks, [illegible] hour, until otherwise notified.

Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. [illegible] 17, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

Amboy, Lee Co., [illegible] the second and fourth Sunday of each [illegible]
C. C. [illegible] TON, Pastor.

[illegible] M.

The next Q. M. [illegible] ern District of Michigan will be [illegible] church in Hesperia, Friday, Feb. [illegible] nday. Let there be a general rally, [illegible] tithes and offerings into the store-h[illegible] obtain the blessing.
E. B. SCOTT, Sec'y.

To the churches in Branch County, Michigan, I would say that my appointments for the year 1873 will be as follows:

East Gilead, Jan. 5, 10 a. m., and every two weeks after.

California, Jan. 12, 10: 30 a m and every two weeks after.

Algansee, every Sunday 2: 30 p m and evening. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening.
J. R. PRESTON, Pastor.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.

Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

The third Q. M. of the Southern District will be held in Rives, Jackson Co., commencing Thursday, Feb. 13, and continue over Lord's Day. A full representation is desired, and we trust that all our preaching brethren will be present. We cordially invite all who can, to come filled with the Spirit, and to work for the salvation of the perishing. C. FOX, Sec'y.

INDIANA.

A Q. M. of the Nothern District of the Indiana Conference will be held with the church at Sumption's Prairie, commencing Friday eve., Jan. 24, and continuing as the interest may seem to justify. The lovers of Jesus are invited to attend. There will be teams at the Niles and South Bend R. R. morning trains on Friday, the 24th, and also at the day trains of the Michigan Southern R. R., and also the Peninsular day trains on Friday, to take all that come to the meeting.
E. C. ANDRUS.

KANSAS.

The Kansas Advent Christian Mission Association will hold its annual session at Bero, Cherokee Co., Feb. 10. Officers for the ensuing year are to be chosen, and other business of importance transacted. A general attendance is desired. T. BOZLEY, Sec'y.
H. J. MUNSON, Pres't.

ARKANSAS.

The first Q. M. of the Batesville District will be held at Matthew's S. H., Saturday, Feb. 1, and continue over Sunday. S. ROSENBAUGH.

The first Q. M. for the Blue Mountain District will be held at the Turkey Creek Meeting House, Richwood Township, Saturday, March 1, and continue over Sunday. J. B. BROWN.

IOWA.

Masonville, Wednesday eve., Jan. 22, and over the following Sabbath.
Greeley, Tuesday eve., Feb. 4.
Odel S. H., Wednesday eve., Feb. 5.
Elk Creek, Thursday eve., Feb. 6, and over the following Sabbath. J. RIDLEY.

We, the undersigned, members of various churches of the Iowa Christian and the Iowa Advent Christian Conferences, realizing the obligations we are under to God and his truth and his people, and realizing, too, that in our present divided condition we cannot possibly accomplish as much good as we might if all the elements among us were heartily united in concerted action and with [illegible] ded front, do hereby propose and call a con[illegible] m, to be composed of two delegates from each church, to convene in the city of Manchester, April 15, to take into consideration the matters which now divide us, with a view to an arrangement which shall once more unite us in a single, undivided conference organization.

Signed:—T. E. Cook, J. Ingalls, J. Gildersleve, Dr. Banton, and many others.

Preaching in Thompson's Hall, Delmar, Clinton Co., Jan. 5, and every two weeks until further notice. C. W. PITCHER.

Manchester, the first and third Sabbaths of each months, at 2 and 7 p. m.
J. RIDLEY, Pastor.

MINNESOTA.

The Annual Meeting of the Minnesota A. C. Conference (the eleventh) will be held in Monticello, commencing Wednesday eve., Feb. 5, and hold over Lord's day.

Churches throughout the Conference are requested to report by delegate or by letter. All ministers of the Conference are requested to attend personally, as business of importance will be transacted.

Church officers will please forward to the Conference Treasurer (L. C. Collins, Monticello,) the contents of the Mission Boxes, and collections from other sources for the Conference.

Churches reporting will direct to the Secretary at Monticello, Wright Co., Minn.
S. C. WELLCOME, Sec'y.
GEO. W. MILLER, Pres't.

WISCONSIN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.
A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

Calaburgh, eve. Feb. 1, and once in four weeks.
Norris S. H., 11 a. m., Feb. 2, and once in four weeks.
Warner Creek, eve. Jan 25, and 11 a. m., Jan. 26.
Pine River, eve. Feb. 2, and once in four weeks.
ANSON BROWN.

The third Q. M. of the Western District will be held with the church, at Gilmanton, Buffalo Co., Friday eve., Feb. 7, and hold over Lord's day. All the friends of Jesus are requested to make this meeting a special subject of prayer, that God may make his power known at that time in strengthening believers and converting sinners. Why should we not expect it? God is unchangeable. He gave his Son to save the perishing, and will he not hear prayer to that end? Let us not be straitened in ourselves. God will hear prayer. P. W. HOUGH.

LaCrosse, corner of Main and Sixth Streets, Dec. 1, and once in two weeks. JOB BROWN.

NEW YORK.

Elmira, Feb. 10. JOHN T. ONGLEY.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Warrensville, Lycoming Co., 10: 30 a. m., and eve. Jan. 26.
Canton, Bradford Co., eve. Jan. 27
Commence protracted meeting on the Armenia Mountain, in the Segar S. H., three miles from Canton, Jan. 28.
East Troy, Bradford Co., Feb. 6, 7.
South Creek, Bradford Co., Feb. 9.
JOHN T. ONGLEY.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Bleury St.
JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y. 357, St. Joseph St.

Advertisements.

List of Books, Tracts, etc., kept on sale at the Advent Christian Times office.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c. By D. T. Taylor.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—Unabridged, $5, by express. Condensed, sufficiently full for ordinary purposes, by mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occuring in the Holy Scriptures. With maps and useful tables. 45c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: with engravings, maps, and tables. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

BIBLE DICTIONARY: by Smith & Barnum. The best abridgment of Smith's larger work. Leather $6 cloth $5. By express.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $12 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDance. With Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. $7 50. by express.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock, $2 50. Post-paid.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c.

*THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a re*ply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions to the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 50c. post-paid.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 45c, post-paid.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 60c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY of God: and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 12c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The Phenomena of Modern Spiritualism. By N. Field, M. D. 11c.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC meetings. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 8c. a hundred.

*THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; with a re*view of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabath By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added History, Statistics and Tables. Cloth, $2; leather 2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By Wellcome and Good. 460 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATTHEW, 24 and 25, 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen. The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one adress, post-paid, for $4 00.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH; a history of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on earth during the past 2,000 years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth. $1

LAST DAY TOKENS: by S. S. Brewer. 35 cts.

FUTURITY; by Wm. Sheldon. 20 cts.

THE INDEX BOOK MARK; 25c a dozen.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. Nothing so good on this topic. Cloth $1. Paper, 50c. 3 copies for $1, post paid.

GOOD TIDINGS; a general view of Advent doctrine. By an Association of Authors. 428 pages. Cloth 65c, Paper 40c. Post paid.

*THE NATURE AND DURATION OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT: By Henry Con*stable, Prebendary of Cork. 40c. Post paid.

THE FAITH OF ST. PAUL; showing it to have been neither Pharisaic nor Sadducean, but Hebrew. By L. C. Collins. 10c.

*THE STATE OF THE DEAD; a Discus*sion between N. Field, M. D. and T. P. Connolly, Esq. pp. 300. 50c. Post Paid.

THE JUBILEE HARP. $1. $9 a dozen.

HADES AND SHEOL; By L. C. Collins. The best published exposition of the parable of Dives and Lazarus. 10c.

*THE ADVENT MINSTREL; a choice collec*tion of spiritual songs. Flexible cloth, 20c. $2.15 a dozen. Paper, 15c. $1.50 a dozen.

*HYMNS OF THE HARP; Cloth, 75c, Leath*er $1.

HYMNS OF THE MORNING; A new and rich collection. Cloth 50c. Leather, 60c.

SCIENCE AND THE RESURRECTION; By D. T. Taylor. 8c.

PAULS EARNEST EXPECTATION and hope; (Phil. 1: 21: 23.) By O. R. Fassett. 8c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT: containing the original Greek text of the New Testament with an interlineary word for word English translation and a new emphatic version, 884 pp. Cloth $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1.00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

Land in Wisconsin. There has been placed in my hands for sale for the benefit of the Association a tract of forty acres of land in township 9, Range 2, West, Crawford Co. Wis. Said land is heavily timbered, mostly with Sugar Maple, and is worth $400, or more.

Parties wishing to make an investment can address me at the ADVENT TIMES office. WM. L. HIMES.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE ADVENT TIMES and Banner, one year for $2.50 if pre-paid. Address Wm. L. Himes, 25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1873. Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.

Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee Keepers," (a 36 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York city.

☞ THE TIMES and Bee-Keepers Journal one year fo $2.30. Address Wm. L. Himes 25 W. Lake St. Chicago.

The Ablest Tariff Journal in the U. S.

The American Working People.

Published monthly, is a welcome visitor to One Hundred Thousand firesides. Finely printed, handsomely illustrated, ably edited—has no rival! $1 50 per year. Sent on trial three months for 25c.

The Iron World

Is the largest and most valuable Metal Price Current in the world. $4 00 per year. Sent on trial one month for 25c. All the State Geologists are contributors.

Marion watches, fine silver plated ware, pen and pocket cutlery, and other desirable premiums to getters up of clubs for our monthly.
IRON WORLD PUB. Co.
—437. Pittsburgh, Pa

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Rich Man and Lazarus.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.

LOUIS REIMER,
1006 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

POCKET HYMN BOOK

With Music.

COMPILED BY CHAS. C. BARKER.

"Hymns of the Morning"

Is for sale at THE TIMES Office, at the following
REDUCED PRICES:
Cloth Binding..50c
Morocco " 75c

Sent postage free on receipt of price.

TWELVE COPIES FOR $4.75.

A liberal discount to agents.

This book is suitable for all religious occasions, containing the sublimest of religious songs, and the cream of musical composition.

For special terms for quantities, address the publisher, C. W. SARGENT,
Box 436, Concord, N. H.

☞ For sale at THE TIMES office, in large or small quantities.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which every one should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey, and a little care taken in examination of Routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R.," running from Chicago through Galesburg to Burlington, has achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading Passenger Route to the West. At Burlington it connects with the great Burlington Route which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories; and passengers starting from Chicago on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the C. B. & Q. and Burlington Route.

This Line has published a pamphlet called "How to go West," which contains much valuable information; a large correct map of the Great West, which can be obtained free of charge by addressing the General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. Burlington, Iowa.

THE CHRISTIAN:

A LARGE, LIVE, MONTHLY, RELIGIOUS, Family Paper, containing anecdotes, sketches, records of Providences and answers to prayer, true stories, poetry, music, etc. No sectarianism, controversy, politics, puffs, pills, patent medicines, novels or continued stories, allowed in its columns.

Each subscriber receives a large and splendid Bible reader's map, free. This map exhibits not only Palestine, but all Bible Lands. It is printed on a sheet, 29x39 inches, is beautifully colored, and contains—

(1) View of the Land of Canaan, with its valleys, mountains, rivers and lakes, as seen at a glance from Pisgah, where Moses stood to behold it, before he died. (2) Jerusalem and its Environs, the holy places, valleys, streams, pools, "the mountains round about Jerusalem," etc. (3) St. Paul's journeys, and the world as known to the ancient Hebrews. (4) A view of Jerusalem, as seen from Olivet, where Jesus beheld the city and wept over it. (5) Map of Palestine, "from Dan to Beersheba," giving the inheritances of the different tribes of Israel, colored separately. (6) Peninsula of Mount Sinai, and the journeys of Israel from Egypt to the Promised Land. (7) A Chart of the Seasons, months, productions, weather, and temperature of Palestine.

Besides all these, the map contains the ancient and modern names of all known places; the heights of the mountains; and references to the texts of Scripture where the different places are mentioned.

This map is given to subscribers for The Christian.

Terms—in advance: with the map on paper, beautifully colored, One Dollar a year; with the map varnished and mounted on rollers, a Dollar and a Quarter.

Four copies of The Little Christian, a child's paper, to one address, sent at the same rate as one copy of The Christian.

Ten thousand agents wanted to get subscribers for this map and The Christian.

Honest, intelligent, energetic men, women and children, can have pleasant and profitable employment, without risk or capital. For specimens and instructions, address H. L. HASTINGS,
20 Hanover St. Boston, Mass.

☞ The Times and Christian one year for $2.40. With map on paper, $2.70. With map on rollers, $2.85. Address W. L. HIMES,
25 West Lake St., Chicago.

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. [illegible]—NO. 26. CHICAGO, JANUARY 28, 1873. WHOLE NO. 457.

Advent Christian Times.

Contents of This Number.

First Page.

The Advent of Christ (concluded), O. R. Fassett; The "Daily," L. T. Cunningham.

Second Page.

Let Everyone Sweep Before his Own Door, (Poetry); The Judgment at Hand, E. C. Bronaugh; The Life of a Justified Man, (first article,) London Journal of Prophecy; "That's Old Testament," (second article,) W. Kellaway.

Third Page.

Help at the Right Time—a Talk About Providence; That Ministers' Meeting; A Plain Fact.

Fourth Page.

Brief Editorials; Our Future; Our Responsibilities; Something Done; Ten Thousand; The Time for Action.

Fifth Page.

Not Rightly Divided; Sense and Sensitiveness; A Noble Project; An Important Correction; Editorial Gleanings; A New German Tract; Personal; Present Truth.

Sixth Page.

The Honey and the Gold; The Test of Small Things; God's Opportunity; Communion, E. A. Marsh; Letter from S. B. Mabey; Immortality of Man and Animals.

Seventh Page.

Doing Duty, S. K. Gibson; Brother Beecher; Out in the Street, (poetry); I Forgot.

Eighth Page.

Business Department; Obituaries; Book Notices; News; Appointments.

The Advent of Christ.

[Second Article—Concluded.]

Love for Christ's appearing, and the desire to see him, is the true impulse of every Christian's heart the world over. The more ardently Christ is loved, the greater the degree of desire to see and be with him. The bride looks forward with anxious longing for the day of nuptial joy and union with the bridegroom; and the devoted wife waits, earnestly counting the days, the interim of which separate her from her absent husband. It betrays the absence of love or divorced affection if otherwise. If the intended bride wishes not to see the day when the bridegroom shall appear and claim her heart and her hand as his own in wedded union, what would it bespeak but a lack of affection, the want of a true and loving heart? If the wife, after a week, months, or years of absence of her husband, the chosen partner of her life, should receive from her still-devoted husband a letter communicating the intelligence that he was about to return, should be indifferent to its reading, and lay it aside as if she cared not to know when he would return; moreover, her neighbors and friends ask her, "Have you heard from your husband, and when is he to return?" to which she replies with indifference, saying: "I don't know when he is coming, and, furthermore, I don't care," what would it betray? And what would her neighbors and friends think of her, but as one whose affections had become divorced for some cause during her husband's absence, and that there was a wrong existing manifestly in her heart if not in her outward conduct. Besides, when her husband returns, suppose she meets him not as is her custom, with a smile, and an approach of welcome, and a kiss, but with a dreadful frown, a distant indifference, or despair! Alas! the tale is told. That once loving wife is divorced in her affections from that true heart that has returned to still show its own love is unabated. What then shall we say of the professed church of Christ in this age, as a body, which has so little interest in the Lord's return, and treats the news of his coming with contempt, ridicule, and scorn before the world. Is not devoted and sincere love for Jesus wanting, and its lack betrayed, in her attitude of non-expectation?

The faithful and true witness has described the character and condition of this the last age of his professed church, in the following graphic language which draws her portraiture unmistakably: "I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot. So then, because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spew thee out of my mouth. Because thou sayest, I am rich and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked." (Rev. 3: 14–18.) This description of the Laodicean church, the last of the seven churches addressed in the "Revelation," is designed to draw the prophetic picture of the Christian church in her last stage, before she appears before the Judge, and King, and Coming Bridegroom, without the "true gold," "the white raiment," and when her destitution, shame, and nakedness is to be exposed.

"Because thou art lukewarm I will spew thee out of my mouth." This language declares the Savior's disgust at the profession of love for him, while in the heart it is wanting. And [illegible] true is it at this day, that the church is lukewarm in her love! What is more afflicting and contemptuous to a young man of a noble and manly heart, who has set his love upon another, and chosen her to be his partner for life, because she has professed ardent affection for him, when he discovers that the person he has loved is trifling with his affections, or is not true in heart? How many a tragic scene has this world witnessed provoked by such false love!

And need I speak of the affliction to a kind, generous, and affectionate husband's heart, to learn in his absence and delay that the wife of his choice has found out other lovers besides himself upon whom secretly she bestows her attentions, while hypocritically professing love for him for some personal advantage merely? Is there not, without the most hearty and speedy repentance on the part of that wife, such as is unmistakable, and leads to a reformation, and new pledges of love under the scalding tears of sorrow for her departure, a divorce at once the result, and lawfully, too, in both divine and human law?

Such will be the result at the advent of the coming Bridegroom and Husband of the church. An everlasting divorce between him and all those who love not his appearing, and because they receive not his "counsel" and do not "repent." (Rev. 3: 14–22.)

A union, however, will be consummated between the true and loving bride and the Bridegroom, which will be lasting and eternal, real and unfeigned. And there will be no disappointment in its non-occurrence. Not the shadow of it.

How often the contemplated union between two loving hearts is interrupted before the appointed day of nuptial joy by the sad occurrence of the death of one of the parties, either of the bride or of the bridegroom. Who of us have not witnessed the funeral occasion when an anticipated bride or bridegroom, lay a lifeless corpse in the coffin, while the surviving party was present, the subject of commiseration and pity, and the premature death of the other called forth lamentation and weeping? How many surviving ones, who have thus followed to the grave the loved one of their choice, with whom they had hoped soon to set out on the voyage of life together, as partners of each others joys, have felt ever after lone and sad, till they followed them to the grave, dying of a broken heart!

But death shall not interrupt the consummation nor shorten the duration of this union between the heavenly Bridegroom and his bride. The Bridegroom will never die—that is sure! He says "I am alive forevermore." He has an "endless life." And if the bride should die (and a portion of what constitutes his bride is dead,) he says "The gates of hades shall not prevail," and "Because I live ye shall live also." He can, and he will, resuscitate and bring her to life from the dead again, and be united in an everlasting union, uninterrupted as eternity itself. Oh! the joy, and the increased love the bride will have for the coming Bridegroom, when from the grave, death, and mortality she awakens to immortality, and beholds him, at once her Deliverer and Lord, and in a union then effected never to be severed or broken!

Can it be otherwise, with such joys in anticipation as he will bring to his chosen, than that the true "catholic cry" of every loving Christian heart should be, "Even so; come, Lord Jesus!" "Make haste, my Beloved, and be thou like a roe, or to a young hart upon the mountain of spices?" And in answer to this ardent love and desire for the return of the long-absent Lord, who is "the chiefest among ten thousand," the bride will soon exclaim with rapture: "The voice of my Beloved—behold he cometh, leaping upon the mountains, skipping upon the hills. My Beloved is like a roe, or a young hart. My Beloved spake and said unto me: Rise up, my love, my fair one, and come away. For lo! the winter is passed, the winter is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land; the fig tree putteth forth her green figs, and the vines with the tender grape give a good smell. Arise, my love, my fair one, and come away." (Cant. 2: 8–13; 5: 10; 8: 14.) Then will the Bridegroom convey in his chariots [" the chariots of God are thousands of angels," Ps. 67: 17], in "the times of restitution," his spouse to the mansions he has prepared for her, and into the Eden and paradise he restores for her inheritance.

The Lord's coming again to earth will be a day of terror and of joy; of terror indescribable to his enemies, of joy "unspeakable and full of glory" to his friends. Who can conceive the utter fear and despair of those who shall cry "Rocks crush us, mountains on us fall!" "Hide us from the face of him who sitteth on the throne and from the wrath of the Lamb; for the great day of his wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?" (Rev. 6:16, 17.) And who can imagine the thrill of ecstasy, the transport of joy of the saved and redeemed when they shall see him as he is and be like him, who is the object of their fondest love, and in whom center all their hopes for an endless eternity? Then will their weeping, lamentation, and sorrow be "turned into joy." As says Jesus: "I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice, and your joy no man taketh from you." (John 16: 20–22.)

At his advent will end this world, but then will begin and be revealed "the world to come." And who would not exchange an old thing for a new one when the new is by far the best? And between the old earth and the "new earth," which will be the old earth made new and restored to more than Eden's glory and beauty, there can be no just comparison.

At his coming will end the present human history, but then will begin the era of the immortal ages! But who can sigh over this? The present human history, for six millenniums, has been one of constant and increasing sin, crime, oppression, cruelty, carnage, of sorrow, suffering, wo, and of death. And so it will continue to be till the world's Redeemer shall come, when at his advent a sinless, sorrowless, deathless state will be introduced, and of peace and of righteousness, under the endless reign of "the Prince of Peace," and "the Lord our righteousness." When he shall be "King over all the earth," "there shall be no more curse, and his servants shall serve him, and they shall see his face, and they shall reign forever." (Rev. 22.) Oh! happy change in human history! and a change not to be interrupted by the recurrence of any evil while the cycle of ceaseless ages roll their everlasting round! May we be there, my coming Lord!

"How solid all,
When change shall come no more!"

O. R. Fassett.

The "Daily."

Does the word tamid, translated continual, or "daily," in the Bible in itself considered ever mean the worship of God?

I answer most emphatically, No, IT DOES NOT! The Hebrew word is rendered continual, or continually, 77 times out of 102; perpetual twice; alway, or always, 8 times; daily 7 times, 5 times in Daniel, once in Num. 4: 16, also 29: 6. In this latter verse (lit:) continual. It is rendered ever 3 times, evermore once. The reader will discover from these facts that the simple meaning of this term is continuance, that which continues, incessant, without interruption. When this term is used in relation to the worship of God, or his praise, it simply means the continuance of that worship or that praise. If there were anything in the word itself that meant worship, or praise, then it must invariably have had this meaning; but this is not so. For proof see Ps. 69: 23, speaking of those who crucified Christ: "Let their eyes be darkened that they see not; and make their loins continually to shake." Ps. 74: 23.—"Forget not the voice of thine enemies: the tumult of those that rise up against thee increaseth continually." Is. 52: 5.—"Now therefore what have I here, saith the Lord, that my people is taken away for naught? they that rule over them make them to howl, saith the Lord: and my name continually every day is blasphemed." Is. 65: 3.—"A people that provoketh me to anger continually to my face; that sacrificeth in gardens, and burneth incense upon altars of brick." Obad. 16.—"For as ye have drunk upon my holy mountain, so shalt all the heathen drink continually, yea, they shall drink, and they shall swallow down, and they shall be as though they had not been." Nah. 3: 19.—"There is no healing of thy bruise; thy wound is grievous: all that hear the bruit of thee shall clap their hands over thee, for upon whom hath not thy wickedness passed continually." Hab. 1:17.—"Shall they therefore empty their net, and not spare continually to slay the nations."

In all these instances the term tamid' is used in the opposite sense of worship, or praise, and that too, most emphatically. Therefore the worship of God is no more implied in this term than is wickedness and blasphemy. This term as used in Daniel stands related to beastly governments or kingdoms and powers antagonistic to God and to his people. They are to tread his people under foot, as also their inheritance, the inheritance that belongs to Christ, which he has purchased, and will soon redeem and restore. The Hebrew terms tamid' zeh'-vagh, that do express continual sacrifice, are not once found thus related in the entire Hebrew Scriptures. Let those that contend that "daily" (sacrifice) as used in Daniel, is a proper rendering of the Hebrew, give us one instance of the kind. Till they do this it would be well for them to stop talking about the "daily" as used in the prophecy of Daniel having reference to the worship of God.

I have had a conversation with a Hebrew scholar of high reputation on this subject. I asked him why the word sacrifice in Daniel 8 was used in connection with tamid' by our translators? I also asked him if God wished to express sacrifice in the cases refered to, if he would not have used the word zeh'-vagh to express it? He assented to it, saying that was good reasoning. He did not see the relevancy of using sacrifice in such connection.

Let these facts and statements be examined and criticised; the closer, the better, only do it candidly for the truth's sake, for that is what I seek. I contend that the prophecy of Daniel cannot be properly understood, unless we understand the true meaning of this term tamid' as used in that book.

L. T. Cunningham.

Crisis please copy.

TYRANNY does not necessarily associate itself with particular forms of church-government. This is well exemplified in a remark made by a Mr. Blackstone, who came in early times to New England, but refused to unite with any of the churches, giving this reason for it: "I came from England because I did not like the lord-bishops; but I cannot join with you, because I would not be under the lord-brethren."

HYPOCRITES are such as talk well, and also act well, but who, in whatever they say or do, have respect to themselves. When they do good, it is only for the sake of themselves.—Swedenborg.

MEN trust rather to their eyes than to their ears; the effect of precept is therefore slow and tedious, while that of example is summary and effectual.—Seneca.

HE that does evil that good may come, pays a toll to the devil to let him into heaven.—Hare.

Let Everyone Sweep before his Own Door.

(A Paraphrase.)

Do ye heed the homely adage, handed down from days of yore,
"Ere you sweep your neighbor's dwelling, clear the rubbish from your door."
Let no filth, no rust there gather—leave no traces of decay,
Pluck up every weed unsightly, brush the fallen leaves away.

If we faithfully have labored thus to sweep without, within,
Plucked up envy, evil-speaking, malice, each besetting sin,
Weeds that by the sacred portals of the inner temple grow,
Poisonous weeds the heart defiling, bearing bitterness and woe;

Then, perchance, we may have leisure o'er our neighbor watch to keep,
All the work assigned us finished, we before his door may sweep;
Show him where the mosses clinging—tokens ever of decay—
Where the thistles, thickly springing, daily must be cleared away.

But, alas! our work neglecting, oft we mount the judgment seat,
With his failings, his omissions, we our weary brother greet;
In some hidden nook forgotten, searching with a careful eye,
We the springing weeds discover—some slight blemish there descry.

For his slothfulness, his blindness, we our brother harshly chide,
Glorying in our strength and wisdom, we condemn him in our pride;
Ask not why he has neglected thus before his door to sweep,
Why grown careless, he has slumbered, failed his garden plot to keep.

On the judgment seat still sitting, we no helping hand extend
To assist our weaker brother his short comings to amend;
For his weariness, his faltering, we no sweet compassion show,
From our store no cordial bring him, no encouragement bestow.

But, while busied with our neighbor, urging him to ceaseless care,
Calling to the thoughtless idlers, to their labor to repair,
Lo! unseen the dust has gathered, weeds are growing where of yore
Flow'rets rare and sweet were blooming, when we swept before our door.

Ah! how easy o'er our brother, faithful ward and watch to keep,
But, alas! before our dwelling hard indeed to daily sweep;
Harder than to share the conflict, "by the stuff" at home to stay,
Easier far to sit in judgment than to humbly watch and pray.

The Judgment at Hand.

"Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me."

There is plainly foretold, in both the Old and New Testaments, the coming of a time yet future when this earth shall be renewed, by being restored from the ruinous consequences of sin, and the effects of the fall of our first parents. Is. 65: 17 to end: 66: 15 to end. This time is called by our Savior (Mat. 19: 28), "the regeneration," and is spoken of by St. Peter as "the times of the restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." (Acts 3: 21), and as "a new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." (2 Pet. 3: 13.) There are given by David and John several number of years which it was revealed to them should be fulfilled or elapse between the happening of certain events in history and the ushering in of this day of blessedness. It is universally conceded, by those who have given these prophetic periods the closest attention and most critical study, that they have all now nigh about expired; and consequently there is abroad amongst Christians a very general belief and expectation that we are on the eve of some great change in the world's history, the most marked of any that has ever befallen society.

But as to what the character of that change will be there is a wide disagreement. The popular and by far the most generally received opinion is that it will consist in a moral and spiritual regeneration and "healing of the nations." That the strenuous and faithful efforts which have of late years been, and are now being made by the church for the dissemination of gospel truth to the utmost ends of the earth, resulting as it is said in the publishing of the New Testament in the vernacular tongue of every considerable nation and tribe of mankind, are to be rewarded by multiplied and copious outpourings of the Spirit amongst the various peoples, resulting in their Christianizing, the consequences whereof will be that wars will give place to universal peace, the nations will adjust their differences by amicable arbitrament, the arts and sciences will be promoted to their utmost capacity of attainment, causing the earth to yield her increase to the full and the marts of the world to overflow with the fruits of peaceful commerce, and that the watchword of human development, mental, moral, physical and social will be "onward," and "peace on earth and good will to men" shall be inscribed on every banner and embalmed in every heart.

This is quite a pleasing picture, very flattering to human vanity, and doubtless replete with consolation to those who indulge in contemplating it as a faithful representation of "things which must shortly come to pass." Alas, reader, it is only a dream, of which it is written in God's word that it shall not be realized. It is nowhere promised in Scripture that the publishing of the gospel among the nations shall result in their conversion. It is said "this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." (Mat. 24: 14.)

Our Savior in this chapter of Matthew, and as also recorded in Mark 13 and Luke 21, presents to the view of his disciples a picture of the destiny of the church and of the world, of very different delineations and coloring from the one we have just been inspecting, which the church has drawn for herself. We read there of a church militant; of Christians persecuted; of the dominancy of Satan and his allies from the time of the speaking of the prophecy by our Savior, until the day when he shall come in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory to judge the world. There is not so much as a hint given us of the cessation or even diminution of evil, or of a church triumphant. On the contrary we read that "as it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man." (vv. 37, 38; Luke 17: 26, 27.) And we read in Gen. 6: 5-8 that in the days of Noah "God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually," in so much that it repented the Lord that he had made man.

It is said also that "as it was in the days of Lot, even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed." (Luke 17: 28-31.) But in the days of Lot not even ten righteous were to be found in all Sodom. (Gen. 18: 32.) And in Jude this same comparison between the wickedness of the last days (v. 18) and of Sodom and Gomorrah (v. 7) is instituted: iniquity so fearful and God-defying that language is literally exhausted in depicting its depths, and the re-echo of which comes to us again from 2 Tim. ch. 3, in which we are told (v. 13) that "evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived."

Now dear reader how can it be possible to reconcile the theory of human progress to ultimate perfection, which is so generally accepted, with these plain declarations of holy writ. Does not our Lord in this 24th chapter of Matthew embrace for the fulfillment of the predictions which he there utters, every possible moment of time which should intervene between the one in which he was speaking and the one in which he shall come again to judge the world? Is there any break in the thread of time or events there discoursed of by him, or any interval unaccounted for, within or during which a thousand, or any other number of years of church triumph or universal righteousness might possibly intervene? Or can we conceive it possible that if such a thing was to be, our Savior would have passed it by in utter silence, and have presented to his beloved disciples the dark side only of the picture, witholding from them every gleam of a light so well calculated to relieve that darkness of much of its horror?

In the book of Daniel and of Revelations we find upon an enlarged scale this same history, predicted, of the dominancy of evil over good, of the church being warred upon, and prevailed against until her Redeemer shall come out of Zion to release her from her long captivity, and destroy them which destroy the earth.

Many of these prophecies, though clothed in highly figurative language, are yet readily to be understood, in so much so that there is no disagreement among commentators as to their correct interpretation; in fact the more important of them reveal their own interpretation. And yet, our ministers, and teachers in our religious journals and sabbath schools, seem studiously to decline introducing them before those whom they all called to instruct, whereby it results, that by many otherwise well informed Christians, these wonderfully important predictions are regarded as so many incomprehensible riddles, to undertake the solution of which, is to indulge an almost unlawful and wholly unprofitable curiosity: whereas we are told by St. Peter that "we do well to take heed to the sure word of prophecy, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place." (2 Pet. 1: 19.)—(To be continued.)

E. C. BRONAUGH.

The Life of a Justified Man.

[First Article.]

God's processes are not always rapid. His greatest works rise slowly. Rapidity of growth has been always one of man's tests of greatness—not so with God. His trees grow slowly; the stateliest are the slowest. His flowers grow slowly; the brightest are the slowest. His creatures grow slowly, year by year; man, the noblest, grows the most slowly of all. God can afford to take his time—man cannot. He is hasty and impatient. He will have everything to be like Jonah's gourd, or like one of those fabled oriental palaces which magicians are said to call up by a word or a stamp out of the sand. He forgets how slowly the palm tree and the cedar grow. They neither spring up in a night nor perish in a night. He forgets the history of the temple—"forty and six years was the temple in building." He insists that, because it is God's purpose that his saints should be holy, therefore they should be holy at once.

It is true that our standard is, and must be, perfection; for our model is the Perfect One. But the question is, has God in Scripture anywhere led us to expect the rapidity of growth the quick development of perfection, in which some glory, and because of the confessed lack of which in others, they look down on these others as babes and loiterers.

Is there in Scripture any instance of a perfect man, except him who was always and absolutely without sin?

If Christians were perfect, where is the warfare, and the adversary, and the shield? Are angels exposed to this warfare when they visit earth? Or is it not our imperfection that in great measure produces this? And are we anywhere in Scripture led to believe that we are delivered from "the body of this death," from the battle of flesh and spirit, from the wrestling with principalities and powers, till death sets us free, or our Lord shall come?

Yet we are called with a holy calling (2 Tim. 1: 9); and as so called, are bound to take the highest standard for our model of life. The slowness or swiftness of the progress does not alter the standard, nor affect our aiming at conformity to it.

This progress, rapid or gradual, springs from the forgiveness we have received, and the new life imparted by the Holy Spirit. Our life is to be fruit-bearing; and the fruitfulness comes from our ascertained acceptance, our being "rooted and grounded in love." We taste and see that the Lord is good; that in his favor is life: that the joy of the Lord is our strength; and so we move on and up, rising from one level to another. "We know and believe the love that God hath to us;" and we find in this the source of gladness, no less than of gladness and liberty.

The life of the justified should be a peaceable one. Being justified by faith, we have peace with God—the God of peace, and the God of all grace. The world's storms have not been stilled, nor our way smoothed, nor our skies brightened, nor our enemies swept away; but the peace of God has come in and taken possession of the soul. We are cheered and comforted. God is for us, and who can be against us? The name of the Lord is our strong tower; we run into it, and are safe. No evil can happen to us; no weapon that is formed against us can prosper.

The life of the justified should be a holy one, all the more because of the extent of previous unholiness. "And such were some of you; but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God." (1 Cor. 6: 11.) All that these marvelous and mysterious words "holy" and "holiness" imply, is to be found in the life of one who has been "much forgiven." There is no spring of holiness so powerful as that which our Lord assumes, "Neither do I condemn thee: go and sin no more." (John 8: 11.) Free and warm reception into the divine favor is the strongest of all motives in leading a man to seek conformity to him who has thus freely forgiven him all trespasses. A cold admission into the paternal house by the father might have repelled the prodigal, and sent him back to his lusts; but the fervent kiss, the dear embrace, the best robe, the ring, the shoes, the fatted calf, the festal song,—all without one moment's suspense or delay, as well as without one upbraiding word, could not but awaken shame for the past, and true-hearted resolution to walk worthy of such a father, and of such a generous pardon. "Revelings, banquetings, and abominable idolatries," come to be the abhorrence of him round whom the holy arms of renewed fatherhood have been so lovingly thrown. Sensuality, luxury, and the gaities of the flesh have lost their relish to one who has tasted the fruit of the tree of life.

The life of the justified should be a loving one. It is love that has made him what he is, and shall he not love in return? Shall he not love him that begat, and him also that is begotten of him? The deep true spring of love is thus revealed to us by the Lord himself; "A certain creditor had two debtors; the one owed five hundred pence, the other fifty. And when they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both. Tell me, therefore, which of them will love him most?" (Lk. 8: 41, 42.) Thus love produces love. The life of one on whom the fullness of the free love of God is ever shining must be a life of love. Suspense, doubt, terror, darkness, must straiten and freeze; but the certainty of free and immediate love dissolves the ice, and kindles the coldest spirit into the warmth of love. "We love him because he first loved us." Love to God, love to the brethren, love to the world, spring up within us as the heavenly love flows in. Malevolence, anger, envy, jealousy, receive their death-blow. The nails of the cross have gone through all these, and the deadly wound cannot be healed. They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh, with its affections and lusts. Sternness, coldness, distance depart, and are succeeded by gentleness, mildness, guilelessness, meekness, ardor, long-suffering. The tempers of the old man quit us, we know not how; and in their place comes the "charity which suffereth long, and is kind, which envieth not, which vaunteth not itself, which is not puffed up, which doth not behave itself unseemly, which seeketh not her own, which is not easily provoked, which thinketh no evil, which rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth, which beareth all things, which believeth all things, which never faileth." (1 Cor. 13: 4-8.) Gentle and loving should be the life of the justified; meek and lowly should they be who have been loved with such a love.

The life of the justified should be an earnest one. For everything connected with his acceptance has been earnest on the part of God; and the free forgiveness on which he has entered in believing, nerves, and cheers, and animates. It is a spring of courage, and hardihood, and perseverance. It makes the coward brave; it says to the weak, Be strong; to the indolent, Arise; making the forgiving man ready to face danger, and toil, and loss, arming him with a new-found energy, and crowning him with success. Ready to spend and to be spent, is his motto now. "I am debtor" is his watchword—debtor first of all to him who forgave me; after that, to the church of God, redeemed with the same blood and filled with the same Spirit; and then after that to the world around still sunk in sin, and struggling with a thousand sorrows, under which it has no comforter, and of whose termination it has no hope. How thoroughly in earnest should be the life of one thus pardoned—pardoned so freely, yet at such a cost to him who "gave his life a ransom for many." (To be continued.)

"That's Old Testament."

[Second Article.]

On the other side of the question I have somewhat to say. Having considered objections let me offer some further reasons why I accept plainly stated facts of the Old Testament as of equal truth, authority, and eternity with those of the New.

1. I believe "all Scripture is given by inspiration of God." I believe "holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." The words of the Old Testament are "the words which the Lord of Hosts hath sent in his Spirit." That Spirit is infallible. That word is likewise infallible. Though through man, it is not of him. It is the wisdom of God evolved out of human minds. Thus the prophets could say, "O earth, earth, earth hear the word of the Lord!" Such could say, as did Jesus, "The words that I speak are not my own." The prophets were men whose ears were opened to hear the words of God; and he that heareth God, speaketh the words of God."

Moved then by the divine, all-wise, and infallible Spirit, they gave testimony. That testimony, whatever it is is irrefutably true. It is "truth, truth," as the strong expression of Scripture is. It is inspiration; what more is the New Testament? It is infallible; is the last part of the Record more? Then it is of equal standing with the New, and as worthy of acceptation. The same Spirit as moved the apostles indwelt and moved the prophets. The same superintendent or plenary inspiration as taught the church of Christ through the apostles, taught the church of God through the prophets.

Eternal truths as well as the then present, general truths as well as specific, world-wide as well as national came from the lips of both alike. To wit, the prophets, the creation, and the mortality of man, in which we all have an interest.

Now who will dare choose between inspiration and inspiration? Who will discredit one by the other? Will you, O man, even venture to hint that the Holy Spirit, understanding the deep things of God, did erringly direct the minds of Old Testament saints? Will you presume to set their testimony aside when God has set it forth to be heard? And if you will not, then believe the witness they give: for I say the Scriptures—meaning by the term the books which make the Old Testament—are as worthy of reception in all their testimony as the New; because equally inspired to declare the testimony given them; so that I cannot sneer at, and shun the old servants of the Lord, saying of a fact stated by them—the author being God—"That's Old Testament." Every part of Scripture has its specialty; every writer the message God gives him; and let us be content to receive from each whatever God sends us by them; not esteeming those who bring us smaller light in comparison with others, to be eclipsed or despised for the others, who bring the apparently greater and richer.

2. The Old Testament Scriptures are not only inspiration, but truth, The angels regard it as such; for when Daniel was praying, one came to him and said, "I will show thee that which is noted in the Scriptures of truth." Are they the Scriptures of truth? Is that really so? Then who shall disparage them? Whoever attempts it is in the act, doing against the truth. But said an apostle: "I can do nothing against the truth; but for the truth." But if I deny or underestimate a truth, simply because it is written in the former part of God's revelation instead of the latter, I am doing something against the truth. Did not Jesus also endorse what was written in Moses and the prophets? Did he not sanction them? Did he not say that the Jews had Moses and the prophets, and should hear them? Why should you have a prejudice against the Old Book. That crotchet of yours, however pious, is founded in mistake. Do not object, I pray you to God in the Old Testament, nor think he has grown wiser in the New. What he says of man there is true, whether you allow it or not.

3. The New Testament was not intended of God to supersede the Old; but to be stitched up with it, as our Bible societies have wisely done. Christ did not come as a destroyer of the old Book. He came to remove the walls of forms and ceremonies given to the Jews to serve for a time, and open the pasture to the Gentiles. He came to show the Father's love, and adapt the gospel to all men. He came to teach a worship of God in the secret of the heart, and do away with the temple. But his mission was not to invalidate by impeachment any testimony of God, declare it false, or advert to it as only a half truth. The New Testament is the supplement of the Old. It is like a sequel to a book. A supplement and sequel implies a book preceding; it is something added. And the New Testament is the added gospel of Jesus Christ. It is the completion of the Old as far as this: it swallows up many types in substance. It shows us the Word made flesh. It tells us what to look for preparatory to the incoming of the succeeding age. In short, it exhibits the onward march of the promise of salvation toward completion. It is a commentary on the Old, because it has "explanatory notes," on some of the former typical things and ordinances. For what are some of the epistles but comments on the Old Book? These two then are one; and it is wrong for man to put asunder what God hath joined together.

Despise not then the word of the Lord in the Old Testament. A truth is a truth on any page of Scripture. Let not any New Testament passage be interpreted in the light of a heathen imagination, rather than in the ancient but ever steady and reliable light of the Old Testament Scriptures. Beware of putting an heathen gloss on any of God's words, of getting a heathen conception from them. The Old Book is not yet obsolete; its truths are yet fresh and sparkling as when they were communicated. 'Twas God then, if it were a long while ago. He is the Author of the ancient Record. It is true as himself, and time cannot unmake, disprove, or change its truths.

Beloved! I would have you know that I believe all things written in the law and the prophets without being ashamed to confess it. I quote after the example of our Master and his apostles from the Old Book; and do so because I believe every word of God [of statement, as well as promise] is true from the beginning. I have no sectarian fancies or superior claims to support, and am not therefore necessitated to deny that an ancient Divine testimony touching man's nature is of less force than a more recent one.

Our foundation then, condemned or approved, is not only the New Testament; but we are "built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone." And we pray that when what is written is laid before us—no matter from whence, if it be only in the revelation—we may be saved from saying either with expressed or silent contempt, "That's Old Testament!"

W. KELLAWAY.

Help at the Right Time—A Talk about Providence.

"I wish I knew whether there are in these days any providential interventions or not," said a young man of inquiring, yet doubtful mind, to his pastor.

"What evidence would you desire?" responded the pastor.

"That of facts."

"You know the Bible furnishes many such facts."

"True, but those belong to another age, and chiefly to a peculiar people. Are there current facts that establish the doctrine of a special Providence."

"Many."

"I beg you to give two or three of them."

"I will do so cheerfully. In the city of Buffalo, during one of the severest winters of the last fifteen years, a widowed mother, enfeebled by disease, with a child of two summers, one night lay shivering in an upper room of a dilapidated tenement building. The husband and father had perished in the wreck of a propeller a few weeks before in a terrible gale upon the adjacent lake, and with him were lost the household goods and the money saved from the sale of a humble home in the West. The news of wreck and loss was terrible to the stricken woman, who had journeyed to Buffalo by the cars and was awaiting at the hotel the arrival of her husband. What followed need not be told at length. The humblest quarters were sought as a temporary shelter. Sickness followed bereavement. The last penny was soon spent, and under the pressure of want, the contents of a well-filled trunk was carried to the pawnbroker. Even the trunk itself had been exchanged for fuel, which was now exhausted. And now, on the severe night which I have mentioned, the poor woman had nothing left but the scantiest of wardrobes, a pallet of straw, a single blanket, and the precious child was sleeping in her arms. It was indeed a case of extremest destitution and of gloomiest prospect. 'O God,' cried the poor stricken one, 'thou hast permitted all this for my good—it must be so. I will bear it all. But my babe! O, my poor suffering child!' At that very hour a Christian lady of wealth in a distant part of the same city lay unusually and strangely wakeful upon her couch, and as the winds were howling without her thoughts turned to the condition of the poor. An extraordinary impression came, she knew not why at first, that some one in that dilapidated tenement house (which she had occasionally passed but had never entered) needed her attention. The impression so deeply affected her that she aroused her coachman; at the earliest hour of the morning light her carriage stood by the hallway leading to the room of the destitute widow. What followed need not be told, except that the most abundant relief was afforded, and a home of comfort provided for the mother and her child."

"But may it not have happened so?"

"So might it have happened that the hungry lions would not harm the prophet of God when cast into their den; but we know that the intervention was real and divine. So in the case which I have mentioned, the providence was real; the witnesses are still living, and their testimony is undoubted."

"Will you mention another case?"

"Only yesterday I read this incident in the letter of a pious German: 'In the first year of my marriage,' he writes, 'I had one day not a farthing in the house, when my wife came and asked me for a thaler to pay the weaver who was to bring her cloth home in the evening. The weaver was poor. There was not a person in the village of whom we could borrow the money, and my wife, unaccustomed to such embarrassments, burst into tears. I tried to comfort her by telling her that our heavenly Father knew what we needed, and that, perhaps, the bad weather might prevent the weaver from coming that day. I commended the matter to the Lord, for I saw no means of human help. In the evening I heard with grief the sound of the house-bell. The weaver was ushered in. I was going to sit down at the table, and was just taking down a book from the shelf above me, when at that very moment a piece of money rolled out of it, and fell rattling upon the table. My wife and I stood motionless; we felt distinctly the presence of God, who so exactly knew what we needed, and bestowed it upon us at the very moment when we required it.' Our German friend added in his letter that he remembered that about three months before, when he was carrying the book from the bookseller's shop to his house, he met a friend by the way who owed him money, and as both hands were holding the books, he asked him to put the money in the uppermost book, which he did."

"So the falling out of the money was quite natural."

"It was so, indeed; but that it should remain in the book for so long a time, and then fall out at just the moment when needed to relieve the distress of the poor weaver, as well as that of the poor German and his wife, was a providential incident, the remembrance of which still cheers the hearts of the recipients."

"O, I remember now the piece of tax money found by command of our Savior in the fish's mouth."

"Exactly; but here is another instance: A friend of mine, in a town not a thousand miles from Brooklyn, who had long been an official member of the church, and a generous contributor in all the collections for its support, was suddenly impoverished by a sad business calamity. In the embarrassment which followed he yielded to the mistaken notion that as he was now poor he would be excused from giving even the smallest sum for the support of the gospel. His embarrassment increased, and his days were those of gloomy forebodings and sorrow. He became sorely tempted. 'I cannot give anything for the support of the church,' said he one day to his pastor, 'and I must, therefore, stay away; you must accept my resignation as its leader.' His pastor expostulated with him, but in vain. 'Give a little,' said the pastor, 'to every collection; it will not harm you; no one is the poorer for giving for gospel purposes.' Weeks passed, and my friend's seat in the church continued vacant, and his financial troubles at home increased rather than diminished. One day the faithful, right-minded pastor, while raising a subscription for the purchase of a parsonage, went to him and requested a pledge for a small amount. The appeal overwhelmed him with a fresh grief; the struggle in his sensitive soul between his desire to 'be a man,' in giving and his apparent inability was fearful. The pastor pressed him for his own good. 'Give,' said he, 'and God will bless you with the means to give. Trust him for once; he will not fail you.' 'I will venture it once,' responded my friend, as he burst into a fit of tears. The pastor left with a subscription of ten dollars for the new parsonage. That evening, as my friend was passing homeward, thinking over the new trust which he had ventured, he found a ten dollar bill on the sidewalk. In spite of his efforts to resist it, the suggestion impressed him that there might be some connection between his subscription and the newly-discovered bill. The money was duly advertised, but no owner could be found. In due time it went to cancel the parsonage subscription. My friend learned this precious lesson of faithfulness in Christian duties, of generous though humble giving, and of trust in God. From that date he continued to practice accordingly, and with that practice his temporal prosperity returned. He is now one of the most affluent, generous, happy, and useful men in his whole region of country."

"But you do not think the Lord created the ten-dollar bill for his benefit?"

"Probably not; for that would involve an involuntary liability of the bank whose promise to pay the bill contained. It had doubtless been lost by some passer-by, and a good Providence so ordered that my friend should find it."

"That again reminds me of the piece of the tax-money in the fish's mouth. The incidents you give have greatly relieved my doubt about the doctrine of Providence."

"I could mention scores of others, some of them much more striking, but too lengthy for me to report them now. They come thoroughly attested, and there is no doubt of their reality."—W. H. DePuy, in DeKalb Avenue Annual.

That Minister's Meeting.

Although we have given several reports of the excited session of the Methodist minister's meeting, we have seen none that give so clear a statement of Dr. True's remarks as the following from the New York World, which we reprint, in order that our readers may clearly apprehend the Doctor's position:

Dr. True is one of the most thoroughly educated and highly cultivated men in his church, and was for many years a Professor in the Wesleyan University. He rose with evident reluctance at the call of his brethren, and said that he had an essay on the subject which he had been requested to publish in the Methodist Quarterly Review, and which the editor had read and approved as a fair presentation of the views of many on the subject; but it had been thought best, on mature consideration, not to publish it, lest it might give rise to unprofitable and perhaps bitter controversy. He would not read the essay, but would give a summary of his opinions on the subject. He was not an annihilationist, but a destructionist.

Mr. Corbit asked: "what is the difference?"

The Speaker—Annihilation is the destruction of the material of which man is made and would require the same exertion of power on the part of the Almighty as the creation of matter. I believe that the penalty of the incorrigibly wicked will be the destruction of his conscious existence; a total cessation of all his functions. Man was designed to live forever. He was naturally immortal. There were three great men at three great epochs of the world through whom the divine will was given to man—Adam, Moses and Christ. With the law the penalty of violating the law should be given, and if you do not find the penalty of eternal punishment given by either of these in direct terms, do not look to parables, figures of speech, or the meaning of words. With the law the penalty was given. What did God say to Adam, our representative? "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die," and so death entered the world. Adam was not damned. This is not a damned world in which we Methodist preachers live and preach repentence and remission of sins. But physical death entered the world and passed upon all men, because all have sinned. I can't be objected to thus far in my theology.

Mr. Corbett (interrupting)—Yes you can be objected to wonderfully. No one here will allow such ecclesiastical humtrumpery.

Corbett—(rising excitedly, and gesticulating like a windmill)—I say I am in order and understand what I am about. The doctrine just enunciated by Dr. True originated in hell, and ought to be crammed back there again and the preacher who would give utterance to such heresy ought to be turned neck and heels out of the church. I will protest against it here and everywhere, and if I have to stand alone I will stand firmly for truth, like Luther at Worms.

Dr. True being allowed to proceed continued: God said to Adam, in the day thou sinnest thou shalt surely die. If God had meant "Thou shalt continue to live through endless ages in sin and misery and despair," then was the time to say it in such words that there could be no mistake; but he did not say so. Come to the time of Moses. Again a law is given, and a penalty: "Lest they die," "I set before you life and death." Here was the time to have life and death defined beyond all cavil.

Rev. George L. Taylor (interrupting)—Do you mean that the same death, in the first passage, was applied to both men and beasts?

Dr. True—Yes, just the same; physical death. I agree with all the church on the condition of the righteous and the wicked up to the time of the judgment, and am only heretical (as my brother Corbett calls me) in my views of the future beyond that time. I heard Dr. Warren, President of the Boston Theological Seminary, say in a sermon, that up to the time of the "Sermon on the Mount" there was only a faint whisper in all the Scriptures of a state of eternal punishment. I would add that there is not a whisper either before or at that time. If you will find it there I will receive it, but it isn't there. And if it were promulgated there for the first time it would be unjust, for it would be an ex post facto law. All the expressions referring to future punishment denote final destruction rapid and complete. The worm may not die and the fire be unquenchable and eternal, but each victim is utterly consumed. John Wesley—a wise man for a hundred years ago, but not so wise as Dr. Curry there, nor so wise as I am (laughter) with the advantages of a century of research—believed that the fire of hell was material fire, and you say he was wrong. I say he was right, but he made the mistake of thinking that fire would not burn. Neither through Adam nor Moses, nor Christ do we hear of everlasting punishment. The apostles nowhere teach the doctrine. The fathers of the first century neither taught nor believed it. It was neither advanced nor suggested till the year 131. The early Christians had been daily looking for the advent of Christ and the utter destruction of all their enemies, and when it failed to come they made up for the delay by intensifying their punishment when it should come. Soon after came Popery and things got mixed up, and when a purer church arose some of the traditian came to be accepted as truths. Even Wesley, your founder, was wrong, you say; but I say only partially wrong.

A Plain Fact.

A horn of a beast is never taken for a single person. It always signifies a new kingdom; and the kingdom of Antiochus was an old one. Antiochus reigned over the four horns, and the little horn was a fifth under its proper kings. This horn was at first a little one, and waxed exceding great: but so did not Antiochus. It is described as great above all the former horns; and so was not Antiochus. His kingdom, on the contrary, was weak, and tributary to the Romans, and he did not enlarge it. The horn was a king of fierce countenance, and destroyed wonderfully and prospered and practiced; that is, he prospered in his practices against the holy people; but Antiochus was frighted out of Egypt by a mere message of the Romans, and afterwards routed and baffled by the Jews. The horn was mighty by another's power. Antiochus acted by his own. The horn stood up against the Prince of the host of heaven, the Prince of princes; and this is the character, not of Antiochus, but of anti-Christ. The horn cast down the sanctuary to the ground, and so did not Antiochus; he left it standing. The sanctuary and host were trampled under foot 2,300 days: and in Daniel's prophecies days are put for years; but the profanation of the temple, in the reign of Antiochus, did not last so many natural days. These were to last till the time of the end, till the last end of the indignation against the Jews; and this indignation is not yet at an end. They were to last till the sanctuary which had been cast down should be cleansed and the sanctuary is not yet cleansed. —Sir Isaac Newton, Observations, pp. 137, 138.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, January 28, 1873.

WE have a number of queries from correspondents which we design to answer as soon as possible. Some of them require more study than we have been able to take time for of late.

WHEN Jesus has said that except we be converted and become as little children we shall in no case enter the kingdom of heaven, how may any say that one may be converted, and be justified, and find peace, and be saved, and yet not "become as little children;" saved with their own will not swallowed up in the Lord's will? Think of it.

MILTON's sentiments concerning the nature of man, as expressed in his letter on the State of the Dead, sometimes crept out in his poems. In Paradise Lost (XI. 57-61) we read

'I, at first, with two fair gifts
Created him, endowed with happiness
And immortality: that fondly lost,
This other served but to eternise wo;
Till I provided death.'

—The poet revolted at the idea of eternal wo. No wonder! The hateful thought is revolting beyond description.

IT is always a subject of regret that we should be misunderstood. For the benefit of those who misunderstood us, we would say that by the title of an article on the subject of holiness which appeared in THE TIMES some weeks since, we did not mean that the controversialists on that topic were vexed with each other. We said 'A Vexed Question,' That was what we meant: that the question, the subject under consideration, was vexed—i. e. disputed, contested, in controversy, and not that the advocates of differing views were angry. We hope we shall be understood now.

'BELIEVERS do not achieve victories in godliness simply by a process of growth,' says one. Very true; but the process of growth in the believer is the result of victories in godliness; and victories are the results of conflicts. The Christian life is not akin to the Hindoo Nirwana—one trial and then a loss of personality, a rest above and beyond temptation or trial, an endless placidity. Such an experience is not genuine. Our spiritual powers, like the physical are, enlarged by exercise. Temptation is not sin. Trial is not an offence. They bring contests, and contests bring victories, and victories bring blessings, not alone 'second,' but third, and fourth, and on without number.

NOT in the old Jewish church alone have men spoken more wisely than they thought, and other priests beside Caiaphas have prophesied unwittingly. In the Episcopal service, in the 'Collect for Advent Sunday,' we read:

> Almighty God, give us grace that we may cast away the works of darkness, and put upon us the armor of light, now in the time of this mortal life, in which thy Son Jesus Christ came to visit us in great humility, that in the last day when he shall come again in his glorious majesty, to judge both the quick and the dead, we may rise to the life immortal through him, who liveth and reigneth, with thee and the Holy Ghost, now and ever.

—'Rise to the life immortal!' That is sturdy apostolic theology—the only theory of a future life that can be expressed in Bible language.

THE Christian Mirror says:

> Theology, then, is the basis of Christology The latter has no consistency, in false conceptions of the former. A thorough, sturdy, conquering Christianity, is never separated from a sound theology. As well take from the human system its skeleton, and preserve its form and beauty, as take from religion a thorough theology. A pulpy, lifeless system were the result. Say not then the religion of Christ is love, not philosophy!' Love follows philosophy; faith pre supposes, is founded on, a spiritual philosophy. Love you know not what, nor why? Believe, you know not in whom nor for what reasons? Never! It is impossible. Let the orator and Christologist tell us what such faith or love is worth.

—How careful then should we be to have and hold a Scriptural theology. 'Search the Scriptures,' not to bolster your own ideas; not to find something different from other people's belief, but to know the theology they really teach.

NOT every one has a happy faculty of 'putting things.' Among those who possess this gift we think of none more highly endowed than Mr. Samuel Minton. For instance this little scrap—a clearly expressed thought, driven home and clinched by Scripture appropriately cited and aptly arranged:

> The penalty of sin has never been changed. It is still, in the last resort, capital punishment. 'Sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death.' 'The wages of sin is death.' 'Fear him who is able to destroy both body and soul [the component parts of man's being] in hell.' Immortality is still offered to man through him to whom the Father has given 'to have life in himself.' 'The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.' 'This is the record, that God hath given unto us eternal life, and this life is in his Son.' 'He that doeth the will of God abideth forever.' 'Your fathers did eat manna, and are dead: this is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die. I am the living bread which came down from heaven; if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever.'

THE Christian character is progressive. No created being is absolutely perfect. The angels are charged with folly—relatively. As angels they may be wise; but when their Creator is brought into the comparison, their best wisdom is folly This gives room for infinite progress.

So with man. His attainments, however great, in righteousness, holiness or knowledge will ever have room for growth. The sanctification essential to salvation begun in time will continue to all eternity. Through its ceaseless round of ages our varied experience and the growth of our mental and spiritual faculties will keep this grace alive. For every gift of the Creator, every enlargement of our powers, direct or indirect, will but renew the opportunity of giving all to him who is the giver of all. Sanctification, setting apart for holiness or holy uses, has its inception in conversion, but its growth is to continue throughout time and eternity. So far as relates to our legal acceptance as holy beings, that work is complete in Christ by our faith in him, but in the matter of the development of ourselves, the work will never end. Assimilation to the divine character is a fit occupation for eternal life.

OUR FUTURE.

The suspension of a weekly religious paper, and one which has been so interwined with the personal, religious, ecclesiastical and social interests of its readers as THE TIMES, is an event of no small importance. What a blank it would cause, what a chasm it would leave. How many dear and tender ties would thus be sundered never to be restored.

And yet all this is possible. Many larger and stronger papers have lived, prospered, waned, and perished, and no man knoweth their grave to this day. Every plant that my Father hath not planted must be rooted up. And if, in the eyes of the great Husbandman, this sheet be found barren and unfruitful, who shall question the authority or impugn the wisdom of him who says, "Cut it down: why cumbereth it the ground?" Weighed in an even balance it has been but a faulty work; and unless the great Intercessor shall plead, "Let it alone yet this one year," its doom is sealed.

The past with all its faults is gone; the future is unseen, and may ever be unseen to us; the present, the living present is upon us, with its solemn duties, its urgent demands, its tremendous responsibilities. Shall this paper be one of the instrumentalities which help to do the Master's mighty work, or shall it drag itself, crippled and halting, to a lonely and untimely grave? This is the question which impresses us to-day—a question which no man can solve—a question which the Lord alone can decide.

To him then we turn, and purpose, if he grants us time and strength and means and opportunity to do his work, that henceforth this sheet shall be edited for HIM. Not as the organ of any man; not as a means of praising or blaming poor fallen mortals; not in the interests of narrow-minded thought and sectarian bitterness; but in that love which is greater than either faith or hope, and for the glory of him who watches our labors from his heavenly throne, and who says "Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me to give every man according as his work shall be."

Brethren in Christ who wait for the coming King can you not rally to the standard which we thus uplift? Can you not join us with heart and hand, and exalt the Lord Jesus Christ, and make ready a people prepared for his return? Can you not forget whatever of fault or folly may have marred or stained the past, and help us while we press forward to better things which are before? Can you not be patient with our infirmities and aid us by your prayers, and pens, and means as as God shall lay upon your hearts to do? If so we trust the result will be for good both now and in the world to come. We ask no honor praise or fame. We are willing to lie in the dust before our God, but we do crave the privilege of being a blessing to a lost world, unworthy of the favor though we are. Help us in this desire, and may God make blessings to abound unto us all.

"See on the mountain top
The standard of your God;
In Jesus' name I lift it up
All stained with hallowed blood.

His standard bearer, I
On all the nations call;
Let all to Jesus' cross draw nigh,
He bore the cross for all.

Go up with Christ your head
Your Captain's footsteps see.
Follow your Leader and be led
To certain victory."

OUR RESPONSIBILITIES.

The removal of the office of THE TIMES to Chicago was no doubt a crisis in its history, which is not even yet fully passed. The opening for removal was, we cannot doubt, providential. Our faith in the success of the enterprise is as firm to-day as it has ever been, and if the concern were wholly our own, we should quietly trust in God to move the generous souls who would rejoice to aid us. But the work of an Association is a different thing in some respects from that of individuals: and while individuals may infuse more or less of their personality into an associated body, nevertheless one cannot do just as one would if he were entirely independent: he must defer something to the body to which he belongs.

Our Western Association fairly represents the Adventists of the Interior, and has some claim for support upon Adventists everywhere, because of its usefulness in missionary fields, where no remuneration for its gifts could be expected, and also the straight-forward boldness and decisiveness with which it has sustained the Advent interest, giving no uncertain sound in its proclamation, and keeping the vital issues of the age prominently before the people.

For many months we have been crippled by a combination of influences which we may not enlarge upon here. Some of our friends were unable to redeem their pledges to aid in the expenses of our removal. Money has been "close," and others have had to call in loans made for our accommodation. Hundreds of our subscribers have been unable to meet their obligations. Some of our most efficient workers have been laid aside from sickness and other causes. Again and again we have been tempted not only to say, "All these things are against us!" but to throw up the enterprise, and seek a field of labor in some other relations.

But there has been sunshine as well as clouds; there have been joys mingled with sorrows. The very dregs of the cup have had some sweetness mixed in them. And there is now a waking up among the people, as is evident from our correspondence and conversations, such as opportunity affords, to the wants of the Association, and a determination is forming that it shall, under God, be sustained in its legitimate work.

For some months the minds of many seem to have been directed toward an effort to free the Association from debt, and furnish a surplus for active operations. Brethren feel that golden opportunities like the present should not be neglected for want of means to operate with. We refer to the interest awakened all over the land in the question of the future punishment, by the heated discussions on the topic in the New York city Minister's Meeting. Those debates, reported not only in the metropolitan journals, but telegraphed all over the country, have an importance far beyond that which could attach to even more able discussions of the subject at any other point, because of the character of the place where they occur. All eyes are turned to New York—the commercial and financial center of the country—by far the most important city of the continent; and the excitement gendered by the introduction of the 'annihilation' doctrine is magnified in importance by the fact that it is a metropolitan dispute. Thus a deep interest has been awakened all over the land, and the 'annihilation' theory, as it is called, is being advertised and pressed upon the attention of the people as never before. Thousands are gathering a clear idea of it for the first time; thousands are ready to be welded to the truth, if the welding blows can be struck "while the iron is hot." Now is the time when every believer in the main ideas asserted by Dr. True in New York, and by Br. Burr in Chicago (at their minister's meeting here), which fell like bombshells into the camp, should press their consideration by papers, tracts, and conversation. Tracts on the subject—something pointed, racy and clear, would be eagerly sought, and attentively read. What are we doing to improve the opportunity? Are we not assuming the attitude of passive spectators, rather than engaging in the vigorous operations of an effective campaign? Are we not guilty of a great blunder, when Providence has turned up the soil of so large a field, in that we are not only casting so little seed into the furrowed ground, but actually have not the seed prepared for the sowing? It seems so to us.

Shall we do better? Shall we of this Western field, where men's minds are more inclined to candid investigation, shall we unite solidly and sturdily, and lift our publishing interest out of the embarrassing ruts of debt and usury-bearing obligations, and place it upon the smooth track of ready means for successful operation in taking advantage of every such providential opening as this we have referred to? Is it not time? Can we expect the world to believe us in earnest if we are so occupied in personal ambitions, or intent upon working in our own way or none, or practising economy in pinching our religion rather than by sacrifice of the pride of life, and the lusts of the flesh and the eye, that golden opportunities provided by Providence for reaching the masses go unimproved?

Surely every consideration that can be urged upon our higher nature, that can be brought to bear upon our nobler qualities of mind and heart, demand a sanctification deep and broad, making itself felt in the world in its practical demonstrations that we exist as a vital, aggressive power.

SOMETHING DONE.

Our labor is not in vain. God's word does not, cannot return to him void. Seed sown in weeping, by sacrifice, with toil, will bring forth fruit. Some soils may be quicker than others: some may prove barren. But if God scatters seed upon the wayside, the stony ground and among the thorns for the sake of certainly reaching every spot of good ground that may be found, we should certainly sow in the same fashion.

But he does not leave us without exhibition of ripening and ripened fruit of well-directed effort, to cheer us. Let us turn our eyes off from the difficulties, the obstacles, the trials in the way ahead, and look about us and on what God has done and is doing. We are gaining ground steadily. It only needs the consecration and faith of Caleb and Joshua to secure new and greater victories for the truth, opening to us broader and richer fields for future harvests of souls.

10,000.

Some thought we were extravagant, because a few weeks since we asked for ten thousand subscribers. Other papers offer premiums (don't know but we shall have to do so: it seems as if a "premium" of some kind was a necessary part of every paper); other papers take a more popular course than THE TIMES; times are hard, etc., etc.

Well, what of all that? Does any body doubt that if every one of our readers should go to work in earnest the desired result would be effected inside of three months? We do not. The first of May may see us with such a list of subscribers as would immensely increase our usefulness, and give us means to enlarge, beautify, and improve the paper in every department, if every one should only will to have it so. What do you say?—each one. Shall we all go to work in earnest?

THE TIME FOR ACTION.

There are some indications that the time has arrived for decisive and liberal action in behalf of our Western Association. In view of the 'hard times' many may think this a mistake; but if the Lord's time has arrived for us to pay off our debt, and place our publishing interest upon its feet for a greater work, upon broader principles, than ever before, now is as good a time as any. To us, the duty of immediate and generous action is plain; and others seem to be of the same mind, as is witnessed by the letters we here append, samples of our correspondence on the subject.

Last month the following letter was received from a brother in Missouri:

> Dear Brother: In perusing the Secretary's report that is found in THE TIMES of Nov. 5, I can see that the liabilities of the Association are something less than five thousand dollars. This ought not to be so. We, as a people believe that the time is short, and what can be done must be done quickly, and in order that the Association may work more successfully, I would propose that the believers in the Advent cause in the West should respond quickly, and wipe out this debt that hangs over us, that we can say that we owe no man anything but love when the Master comes.
>
> This is the plan that I would suggest. That every subscriber of THE TIMES would send to the office the sum of one dollar (I mean those that are able); and those that could do better would send more; remembering the Lord loveth a cheerful giver.
>
> To start the above proposal I send you the sum of two dollars at this time, and will send you three more before the first day of January 1873.
>
> Dear Brethren: Let us respond heartily and quickly, and let the Association be speedily untramelled, so that we can spread tracts and other publications more liberally.
>
> ISAAC BODDY.

A brother in Illinois writes, at a later date:

> The appeal for the benefit of the Publication Fund, in the last TIMES, deeply impressed me, and I felt I must do something. I propose that one thousand Adventists, contribute five dollars each at once. This will place the necessary five thousand dollars in the hands of the office. I inclose mine, believing there are more than a thousand persons ready to give this paltry sum in itself, but which in the aggregate will be supplied to relieve the Association from all embarassment, and do an immense amount of good. As soon as this is raised, I will be one of five hundred to give ten dollars. This sum will be sufficient to make the cause move.
>
> Now brethren of this precious faith, come up to the work. Many of you are blessed with preaching and church associations. Here we have THE TIMES, a few books and tracts and our Bibles. People are calling for tracts; but we have only a few, nor are we able to buy them. Let us be up and doing. Let us work, and work, and work on. Let us give and continue to give. By giving our money to this cause we all become preachers. I hope every one who reads these lines may feel that he is especially called upon to give to this cause.
>
> I feel that I do want to do some good in this world. I intend to work, and pray, and give all I can. O, ye who are looking and waiting for Jesus' "glorious appearing," arouse yourselves, shake off this indifference that possesses you. Time hastens, preparations for the judgment are being made. Soon the last Gentile power "shall plant the tabernacle of his place between the seas in the glorious holy mountain," and "Michael the great prince shall stand up." Then if in this life we have acted wisely, we "shall shine as the brightness of the firmament," and if it shall be found that we have "turned many to righteousness, we shall shine, as the stars forever and forever." Oh! glorious hope! Hallelujah! Transporting, rapturous thought. How it warms and enlivens my heart.

Come, dear friends. Let us have these five thousand dollars, now. Wait not a single day to remit, but do it at once. Delay not. Hasten to place the money in the hands of the Association. Do it now. "Delays are dangerous." J. W. Johnson.

A few spirits of this sort would vitalize the entire body with new life and power. But here is another letter this time from Wisconsin:

I noticed in The Times an appeal by one of our old pioneers calling on the friends of the Advent cause to contribute as far as they are able, to support the cause we love. This is all right. How can we that are Adventists stand, look on, and see the cause suffer. God forbid! I would like to say to the brethren and sisters scattered abroad, let us put shoulder to the wheel and the work will move on. There is enough in the Advent ranks to do all that is needed. Let us so use the means God has put in our hands that we may be able to say, "We have done what we could." Let us then, without delay, contribute as the Lord hath prospered us. Time is short. Wickedness is increasing on every hand. Pride and fashion are doing their terrible work with vital piety. Let us do what we can to save the perishing. The time for work will soon be over, and Jesus will be here.

S. Nye.

This letter was endorsed "Put me down for twenty-five dollars."

These letters will suffice for this time. They show the feeling that is abroad among the friends of the Association, and we believe they, with others, are tokens of a revival among us of the spirit of sacrifice, the missionary spirit, yes, of the spirit that was in the Master, to unwearily do, do, no, for a lost world. Let us strive to be worthy of such a gracious Master.

NOT RIGHTLY DIVIDED.

We are sorry that we have been misunderstood by any as to our position upon the question of Sanctification. Because we have steadfastly opposed an unscriptural and therefore mistaken view of sanctification it by no means follows that we have thrown our influence against holiness or the perfection of Christian character. We believe and teach entire consecration on the part of the believer as an essential element of Christian character. This keeps the standard at a very high point—just where the Scriptures place it. But the theory we have opposed supposes two grades of disciples—sanctified and unsanctified believers; both to be saved, both "heirs of the kingdom," although the first named are deficient in some of the very first things required of the child of God.

This theory is not a new thing among us. It has been mooted among Adventists before, and with disastrous consequences. In its beginnings it is attractive. Its premises are specious, and well calculated to deceive those who long for the closest fellowship with God. But the logical conclusions from these premises are overlooked, until, often too late, they are developed in "fruit unto death." This is a simple statement of fact and is incontrovertible.

Let us look for a moment at some premises and necessary conclusions. A collection of passages in which sanctification is commanded is made, and then it is urged that these exhortations were addressed to believers, to saints. Hence, sanctification is a matter for converted living disciples to attain, an added grace acquired subsequent to conversion. The argument is, clearly, that if disciples, saints, believers, or whatever they may be called, were already in possession of sanctification, they would not be exhorted to sanctify themselves, or to be sanctified. Hence believers may be "justified," acceptable members of the church and yet not "sanctified." Now, this is very specious reasoning, and, at first sight, seems to be impregnable argument, yet it is rotten to the core.

Paul addressing the church says: "Let US cast off the works of darkness, and let US put on the armor of light. Let US walk honestly as in the day, not in rioting and drunkenness." Now, no one dare affirm that because Paul says "Let US" forsake such and such things and courses, that therefore those things were consistent with a certain grade of discipleship, and that those Paul calls "us" might live in them and yet be saved, though it would be better to forsake them and live a higher life. Yet this is incontrovertibly a logical conclusion from the premises assumed in order to prove sanctification a "second blessing."

A case more clearly in point is the not infrequent citation of 1 Thes. 4: 3—"This is the will of God, even your sanctification." "This Scripture," we are told, "was not addressed to the unconverted, but to the 'brethren.'" Very well! but what more is said to the "brethren" of this "model church?" Was this paragraph a complete exhortation in itself, addressed to persons in other respects faultless, with reference to a technical sanctification; or is it a part, only, of an expostulation with some who had wandered from the narrow way? Why, the whole verse reads—not stopping at the comma, as those seeking to press the verse into special service do, "For this is the will of God, even your sanctification, that ye should abstain from fornication;" and it is added, "that everyone of you should know how to possess his vessel in sanctification and honor; not in the lust of concupiscence, even as the Gentiles, which know not God; that no man go beyond or defraud [oppress] his brother in any matter.... for God hath not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness."

Now, candidly, and controversy apart, are we to suppose that "brethren" in good standing, "ensamples" to all "in every place" were subjects of the lust condemned, and in the habit of going beyond and defrauding or oppressing their brethren? We must so conclude if the theory of sanctification which we candidly admit we oppose, is correct. But the evident fact in the case is, that this instruction concerning sanctification was not addressed to the "ensamples" in the church, but to those in it who had yielded to enticement and covetousness and the spirit of revenge, and hence were in a backslidden state. They needed, like Peter, a new conversion, that they might add strength to the brethren. The sanctification, then, which is here spoken of, is not a second blessing, added to those who, being justified already, had "peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ," but a renewal of that condition which they enjoyed when they first became as little children, and yielded their wills and their all to Christ, and were converted, and fit for the kingdom of heaven.

Let it be understood, then, that we believe and teach entire sanctification of soul, body, and spirit, as is commanded. But this entire sanctification is not a privilege, that one may ignore and yet be a Christian; not a "second blessing," which some brethren may enjoy and others may be without and at the same time be "ensamples;" it is simply the continuation of that full surrender of self in order that Christ may be our wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption, which is made in every case of genuine conversion. God accepts no lame, no diseased, no maimed sacrifices. "All on the altar," is the Bible standard. Anything less than this is backsliding to a greater or less degree, or, worse than that, it is the sin of Ananias and Sapphira, who knowingly kept back a part of the price. Let us call things by their right names, and "rightly divide" the Word of God.

SENSE AND SENSITIVENESS.

Sensitiveness bears about the same relation to sense as jealousy does to love. Jealousy has a basis of love, though love in such a case is partial, selfish, and morbid. Sensitiveness, too, has a basis of sense, but not that vigorous quality which we call common sense. Among the most miserable people in the world are those distrustful, suspicious, and self-conscious men and women who seem to be all points and angles. All the senses are preternaturally acute. They are always seeing, hearing, tasting or smelling something bad. Somebody is always stepping on their toes, or getting in their way, or slighting them. Nobody can take any comfort with these hyper-super sensitives. When you meet one of these human sensitive-plants the very fear of giving offense will go far towards making you feel constrained and awkward, and all your pains to please will pass for naught. You will be charged with having been cold, distant, and reserved. A sound mind in a sound body never gets into this hyper-super-acute-angled-sensitive state. To be continually fretting about petty annoyances and trifling slights, real or fancied, is a sure indication not only of a little mind, but of a 'mind diseased.' It is a disease of self. The person is suffering from too much of egoism. The disease is alarmingly prevalent, and in many cases has proved contagious. It is most to be feared when it manifests itself in a prayer-meeting. One of these super-sensitive patients has been known to spoil what would otherwise have been a good meeting, by a long, rambling story of private persecutions, petty troubles, etc., etc., ad nauseam. Such persons go to meetings not to praise God nor to edify others about love or faith or hope, but to spin long yarns about themselves, in which there is not one word of encouragement to saint or warning to sinner. Morbidly sensitive people think that a social meeting at church is a fine place to ventilate their private grievances. They are sure of sympathetic hearers, they think, and no matter if their story makes everybody blue who hears it, tell it they must, and tell it they will. They make the not uncommon mistake of supposing the church to be a hospital. At Dansville, in the public parlor of "Our House on the Hillside," a printed card requests the patients not to talk about their diseases. To be continually brooding over one's troubles, and talking about one's diseases is certainly destructive of one's health, physical or mental.

The following remedies for hyper-super-sensitiveness are warranted to cure, or no pay: Think and talk much less about self. Use the word 'I' less frequently. Be actively employed in doing good to others. Be cheerful. Be hopeful. Look on the bright side of things. Do not despond. Remember that insults are like counterfeit money in this respect, that we cannot help their being offered but we can help taking them. He who is quick to notice slights and affronts really invites insults and is always in 'hot water.' Lastly, remember the words of David, "Great peace have they which love thy law, and nothing shall offend them.

J. H. W.

A NOBLE PROJECT.

We learn that something like two thousand dollars has been pledged to the Association, provided enough more can be raised to pay off all the debt, and put the office in running order, on a solid and permanent basis—say five or six thousand dollars. If five men are ready to give two thousand dollars, for this noble purpose, surely among the thousands of our readers enough can be found to give four thousand more. Shall we raise this sum? Such an offering would insure us the pouring out of an overflowing blessing from on high. Let us all unite to "prove the Lord."

Meanwhile we hope soon to be able to report the definite plan proposed to pay the debt and supply material for our work.

AN IMPORTANT CORRECTION.

The editor of the Crisis in the issue for January 1, makes the following correction of a statement which, as it stood, was likely to create some prejudice against our Western office:

Western Association.—In our "Western Notes," published in the Crisis, Oct. 30th, 1872, when referring to the basis of membership in the "Western Association," we said: "The objection raised to the present arrangement was the fact that a few heavy stockholders controlled the Association, preventing the body at large from being represented." We said this in harmony with information received when at the annual meeting. We have just learned from the President of the Association, and other members present, that at the "late meeting every vote passed was carried by a clear majority of the members present, and in most cases by two-thirds and three-fourths votes of their number; and in no case has a vote of the Association ever been decided in any meeting by 'heavy stockholders.'" We cheerfully make the correction.

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

The church at Holden, Mass., have unanimously desired the services of Br. C. E. Barnes as pastor of the flock there. We don't know that he has accepted their invitation. We had hoped he would yet return West.——Brn. Fox and Branch are holding meetings at Bath, Mich. Seven souls have been converted.——Br. Abbott writes that Br. Reed baptised three souls at Santa Clara, Cal., Jan. 5, and eleven were received into the church the same day. Br. Fassett's health is improving.——Two members have recently been added to the Shelby and Barre (N. Y.) church lately. The society is doing well.——Br. A. S. Calkins is laid up with a throat affection—a kind of congestion—and not able to labor at all. This is sad news for us. When he is in the field we always know it by the new subscribers that come in.

A NEW GERMAN TRACT.

We learn that Br. Reimer has written a new tract in the German language, upon prophecy and the signs of the times indicating the near approach of the advent of Christ to destroy the remnants of the Roman empire, and set up his own universal and eternal kingdom. This is a very important tract; but Br. Reimer is somewhat straitened for means to publish it. We propose, therefore, that the first edition be taken by subscription. The prices will be as follows:

12 copies for	50
25 " "	$1 00
50 " "	2 00
100 " "	3 00

Let every one interested send their subscriptions at once to L. Reimer, 1006 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Penn. Br. Reimer has liberally helped the American Advent cause in various departments. And when he is endeavoring to attract his own countrymen to the light and liberty of the gospel of the kingdom, let us respond to the necessities of his mission with equal largeness of heart.

Personal.

We find the following card in the last Crisis:

Returning from a tour in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and as far west as Illinois, I was attacked when in New York, Sunday morning, Jan. 12th, by symptoms of fever coupled with spitting blood. Leaving others to fill the appointments I had made, and promptly summoning the assistance of my old friend, Dr. E. P. Miller, I was saved from protracted illness, and after four days judicious treatment and careful nursing at his Home of Health, 41 W. 26th Street, with the assiduous care of Br. H. A. King, I was enabled to proceed to Boston, where I arrived in safety Friday evening, Jan. 17. Though I trust through the Lord's mercy I am not in urgent or special danger, yet common prudence concurs with medical authority in prescribing abstinence from public labor for the present; and my friends will not accuse me of neglect if I fail to meet their calls, or even to answer their numerous kindly invitations. The Master's voice seems to say as of old, "Come ye apart into a desert place, and rest awhile." (Mk. 6:31.) And imperative editorial duties connected with the Christian may for a little while require all the strength I can bestow. Pray for me.

All is peace, and the promise is good both for the life that now is, and for that which is to come.

H. L. Hastings.

"Present Truth,"

OR "MEAT IN DUE SEASON."

This is a little work on prophecy and chronology by Br. Jonas Wendell of Edenboro, Pa., setting forth the end of this world or age, this present year—1873.

A Br. in New Jersey has put in our hands seven hundred and fifty of this pamphlet for distribution, and requests us to say, that if any have not the means to pay postage or expressage on what they can prudently use, he will pay it for them, i. e. they will be sent free.

If the demand for these warrant it, he will gladly provide for a thousand copies more.

Send your orders to this office.

John Robinson's Charge.

John Robinson the pastor of that colony of exiles in Holland which supplied New England with its first settlers, was the special champion of spiritual liberty. His advice to these as they were about to leave Holland, has as much of the spirit of true reformation in it as any counsel that ever came from human lips. Hear him:

"I charge you before God, and before his holy angels, that you follow the Lord Jesus Christ. If God reveal any thing to you by any other instrument of his, be as ready to receive it as ever you were to receive any truth by my ministry; for I am verily persuaded, I am very confident, that the Lord hath more truth yet to break forth out of his holy word. For my part I cannot sufficiently bewail the the condition of the reformed churches who have come to a period in religion, and will go at present no further than the instruments of their first reformation. The Lutherans can not be drawn to go beyond what Luther saw. Whatever part of his will our good God has imparted and revealed unto Calvin, they will die rather than embrace it. And the Calvinists you see, stick fast where they were left by that great man of God, who yet saw not all things. This is a misery much to be lamented; for though they were 'burning and shining lights' in their times, yet they penetrated not into 'the whole counsel of God'; but were they now living they would be as willing to embrace further light as that which they first recieved. * * * But I must herewithal exhort you to take heed what you receive as truth; examine it, consider it, compare it with the other Scriptures of truth, before you do receive it. For it is not possible that the Christian world should come so lately out of such thick anti-Christian darkness, and that perfection of knowledge should break forth at once."

In order to ascertain how freely any one has received, or how much any has been loved, you have only to ascertain how freely he can give, or how long he can labor without fainting. The love which does not lead to labor will soon die out; and the thankfulness which does not imbody in sacrifices is already changing to ingratitude.

"I never knew a man," says an old author, "who could not bear another's misfortunes just like a Christian"—which reminds us of the old lady who thought every calamity that happened to herself a trial, and every one that happened to her friends a judgment.

It is one thing to wish to have the truth on our side, and another to wish to be on the side of truth.—Whateley.

The passionate are like men standing on their heads; they see all things the wrong way.—Plato.

To know how to wait is the secret of success.—Le Maistre.

The Christian Life.

The Honey and the Gold.

There is no way of feeding upon the Word except by thinking well over it. Perhaps no learned scholar ever attained a deeper insight into the real spirit of God's truth than a poor widow, who, in her penury, allowed herself still the one luxury of a half-hour's candle-light after her toilsome day was done, that she might read her precious Bible. Experience had taught her how far it would burn in a half-hour. So it was her custom to light it for a few moments, and read such a portion as she thought she could remember, and then blow out her light, and think it over. So she continued to do until the mark on her candle was reached. Surely such meditations, joined with humble prayer, could not fail to extract the pure honey from this precious honey comb. The joy of that evening feast more than made amends for all the day's ills. She lived the truths she had thus made her own, and was truly said to be "mighty in the Scriptures."

Another poor, lone woman, who had walked by the steady light of her old familiar Bible for a long lifetime, found that her failing eyesight could serve her no longer. She could not find her favorite pasages for others to read. She resorted at last to the expedient of placing pins carefully in the margin opposite them, and when any one came to visit her she would pass her withered fingers down the page, and beg them to "read here" or "read there." When she died, a hundred and sixty-eight pins were found in the book. Are there pins in our Bibles? Have we our golden passages to which we turn in time of trouble or any need? If we feed well on the Word, this will be our only true solace, our strong and sure helper.

We can never gain the gospel gold except we delve for it. Careless reading over a chapter or two will never secure it. Better one verse with meditation than the whole book read thoughtlessly.

The Test of Small Things.

In small things lie the crucibles and the touchstones. Any hypocrite will come to the Sabbath worship, but it is not every hypocrite that will attend prayer-meetings, or read the Bible in secret, or speak privately of the things of God to the saints. You shall find the same true in other things. A man who is no Christian will very likely not tell you a downright lie by saying that black is white, but he will not hesitate to declare that whitey-brown is white—he will go that length. Now, the Christian will not go half way to a falsehood—nay, he scorns to go an inch on that road. He will no more cheat you out of twopence farthing than he would out of two thousand pounds. He will not rob you of an ell. Even a Pharisee will ask Christ to his house to sit at meat with him—he is willing to entertain a great religious leader at his table; but it is not every one who will stoop down and unloose his shoes; for that very Pharisee who made the feast never brought him water to wash his feet, nor gave him the kiss of welcome; he proved the insincerity of his hospitality by forgetting the little things. I will be bound to say Martha and Mary never forgot to unloose his shoe-latchets, and that Lazarus never failed to see that his feet were washed. Look then, I pray you, as Christians, to the service of Christ in the obscure things, in the things that are not recognized by men, in the matters that have no honor attached to them, for by this shall your love be tried.—Spurgeon.

God's Opportunity.

Admiral Sir Thomas Williams, the founder of the Royal Naval Female school for the education of Naval officer's daughters, was in command of a ship crossing the Atlantic Ocean. His course brought them within sight of the Island of Ascension, at that time uninhabited, and never visited by any ship except for the purpose of collecting turtles, which abound on the coast. The island was barely seen on the horizon; but as Sir Thomas looked at it he was seized with an unaccountable desire to steer toward it.—He felt how strange such a wish would appear to his crew, and tried to disregard it, but in vain; the desire of the straightforward and excellent commander became more and more urgent; and seeing that they were fast leaving the island behind them, he told his lieutenant to prepare to "put about ship," and steer for Ascension. His lieutenant ventured respectfully to represent to Sir Thomas that changing their course would greatly delay them; that just at that moment the men were going to their dinner; that at least some delay might be allowed. But these arguments seemed to increase the captain's anxiety, and he gave the word of command which is never resisted. He saw in the countenances of his officers an expression of wonder and even blame, as strong as is ever shown on an order from the captain; but he was obeyed, and the ship was steered toward the uninteresting little island.

All eyes and spy-glasses were immediately fixed upon it, and soon something was perceived on the shore.

"It is white—it is a flag—it must be a signal!" were the cries which at intervals broke from the excited crew.

When they neared the shore a painful spectacle met their view. They found that sixteen men, wrecked on that coast many days before, and suffering the extremity of hunger, had set up a signal, though almost without hope of relief. The shipwrecked men were taken on board, and the voyage completed.

What a proof we have in this of the Divine arm to save when all hope seems to have vanished! and what an encouragement it should be for us always to pray and not to faint!

Correspondence.

Communion.

The communion of the Lord's Supper is a holy ordinance, instituted by our Savior, and is commonly called a sacrament,implying a sign and an oath. It is an outward sign of inward grace in the heart, and an oath by which we bind ourselves to the Lord. Some do not consider this term to be Scriptural and prefer to call it the Lord's supper" because it was instituted in the evening, at the close of the passover supper. It is as properly called "the communion" as therein we show our close communion with Christ and his people. The cup of blessing which we bless is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break is it not the communion of the body of Christ? For we being many are one bread and one body; for we are all partakers of that one bread. (1 Cor. 10: 16, 17.) Christians are united by partaking of the emblems of Christ's broken body and spilled blood by faith and are one with him and have fellowship with him and each other. It is "the Lord's supper," for Paul in writing to his brethren says, "When ye come together into one place, this is not to eat the Lord's supper," or, as the margin reads, "ye cannot eat the Lord's supper," i. e., not in this way. He wished to give them certain directions in regard to the proper observance of the institution, and that it is not merely meeting at the same place that shows their communion, but that unless united in the same doctrinal ideas it is not celebrating the supper in a becoming manner. He impresses them with the sacred character of a beautiful remembrancer, and desires a right observance of it. Having then answered the question we proceed to inquire

WHAT IS ITS TRUE OBJECT?

It is to show forth by the appropriate emblems used "the Lord's death till he come," and to commemorate the solemn event of the crucifixion when he bled and died as our "sin offering." Also to keep in memory the sufferings endured by him throughout his whole life. To realize the true import of this ordinance open every avenue of the heart, reveal all its tender sympathies and love, bidding adieu for a time to the whirl of business and perplexities of life; welcoming the tokens of coming redemption presented to us in those beautiful symbols so expressive of our hope in a coming Savior. Our minds should be continually impressed and our keenest sensibilities awakened while thinking upon this solemn yet joyous scene, knowing our sorrow will be turned into joy when he comes again "without sin unto salvation."

HOW SHALL IT BE OBSERVED?

The apostle Paul has given complete directions and we have the example of Christ to follow by which we may learn the manner of its observance. We are cautioned against eating the Lord's supper to satisfy hunger, and Paul declares it is a "shame" thus to change the character of the ordinance. Thanks are to be given for the bread, then it is to be broken, signifying that Christ, as the "Bread of Life," was broken for us. All worthy to accept it are then to partake of it in remembrance of him. In the same manner the cup is to be taken, still keeping fresh in memory the One who first presented it. Self-examination is enjoined on those who commemorate the great event of Christ's death, for if unworthy, condemnation follows in not "discerning the Lord's body." As a result of eating and drinking unworthily many are weak and famishing for the "Bread of Life." Then how careful should we be in guarding against such an error, and should closely examine our motives and actions in order to be the proper recipients of those holy emblems.

The examples given seem to warrant the conclusion that only disciples of Christ or true Christians are entitled to a seat at the Lord's table, yet we are not to judge who are worthy and who are not, nor are we authorized to exclude any; for Judas, although unworthy and the betrayer of his Lord, sat with him at the table. We have an example in this of one who betrayed his Lord even unto death; but it is a terrible example to imitate. How carefully should we avoid the example of those who betray him by unholy words and acts, and endeavor to follow our perfect Examplar?

WHAT ARE THE PROPER EMBLEMS TO BE USED?

"And as they were eating Jesus took bread." Here we notice one emblem is bread; and as none but unleavened bread, or rather cakes could then be eaten, it is most certain no other could be used in this ordinance. Few Protestant churches consider this a circumstance of much importance, though some are very particular in breaking instead of cutting it, a circumstance more natural and easy in cakes (such as the Jews still use), than in loaves like ours. After taking the bread he "blessed it" or "gave thanks," as many Greek copies read, then "brake it and gave to the disciples and said, take, eat; this is my body." (Mat. 26: 26-31.)

Here is the expressive symbol of his body as the bread of heaven broken for us. And what more suitable than "bread" to remember him by? It is the great staff of life, designed to support present life, and Christ compares himself to bread, of which we may partake to insure and sustain an endless life.

"And he took the cup and gave thanks, and gave it to them saying, drink ye all of it." Here is presented the second emblem—what is it? Many are not at all particular so long as it is wine of some kind—grape, currant, rhubarb, or anything thing that is called wine is sufficient to satisfy them. Now I fear there is a great fault here; for we should endeavor to follow the example of Christ.

He said to his disciples, "I will not drink henceforth of the fruit of the vine until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom."

Several facts are observable in this: First, that he would not "drink of the fruit of the vine," until a certain time. The wine is the product of the grape, and the usual word karpos, the term for fruit, is not used here. Grapes are the fruit, wine the product, so we understand that only grape wine was used on such occasions. It was customary for the master of the family to take a cup of wine, and after having blessed it or implored the blessing of God upon it, to distribute it among the members of the family, so our Lord distributed this cup of wine among his disciples. But this was not the sacramental cup; for after the passover he took both bread and wine and instituted the ordinance ever since celebrated.

By comparing 1 Cor. 10: 16-20 with the directions given in the eleventh chapter, and then referring to John 6: 27-36, where Christ is teaching the Jews by comparison, his mission and the object of his coming, the whole design of leaving an appropriate memorial to those who should believe in him is plainly seen. And what could have been left us as a visible token of his love more suggestive than the commemorative emblems pointing back to him as the great sacrifice, and forward to him as the Lifegiver?

WHEN IS IT TO BE CELEBRATED?

Paul says, "As oft as ye eat of this bread and drink of this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come;" but how often, it is difficult to say. But we do know that it was a practice of the disciples to meet together upon the first day of the week. From the time of the Lord's resurrection there is no recognition of a seventh day Sabbath in the Christian church, especially among the Gentiles, though there are many proofs of the first day of the week being occupied in religious worship. In this our Lord himself has set the example by repeatedly appearing to his disciples. He appeared to them in the "evening being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled." (John 20: 19.) On that day is believed fell the day of Pentecost, and we find the Christians of Troas were accustomed to meeting on the same day. (Acts 20.) They met for religious worship and "breaking bread" or the administration of the Lord's supper. On this day the churches were required to make collections for their poor and afflicted brethren. "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him." (1 Cor. 16:2.) This day is called in Rev. 1: 7 the Lord's day. The same expression is used by Ignatius to distinguish the first day from the seventh. It seems to have been especially observed as a day of worship in apostolic times, as the day our Savior arose from the dead, as a day of rest.

Then we understand that as often as it may be convenient it is the sacred duty of Christians to meet for breaking bread in commemoration of the last supper of our Savior with his disciples.

There is a great neglect among many churches in the observance of this ordinance. I hope we may be more attentive to our duties in this respect in the future and not give occasion to the adversary to take advantage of our weakness.

"This is the day of rest, let earth retire,
And leave my thoughts Eternal God to thee.
Let my dull heart this sacred morning be
Warmed by thy grace and touched with heavenly fire.
Softly the Sabbath bell is heard afar,
Like mercy's summons to a feast of love,
On to the house of prayer the suppliants move."

E. A. Marsh.

From S. B. Mabey.

As the brethen may wonder where I am and what I am doing, I would say that I have returned from my trip to Kansas after an absence of six weeks. Although the field is large there, and prospects in some respects good for a great work, yet circumstances were such that I could not well stay longer, although it would have been a pleasure to do so had it been thus ordered by Providence. I visited many places on my way home in Missouri and Illinois, Hopkins, Clear Creek, and Quitman churches, and trust some good may be the result of my labor in the Lord.

I have since been laboring as the way has been opened, and intend so to do in future. Wish to say to brethren that I will call and labor with those who need help and will manifest it by writing to me—rich or poor, and in the northern Illinois conference especially, will attend to invitations already received as soon as practicable. Let none who are destitute fear to write me, and that soon, that I may arrange accordingly.

I feel that earth's probation is almost over, and the King in his majesty and glory will soon appear. Therefore, let an earnest effort be put forth on the part of all the saints to sustain the cause and save perishing men. My address is Amboy, Lee County, Illinois.

"Immortality of Man and Animals."

The following communication is from the Christian Statesman of Milwaukee, Wis:

Ed. Ch. Statesman:— You profess to be the fearless advocate of truth, and practice more of this spirit than many of the religious journals of the age. You have admitted criticisms on Mr. Talmage's views of Hell. These have called out other views and opinions. I do not, probably, agree with any views yet expressed so far as I have seen, but send you an extract from the London Spectator that I have little expectation you will publish, however much you may be urged to do so. It seems to modify this doctrine of revelation so that it shall no longer be "fierce as the furies and terrible as a modern hell" and leaves it as it was, an ancient Gehenna that destroys what is not worth preserving. Here then is the extract from the London Spectator "There seems room for a word, if you can find space for it in reply to 'Philozooist' not so much in way of argument as history in reference to th opinion on immortality. Your correspondent says 'if man's immortality b accepted as proven, certain consequences will follow favorable to the survival of the higher animals.' But wha if it be not accepted as proven? Ther is no small company of our cotemporaries who think that the phenomen of intelligence, and moral feeling, taken in connection with animal deat throw more doubt on the natural, ete nal immortality of mankind as proven, than extending a similar hope to th 'higher animals.' Under any theor of evolution we seem to be compelle either to abandon the doctrine of man' immortality, or to extend the expect tion of eternal survival to all livin creatures. In this difficulty, it is n to be wondered at that an ancient b lief is reviving with immense force ov all Christendom (held, as I understan among others, by the late illustrio Rothe,) that the notion of man's abs lute immortality under a sinful cond tion is a mistake, that it is the very o ject of the incarnation of the Divi life to communicate immortality t mankind but that its enjoyment will restricted to regenerate and curab men, the evil residue of the hum race which may resist all the prese or future redemptive methods lasti long only to receive the due reward their deeds in a judgment usually d cribed as 'death,' 'perishing,' and 'de truction.' It is evident that under th view of conditional immortality co municated by supernatural grace, t Christian faith of many may be pr served who at present feel themselv compelled to reject, in toto, a revel tion supposed to base itself on an i mortality in man which comparati science both physical and metaphy cal does not seem to support by e dence."

This, sir, is the extract, and it is doctrine which has been familiar to n thoughts for more than thirty years u til now. I can see nothing that co flicts with it in either history, philo phy, or theology. I would recomme the reading of Henry Constable's wo on this subject. I would say of t work of Mr. Constable (Prebendary Cork) though the reprint is very cent, and the book less than one hun red pages, a Connecticut secular pa says it has unsettled the faith of o half of the orthodox clergy of Conn ticut in the doctrine of eternal mise It is also stated that many of the eva gelical ministers of England embra these views. Is this so? Don't let try to put out the light and "thus sh the gates of mercy on mankind."

C. W. Turner, Sen.

You can never catch th has once gone out of your lips. O spoken, it is out of your reach; your best, you can never recall Therefore, take care what you s Never speak an unkind word, an i pure word, a profane word.

No man is a better merchant th he that lays out his time upon G and his money upon the poor.—Bis Taylor,

Doing Duty.

here is a very common feeling ng Christians that it matters not t we believe only so we are Christ- . Says one, "I do not see as it is ssary for me to believe that Christ ming soon, or to believe that the l sleep until the resurrection, or our future home is on this earth, at the wicked will be destroyed. nnot see what difference it makes ther I believe these things or not. nk it enough if we live Christians do our duty."

ell, my dear friend, how do you w that you are a Christian? and do you know that you do your ? How do you know but you are gan?

) I am honest in what I do."

es! and so are they.

But they worship idols."

ell, without the light of God's aled will would we know any bet- We claim to know and do bet- han they, because we have more t than they. But upon the princi- hat it matters not what we believe, Bible, God's holy will to us, would f no particular value to us, and so ould just as well follow the Koran, e spirits, or any other device, as Bible.

h! I believe the Bible, and be- it should be our guide."

ell how much of it? If any of it no particular value, may not all be of the same character. And e man says, I will take this much y faith, and another says, I will that, and so on, where will divis- and religions end? Is Christ di- d? Is God's word to be torn into nents to suit the fancy of selfish ? Are we not bound in some de- to respect God's word? To be a stian is to follow Christ. We can- follow Christ unless we know st, and have faith in him as our or and Redeemer. This knowl- comes alone through the reveal- will of God and the gospel of his r Son. "The gospel of God," e Gospel of Christ is the power ed unto salvation to everyone that veth." Here faith comes in as a equisite to salvation, "For without it is impossible to please God." h in what? Faith in God, in his l, in the gospel of his Son. Now much does this gospel contain? The story of his birth, as the only tten of the Father. He must s come "as a child born and a given," "Immanuel, God with us." His death as the sacrifice, the atone- t for sin, "He must needs die and buried. (3) His resurrection for ustification and redemption, "how Christ died for our sins, accord- to the Scriptures, and that he was ed, and that he rose again the third according to the Scriptures." His ascension to the right hand of Majesty on high, as our advocate. His coming again personally. For same Jesus which is taken up you into heaven shall so come in manner as ye have seen him go heaven." "I will come again" Christ to his disciples, "and re- e you to myself." He must come , to fulfill the promises of God to people.

o raise the dead ones; for "the l himself shall descend from heav- with a shout, with the voice of the angel, and with the trump of God; the dead in Christ shall rise first." rious thought! He must come to ge the world, "for the Father hath mitted all judgment unto the Son." e dead shall stand before God ll and great," "Every eye shall see ;" "For the great day of his wrath ome."

e must come "to give reward unto servants the prophets, and to the ts, and them that fear thy name, all and great." "Behold I come ckly and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his work shall be."

To establish his kingdom and reign upon the throne of David, and over the house of Jacob forever." "Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end." All hail thou Prince of Peace!

To restore all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began.

I understand that all this is gospel, and no part of it can be left out and we have the whole gospel. It is all glad tidings of great joy unto all people. Is faith in this essential to salvation? If it is the gospel of Christ, Paul says it is. Did he speak by inspiration? Then it is the word of God and must be believed, or we endanger our salvation.

Well now my friend, how about duty, if we cannot be Christians without knowing the gospel of Christ, and that brings to view the coming of Christ, and the end of man's probation and the judgment of the great day, and we believe it, what is our duty as Christians. Manifestly it is our duty to love it. If we love God we will love his word. If we love Christ we will long to see him, hence love his appearing, love his work, love the salvation by and through him.

Our love for Christ will reach out beyond our own little heart in the form of duty to our fellow men. This is just as natural as that the rays of light and heat from the sun enliven animate creation all around us. We Christians and no feeling of pity like Christ! Excuse ourselves upon the plea of sincerity! But it is and can be only a sincerity in unbelief. True and genuine faith moves the heart to duty, and takes no excuse and asks none. With the Bible in our hands and the love of God in our hearts, where is the excuse for Christians in this matter?

No interest in the coming of the Lord and the glorious consummation of our hope? Why? Is not this your hope, and you a child of God? If not please tell me what is the hope of the child of God? Is it death or life. Christ comes to give life. Do you want to die or live? What is your hope? What has Christ promised you?

Christian awake from sleeping; trim thy lamp and look about thee! Hear the voice of the Savior—"Behold I come quickly!" Sinner hear! "To-day" if any man "thirst" "let him come." "The splendid star of the morning" and the Spirit and the Bride say, Come.

S. K. GIBSON.

Brother Beecher.

I was to preach for brother Anderson. He was a good pastor. Almost the last time I saw him he had just called upon a lamb of his flock, to ask after her spiritual welfare and for fifty cents of his salary. He had left his tubs and brushes at the foot of the hill, and he resumed them when he had made his call; for h[illegible] great apostle, he used to labor, working with his own hands.

For years I met him, but had not known him; he was silent and constrained, he never seemed to know, much less resent, the prejudice that weighs so heavily on his race. All this was long ago. He has preached his last sermon, and is, I doubt not, restfully awaiting the resurrection of the just.

Punctual to the hour, brother Anderson came rolling across the street, and up to the door, and we went in together. After the usual songs and prayer, I took for my text Paul's counsel to the Corinthians as to their disorderly meetings and meaningless noises. The sermon was in the main, a reading of the fourteenth chapter and applications interspersed. I spoke of Paul's first letter, with comment for half an hour, and while showing consideration for the noisy ways of my audience, exhorted them to cultivate intelligence as well as passion.

"When you feel the glory of God in you, let it out, of course. Shout Glory, clap your hands, and all that. But stop now and then, and let some wise elder stand up and tell you what it all means. Men and boys hang around your windows, and laugh at you and your religion, because they don't understand yo[illegible] Some men have religion all i[illegible] head—clear, sharp, dry and dead. Others all in the heart. Now, I want you to have religion in your heads and hearts. Let all things be done decently and in order."

I was well satisfied with my effort; at the time it seemed a success. As I sat down brother Anderson got up and stood on the pulpit-steps to give out a hymn. I am not certain that he could read, for he stood book in hand, and seemingly from memory gave the number of the hymn, and repeated the first two stanzas with deep and glowing feeling. Of the third he read three lines stopped, and after swallowing one or two chokes, went on to say; "I love Brodder Beecher. I love to hear dis afternoon. He's told us a good many things. He's our good fr'en. An' he sez, sez he, dat some folks goes up to glory noisy'n shoutin,' and some goes still-like, 'z if they's 'shame of wat's in 'em. An' he sez we'd better be like de still kind, on' de white folks will like us more. An den I thinks 'tain't much' count no way, wedder we go up still-like, or shoutin,' 'cause heaven's a mighty big place, brudders; an' when we all goes marchin' up to see de Lord, an' I's so full ob de lub, an' de joy, an, de glory, dat I mus clap my han's an' shout, de good Lord's got some place whar we won't 'starb nobody and we can shout. Glory! Glory! Bless de Lord! I'm safe I'm safe in de glory at las.' I tell you brodders an' sisters, dat heaven's a mighty big place, an' dar's room for Brudder Beecher, an' us too."

"Dat's so! Bless de Lord! Amen! Glory! (From the people).

"An' Brodder Beecher sez dat 'tisnt' de folks as makes de mos' noise dat does de mos' work. He sez de ingins on de railroad only puff—puff—puff—reg'lar breathin-like, when dey's at work haulin' de big loads, an' dat de bells and de whistles don' do no work; dey only make a noise; guess dat's so. I don't know 'bout ingins much, and I don't know wedder I's a puff-puff ingin' or wedder I blow de whistle and ring de bell. I feels like bofe[with a chuckle] sometimes. An' I tell you what wen de fire is burnin,' an' I gets de steam up, don't dribe no cattle on de track; de ingin's comin'! Cl'ar de track!" [This with a voice that shook the little house, and a "magnatism" that thrilled and fixed me. Of course, his hearers were by this time swaying, shouting, and amening splendidly].

An de boys an' gals an' de clarks an' young lawyers, dey come up yar watch-night, an' Brodder Beecher sez, "why don't we stop de noise now'n den, an' go out an tell 'em 'bout it—'splain it to 'em." An' I members wot de Bible says 'bout de outer darkness, an' de weepin' an' de wailin,' an' de gnashin' ob de teeth. An' if dese boys an' gals stan' dar outside a lafin,' bimby dey'll come to de wailn' de weepin,' an' fus dey know. An' den wen dey stan' roun' de great temple ob de Lord an' see de glory shinin' out, an' de harpers harpin' an' all de music, an' de elders blowin,' an' all de shoutin' like many waters, an' all de saints a singin' 'Glory to de Lam'!' 'spose God'll say, 'Stop dat noise dar, Gabriel! You Gabriel, go out an' splain!'

"Yes, I see dem stan' las' winter roun' de doors an' under de windows an' laff; an dey peek in an' laff. An' I 'member wot I saw las' summer 'mong de bees. Some ob de hives was nice, an' clean, an' still, like 'spectable meetin's, an' de odders was a bustin' wid honey; an' de bees kep' a goin' an' comin' in de clover; an' dey jes kep' on a fillin' up honey dat was a flowin' like de lan' ob Canaan. An' I saw 'roun' de hives was de ants an' de worms, an' de great drones, an' black bugs, dey keep on de outside. Dey wasn't bees. Dey couldn't fly to de clover an' de honeysuckle. Dey jes hung 'roun' de bustlin' hive, an' live on de drippin's.

"An' de boys an' gals come up yar, an' hang 'roun.' Jes come in, an' we'll show you how de gospel bees do. Come in, an' we'll lead you to de clover! Come in,—we'll make your wings grow. Come in! won't ye? Well, den, poor 'tings, let 'em stan' 'roun' de outside, an' hab de drippin's. We's got honey in dis hive."

Raising the hymn-book, and with tender voice, he took up the stnza just where he had left it—

"Part of 'e hos' av cross 'er flood,
An' part are crossin' now."

"Sing, brudders," said he; and to his "lining out" they sang the whole hymn as only such as they can sing.

All this was ten or twelve years ago. I remember that while he was speaking my sermon seemed to shrink and fade. And now as I recall the scene, and recall his words but in part, I am feeling the power of his truth. Heaven's a mighty big place. The Father's house hath many homes, and places prepared for many.

Was he dreaming of these as he went about our streets with tub and brushes to whiten and sweeten the homes of men? Did he wear his rags contentedly, mindful of his robes shining and exceeding white as snow? In that day when those that are last shall be first, few will look down to find Brother Anderson.—T. K. Beecher.

"WHO ever heard of a man being disciplined for covetonsness?" asks Dr. John Hall. "For other sins," he says "men are cast out of the church; but in this sin, which the Bible calls idolatry, they live and die without one honest rebuke."

WHEN we borrow trouble, God always lets our notes go to protest.

WHEN you bury animosity, never mind putting up a tombstone.

Our Young Folks.

Out in the Street.

Out on the street, in the cold and the sleet,
Poor little children are straying,
With shivering forms that no bright fire warms
And cheeks where no roses are playing;
Pass them not by with a cold, careless eye,
A smile or kind word may awaken
One ray of delight in the sad murky night
Of the little ones, homeless, forsaken.

Out on the street with their bare little feet,
And eyes with a look of sad yearning,
No friend and no bread, no homes and no bed,
No mother to wait their returning.
Are there no homes for the poor little ones,
Lambs of Christ fainting with sorrow,
Christians who pray Give us bread day by day,
You may save them from sinning to-morrow.

Out on the street wealth and poverty meet,
Tatters, and velvet, and jewel;
Oh! Christian ne'er turn from the toilers who earn
Scarce a pittance of cheap bread and fuel
Give him your hand and help him to stand,
He's a man with a soul like another,
You may tremble one day when you hear the Judge say,
Man, what has thou done with thy, brother?

—Mrs. J. E. Akers.

I Forgot.

"James, have you seen the hatchet?" asked Mr. Carter, coming into the room where the children were studying their lessons.

"O father, I left it out on the bench, yesterday. I forgot to bring it in."

"And it rained all night," said his father. "Will you ever learn to remember, James?"

"Jim would lose his head if it wasn't fast to his shoulders," said Tom, laughing. "Shall I get you my hatchet, father? I manage to keep it since I stopped lending it to James the Forgetful."

"James, did you post the letter I gave you this morning?" asked his mother, looking up from her sewing, at this moment.

"O mamma, I met George Hayes, and he took me to see his new squirrel, and—"

"You forgot the letter. Well, my son, you will have to bear the penalty of your carelessness this time yourself. Your Uncle Will wrote to invite you to spend your birthday with him, and was to meet you at the station. The letter you forgot was an acceptance of the invitation, but it is too late now to send it."

"O mamma, why did you not tell me?"

"Because I wish if possible to have you remember such errands as a duty to me, not a pleasure to be gained for yourself."

James looked very blue for a moment, then he looked up bravely crushing back his tears.

"I will try to remember after this. I will scour up the hatchet, father, and I must try to have a good time at home on my birthday."

But his voice quivered a little here, for a day at Uncle Will's was a pleasure not easily given up. Uncle Will lived in the city, and was very apt to find time to visit the museum or give some equally rare treat to his little country relatives when they came to visit him.

For some weeks after this sharp lesson, James Carter tried so hard to overcome his great fault of forgetfulness that his parents began to hope he was learning to remember such directions as they gave him, and the little habits of carefulness that make up so much of the comfort of a family. His books were found in their proper place, his hat hung upon its own peg, and his share of choring was performed at the regular time. But, little by little, the old habit returned, at first in trifling matters, but gradually extending, as before, to errands of importance, or neglect of imperative duties.

"I forgot," was heard again, as before, as the excuse for neglect and inattention, till it really seemed as if the bad habit had become second nature.

But there came one day in the boy's life when "I forgot" brought him such terror and sorrow that it passed his lips then for the last time.

Mr. and Mrs. Carter, the parents of the lad whose story I am writing, had several children, but the darling and pet of the nursery flock was little May, three year old baby, with golden curls and blue eyes, that her brothers thought must look just as those of the angels did. She was the baby, and the only girl in six children; so she was a perfect little queen among them.

The beautiful autumn days had come, and one Saturday, when the children had a half holiday, a sharp frost gave promise of nutting in the woods, nearly a mile from home. Great preparations were made for a day of pleasure, and baby May seeing the excitement, put up a very pitiful face, and begged to go along with the boys.

"Oh let her go, mamma. We will carry her if she is tired," said James.

Mamma hesitated a little, but finally consented, saying:

"Remember, James, you are the oldest, and I give her in your special charge."

"I will be very careful," he promised, thinking he could never neglect his precious little sister. They were a merry party, and the afternoon passed quickly. James, who soon tired of actual nutting, took May by the hand and wandered away from the others to see if a little water wheel he had built in the summer on the brook was still in existence. Putting the child in a safe place upon a fallen log, he went down a narrow path to the water. As he left the woods he met a party of his schoolmates, who were going to play foot-ball in a field near by, and who called him to join them. For a moment he hesitated, then he thought May was safe, and one game, just one, would not take long, and he yielded to the temptation.

But one game was sufficient to drive the memory of the grave charge he held from the careless boy's mind, and it was nearly dusk when a sudden sharp recollection sent him flying across the field toward the woods.

"I forgot May!" he shouted in answer to the calls of his companions.

Back with rapid steps he rushed to the place where he had left his little sister. She was not there! With loud clear voice James called again and again, searching eagerly in every direction.

"O!" he cried in an agony of fear, "O! Heavenly Father, let me find her."

As if in answer to his prayer, he heard a faint, sobbing moan, not far from him, and following the sound, found a sight he never forgot. Upon the ground, at the foot of a small but steep hill, lay his little sister, moaning and partly unconscious, having evidently fallen while running about, probably afraid of the loneliness. Her head had struck a piece of stone, and the long golden curls were stained with blood from a deep gash. Sick with misery and remorse, James lifted the child and carried her home, praying as he had never prayed in his life for the life he had periled by his culpable neglect. There were long days when the little one lay moaning and tossing in delirious fever, when the doctor spoke but few words of encouragement, when father and mother scarcely left the side of the little crib—days that seemed years in length to James, who could neither study nor play, and whose prayers came from a heart full of sorrow and repentance. But God spared the boy the misery of causing the death of his little sister. Slowly the fever left the little wasted figure, and the blue eyes grew calm again, and one day the boy's heart filled with thankful joy when the baby voice called:

"Dear Jimmy, come play with May."

Grateful tears filled Jimmy's eyes, as he kissed the pale little face, and noted the scar on the white forehead, that must ever remind him of the danger May had passed through. But never again did any one hear James say "I forgot."—Methodist.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, January 28, 1873.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.
Sent Three Months on trial for Thirty-five cents.

The officers of the Association are as follows
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON,
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD,
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK,
Treasurer—AMBROSE W. TUCKER.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS,
A. S. CALKINS.
EDITORIAL COMMITTEE
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH,
A. B. BABCOCK.
BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES

☞ Address all communications to Wm. L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago, and

☞ Make all Postal Orders and Drafts payable to him, and always state the amount of money enclosed plainly at the head of the letter

☞ Give your Post Office address in full in every letter

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions

Business Department.

Norwegian Tract.

Br. Wellcome's Norwegian Tract is at the stereotyping foundry, and will be issued soon.

The "Times" to Ministers.

We send THE TIMES to ministers of any denomination for one dollar a year—half price. Those who wish to send the paper to preachers can take advantage of this fact.

THE WESTERN RURAL.—To any one paying us $3.50, we will send the Western Rural, the popular and excellent Rural and Family Weekly of the West for one year, and credit one year's subscription paid to our own paper. The Western Rural, alone, is worth $2.50 per year, and every family in the West ought to have it. [tf

Back Numbers.

We find that from this date we shall be unable to furnish new subscribers with back numbers except those since Jan 14. We supposed a sufficient number were printed to supply the demand in this direction. However, we have as good things coming for new subscribers as any we have furnished in the past. Send in the names.

To Correspondents.

H. GUERNSEY. Be faithful and hold fast to the end "To patient faith the prize (eternal life) is sure." M. M. MAXWELL. It is good to trust in God in sickness, and every sick day makes more precious the promise of the land where the inhabitant shall not say 'I am sick.' We have not seen the book you refer to.....G WRIGHT. Smith's Dictionaries are as highly esteemed as any that are published. We presume it could be obtained in this city. Do not know the price. Lempriere's is a standard classical dictionary. W. KELLAWAY. Attended to items of business with Banner and Crisis as requested.....J. C. POST. We have requested sample copies direct to you from the publishers of the Interior, and ordered a copy of the Interlinear Translation for you

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

A A Johnson
A F Moore
W H Moseley
J N Washburn
J B Parkin
S A Smart
H Gurnsey
G W Nafe
J S Patterson
W G Boltze
A Trowbridge
W Tomlinson
J Myers
S B White
W G Morris
S Q Ketchum
B H Osborn
F S G Watson
F Broom
S Ramer
J Hair
G W DeLong
H M Rinehurst
G W Greezing
T Virgin
N J Winchell
A Organ
H Boon
S Thayer
J Anderson
W S Drummond
D Kesler
W J Bursell
S Case
P Mitson,
J Fisher
V Hunt
M McCrady
D A Dickenson
H Lewis
E R Jeffrey
A Adams
H A Flank
H M Bronson
M Briggs
S Houghton
S B Miller
L F Cole
E W Tartt
G L Rhinehurst
D D Chaffee
M Towsley
J F Bishop
J F Huber
A Bault
J Black
J C Weltner
L F Field
W Snyder
G W DeLong
S Baldwin
C Harrington
F Fisher
C M Shepard
W H Connell
F M Grinnell
L T Cunningham
W Baird
Thos C Baker
J S Ames
P Koller
J W Trowsdale
L H Vroman
N S Hendrix
S D Townsend
A M Corbit
J W Whiting
A Churchill
J C Smith
T S Thomasson
J H Lane
J H Hiltner
D I Williams
D C Brown
O F Ross
A B Fox
C Sage
N Guthrie
B F Byers
F E Hawes
A Farrow
J M Michael
C Palmer
G Howard
M M Emmons
A Slocum
F A Cummings
E Polly
W Fraser
W S Thomasson
D Q Kent
A Adams
J Anderson
W S Drummond
K Feinogle
H Brown
S Ramer
J B Lawyer
A Trowbridge
W G Boutse
G Robinson
L Coppersmith

Books and Tracts sent by Mail.

E A Bowe
D Cripe
G B Hurlburt
S P Forney
W F Talley
C W Lincoln
J W Cowles
C F Benton
J L Russell
E V Philip
S W Bird
J Laton
E Cheney
C A Wiles
M Newberry
S Nye
D A Steele
W H Mills
W H Jarvis
D K Drenkel
C W Turner
J H Stanwood
S Carlisle
O Combs
J H Mills
D C Baker
N W Spencer
J G Rogers
J F Bishop
C W Barninger
D C Williams
M Puterbaugh
E E Sturgeon
A Cryar
J C Wright
W J Griffin
W Johnston
S Marshall
T Smith
A D Hearn
R Bruckler
W Colby
P Wooden
E E B Curtis
S Pope
H W Kuhle
I Day
M [illegible] Biery
O Field
P C Marsh
J Hamilton
G W Turner
E Dale
D D Chaffee
S J Morgan
J F Huber
R O Livingston
A Mozingo
J Black
J A Pease
G W DeLong
S Baldwin
G L Rhinehard
J Luttrell 3
J B Parkin
W H Moseley
W Baird
L Kerr
J A Smith
M E Niles
J Griffith
P Holler

Publishing Fund.

G W Whiting $10.00; H. M. Benson's little girls 1.00.

Obituary.

BISHOP—In Riggsville, Ark., Nov. 8, 1872, Mary A. Bishop, aged 31 years; and, Dec. 5, her infant son, aged 1 month.

She fell on sleep in Christ fully in the faith and hope of the Lord's speedy coming; and she will soon awake and come forth in the resurrection. She was a faithful mother and wife, and leaves six children, with her husband, Br. Thomas J. Bishop, an Advent believer and preacher. One after another falls under the hand of the enemy. But they fall only to rise again. I put up with this family in my last visit in Arkansas. Our next meeting will be in the "new earth." J. V. H.

HERR—Our beloved brother, M. Herr, died very suddenly of apoplexy, in Philadelphia, Penn., Dec. 12, 1872, aged 66 years.

How sad we were made on Friday evening, Dec. 13, just as we closed our meeting at Branch Chapel, Boston, as the messenger brought the dispatch containing the above announcement, and summoning me thence to help bury the dead. Dr. Herr was born in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. His residence for many years was Baltimore, Md., where he did an extensive commercial business, with a branch house in New York, also one in Cincinnati. He was Director of the Northern Central R. R. for years, and a large owner in the road.

Notwithstanding the great business connections which charged his noble mind, he had plenty of room for the Savior, the Lord Jesus, whom he loved and honored. He was for many years connected with the Methodists, but liberal, kind, and loving to all God's people of every name. Wherever his business called him, in large cities, the wilderness, the Rocky Mountains, or the plain, he manifested his love for Christ, and honored his name. He lived to bless others. His great heart was ever true to the cries of the poor and unfortunate. His hand was ever stretched out to the needy. His daily petitions to Heaven embraced all mankind, and his memory will remain green in many hearts, and many who have enjoyed his benefactions will ever call him blessed.

In October, 1870, he visited the tent "Evangelist," in company with his dear wife, while it was pitched on Fifteenth and Coates streets, Philadelphia, and embraced the glorious news of Jesus' soon coming and kingdom, and with many others renewed his covenant with God, and was greatly blessed. He united with the Evangelist Christian church, which organized the following spring. The blessed hope of soon seeing "the King in his beauty," the resurrection of the dead, the "new heavens and the new earth," cheered and gladdened his pilgrim heart. Often he would exultingly say, "I shall live in Paradise restored."

He had a premonition of his death, and made arrangements for his burial, and left full directions, and a clear account of all business matters, written out by his own hand, that his wife in her feeble health should have no trouble. The night previous to his death, when he arose from prayer, he exclaimed, "He doeth all things well." He passed away without a struggle or a groan, with a heavenly smile, and while gazing on his dear wife he fell on sleep. Yes, he sleeps

"In Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep."

Words of comfort were spoken to the mourning relatives and friends of the deceased by the writer, on Sunday, the 15th.

"May we meet beyond the river,
We who linger breast the waves;
Greet him in that glad forever,
Where is found no place of graves."

JOHN G. HOOK.

Book Notices, Etc.

GOLDEN HOURS, by Hitchcock & Walden, of Cincinnati, O., is commended as one of the very best periodicals for children. It is a monthly magazine of 48 large octavo pages, with illustrations. $1 a year.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE is invaluable to American readers as a thorough compilation of a generally inaccessible but indispensable current literature;—generally inaccessible because of its great bulk and cost; indispensable because it embraces the productions of the ablest living writers in science, fiction, poetry, history, biography, politics, theology, philosophy, criticism and art. Among the numerous important articles that have appeared in the numbers of this magazine for the last few weeks, may be mentioned the following: On Mind and Will in Nature, by Dr. Carpenter, F. R. S.; The Chasm between Theology and Physical Studies; Origin and Growth of Romanesque Architecture, by Edward A. Freeman; New England Puritan Literature; Immortality; The Consciousness of Dogs; The Last Eruption of Vesuvius; Of Growing Old; etc.

THE Bee Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, for 1873, comes to us with a new and attractive heading, its name changed to "National Agriculturist and Bee Journal," and the paper enlarged to sixteen quarto pages. It is devoted to Agriculture, Horticulture, Apiculture, The Youth, The Family and every interest of ruralists of whatever occupation. It is handsomely illustrated in all its departments and full of practical interest. $1.50 per year, with a splendid Chromo free. Sample with terms to agents, free. Address H. A. King & Co., 14 Murray St., New York.

THE Ladies' Repository for 1873. The thirty-third volume of this long established religious and family magazine, which has won for itself the appropriate title of Queen of Monthlies, commences with January, 1873. Only $3.50 per annum. Each number of this splendid journal contains eighty superroyal octavo pages, double columns. It is printed on the finest calendered paper, and each month is embellished with two original Steel Engravings, executed in the best style of the art. For amount and quality of reading matter, for mechanical execution and illustrations, the Ladies' Repository will compare favorably with any other magazine published in the country.

The publishers propose the widest range and the greatest variety possible in the literary matter of the pages of this popular magazine: Essays, Disquisitions, Tales and Adventures from Real Life, Biographical and Literary Sketches, Poems, and Papers on subjects of practical value. The grave questions of Science, History, and Religion will not be avoided, but will be discussed as fully as their importance demands and as our space will admit of. The constant aim will be to produce a magazine that shall meet all the literary wants of all the members of the Christian family, and especially a journal that every lady of intelligence, culture, and with a taste for reading, will regard a welcome visitor.

$3.50 per year, in advance; $1.75 for six months, in advance. Subscription to begin either with January or July. Remit by postal money order, draft, or express. Address HITCHCOCK & WALDEN, Publishers, Cincinnati, Chicago, or St. Louis.

The Times.

AT HOME.

.... The snow storm of Thursday and Friday of last week was one of the most severe upon record in this vicinity. Indeed, nothing like it has occurred in Chicago. The streets were quite deserted. Railway travel was nearly suspended, except as snow shovelers or plows propelled by two or more engines slowly cleared the tracks. The fall of snow was heavy, and it drifted badly. The railways are suffering an exceedingly unfavorable winter for their interests.

.... Minnesota and Northern Iowa were of late the scene of a storm graphically described as a polar huricane. A heavy snow storm accompanied with severe cold swept over the region indicated at a speed of nearly thirty miles an hour. The snow drifted to an immense depth; in some cases horses were buried out of sight. Travel was thus impeded and many hapless travelers, caught in the storm, blinded and bewildered lay down to die, or perished in vain attempts to reach home or some shelter. Some dug holes in the snow, in which they survived the storm, but were more or less seriously frozen. In all not less than one hunred deaths are reported in different parts of Minesota. "The Minnesota Horror," of the winter of '72-3 will not be soon or easily forgotten.

.... Our telegraphic columns continue day after day to record deeds of violence and murder illustrating in a startling manner the audacity crime is assuming among us. In the same way slanders and libels on private character are becoming so frequent, and are so seldom visited with punishment, and are getting to be so familiar with the public, that the impunity of moral assassination is a feature of the day only less alarming than that of actual murder. It is evident that some cure must be found, and that quickly, for this evil of lawlessness, of habitude to and carelessness regarding crime, must be eradicated by some means. Prompt and stern punishment is imperatively called for, and nothing should be suffered to turn aside the sword of justice. —Inter-Ocean.

.... A New York dispatch says that the murderers in the Tombs are very busy consulting with their lawyers, fearing now that hanging is about to break out in New York as an epidemic. Stokes thinks it very hard fortune that his case should be successively abandoned by Graham, McKeon, and Tremaine. Foster's case will come before the Court of Appeals next Monday. In the cases of Sharkey, Scannel, and King true bills have been found by the Grand Jury. Sharkey will be tried in the Court of General Sessions and King and Scannel in the Oyer and Terminer, as soon as the Tweed trial is over. In the matter of Blakely, who killed his depraved niece, the papers have not gone before the Grand Jury. Rozenweig and Hickey will have each a new trial, the first in the Supreme Court, the other in the General Sessions. In regard to Simmons, an inquest has yet to be held. The defense of Scannel will be conducted by Mr. Tremaine. [Since the above was put in type, Foster has been sentenced to be hanged March 7, 1873.]

ABROAD.

.... The great Italian volcano is giving forth symptoms of another grand eruption. Already there have been several small eruptions, recently, causing alarm in the vicinity.

.... On the night of the 22d an emigrant ship was run down in the English channel by an unknown steamship, which inhumanly kept on her way, paying no attention to the disabled vessel she had wrecked. Out of 462 persons on the emigrant ship over three hundred souls perished in a watery grave. How true that

"Man's inhumanity to man
Makes countless thousands mourn."

The heart sickens and grows faint at the exhibition of such heartlessness. It is quite incomprehensible. Later intelligence is to the effect that both vessels were wreked by the collision.

.... The Odessa Messenger relates that the authorities of that town are on the track of a painful judicial error committed eleven years ago. At that date a murder was perpetrated on the person of Madame Deudovitch, wife of a general, and suspicion fell on the lover of the victim's maid servant, a man named Kisslevitch. This person was tried by court martial, condemned and shot. It now appears that the real murderer of the lady has been recently discovered, and has confessed his crime.

.... England has at last boldly faced Russia in her Asiatic operations, and flatly objects to the further Russification of Asia, at least in the direction of India. Whether Russia is any temper to quietly submit to a check upon her schemes of aggrandisement, remains to be seen. Just now things look as if there might be another chance for another national arbitration case, though it is extremely doubtful whether the Eastern Question in this new form will be settled without an appeal to arms.

.... The proverbial loveliness (!) of the English climate is represented to have reached its acme during the last months of the year which has just expired. At London the weather was so wretched that its people were seriously tempted to jump from Waterloo bridge into the Thames. The only thing that prevented them from a wholesale suicide was the unsavory appearance of the river, which looked dirtier and blacker than ever. Whether the sun existed and what he was like nobody in England seemed able to tell. When a newspaper correspondent, therefore, perpetrated the joke of declaring in a solemn manner and in scientifically dressed phrases, that the sun had for some time emitted a blue light, and that Professor So-and-so had explained this phenomenon by the infusion of a large quantity of magnesium, calcium, etc., into the solar photosphere, the hoax was received as a gospel truth.

.... Russia has sent an army across the borders of her possessions in Asia into Turkestan, to punish the Khan of Khiva, the ruler of that country, for having sold Russian subjects into slavery. England protests, suspecting Russia's designs, and there is serious danger that the controversy will result in a war between Russia and England. The latter power is apprehensive of her interests in that region, Hindoostan and her other East Indian colonies lying adjacent to Turkestan. It is also suspected in British political circles that Russia's ulterior design is really upon Turkey and the control of the commerce of the Mediterranean seas, which of course Great Britain would not quietly submit to. Late dispatches announce that Russia, in order to quiet British fears as to her intentions now proposes to give certain guaranties and to establish in Afghanistan a "neutral zone" between her anticipated conquered province and the British East Indian possessions. We would not be surprised to learn of the breaking out of a war between Russia and England as the result of the pending controversy.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

The first Q. M. of Neponset District is called to meet with the church in Oneida, eve. Feb. 6, continuing over the following Sunday. Br. C. C. Marston is expected to be with us. Let us see a good representation at this meeting from all parts of the district. Rally, brethren—time is short! L. F. COLE, Sec'y.

Creston, eve. Feb. 3 and 4. C. C. MARSTON.

Ackerman's S. H., 11 a. m. Feb. 2.
White Rock, Union Chapel, 2½ p. m. same day.
Rochelle, Ogle Co., eve. of same day.
New Rutland, Feb. 10-21 and longer as the Lord may direct. C. C. MARSTON.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.
Preaching in Advent Mission Hall, 619 West Lake Street, every Sunday 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening D. R. & M. S. MANSFIELD.

Genoa, Oct. 27, and every other Sabbath until further notice. E. H. BURINGTON.

Forreston, Jan 23, '74. C. C. MARSTON.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.
Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.
Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co., at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.
Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Wiley S. H., Union Town, 3 p. m. July 21, and every four weeks until further notice
Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S H 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.
Round Grove, 10½ a. m. August 4, and every four weeks. ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Nov. 10, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.
Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Nov. 17, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

Amboy, Lee Co., preaching the second and fourth Sundays of each month.
C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

MICHIGAN.

The next Q. M. of the Northern District of Michigan will be held with the church in Hesperia, Friday, Feb. 14, and over Sunday. Let there be a general rally. Bring your tithes and offerings into the store-house and obtain the blessing. E. B. SCOTT, Sec'y.

To the churches in Branch County, Michigan, I would say that my appointments for the year 1873 will be as follows:
East Gilead, Jan. 5, 10 a. m., and every two weeks after.
California, Jan. 12, 10:30 a m and every two weeks after.
Algansee, every Sunday 2:30 p m and evening. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening.
J. R. PRESTON, Pastor.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.
Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

The third Q. M. of the Southern District will be held in Rives, Jackson Co., commencing Thursday, Feb. 13, and continue over Lord's Day. A full representation is desired, and we trust that all our preaching brethren will be present. We cordially invite all who can, to come filled with the Spirit, and to work for the salvation of the perishing. C. FOX, Sec'y.

Lexington Lake Shore Advent Chapel, 3 miles north of village, Sabbath, Jan. 26, at 3 p. m., and every two weeks after.
Lexington Ridge, White S. H., Feb. 2, at 3 p. m., and every two weeks after.
Marlette, Advent Chapel, Tuesday and Wednesday eve. Feb. 11 and 12, at 7 p. m., and every 4 weeks till further notice.
GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

Elk Corner, Vancamp's Hall, Thursday eve. Feb. 13.
Fremont, Red S. H., eve., Friday, Feb. 14.
Port Hope, eve. Tuesday and Wednesday, Feb. 18 and 19, as Br. Durand may arrange.
Port Crescent, Sabbath, 11 a. m. and 7 p. m., as Mr. Daniel Day may arrange, Feb. 23.
GEO. WRIGHT.

The third Q. M. of the Eastern District of the A. C. Conference of Michigan will be held with the A. C. church of Marlette, Sanilac Co., commencing at 2 p. m., Thursday, March 6, and continuing over Sunday.
Brethren come, as far as possible, and come to work. We earnestly hope this church will be prayerfully remembered, and the quarterly gathering will be a great blessing to them. They have a good and comfortable chapel, and we have reason to believe the brethren at Marlette will cordially greet all who may attend.
JOHN H. PATON, Sec'y

INDIANA.

A Q. M. of the Northern District of the Indiana Conference will be held with the church at Sumption's Prairie, commencing [illegible]day eve., Jan. 24, and continuing as the int[illegible] seem to justify. The lovers of Jesus a[illegible] to attend. There will be teams at the Niles and South Bend R. R. morning trains on Friday, the 24th, and also at the day trains of the Michigan Southern R. R., and also the Peninsular day trains on Friday, to take all that come to the meeting.
E. C. ANDRUS.

WISCONSIN

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.
Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.
A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

Celaburgh, eve. Feb. 1, and once in four weeks.
Norris S. H., 11 a. m., Feb. 2, and once in four weeks.
Pine River, eve. Feb. 2, and once in four weeks.
ANSON BROWN.

Mazomanie, Dane Co., Tuesday eve. Feb. 4, and onward as the interest may demand. Philo Hitchcock and M. D. Peavey will be present to help. We hope to see the friends from Arena and Cassell's Prairie to help plant the truth in this new field. BYRON MEIGS.

The third Q. M. of the Western District will be held with the church, at Gilmanton, Buffalo Co., Friday eve., Feb. 7, and hold over Lord's day. All the friends of Jesus are requested to make this meeting a special subject of prayer, that God may make his power known at that time in strengthening believers and converting sinners. Why should we not expect it? God is unchangeable. He gave his Son to save the perishing, and will he not hear prayer to that end? Let us not be straitened in ourselves. God will hear prayer. P. W. HOUGH.

LaCrosse, corner of Main and Sixth Streets, Dec. 1, and once in two weeks. JOB BROWN.

MINNESOTA.

Ridgeway, Feb. 8 and 9, and once in four weeks.
P. MITSON.

West St. Paul, as Br. Libby may appoint, Saturday eve. and Sunday, Feb. 1 and 2.
Annual Conference, Monticello, Feb. 5 and over Sabbath.
Eagle Lake, Byers S. H., Thursday eve., Feb. 13.
Winnebago Agency, New S. H., Friday eve., Feb. 14.
Medo, Western S. H., Saturday eve., Feb. 15.
Medo, at Br. Bates' house, 2:30 and 7 p. m., Sunday, Feb. 16.
Owatonna, Fitzsimmons S. H., Tuesday and Wednesday eve., 7 o'clock, Feb. 18 and 19.
S. C. WELLCOME.

The Annual Meeting of the Minnesota A. C. Conference (the eleventh) will be held in Monticello, commencing Wednesday eve., Feb. 5, and hold over Lord's day.
Churches throughout the Conference are requested to report by delegate or by letter. All ministers of the Conference are requested to attend personally, as business of importance will be transacted.
Church officers will please forward to the Conference Treasurer (L. C. Collins, Monticello,) the contents of the Mission Boxes, and collections from other sources for the Conference.
Churches reporting will direct to the Secretary at Monticello, Wright Co., Minn.
S. C. WELLCOME, Sec'y.
GEO. W. MILLER, Pres't.

IOWA.

Masonville, Wednesday eve., Jan. 22, and over the following Sabbath.
Greeley, Tuesday eve., Feb. 4.
Odel S. H., Wednesday eve., Feb. 5.
Elk Creek, Thursday eve., Feb. 6, and over the following Sabbath. J. RIDLEY.

We, the undersigned, members of various churches of the Iowa Christian and the Iowa Advent Christian Conferences, realizing the obligations we are under to God and his truth and his people, and realizing, too, that in our present divided condition we cannot possibly accomplish as much good as we might if all the elements among us were heartily united in concerted action and with undivided front, do hereby propose and call a convention, to be composed of two delegates from each church, to convene in the city of Manchester, April 15, to take into consideration the matters which now divide us, with a view to an arrangement which shall once more unite us in a single, undivided conference organization.
Signed:—T. E. Cook, J. Ingalls, J. Gildersleeve, Dr. Banton, and many others.

Preaching in Thompson's Hall, Delmar, Clinton Co., Jan. 5, and every two weeks until further notice. C. W. PITCHER.

Manchester, the first and third Sabbaths of each month, at 2 and 7 p. m.
J. RIDLEY, Pastor.

KANSAS.

The Kansas Advent Christian Mission Association will hold its annual session at Bero, Cherokee Co., Feb. 10. Officers for the ensuing year are to be chosen, and other business of importance transacted. A general attendance is desired. T. BOZLEY, Sec'y.
H. J. MUNSON, Pres't.

ARKANSAS.

The first Q. M. of the Batesville District will be held at Matthew's S. H., Saturday, Feb. 1, and continue over Sunday. S. ROSENBAUGH.

The first Q. M. for the Blue Mountain District will be held at the Turkey Creek Meeting House, Richwood Township, Saturday, March 1, and continue over Sunday. J. B. BROWN.

NEW YORK.

Elmira, Feb. 10. JOHN T. ONGLEY.

PENNSYLVANIA.

East Troy, Bradford Co., Feb. 6, 7.
South Creek, Bradford Co., Feb. 9.
JOHN T. ONGLEY.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Bleury St.
JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y. 357, St. Joseph St.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.---NO. 27. CHICAGO, FEBRUARY 4, 1873. WHOLE NO. 458.

Advent Christian Times.

Contents of This Number.

First Page.

The State of the Dead, C. C. Marston; The Coming Glory.

Second Page

Over and Over Again, (poetry); We Shall See Them Soon, (poetry); The Life of a Justified Man, (second article); The Judgment at Hand, (second article) E. C. Brunaugh; The Adventist Leader in Futurism.

Third Page.

Where is the Promised Kingdom of God? Plato's Psychology, A. Armour; Church Discord, M. D. Peavy; The London Times and Spiritism.

Fourth Page.

Brief Editorials; Bringing Things Home; "More Beyond;" Infidelity Seeking Light; "What Do ye More than Others?"

Fifth Page.

Responsibility; Is Dr. True Mistaken? Editor's Drawer; Editorial Gleanings; News.

Sixth Page.

"Whiter than Snow," (poetry); "Any of You;" Unsuitable Apparel; The Narrow Way; From Our English Correspondent; Letters from L. Kerr and P. Mitson.

Seventh Page.

Letters from A. J. Winter, J. B. Dillier, T. W. Raymond, Wm. McCullock, L. W. Wood, H. M. Benson, F. J. Houghton, and Mary F. Bishop; "Whosoever," (poetry); A Letter; Willie's Home

Eighth Page.

Business Department; Obituaries; Notices; Appointments; Marriages; Advertisements.

The State of the Dead.

Dr. H. Mattison says:

> "We talk of the death of man, because we see the 'earthly house' dissolve, but it is only an illusion.
>
> "'There is no death; what seems such is transition.'
>
> 'The body dies, but the soul survives death ....The sainted dead are already before the throne, and serve God day and night in his temple; and when Christ shall appear in the clouds of heaven to raise the dead, and burn the world, and judge all men and angels, these 'saints' shall attend him down his starry pathway, to re-enter their bodies, now made incorruptible and glorious, and for the redemption of which they have so long waited."

In contrast with the above let us read the following from an inspired witness on the same subject:

> For there is hope of a tree, if it be cut down, that it will sprout again, and that the tender branch thereof will not cease. Though the root thereof wax old in the earth, and the stock thereof die in the ground, yet through the scent of water it will bud, and bring forth boughs like a plant
>
> But man dieth and wasteth away; yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he? As the waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth and dryeth up; so man lieth down, and riseth not; till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep.
>
> Oh, that thou wouldst hide me in the grave that thou wouldst keep me secret, until thy wrath be past, that thou wouldst appoint me a set time, and remember me! If a man die, shall he live again? all the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come, Thou shalt call and I will answer thee; thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hands. (Job 14:7-15)

There was never a more striking contrast. One witness says "there is no death," the other affirming that "man dieth and wasteth away." One or the other of these witnesses must be wrong. Which one shall we believe, Job or Mattison? Let the candid believer in the Scriptures decide which is the preferable authority on this subject.

We will do well to give a little careful attention to Job's argument in this connection. He introduces the figure of the tree; if it be cut down and the body of the tree even destroyed, the roots still remaining in the ground, through the scent of water they may spring up and another tree be produced from the roots of the old one. Certainly this is a perfect representation of Dr. Mattison's condition of the dead. Death makes a wonderful effort to destroy man, but fails in the attempt, and only, at most, destroys the house in which man lives, while the soul, corresponding very beautifully with the root of the tree in Job's illustration, does not die but assumes another form and lives right on without interruption. Job's illustration and Mattison's statement are therefore in perfect harmony. But let us read the next verse:

"But man dieth and wasteth away; yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he?"

With a tree it is as he has before explained, but with man death takes an entirely different course—"but MAN dieth." The tree lives; but man dies. What could be plainer, simpler, and more in harmony with reason, nature, and facts?

Dr. Clarke says truly in his comments on this: "No human being ever can spring from the dead body of man, that wasteth away, corrupts, and is dissolved; for the man dies; and when he breathes out his last breath and his body is reduced to dust, then, where is he?"

Albert Barnes says to the same effect: "Other things that are cut down, spring up again and live. But man is cut down and does not spring up." "The idea is, he entirely vanishes."

Such is the plain meaning of this passage of Scripture, and only when wrested from its proper connection can it be made to mean anything else. But Job introduces another figure, and this figure does represent the true state of man in death. Hear him:

> The waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up: so man lieth down, and riseth not; till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep.

Nothing could be plainer than that man, according to this statement of the case, while in death has ceased to be and is perished. Like the failing flood that drieth up, man in death lies down and rises not till the heavens be no more. Then he will come from his dusty bed of death clothed with beauty and splendor, if one of the Lord's jewels, to the enjoyment of eternal life.

WHAT IS DEATH?

This momentous question is thus answered by Dr. Watts:

"Why do we mourn departing friends,
Or shake at death's alarms?
'Tis but the voice that Jesus sends
To call them to his arms.'

Do we accept of this answer? If by death our dear friends are simply called to Jesus' arms, they have certainly bettered their condition by the change, and instead of weeping over their departure we ought to rejoice and be glad they are gone. And methinks if this were true that such would be the feeling on the subject. But, ah! "there's the rub!" It is not true, and our experience and the experience of all time as well as the united testimony of inspiration, all, with one voice, declares that it is not true!

Another poet tries to explain with just as fair a show of truth, and makes just as complete a failure. Thus:

"Death is the crown of life!
Were death denied, poor man would live in vain,
Were death denied, to live would not be life,
Were death denied, even fools would wish to die.
Death wounds to cure; we fall—we rise—we reign!
Spring from our fetters, fasten in the skies,
Where blooming Eden withers in our sight.
Death gives us more than was in Eden lost;
The king of terrors is the prince of peace."

"Death the crown of life!" Think of it ye students of God's Word!

Let this effusion of theologicial poetry be carefully compared with the following passages of Holy Writ:

> "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." (2 Tim. 4: 8.)

When Paul came down to death he found his crown "laid up" until Jesus should come the second time. How then could death be his crown of life?

> He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth; for the Lord hath spoken it. And it shall be said in that day, Lo! this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us: this is the Lord; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation. (Is. 25:8, 9.)

Here death is represented as being destroyed or conquered. How ludicrous indeed it would be to suppose that our "crown of life" is to meet such a fate as this! 1 Cor. 15:54-56 is to the same purport. And the immortalized saints are represented as saying after death (or receiving the "crown of life," according to theology) is conquered, "O! Death, where is thy sting?" The farther we press this the worse it looks. The idea of our "crown of life" having in it a poisonous sting that torments us for a time, but finally we conquer it, and shout as we triumph, "O! 'crown of life,' where is thy sting!" is simply ridiculous.

What is death? Dr. Noah Webster defines it thus: "That state of a being, animal or vegetable, in which there is total and permanent cessation of all the vital functions, when the organs have not only ceased to act, but have lost the susceptibility of renewed action; cessation of life; extinction of bodily life; decease; demise; departure; dissolution; exit." This is Webster's first or primary definition of the term. And it is most sensible and rational and true to our experience and to the facts in the case. Nothing is truer when we take a common-sense view of the subject than that, when man is dead his life is extinct. And it will be necessary to prove that the Bible is not a common-sense book in order for common-sense people to believe that man by death escapes death and gains eternal life.

Let us now go to the Scripture for a definition of death.

In Gen. 2:17 we find the penalty of God's law declared to be death, as follows:

> "But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die."

That Adam and Eve fully comprehended the force of this law is clearly shown by the following conversation between the woman and the tempter:

> "And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden, but of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die." (Gen. 3: 2, 3.)

But they did not maintain their integrity; they failed. They sinned and forfeited their home with all its comforts, and the penalty of the law they had broken, which was death, was further explained, and finally endured by them as follows;

> And unto Adam he said: Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it: cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life;
>
> Thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; and thou shalt eat the herb of the field.
>
> In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust thou shalt return. (Gen. 3: 17-19.)

And in Gen. 5:5 we have the record of fulfillment:

> "And all the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years: and he died."

By this we see that to die is to return to the dust from which we were taken. This, then, is death. And this definition of the subject, we have seen, is sustained by the very best of authority. Not only by Dr. Webster, but also by the Scriptures of truth, as well as by the universal experience of humanity.

Death is not a dissolution of personalities in the sense of dissolving partnership by a firm. It is, however, the dissolution of elements—the breaking up of the relation that exists between the various elements that go to make up the living, organized being called man. In this sense death is a dissolution.

After God had "formed man out of the dust of the ground" (Gen. 2: 7), he breathed into his nostrils the breath (spirit) of life, and the result was that man lived or "became a living soul." Now, if man lived on account of possessing this element—the spirit or breath of life—what would be the result if that element were taken away from him? We should naturally suppose that death would ensue. Let us see what the Scriptures say on this point:

> "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." (Ps. 146:4.)

"Breath" in this passage is from the same word (ruach) that it is in Gen. 2: 7. Man lives when he receives it, and dies or returns to his earth when it goeth forth or he gives it up.

In Jas. 2: 26 we read:

> "For as the body without the spirit [breath] is dead, so faith without works is dead also."

This word spirit is from pneuma, the corresponding Greek term for ruach. And by this passage it is still further shown that death is simply the dissolution of elements. And when the relation sustained between the life-element or spirit of life and the man is broken up or dissolved, the man dies.

C. C. MARSTON.

The Coming Glory.

Eschatology or the doctrine of "future events," is an interesting and fascinating study to the Biblical student. It is so, either as a practical or speculative subject, according to the bent of mind, and the spiritual aspect under which it is viewed. There are not many however, who care to bend the energies of their minds to a solution of the difficulties which beset them in this study, and hence it is seldom interwoven with our preaching, and only sometimes adorns our religious conversation.

So, to the few who rise above the prejudices which mistaken and misguided men have created by their fantastical interpretations and weird predictions—we would offer our sympathy and kindly invite them to join us in viewing the "Coming Glory" of our Lord Jesus Christ.

What a subject to engage our attention! The "hope" of the church for the first three centuries of her existence was this glorious appearance of that "Savior," the Lord Jesus Christ, who will transform the body of our humiliation, that it may be conformed to the body of his glory, according to the working by which he is able also to subject all things to himself." Phil. 3: 20, 21. The revival of that hope is practically less than a century old—and may be said to have increased to its present proportions, more in the last fifty years than any time since the days of the apostles.

To-day the church is moving on under the mistaken idea that the preaching of the gospel in this dispensation is to convert the world, forgetting that preaching never was designed to accomplish this, but simply to be "a witness unto all nations"—leaving to all heathen as well as Christians—barbarous as well as civilized nations, the responsibility in their individual life of accepting or rejecting its offers of mercy.

That the kingdoms of this world will become the kingdoms of our Lord and His Christ is expressly stated in the Word of God, and fully admitted by all of us. But nowhere do we find this great victory effected by our present dispensation of a preached gospel.

The fact is, that preaching is the humanly responsible side of Christianity, and, viewed as such, is in its very nature limited to as many as God has "called" and by its inherent force, through the Spirit, compelled to obey. It is the power of God unto salvation to all them who believe, and is meant to prepare, "a people for the coming of the Lord."

It is the judgment of God unto condemnation upon all those who, having heard its appeal, will have none of its teaching. In the one, the savor of life unto life, and in the other, of death unto death.

We are now under the reign of the Spirit acting as the "Upper Servant." This Holy One, is preparing a people, who with glad shouts will welcome the coming of their Lord, whom the heavens have received till the time of the restoration of all things, and who, when these times have fully come, will be glorified where he was crucified, honored where he was despised, and crowned Lord of all.—J. T. C. in Baptist Weekly.

WE unhesitatingly assert that if the day ever returns when men will hang with intensest interest upon the words of the, preacher and when they will trace their conviction of sin to the pulpit rather than the prayer meeting, it will be when ministers, imbued with the spirit of Biblical theology, will, in the fear and love of God, declare those solemn as well as grand doctrines of theology, which, whenever they have been preached under deep conviction of their truthfulness, have always evolved by a seeming supernatural force the otherwise latent and dormant energies of the human soul. It is this system of scriptural theology, adapted to modern times, without the least abatement from its original claims, and this alone, which is to awaken men to the realities which surround and impend over them, and which will pierce what would otherwise be to human hearts a heaven of brass, shut in and shut down on every side. It is this system in which are to be resolved all difficulties. It is this which will not only arouse men from their listlessness, but will send them forth into the Lord's vineyard resolute and determined workmen.—Prof. L. T. Townsend.

Over and Over Again.

Over and over again,
  No matter which way I turn,
I always find in the Book of Life
  Some lesson I have to learn
I must take my turn at the mill,
  I must grind out the golden grain,
I must work out my task with a resolute will,
  Over and over again.

We cannot measure the need
  Of even the tiniest flower,
Nor check the flow of the golden sands
  That run through a single hour;
But the morning dew must fall,
  And the sun and the summer rain
Must do their part, and perform it all
  Over and over again.

Over and over again
  The brook through the meadow flows,
And over and over again
  The ponderous wind mill goes
Once doing will not suffice,
  Though doing be not in vain;
And a blessing failing us once or twice
  May come if we try again

The path that has once been trod
  Is never so rough to the feet;
And the lesson we once have learned
  Is never so hard to repeat.
Though sorrowful tears must fall,
  And the heart to the depths be driven
With storm and tempest, we need them all
  To render us meet for [illegible]
  W.

We Shall See Them Soon.

We shall see them soon, the loved and lost,
  Whom death has snatched away.
Though locked in earth by winter frost,
  And crumbling to decay

We shall see them soon, though buried now,
  And mingling with the clay,
And damp mould gathers on their brow,
  And worms upon them prey.

We shall see them soon, though not a spark
  Of life in them remains;
Though their low, narrow house is dark,
  The mystery God explains.

We shall see them soon, the risen One—
  Our Christ—shall bid them rise,
Immortal, shining like the sun,
  To meet us in the skies.

We shall see them soon, we shall greet them where
  No farewells sad are spoken;
And with them Christ's bright kingdom share,
  Where circles ne'er are broken,

We shall meet them soon—Oh! hail, glad day!
  When we shall meet again,
And while the happy hours away,
  And know no parting pain.

L. C. McKinstry.

The Life of a Justified Man.

[Second Article.]

The life of the justified should be a generous one. All connected with this justification has been boundless generosity on the part of God. He spared not his own Son, and will he not with him also freely give us all things? The love of God has been of the largest, freest kind; and shall not this make us generous? The gifts of God have been all of them of the most unlimited scale; and shall not this boundless liberality make us liberal in the highest and truest sense? Can a justified man be covetous, or slow to part with his gold? God has given his Son; he has given his Spirit; he has given us eternal life; he has given us an everlasting kingdom. And shall these gifts not tell upon us; shall they not expand and elevate us; or shall they leave us narrow and shriveled as before? Surely we are called to a noble life; a life far above that of those who, disbelieving the liberality of God, are trying to merit his favor, or to purchase his kingdom by moral goodness or ceremonial performances of their own. Not unselfish merely, but self-denying men, we are called to be; not self pleasers, nor man-pleasers, nor flesh pleasers, nor world pleasers; but pleasers of God, like Enoch (Heb. 11: 5), or like a greater than Enoch, as it is written, "Even Christ pleased not himself." (Rom. 15: 3.) "We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves; let every one of us please his neighbor for his good to edification," i. e. to the edification or building up of the body of Christ. (Rom. 15: 2.) Selfishness, self-love, self-seeking, have been in all ages the scandal of the church of God. "All seeking their own, not the things that are Jesus Christ's" (Phil. 2: 21), was the sad testimony of the apostle of the Philippian church, even in early days: so little has God's marvelous love told even upon those who believed it; so obstinate is the contraction of the human heart, and so unwilling to yield to the enlarging pressure of an influence which men in common things deem irresistible. To love warmly, to give largely, to sympathise sincerely, to help unselfishly; these are some of the noble fruits to be expected from the belief of a love that passeth knowledge. Self-sacrifice ought not to seem much to those for whom Christ has died, and whom he represents upon the throne. Generous deeds and gifts and words ought to be as natural as they are becoming in those who have been so freely loved, and so abundantly pardoned, and so eternally blest. Narrow hearts are the fruits of a narrow pardon and of an uncertain favor; poor gifts are the produce of stinted and grudging giving; but large-heartedness and open-handedness may surely be looked for from those whom the boundless liberality of God has made partakers of the unsearchable riches of Christ, and heirs of the kingdom which cannot be moved.

The life of the justified should be a lofty one. Littleness, and meanness, and earthliness, do not become the pardoned. They must mount up on wings as eagles, setting their affections on things above. Having died with Christ and risen with him, they sit with him in heavenly places. (Eph. 2: 5.) In the world, and yet not of it, they rise above it; possessed of a heavenly citizenship (Phil. 3: 20), and expecting an unearthly recompense at the return of him who has gone to prepare a place for them. High thoughts, high aims, high longings, become them of whom Christ was not merely the substitute upon the cross, but the representative upon the throne—the forerunner, who has entered within the veil, and ever liveth to intercede for us. Shall he who has been freely justified grovel in the dust, or creep along the polluted soil of earth? Shall such a justification as he has received not be the source of superhuman elevation of character, making him unworldly in his hopes, in his tastes, in his works, in the discharge of his daily calling? Shall not such a justification act upon his whole being, and pervade his life: make him a thoroughly consistent man in all things; each part of his course becoming his name and prospects; and his whole man symmetrical, his whole Christianity harmonious?

The life of the justified is a decided one. It does not oscillate between goodness and evil, between Christ and the world. The justifying cross has come between him and all evil things; and that which released him from the burden of guilt has, in so doing, broken the bondage of sin. Even if at any time he feels as if he could return to that country from which he set out, the cross stands in front, arrests his backward step. Between him and Egypt rolls the Red Sea, now flowing in its strength, so that he cannot pass. At the door of the theater, or the ball room, or the revel hall, stands the cross, and forbids his entrance. The world is crucified to him, and he unto the world, by the saving cross. His first look to the cross committed him. He began, and he cannot go back. It would be mean as well as perilous to do so. There is henceforth to be no mistake about him. His heart is no longer divided, and his eye no longer roams. He has taken up his cross, and he is following the Lamb. He has gone in at the strait gate, and is walking along the narrow way; and at the entrance thereof stands the cross barring his return. Over his entrance there was joy in heaven; and shall he at any time turn that joy into sorrow by even seeming to go back?

The life of the justified is a useful one. He has become a witness for him who has thrown over him the shadow of his cross. He can tell what the bitterness of sin is, and what is the burden of guilt. He can speak of the rolling away of the stone from the sepulcher of his once dead soul, and of the angel sitting on that stone clothed in light. He can make known the righteousness which he has found, and in finding which he has been brought into liberty and gladness. Out of the abundance of his heart, and in the fullness of his liberated spirit, his mouth speaketh. He cannot but speak of the things which he now possesses, that he may induce others to come and share the fullness. He is bent on doing good. He has no hours to throw away. He knows that the time is short, and he resolves to redeem it. He will not waste a life that has been redeemed at such a cost. It is not his own, and he must keep in mind the daily responsibilities of a life thus bought for another. As one of the world's lights, in the absence of the true light, he must be always shining, to lessen in some degree the darkness of earth, and to kindle heavenly light, in souls who are now excluding it. As one of the sowers of the heavenly seed, he must never be idle, but watching opportunities for sowing it as he goes out and in; it may be in weakness, it may be in tears. (To be concluded.)

The Judgment at Hand.

[Second Article.]

You are invited to open the book of the prophet Daniel and to peruse attentively the second chapter thereof. We read here that there was presented to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, in a dream or vision, the appearance of a great image of human form, composed of four different metals, its head being of gold, its breast and arms of silver, its belly and thighs of brass, and its legs of iron, whilst its feet and toes were of iron mixed with the miry clay. While the king was in contemplation of this strange apparition, he saw in his dream a stone cut out of a mountain without hands, which rolled down and struck the image on its feet and overthrowing it broke it in pieces and ground it to dust, so that the metals of which it was composed became like the chaff of the summer threshing floors, and the wind carried them away that no place was found for them, and the stone became a great mountain and filled the whole earth.

Daniel being empowered of God to make known to Nebuchadnezzar the interpretation of this vision expounded it to him thus: The four parts of the image each of different metal represented four great earthly kingdoms which were successively to bear rule over the children of men. The first of these was the Babylonish empire, for, said Daniel to Nebuchadnezzar "Thou O king art this head of gold." (vv. 37, 38) The empire of Babylon attained the acme of its grandeur during the reign of this king, wherefore the prophet speaks of the king as the kingdom itself. "And after thee shall arise another kingdom inferior to thee" (v. 39), even as silver is inferior to gold. This second and inferior kingdom represented by the breast and arms of the image is known, historically, to have been the united kingdoms of the Medes and Persians, the duality and yet unity of which was aptly symbolized by the two arms united in the body of the image; which kingdom overthrew the Babylonish or Chaldaic empire, as indeed Daniel himself bears witness: "In that night was Belshazzar the king of the Chaldeans slain, and Darius the Median took the kingdom." (ch. 5: 30, 31.) And in ch. 6: 28 we read: "So this Daniel prospered in the reign of Darius, and in the reign of Cyrus the Persian."

The "third kingdom of brass" (v. 39) of the chapter under consideration, was, as we are informed by history, the Grecian empire, by which the the kingdom of the Medes and Persians was in turn conquered and overthrown. And here we have one of those impugnable evidences so repeatedly offered by prophecy of the inspiration of sacred Scriptures. For in ch. 8: 20, 21, the Grecian empire is called by name, several centuries before it came into existence, as the power which should accomplish the conquest of the kingdom of the Medes and Persians. The fourth great kingdom represented by the iron legs and feet of the image, was, as we are told in history, the Roman empire, the conqueror of Greece and the proud mistress of the world; the two legs of the image symbolizing the one the Eastern and the other the Western Roman Empire. The iron crown and scepter of Charlemagne, still to be seen at Rome, are perfect types of the harsh and powerful sway of that government, and are imperishable witnesses to the literality of the fulfillment of God's word concerning it.

The ten toes upon the feet of the image were representative of ten kingdoms into which this great iron kingdom should come to be divided. (vv. 41, 42.) That the Roman Empire in the fifth century was thus divided into ten kingdoms is also attested by history, the names of which kingdoms may be obtained by reference to any of our standard commentators, such as Dr. Adam Clarke or Thomas Scott.

But it was further revealed to the prophet, and by him made known to the king, that in the days of these kings the God of heaven would set up a kingdom, represented by the stone cut out of the mountain, which should overthrow and destroy all these earthly kingdoms, and should stand forever. (v. 44.)

It is sometimes claimed that the expression "in the days of these kings," may as well be referred to the days of the four principal kingdoms, or some of them, as to the days of the ten kingdoms into which the fourth was to be divided; and it is therefore assumed that the heavenly kingdom here predicted was the spiritual kingdom of grace established by our blessed Lord when on earth. But we submit that such cannot be the case, since the image was seen by Nebuchadnezzar to be complete and he was gazing on its perfect form when the stone was cut out, which necessitates the springing into existence of the ten kingdoms typified by the toes of the image, before the setting up of the divine kingdoms here predicted. But these ten kingdoms did not appear in history until about A. D. 476. Wherefore to maintain that the kingdom of God here intended was established by our Savior when on earth, and more than four hundred years before the division of the Roman Empire into the ten kingdoms, is to do violence to the sequence of events as foreshadowed in the prophecy.

And may it not with propriety be asked how, keeping in view the ordinary meaning of words and force of language, it can be successfully maintained that the complete overthrow and utter demolition of the power, dominion, yea existence even of these earthly kingdoms as here foretold, is predicted of the universality of the conversion of the nations of the earth? which, as we have seen, is a favorite method of interpretation with the majority of Christians at this generation. Is it not rather to be supposed that if Princes and peoples were all converted to Christ and made subjects of the reign of grace in their hearts, that governments, instead of being estranged, would be greatly strengthened, having for their foundation mutual sympathy of purpose and unity of relation between the ruler and the ruled?

Leaving for the present this second chapter you are now invited to direct your attention to the seventh chapter of Daniel, in which, under the figure of four wild beasts, the rise and rule of these same great warlike kingdoms of earth is foreshown to the prophet himself in a vision. "These great beasts which are four, are four kings which shall arise out of the earth." (v. 17.) The word kings as used here is synonymous with kingdoms: for we read in v. 23, "the fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon the earth." And this fourth beast "whose teeth were of iron" (v. 7,) and which "brake in pieces and stamped the residue with his feet" (v. 19), is evidently identical with the fourth kingdom of ch. 2; for we there read, (v. 40): "And the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron, forasmuch as iron breaketh in pieces and subdueth all things; and as iron that breaketh all these, shall it break in pieces and bruise." This fourth kingdom then was, as we have already shown, the Roman Empire, "and the ten horns out of this kingdom, are ten kings that shall arise" (ch. 6: 24); which identifies the ten horns of this beast with the ten toes of the great image of ch. 2, and these ten kingdoms with those. It will be observed by you that the rise and reign of another mighty and mysterious power, "diverse from the first" or other powers, is foretold in this chapter, of which no mention was made in the second, viz: the kingdom of which the "little horn" of vv. 8, 11, 20, 21, 24, was typical. It is universally agreed among commentators that by this little horn was intended the Papal power, or government of the Popes of Rome; and as to the correctness of this understanding there remains not room for a single doubt, upon comparison of the characteristics delineated in the prophecy of the kingdom represented by this little horn, and those of the Papal government.

This little horn "came up among" the ten horns (v. 8), and the kingdom represented by it, was to "rise after" the ten kingdoms symbolized by the ten horns. (v. 24.) As we have already remarked, the division of the Roman Empire into ten kingdoms took place in the fifth century, that is between A. D. 419 and 476, and the rise of the Papal power among them dates from about A. D. 529, when the edicts of Justinian were published, which "conferred upon the Bishops of Rome a legal title of supremacy in ecclesiastical decisions, and the preeminence over all the churches." Thus did the kingdom of the little horn or Popery spring up among and after the ten kingdoms. It was predicted that three of the ten horns should be "plucked up by the roots" and "fall" before this little horn. (vv. 8, 20.) The Papal government did overthrow and subdue three of the ten kingdoms, namely the Heruli, the Goths and the Lombards, which historic fact is commemorated by the triple diadem worn by the Popes.

It was foretold that this little horn should "speak great words against the Most High." Witness the blasphemous assumptions by the Pontiffs of such titles as these. "Most Holy Father" "The Light of the World" "The King of Glory," "The Lion of the Tribe of Judah," "Our Lord God the Pope," etc; also the doctrine of Transubstantiation; the worship of the Virgin Mary as superior to Christ himself; saint worship; the claim of the Popes that they are Christ's vicegerents on earth with power not only to forgive sins, but to license sin by the sale of indulgences, etc., etc.

It was written that this little horn should "wear out the saints of the Most High." How truthfully and fearfully do the tens of thousands of martyr deaths at rack and stake attest the literal fulfillment of these words, insomuch that not a single Christian dared obey the summons to appear before the Lateran Council at Rome in 1514 and speak against the abominations of Popery. This little horn would "think to change times and laws." (v. 25.) Not only did the Roman Pontiffs change and dictate human laws at will, bringing kings and princes to do most abject obeisance at their feet, but God's law itself has not escaped their sacriligious ambition in this regard, it being said upon reliable information that out of twenty-nine catechisms in use in the various states and kingdoms acknowledging the supremacy of the Romish church, the second commandment is totally omitted in twenty-seven of them; while in the remaining two it is mutilated and only a portion of it expressed. (To be continued.)

E. C. Bronaugh.

The Adventist Leader in Futurism.

Josiah Litch is a name early known as borne by one who was an honor to Adventism in the early stages of its history in this country, when he did yeoman's service in a good cause. Subsequently he was well known for the persistency with which he opposed the true views of life and death theology, verging, at times, almost upon Spiritist notions, setting forth as fact, for instance, visions in which persons imagined the spirit left the body, recognizing itself as a separate entity. Latterly he has adopted and pressed the 'futurist' views of prophecy. A long-promised volume on the subject is at length issued, and is summarized in the following summary and we doubt not fair way by the Advent Herald:

A Complete Harmony of Daniel and the Apocalypse. By Rev. J. Litch. Philadelphia. (Claxton, Remsen, & Haffelfinger. 1873. 300 pp. 12 mo. cloth. Price $1.50.

The first part (76 pages) is devoted to Daniel's prophecies, and is mainly an enlargement of his pamphlet—"Prophetic Significance of Eastern and European Movements"—published at this office in 1867. The "year-day" principle of interpretation is "utterly repudiated," and the great body of Protestant interpreters who have accepted it are regarded as having done so with "no shadow of ground" for their support! The decem regal form of the Roman empire, symbolized by "the toes" of the image and "ten horns" of the fourth beast, is still future; the "little horn" of Dan. 7th is regarded as identical in its application with the "little horn" of chapter 8th and both refer to a future anti-christ; while so far as Dan. 11th is concerned, we have not yet passed the 14th verse. On the book of Revelation he is an absolute Futurist—not a single prediction, from the first verse of the fourth chapter to the "Amen" of the last chapter, having yet been fulfilled! Having taken the position "that there is not a more literal book in the sacred volume," and that "all that is symbolical is either called a sign, or the symbol is interpreted by divine authority," he can find no application of any of its predictions to what has transpired in the church or world for the past eighteen hundred years. These long centuries of blasphemy and blood on the part of the persecutors of Christianity, and of trial and trust on the part of the saints, are therefore not even noticed in the prophetic utterances of the Seer of Patmos; and of course little can be said or needs to be said by any author by way of explaining the Revelation if the principle of interpretation adopted is so simple and harmonious that "a child can understand its import." Though it may involve the necessity of having a literal star fall upon the rivers and fountains of water on earth and make "one-third part" of them bitter, or two hundred millions of "infernal locusts" to literally come out of the bottomless pit, or John to "yet perform service as one of the two witnesses, and thus fulfill his mission of prophesying again"; or to go with a reed and "measure the temple of God and the altar, and them that worship therein," or the existence of a river of blood two hundred miles long and deep enough to be up to the horse bridles, or "Christianity or the new covenant" to flee away into "Moab," or some other place, from the personal devil and his seduced angels, or old Babylon to be rebuilt and become the world's center of commerce, or a score of other things equally marvelous, what of all this? Faith must triumph over them all and accept them as literal verities, for the "descriptions and announcements God himself" commanded John to write "are not symbolical representations of something entirely different, but the exact thing seen and stated."

Nemo.

Where is the Promised Kingdom of God?

"The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof; the world and they that dwell therein, for he hath founded it upon the seas, and established it upon the floods."—(Ps. 24: 1.)

The promised kingdom must be when and where it now is not; else it could not be promised. It is at hand to come, not where it is already; but from heaven to earth, where it is prayed for to come. Neither does it come to this world, but only the promise of it. Where, then, shall it appear? On earth, after this world passes away; for the earth is one, its worlds are several; one before the earth was drowned; "this present evil world;" and "the habitable world to come of which we speak." (Heb. 2: 5.) The past, the present, and the future world all belong to the earth. Neither this world, nor its prince, have any part in the promised kingdom; but they flee away before its coming. They disappear for ever, and give place to the King of righteousness and his kingdom, coming earth as in heaven. This present world is evil and transitory; the future is blissful and eternal. This creation is mortal, corruptible, and passing away; but the world to come is immortal, incorruptible, and never passes away. The earth is the same planet always, but, like our vile bodies changed and fashioned in the King's own likeness, the earth shall be changed, made anew, and with its heavens be fashioned into the holy city and heavenly country of covenant promise, and shall be prepared for the abode of the blessed.

This life and world are temporal, the future ones eternal. When the Scriptures predicate anything concerning the earth or the world, the nature of the thing predicated will show to which world or earth it belongs; whether the temporal or the eternal. Anything promised in the world or the earth, to outlast time, as the kingdom is promised, must of necessity belong to the world to come with the new earth which God will make. The eternal promises, the everlasting covenants, are made and given in this world to mortals; but they are paid and discharged to immortals in the glory and immortality of the future world. The time of the kingdom is future and infinite; but the place of the kingdom is definite and fixed. We are not at liberty to fix the time; we are not at liberty to change the venue, or the place where in the holy law the scene of the [illegible] When the law and the testimony say earth, [illegible] must inquire whether this or the next be meant. But we must not change the venue laid down in the law; we are not at liberty to read "earth" in the law, and change the scene of action in our mind to the sun, moon, and stars, or to infinite space. The time is reserved in the Lord's power: but the place of the coming kingdom is abundantly declared.

The scene of the promised kingdom of heaven, is, by the holy law and testimony, laid in the world to come on this earth. The King and his kingdom being eternal, the realm of his abode the scene of the action, and the people of his realm must be also eternal. They of necessity belong to the future world of the new heavens and earth which shall never pass away nor be destroyed. We are bound to locate the action where the Scripture lays the scene, that is, earth; but the terms of description decide whether the scene belongs to the temporal or to the eternal world, to the mortal, or to the immortal race; whether to this land of death, or to the coming land of life; whether to this fallen Jerusalem, or to Jerusalem above, which is free: whether to the earth under the curse of sin and death, or to the earth in which there shall be no more curse. We must not change the place of the action from the earth, but only inquire to which state of the earth the action belongs, whether to the present and temporal, or to the future and eternal state.

It requires no words of ours to prove that the promised kingdom of heaven belongs to the future and eternal state of this earth, seeing it is so laid down in all the books of the law and the gospel, and pledged by God the Father to his only-begotten Son, Jesus Christ our Lord, saying, "I shall give thee the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession" (Ps. 2: 8). "Unto thy seed (which is Christ, Gal. 3: 16) will I give this arets, earth" (Gen. 12: 7). To Adam, the first, the dominion over all the earth was given (Gen. 1: 26). He lost it. To the seed of the woman, the Son of the blessed, it is pledged for an endless dominion (Ps. 8: 6.) "And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages should serve him." (Dan. 7: 13, 14.) "Truly, as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord. (Num. 14: 21.) "Unto the Son he saith, Thy throne O God, is for ever and ever." (Ps. 16: 9.) "Thou shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great, and he shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." (Luke 1: 31.) "Every knee shall bow, and every tongue confess, that Jesus Christ is Lord." (Phil. 2: 11.)

The king is Jesus, the testimony of whom "is the spirit of prophecy." His kingdom is foretold by the prophets, and preached in the gospel, prayed for in the church, without ceasing, and sure to come with God's will done, in earth as it is in heaven. We may devoutly ask, whether the king, and the kingdom, and the people promised, are to be manifested in this world or the next? and whether the throne of the kingdom is to be set up in the earth that now is, or in that which is to be? To this question only one answer is possible. Seeing that the king, his dominion and realm, and his subjects, are eternal and immortal, the scene of their manifestation can only be in the heavenly and eternal world of the new creation. No mortal may attempt to change what the lawyers call the venue. That is laid down in the written law and the preached Word, as belonging to the eternal world, and to the regenerate earth; to the king and the kingdom of the resurrection from the dead, for which we according to [illegible] and a new earth [illegible] "a new heaven righteousness. (2 Pet. 3: 13.)" In the heaven and earth of the new creation is laid down the site, and is spread out the scene, or the ground-plan of the city and the kingdom of God; in which "the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together." (Is. 40: 5.) "The whole earth shall be full of his glory." (Is. 6: 3.) "For the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." (Is. 11: 6.) "Oh! let the nations be glad and sing for joy; for thou shalt judge the people righteously, and govern the nations upon earth." (Ps. 67: 4.) "His name shall endure forever; his name shall continue as long as the sun; and men shall be blessed in him; all nations shall call him blessed." (Ps. 72: 18.) "And the Lord shall be king over all the earth. In that day there shall be one Lord, and his name one." (Zech. 14: 9.) "Let the floods clap their hands, let the hills be joyful together before the Lord; for he cometh to judge the earth." (Ps. 98: 8.) "He cometh to judge the earth; he shall judge the world with righteousness, and the people with his truth." (Ps. 96: 13.) The Lord says "earth;" who shall say to him, "Nay?" Who shall say, "Not earth, but heaven?" Who shall say, "Not in earth, but in boundless space?"

Blessed be the name of the Lord, who "came into Galilee preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, the time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand; repent ye and believe the gospel." (Mark 1: 14.) Blessed be the name of the Lord, who teaches us to pray, "Thy kingdom come; thy will be done in earth."—London Quarterly Journal of Prophecy.

Plato's Psychology.

It is generally believed that Plato demonstrated the immortality of the soul. It is not so generally known that he also, and by the same kind of argument, demonstrated its conscious pre-existence; and hence its capability of separate conscious existence. His argument has been thus stated:—

"We cannot account for all our knowledge by experience. There are elements of which we have never acquired in this world, or in the present life, and these we can only account for cences or recollections of what we knew or acquired in a former existence. When we examine the contents of our consciousness—the thoughts, ideas, principles of judgment, or the aspirations, sentiments, deep seated and ineradicable hopes and anticipations which constitute the inward wealth of the human spirit, we find on close examination not a little the origin of which our experience in this life will not explain, nay, without which that experience itself could never have been acquired, and which must be presupposed in order to it....Of this fact great and original minds furnish the most striking examples, but in their measure it is true of minds the most ordinary....These universal ideas, these conceptions of eternal truth, and beauty, and goodness are not the product of experience; they contain in them something which the poor materials of sense and sight can no more account for than the earning of a bondman's wages could account for the possessing of princely wealth..... Since we have in our minds ideas, principles and notions which our earthly experience cannot account for, which we did not and could not get in our past life in this world, it follows that we must have lived before—had another and earlier life in some world where these unexplained resources were gathered."—(Prof. Caird.)

But let us hear the ancient philosopher himself:

"When says Plato in the Phædo, "did our souls acquire this knowledge? Not since we were born as men. They must, therefore have existed before they were in the form of man, without bodies, and must have possessed intelligence. These ideas are not given to us at birth, for we have no consciousness of them then, and we only afterwards begin to recover or recollect them. If there is an absolute beauty and goodness and essence in general, be a [illegible] which is now discovered to we refer all our [illegible] being, this compare them—assuming this [illegible] have a prior existence. As if these absolute ideas existed before we were born." Again, in another dialogue, the Phædrus, this is his argument epitomised:—"The soul in her own nature having the vision, remembers in her condition here those glorious sights of justice, wisdom, truth, which she once gazed upon when in company with the heavenly choir. Then she celebrated holy mysteries and beheld blessed apparitions shining in pure light, herself pure, and not as yet entombed in the oyster-shell of the body. Such a light of other days is spread over her when she remembers that beauty which alone of the ideas has any visible representation on earth. For truth has no outward form, and is too dazzling bright fot mortal eyes. The true explanation of our admiration of earthly beauty, of a godlike form or face, is that at the sight of earthly beauty the heavenly is recalled. The soul of the lover is ravished with the delight, not simply of the loveliness he beholds, but of the celestial loveliness of which the best and fairest is but the faint copy and suggestion."—(Scot. Am. Jour.)

"The severe logic of modern philosophy" rejects this Platonic explanation of our mental endowments, and the doctrine of pre-existence. But, strange to say, the doctrine of future separate existence—consciousness forever more—is accepted as proved to demonstration from the same inductive argument.

"It must be so: Plato, thou reasonest well.
Else whence this pleasing hope, this fond desire.
This longing after immortality?"

May not the longing after immortality be explained, as well as our innate consciousness of truth, goodness and beauty, right and wrong, as the works of the Creator? Why should the desire for immortality prove its possession, and the desire for goodness not prove the possession of that? Desire, implanted by the Creator, for truth, goodness, beauty and immortality, only proves that we were intended by him to be true, good, beautiful and immortal. But the desire, as we find it, is dim and darkened, not by the waters of Lethe, but by sin. The highest perfection of all goodness—God—is dreaded; and it is very evident that a great change is needed to be wrought in man before the original intention of his Maker can be reached, and man be true, good, beautiful and immortal.

When Plato proved pre-existence, he proved that the soul could live apart from the body. Now his proofs are found worthless, and in philosophy no proof is claimed that the soul ever had a conscious existence apart from the body. Then it follows that it is not demonstrated that it is even capable of such existence.

A. Armour.

Church Discord.

Every church has its workers, while some churches have both workers and idlers. A church filled with workers only is a rare spectacle; yet there are a few noble examples of this kind. This kind are alive, aye, wide-awake and vigilant in the Master's cause, and scrupulous about each other's wellfare. Meetings are well attended, preachers duly compensated, hearts well filled with the Holy Spirit, and through their influence sinners are reclaimed.

On the other hand, a mongrel church of amalgamated laborers and drones, is in a sad plight indeed. The workers may accomplish but the drones will destroy. The workers may lay out and plan their work; the drones will retard and thwart their designs. Thus, no end is gained and no work is completed. Oh! when will the fault-finders cease, and let the laborers work in peace in the Lord's vineyard? Only when every professed Christian shall earnestly strive to be a lamb and not a lion. May the Lord hasten the time!

M. D. Peavy.

The Londen "Times" and Spiritism.

As, however, a good deal of curiosity upon the subject prevails, and is likely to be stimulated by such articles as those in the Times, we will suggest one or two reasons which should make people pause before encouraging seances and spiritual manifestations. In the first place, if there is anything in Spiritism, nothing could be easier than of the electric [illegible] its truth. Why do we submit them to crucial expelations every day and every hour of the day. Why don't we believe in the revelations of mediums? Because they always evade a crucial experiment. Take a simple case. President Lincoln's assasination was known throughout America within an hour or two after it had happened. Subsequent evidence, of course, confirmed the truth of the report. If a Spiritist had announced the event in England before it had come to us by any ordinary means (the submarine telegraph was not then laid down), we should have been convinced instantaneously that Spiritists possessed some mysterious power. If, in fact, they possess the means of knowing what is happening at distant times and places, they can place the reality of their claims beyond all conceivable cavil. They can prove their power fifty times a day. But any one proof would be sufficient. If a single revelation were made, such as that of Lincoln's assassination, it would be enough. Why has no such proof ever been given? For the simple reason that the power does not exist. All the alleged wonders of this kind depend upon what A said to B, and what B repeated to C and so on. If a single witness has lied or made a mistake, they are valueless. A man claims a power of communicating with disembodied spirits; if he has it, opportunities for demonstrating it in the most public manner are open to him every and all day long; and yet it is never done. And for this reason we recommend ordinary inquirers to wait. If the alleged power exists, it will prove itself. If it does not, they had better not waste time in examining into it.—Saturday Review.

Those who, in the day of sorrow have owned God's presence in the cloud, will find him also in the pillar of fire, brightening and cheering the abode as night comes on.

He that lives in sin, and expects happiness hereafter, is like him that soweth cockle, and thinks to fill his barn with wheat or barley.

I have found nothing yet which requires more courage and independence than to rise even a little, but decidedly above the par of the religious world around us.—James W. Alexander.

The very name Jesus, is a false pretense, unless he has something re-generative and new-creative; something fitly called a salvation.—Bushnell.

The real man is one who always finds excuses for others, but never excuses himself.

Situations are like skeins of thread on silk. To make the most of them, we need only to take them by the right end.

It is more difficult, and calls for higher energies of soul to live a martyr than to die one.—Horace Mann.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, February 4, 1873.

REV. DR. TYNG, speaking of Sunday School teachers who get tired and leave their classes, says everybody gets tired except the devil; he is a bishop that is never out of his diocese.

ABP. THOMPSON, in his Bampton Lectures (p. 56), says: 'Life to the godless must be the beginning of destruction, since nothing but God, and that which pleases him, can permanently exist.'

IT is evident, says the Independent, that if some of the [Methodist] ministers could have their way, Dr. True would get a fore taste of retribution in this life for introducing this unpleasant subject [of 'annihilation.']

THE Methodist Recorder suggests that when the churches are investigating the merits of a candidate, and inquiring whether he is "smart," and whether he can "draw," it might be well to press another question, viz.: "Is he religious?"

IT is immaterialism speaking to men which

'Assures them they are mortal, and the next line
Calls them immortals, angels, and divine;
Declares them spirits, and yet some of clay,
Who death survive and yet in death decay;
Exposed to anguish in the quenchless fire,
Whose flames destroy and leave the wretch entire.
Such contradictions are abundant there,
But, God be thanked, ne'er in the Word appear.'

A GERMAN scientist in 1789 wrote as follows: "The sun is really a kitchen fire, and the spots are great clouds of smoke and heaps of soot; consequently, where there is a kitchen fire there must be meat to roast, such as Godless people, Deists, Universalists, Atheists, and the devil is the cook who turns the spit!"

A co[illegible] churches can be [illegible] accept a little less than a first-class minister, and how a good servant of the Lord Jesus can be satisfied with a pastorate in a locality not blessed with all the modern facilities?"

IN a notice of Mr. Minton's forcible pamphlet, 'The Harmony of Scripture on Future Punishment,' the Contemporary Review says: It 'shows very conclusively, that if we are bound by the letter of Scripture, we cannot refuse his belief.' A clergyman of the established church adds: 'The beneficial influence of this truth [the finite nature of sin] on the religious thought of the future would, in my opinion, be simply incalculable.'

CONCERNING a supposed atheistical tendency in the study of medical science, Dr. Arnold observes: 'If there is anything special in the Atheistic tendency of medicine, it arises I suppose, from certain vague notions about the soul, its independence of matter, etc., and from the habit of considering these notions as an essential part of religion. Now I think that the Christian doctrine of the resurrection meets the materialists as far as this, that it does imply that a body or an organization of some sort is necessary to the full development of man's nature.'

IN a business letter Br J. S. Lawver remarks:

An orthodox minister, in this region, a few days ago said (in a funeral sermon) that he was happy to tell them (his hearers) that death was not dying (every boy in our town knew that before), but that death was a bridge into the better land.

He meant to convey the idea that death was not being dead or unconscious; and as death is the only sure thing in this world, would it not be well for orthodoxy to advise sinners to make their calling and election sure by getting on this 'bridge,' and going over. Is it a wonder that people commit suicides who are instructed that death is the sure way to the glory-world.

SOME friend has kindly sent us a report of Hon. J. R. Doolittle's (ex senator of Wisconsin) lecture upon the Metallic Image of Dan. ch. 2. He does not differ from the ordinary exposition except his interpretation of 'the stone,' which he refers to the United States, which is the type of the highest and best form of government, destined to stand while the world stands, or 'forever.' The gloss is most absurd, equally so with the theory which finds the two horned beast of the Apocalypse in this Republic. Mr. Doolittle has been teaching, or lecturing more or less, upon his prophetical opinions for some years; but we do no learn that he has secured any converts, although his theory is far more consistent than those which interpret the stone of a kingdom set up at Pentecost, or some other date in the Apostolic age.

IN a recent sermon Spurgeon says:

Was not Jesus always telling of his sheep who heard his voice, of the wheat which would be gathered in the garner, and of the precious things which would be treasured up when the bad would be thrown away? Therein he was bearing witness that the false must die, that the unreal must be consumed, that the lie must rust and rot; but that the true, the sincere, the gracious, the vital, shall stand every test, and outlast the sun.

—But how can the false, the unreal, the lie rust, rot, consume, die, if the liars, the hypocrites, the sinners, are to continue in existence as long as the most precious things of God shall exist. Virtues and vices exist in persons: and if the incorrigibly vicious are immortal, their vices will be immortal also, and will neither consume, rot, or die. It is a subject for gratitude to the Creator, that what Mr. Spurgeon has said is true: all evil must sooner or later come to an end, and only the good remain

SOME one with considerable common sense writes to the Baptist Weekly:

John Quincy Adams once said of Roger Williams, that he had "a conscientious contentious spirit." Allowing that this is a little severe, it is nevertheless substantially true. Roger Williams was one of the world's great reformers, and as such had the reform spirit—a spirit conscientiously contentious. Truth that is not contended for conscientiously can never triumph, or at least never in the past has triumphed, and no man has been a great reformer, who has not contended, and that too, conscientiously, and persistently. The old reformers contended earnestly for the "faith once delivered to the saints." Their earnestness was in their conscientiousness. Is there not great need of their spirit now?

THE idea of a universal programme for the week of prayer, to be followed by all churches throughout the world, is proving defective. In Boston many pastors testify that the meetings were the most effective in which the programme of the Evangelical Alliance was wholly or in part laid aside, and one or two definite objects of prayer taken up. The subjects presented by the Alliance [illegible] sarily vague as [illegible] the main objects [illegible] Christians are interested. The intense personal interest necessary in order to insure success can hardly be secured by adhering closely to this programme. Many pastors favor the suggestion that next year a simple, local programme should be prepared. It is also the conviction of those who have tried both ways, in this city, that the Union meetings of different churches during the week did not develop so intense permanent interest as those which each church held by itself.

THE subject of sanctification is, we learn, becoming somewhat tiresome to our readers, that is, as a controverted question. It is a difficult subject to handle—people are so sensitive, so tender concerning it. One can hardly stir in the matter without treading on some one's toes. And yet it seems to be forced upon us. A peculiar view of the subject is pressed, persistently so; how then can the topic be avoided?

Practical holiness or sanctification, would stir no opposition among Christians. It is not an attempt to elevate the standard of Christian character that has so moved the body, but the pressure of a theory of holiness upon their attention. We give all our influence to any movement to bring about a closer union, a fuller fellowship between God and his people. But such a movement must be based upon God's truth. If it be founded in an error, its fruit will eventually be evil. We would rather avoid the technical consideration of the subject; but if it is pressed we shall try to do our duty.

THE following extract from the Methodist Recorder has a breadth of application that need not be enlarged upon:

The Banner of Holiness, in its prospectus, makes a business point, as follows:

"It is a guarantee to all who may be readers of the BANNER that these contributed papers will be adapted to give profit, when it is known that these ministers (the writers) have all received the cleansing blood of Jesus, and are consecrated to the blessed work of spreading Scriptural holiness."

And by whose blood have all other ministers in Christendom been cleansed or justified? and to what work have all other ministers been consecrated? And what evidence do these select few adduce to prove that they are holier than their brethren? We cannot accept the assertion as true, from the simple fact that they advertise it as an inducement to secure subscribers; for this has a carnal look. This thing of magnifying one's own sanctity at the expense of others, was a flagrant weakness among the Pharisees. When the doctrine of holiness resorts to such a policy, becomes censorious and exclusive, and sits in judgment upon its neighbors, it does not seem to have the spirit of Jesus, or the tone of genuine Methodism.

THE Rock gives the following "deadly thrust" at those who work miracles by the pretended aid of departed human spirits, and shows that modern spiritism is but a new form of the demonism that has been rampant in Rome for centuries agone—The Rock says:

Romanism, however tolerant of many other "isms" of the day, has always shown the very strongest antipathy to "Mesmerism," "Spiritualism," and every kind of thaumaturgy but her own. Nor is the cause of this antagonism far to seek. We have only to look at the legends of the Romish saints, and we cannot fail to be struck by the similarity between the marvels we meet with there and those that are claimed by the Spiritualists of the present day. Take, for example, the heavy new volume—heavy in more ways than one—of Dr. Vaughan's Life of St. Thomas Aquinas, and the truth of our observation will be felt at once. Here are miracles by the score, but quite indistinguishable from those of the other party. The saint works many cures, so do they. He floats in the air, so does Mr. Home. He fancies a particular kind of fish, and, after a marvelous fashion, the dainty comes. Mrs. Guppy gets a lobster supper in the same way. And so on, through the whole list. The simple fact is that Popery's is the old established house for miracles: she is doing an excelent business, and will put down all competition if she can. On this point the last Tablet speaks out. "Spiritualism," it tells us, "is but a refined synonym for Devilry," and therefore "all wonder-working out side the Catholic church she must distrust." All this has much the appearance of Satan's kingdom being divided against itself, and if so, the inevitable result stands declared by the highest authority—that of our Lord himself.—Rock.

BRINGING THINGS HOME.

Great things can be done when the people can be made to feel the necessities of the given case. We think an article in another column, headed "What do ye more than others?" will set some of us to thinking, if it does not make us feel all we should of the manifest deficiency, as a people, of our payments for the support of the gospel. From the furnishing of the bread and wine for the communion, or the fuel for warming the house, up to ministers' support, the Mission and Publishing Funds, the [illegible] give liberally: [illegible] give nothing or comparatively little. There is a lack of the exercise of principle in this direction. If every one interested in the gospel of the kingdom should make it a matter of principle to sustain the proclamation of that message of good news, there would be no burdens in the case, the amount needed would be so equally distributed. We apprehend that the difficulty lies in our being controlled by impulse rather than by deep settled convictions in all our giving. Get a large concourse of disciples at some public meeting, and eloquent speakers, who can stir the heart's emotions by fervid appeal, will bring into the treasury tens, yes scores of dollars, where a printed appeal, bearing every iota as good reasons for beneficence, will bring one dollar. This appears from the fact that the few at some campmeeting will often give much more for missions, or for a Tract Fund than the whole body beside during the year.

These things ought not so to be. We should give, all give, honestly, according to the gospel rule—"as the Lord hath prospered us;" systematically and judiciously. And "the liberal soul shall be made fat." We can but admire as we look over the acknowledgments of various funds, to see certain names or initials occurring at regular intervals, with the amount given judiciously apportioned to the various departments of the cause. Let every one adopt some plan of systematic benevolence—making it a matter of principle and pleasure as much as they do in the case of other Christian duties, and the increased efficiency of the ministry and prosperity of the Mission and Tract enterprises, and a better show of our financial statistics will be our reward. A late writer has said:

Benevolence, generosity, charitableness, all that group of impulse which do so much to redeem our fallen nature, simply as impulses are noble and beautiful. But as impulse alone they fail of the highest results. Impulses are uncertain, blind more or less, and altogether unreliable as guides to human action, or elements in human action, or elements in human character. Their office is not fulfilled while they act as mere impulses, but [illegible] they stimulate the higher [illegible] prompt to exercise the w[illegible]ual and moral nature. [illegible] should be intelligent, not merely [illegible]pathetic and generous; and it should seek its end in the good of others in ways which will make sure the result. Mere vagrant giving, under special and momentary excitement, is not benevolence in the high and worthy sense. Real benevolence is giving in such ways, and at such times, and to such objects, as that it shall be investment in the interest of charity, as wise and as hopeful as those which the judicious financier makes in the interest of his own personal wealth."

The needed reformation in our system or lack of system in giving, can not be effected in conferences or passage of resolutions in other public meetings, it must be an individual work. Make "closet work" of it. Consecrate self and all anew to the Lord in secret with him; and "if any man lack wisdom let him ask of God, who giveth liberally," and will not upbraid us for our remissness in the past.

"MORE BEYOND."

Spain once owned both sides of the Mediterranean at the Straits of Gibraltar. So highly did she prize this possession that she stamped on her coin the two pillars of Hercules, and in a scroll over these the motto ne plus ultra,—'the utmost extent,' or "no more beyond." But, one day, a noble, truth loving, self-sacrificing spirit sailed far beyond these pillars and found a new world of beauty. Spain, convinced of her ignorance, resolved to make an important change in her foolish motto. She struck the word ne from the coin but wisely left the words plus ultra—'more beyond.'

What i[illegible] objectionable in creeds written by uninspired men is that they become stereotyped, ultima thules of theology, Gibraltars of faith, over which and under which are practically written the words ne plus ultra. It has been the custom of the Roman Catholic church to anathematize all who should dare to dissent from her decisions. At all of her numerous councils, from that of Nice, in the fourth, to that of Rome, in the nineteenth century, she has erected standards of faith, but she has never deigned to explain their many obvious contradictions. Nor has Protestantism escaped from the fetters of tradition. Nearly three and a half centuries have elapsed since the noble motto, "The Bible, and the Bible alone, contains our rule of faith and practice," was adopted by the first Protestant in Germany. To-day not one of the great Protestant churches will accept the inspired volume as its only standard. While the Romanist settles what is truth by appealing to the decrees of Nice, Chalcedon, Florence, Trent, or Rome, the Protestant goes back to Wittenberg, Geneva, or Westminster.

The progress made in theology is not comparable to that made in any other department of learning. Is theology a stationary science? Shall we advance rapidly in law and medicine and in the mechanic arts and stand still in the noblest of human studies? Shall we write ne plus ultra over the Westminster Catechism or consider the Methodist Discipline the ultima thule of religious truth? Is there not for us a more excellent way?

YES. Believing that there is "more beyond,' that truth is unlimited, that the human thought of one century is no unerring guide for that of another, that progress is the only legitimate rule of action, let us adopt the motto of the Genoese navigator—"more beyond"—and sail boldly past the twin pillars of ignorance and superstition into the unexplored ocean of the future in quest of truth, the true elixir vitæ, more precious than the gold of Ophir or the diamonds of Golconda.

J. H. W.

INFIDELITY SEEKING LIGHT.

I believe what "Christians" call "Infidelity," though I think many of [illegible]hem, perhaps, do not know the mean[illegible] of the word. I send for "The Bi[illegible] Triumphant," with a desire to investigate—am open to conviction or ready for logical reasoning.

If "The Bible Triumphant" can harmonize the Bible contradictions, (which, say Mr. Preachers, are unimportant; though I am not aware that God inspired men to write unimportant things, and contradictions, at that!!) it, as I think, must prove black white, and white black. I am eager to see the book.

P. P. DAVIS.

We received the above letter more than three months since. The book was sent immediately, but no answer has been received. We trust our infidel friend found that the reconciliation of supposed contradictions in Scripture is not so difficult as he had supposed. The Bible only needs fair treatment—to be criticised according to the laws of language and grammar, and just principles of interpretation, to harmonize perfectly with itself and the character of God.

Meanwhile, all must regret that supposed contradictions should be treated lightly or evaded. Better meet such objections squarely; and if we cannot always explain difficulties, we can wait for more light. P[illegible] information sometimes make[illegible]rent contradiction, that is [illegible] when all the facts, or more of t[illegible], become known. It is no disgrace to a Christian not to be able to explain every passage of Scripture: the Bible is a great book, and contains matter for a life study. And, furthermore, it is no imputation upon the character of the Bible that there are differences of opinion concerning its teachings, or that through the ignorance of man some of its allusions should be misunderstood or misinterpreted. It is God's book; his revelation to man—an anvil that has worn out many an infidel hammer.

"WHAT DO YE MORE THAN OTHERS."

In THE TIMES of Oct. 15th last, it was incidentally stated that the denomination called Second Adventists now numbers 500 preachers and from 100,000 to 150,000 members. I have before me statistics of the United Presbyterian church, for the last year as follows:—

Ministers, 584. Members, 72,896. With this strength this church contributed as under:—

Home Mission, $22,895; Foreign Mission, $38,840; Freedmen's Mission, $8,113; Education, $8,560; Publication, $5,225; Church Extension, $14,337; Aged ministers' fund, $1,209; Assembly's fund, $1,546; Salaries of pastors, $416,656; Congregational expenses, $236,451; Bequests and donations, $30,450; General contributions, $75,543; Contributions by S. Schools, $21,421. The average contributions for members is $11.92. The average salary of pastors, $898.29. The church papers are published by private enterprise. The Board of Publication has assets over liabilities $78,183, and receives annual rent of part of building, $3,000.

The chuch also supports five theological seminaries, and two colleges, which are intended to be endowed, and whose property is now worth $450,000.

Their churches and parsonages are valued at $4,400,350. The home missions aid two hundred churches and stations, and appoint ninety-six preachers. The foreign missions have thirty-five missionaries in actual service, in Syria, India, Egypt and China. Also eighty-eight native helpers. Expenses the past year, $45,536.

Making all due allowance for exaggeration, may we not consider that the membership of the Advent body at large is double that of this (U. P.) church? Then what of average pastor's salaries? Of colleges and seminaries? Of home and foreign missions? Of Publications? The U. P.'s have very little which they regard as distinctive truth, to publish—perhaps only respecting Psalmody—hence they have little call to support this fund; but we, Second Adventists, have many and great and vital truths—distinctive truths, which ought to be published, and that quickly. We may say we have nothing but publications to take the place of home and foreign missions, church extension, education (and pas-salary to—in too many cases.) . P. church asks $2.00 a year ach member for these Boards. Adventists give as much? If by not?

A. A.

RESPONSIBILITY.

. Bentley, in a recent number of Herald, has the following perti- emarks which may serve as a in more quarters than one:

of the corrections necessary at sent time, is in relation to the of some in regard to personal sibility. If all were feeling the d proper weight of responsibil- t is resting on them, we should lifferent state of things in busi- orals, politics, and religion.

are quite ready to fasten the re- ility of any disaster, by sea or pon the person having charge carriage or vessel on which it if he has been the cause of it, by action or want of it. Why we not as readily do so in relig- ncerns? We all admit that we a perilous voyage to an un- able state; that our future will upon how we act, and how act for us. This is fairly in- from the teachings of the Old ew Testaments. Christ, the ts, and the apostles are a unit teaching, and the courts of all d lands agree with the inspired . Now, what must we think of lass of religionists who teach he responsibility of saving oth- upon God; that they are resting cetly in Jesus; are so gloriously have been so thoroughly l in the blood of the Lamb that are not troubled about anything, anxiety; and in some instances conscientiously repeat the prayer, they are so free from d do not make any special ef- or the salvation even of their ildren.

eems to me that some voice to be raised against this teach- d delusion. If Mr. Wesley go to sleep at will, and Dr. Cul- r lost an hour's rest on account anxiety since he entered the r life," it does not prove, that to lly sanctified brings the same nce in that respect to all. Dan- e no pleasant bread for three weeks," and yet the Lord often him, "O man, greatly beloved;" ighteous soul was vexed; David n after God's own heart, found had taken hold of him on ac- of the wicked; Paul had great ess and continual sorrow in his because of his kinsmen and n who were unsaved; and Jesus "all night" that the devil might umph. Will any one doubt the rs of either Jesus or Paul, or e say they were not as intelligent dern Christians of the most cul- d class?

ead of calling the religion pro- by some, the "higher life," it d be called the lowest, or baby n. The most holy and useful s that have been in the church the reformation, were persons were often distressed for the sal- of others. Read the history of well, John Smith, Fletcher, Fin- Summerfield, and hosts of others night be named, and the idea of a g of responsibility seems to have resting upon them for the salva- f others to that degree that sleep ppetite often departed, and great rial was considered necessary ractical.

great want of the hour is a r or proper conviction of the re- ibility resting on individuals for lvation of others. "The harvest s plenteous but the laborers are Jesus said pray for "laborers," r resters. It will be time for us st when we are welcomed to d.

IS DR. TRUE MISTAKEN?

introduction of the question of hilation" into the Methodist Min- Meeting, of New York, is cre- no small sensation throughout country. Many journals simply the report of the proceedings and hem go on their doubt-producing

Others have comments more or andid, from the filthy blasphemy Spiritist journal to the tyrannical ry of the organ of the "most est sect" of orthodoxy. A sam- f the latter our readers will find e following editorial from the York Observer:

DR. TRUE IS MISTAKEN.

Seldom is so much nonsense packed into so small a space as the Rev. Dr. True managed to condense in a speech last week before the Methodist preachers of this city. In spite of his name, the Dr. was so wide of his mark as to justify the suspicion that he did not know what he was talking about. It appears that he has got the notion into his head that the souls of sinners after the death of the body are to die also: to be destroyed; he wrote an article to prove it, and the Quarterly Review of the church having declined to publish it, the author was called upon to state his views before the preachers in the weekly meeting, and in the midst of numerous unseemly interruptions, he made a profession of his faith: "He was not, he said, an annihilationist, but a destructionist. He did not believe that God would cause matter which he had created to cease to exist, but that the penalty of the incorrigibly wicked would prove to be the destruction of his conscious existence—the total cessation of all his functions. Man was naturally immortal and designed to live forever. The penalty of the law was the destruction of this immortality."

If this means anything, it is simply modern materialism; Dr. True considers the soul to be matter, which will cease to be conscious after the death of the body: and that is the end of the wicked! Dr. Curry and others protested warmly against such a doctrine being supposed to have any hold upon the meeting, and Mr. Corbett proposed to [illegible] out of the church, neck and heels. No one [illegible] a word to say in support of the heresy which burst like a shell in the midst of the preachers. It is not worth while to make any serious argument on the other side. It is only another of the many phases of "modern thought" by which the simple faith of the gospel is sought to be undermined or set aside by speculative and not practical men. Dr. True will have the satisfaction of misleading a few, for there is no sentiment too gross for human credulity. But he will not, we trust, have many who will forsake the truth as it is in the Bible, for the sake of following him to the belief that the human soul is to be destroyed, or become unconscious of its own existence. The everlastingness of the sensibility of one class of people is as distinctly affirmed as that of the other, and to deny it is no better than to abjure the truthfulness of the Scripture teachings on this subject. We hope Dr. True will yet see his blunder.

We recollect that when Dr. Ives first caused the publication of Mr. Constable's work on this topic in this country, that the Observer had some remarks in a similar strain, predicting that the thing would come to nought. But since then two large editions of the book have been issued, and the scattered copies have been, and still are, adding converts to the ranks of the hated "annihilationists." And the display of ill-temper and fear in the New York contest will go far to create new suspicions and confirm old convictions that there is something radically wrong in the orthodox theory of the future punishment.

Editor's Drawer.

In this department we shall consider such questions as may be answered briefly and suggestively. Topics requiring elaborate examination, or extended discussion may not be entertained.

POSSESSION BY DEMONS.

"But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts: and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you, with meekness and fear." (1 Pet. 3: 15.)

Please answer through The Times how we are to harmonize Luke 8: 2 with our materialistic views teaching the personality of God and the devil. "And certain woman, which had been healed of evil spirits and infirmities, Mary called Magdalene out of whom went seven devils."

Now if devils are personal beings, and as persons require space, in what way did they inhabit this woman? If they were real entities, why is the orthodox doctrine not true of the soul being a real entity.

Now we have positive proof in Mat. 8: 29-32 that these devils spoke a language that was understood by the keepers of swine: "And behold, they cried out, saying, What have we to do with thee, Jesus thou Son of God? Art thou come hither to torment us before the time?....And there was a good way off from them a herd of many swine feeding.....So the devils besought him, saying, If thou cast us out, suffer us to go away into the herd of swine....And he said unto them, Go. And when they were come out, they went into the herd of swine. And behold the whole herd of swine ran violently down a steep place into the sea, and perished in the waters."

Did the devils or demons, perish too? How are we to understand that these personalities came out of human beings and went into swine?

God always in revealing himself did it through a personality and that personality had a mouth and a tongue. The orthodox claim only one entity in a human body which would certainly be easier to believe, than to believe that there were seven in one body. Was not this an interpolation. We are told by the learned, that our zealous monks made marginal notes on recopying manuscripts, and that in later recopying by monks these marginal notes crept into the body of the manuscripts.

J. S. Lawyer.

REPLY.

We find no difficulty in our own mind, nor do we ever recollect having any in understanding those passages. When a child there was an old English Bible in the family, profusely illustrated (we have the Book still, in our library), and among its quaint pictures were several of the dispossession of demoniacs, in which the devils were pictured as taking their departure from the possessed via the mouth. The quaint absurdity of the thing settled a [illegible] way the demons might [illegible] in what ever [illegible] son or in swine, they were not contained physically.

The "possession" of a medium, willing or unwilling by a demon is undoubtedly by an influence similar to mesmerism. When one is mesmerised, they have no longer control over their own mental or physical powers; but these are dominated by the will of the mesmerizer, who is to all intents and purposes the possessor of his subject. Demons may possess this power in a still greater degree than we ever see it manifested in man. And as the possessed person would be controlled by the demon, which would be itself hidden from sight, it would be the most natural thing in the world to speak of the controlling agency as within the man; for it seems to operate from within. We understand therefore that in referring to demonology the popular language in discoursing upon its phenomena was adopted by the Savior.

Some are of the opinion that possession by demons was only a manifestation of disease in some form. We confess we have never been able to persuade ourselves that these narratives of "possession" did not indicate the existence of an order of spiritual beings, of super-human power and intelligence; substantial beings, too: but, no doubt, of more refined material than man.

We should be unwilling to entertain the idea of interpolation simply to get rid of a difficulty in any case. There are so many manuscipts, and the critical study of them has been carried to so high a point, that but few probable interpolations can possibly escape detection. And when a natural solution of the supposed difficulty is so reasonable, we see no reason for even supposing an interpolation.

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

We observe that Br. A. F. Dugger announces that he has started to visit the churches in Iowa and Missouri to introduce the Age-to-Come view among them. He anticipates greater success than we would dare predict for him. Our brethren in that region think for themselves.——Br. S. K. Gibson's late meeting at Brooklyn, Iowa, resulted in the organization of a church of eleven members. The opposition forces started a 'Union meeting,' but had not enough of the spirit of union to sustain it. Br. Gibson is now at Victoria laboring with good prospects. He has the Presbyterian house.——The church at Buchanan, Mich. are in hope of obtaining the services of Br. D. Mathewson as pastor, early in the spring.——A glorious revival is in progress at Lexington Ridge, Mich. Brn. Wright and Paton are there.——Religious meetings throughout the West have suffered much on account of the horse epidemic, which has caused a very thin attendance in many cases. At Br. Mitson's late meetings at Ridgeway, Iowa, some came five miles a foot. In othea places the interest has been equally great.——Brn. Sheldon and Howard are engaged in a very interesting revival at Magnolia, Wis. More than twenty have been converted, and the work is still in progress.

The Times.

AT HOME.

“ “ “ A daily illustrated (lithographed) news paper is seriously talked of in New York. It is to be lithographed by a new process.

“ “ “ The much abused 'franking privilege' has been abolished by act of Congress: and hereafter all postal matter must be paid for, whether sent by an M. C., or you or I.

“ “ “ "The Church of God" (Winebrennarians) claims to be a "church without sect." Its members must be baptized by immersion, must practice feet-washing, and accept other distinctive peculiarities, but these are not supposed to mark out any sectarian lines. In the United States and Canada they number about 130,000.

“ “ “ A plan is on foot for a pneumatic tube (not a spirit tube, however, as one might infer from the etymology of the word, but an air tube) from New York to Chicago, to convey packages of mail and other matter. The scheme proposes to propel spherical cars within the tube by atmospheric pressure, the air in front of the baggage-ball being exhausted by a system of air pumps. Who shall say the scheme is impracticable, in this [illegible]

“ “ “ [illegible]tific and mechanical wonders. [illegible] taining notoriety by murder [illegible] all. Refused a hearing in San Francisco, she went to Sacramento, and being denied any hall in the city, at last rented a saloon in which to speak. But no one would pay to see or hear her, and finally she was forced to throw the doors open free to any one who would come in. In this way she obtained a small rabble, who drank their liquor and listened to her harangue.

“ “ “ The small-pox has become an epidemic in both Boston and Baltimore. In the latter city the authorities attribute the spread of the disease to the fact that the blacks are ignorant and have a superstitious dread of being vaccinated, but no reason is given for its ravages in Boston. It is reported that large numbers of people are leaving the latter city to avoid the contagion and though there may be no truth in this story there can be little doubt that the city is severely afflicted.

“ “ “ One of the most remarkable instances of presence of mind and the virtue of soft soap was shown in Dalton, N. Y., the other day. A man working near a revolving shaft was caught in the main belt and was in a fair way of being dashed to pieces, when a boy standing beside the shaft, seized a dipper of soft soap and threw it upon the belt, causing it to slip, and release the man from certain death.

“ “ “ The Lawrence, (Mass.) American says that the engineers of a train which left Chelmsford during the storm on Saturday night, saw a large ball of fire "about the size of a bushel basket" descend from the heavens, and lodge on the track a few yards ahead of the locomotive, where it remained a few moments, then burst with a loud report, and illumined the darkness with a bright blue light. The engineer was not badly frightened, but the passengers were, and the train stopped for some time to wait for another ball, but none came.

“ “ “ Just at the conclusion of a recent circus performance in a North Carolina town, the clown stepped forward and informed the vast assembly that they had taken in about $600 that day—more money, he ventured to say, than any minister of the gospel in that county would receive for a year's service. He then plainly told them that the large portion of the audience were church members, who would plead their poverty when asked for money to support the gospel, and severely exposed their inconsistency. A few Sundays after, he preached in the same community, and made a strong appeal for missions, when a collection was taken amounting to $438.

“ “ “ Within the past few days we have received quite a number of letters, inquiring, in effect, "What is the Credit Mobilier, about which so much fuss is being made, and why didn't Congressmen have as good a right as others to invest in it, if it was a legitimate business transaction?" The Credit Mobilier is a huge joint stock corporation chartered by the Pennsylvania Legislature, and the object of it was to raise money with which to build the Union Pacific Railroad. The corporation made a "big pile of money" out of the operation, and divided it among its stockholders. The country is indebted to it for the speedy and early construction of the railroad. As regards the connection of certain Senators and Representatives in Congress with the corporation as stockholders, there would have been nothing improper in it if it had not sought and received material "aid and comfort" from Congressional legislation. Some of the Senators and members who purchased stock at Oakes Ames' request, being assured that it would be a very profitable investment, no doubt did so without suspecting that Congressional legislation would be asked for, and those who, on discovering the real state of the facts, canceled their purchases did wisely. The lesson of this affairs will not be lost upon our national law-makers. It will teach all future Senators and members of Congress that, in order to maintain their reputation for integrity, they must steer clear of everything that has even the appearance of a lobby job.—Journal.

“ “ “ Not for years has the weather been so serious a matter as for the past few months. People are justified in making it the theme of their conversation, for in its catastrophes more lives and property have been lost the last half year than by any other single cause. The inundations in Italy, France, England and along the German Ocean, the storms which have ravaged all these coasts and swept our own prairies have wrought mischief beside which the Boston fire or the epizootic seems inconsiderable. Day before yesterday a fearful snowstorm descended upon England very much like those that desolated the prairies of the Northwest and overwhelmed New York. In London, travel is virtually suspended and the streets deserted. The English and Irish coast are strewn with wrecks and dead bodies. The storm is one of the most violent that ever visited Great Britain at this time of year. It is singular that these outbreaks of nature should multiply at a moment when the feats of Weather Bureaus had almost made us believe that the weather was under our control, and fortunate that meteorological science has been able in many cases to forewarn in time to save.—Tribune Feb. 3.

ABROAD.

“ “ “ The English folks reckon only thirty-nine "fine" days in all last year.

“ “ “ The Pope once more threatens to leave Rome "if." Where will he go? Italy will sell the convent property. The Papa may bluster, but in doing so will but display his already well known childishness.

“ “ “ Louis Napoleon is stated to have been very devout the last two or three years of his life, and to have attended mass every Sabbath and holy day with scrupulous care. Before his death he made confession and received absolution. Instead of becoming an anti christ, he seems to have done the best he knew how to become a Christian.

“ “ “ The Russian heart is being fired for the threatening war by the circulation of stories of fierce cruelties practised upon Russians by the Khivans, whose territory the former people seek to appropriate. The nobility are volunteering for the campaign. The general preparations, however, indicate war [illegible] than with an insignificant “ “ “ Lloyd's [illegible] secular journal is now printed by [illegible] large rotary machines, and its average weekly sale is upwards of half a million copies. The weight of paper used each week is twenty-six tons and fifteen cwt. If the sheets were laid flat in a single pile they would reach a height of 200 feet. Placed end to end they would extend 473 1-2 miles, and spread out would cover an area of 130 acres, or more than one third of the entire city.

“ “ “ The proprietors of the London Daily Telegraph have offered to send out to Assyria, at an expense of a thousand guineas, for six months, Mr. George Smith, the decipherer of the tablets which have lately caused so much interest in the antiquarian and literary world. Both the trustees and the lords of the treasury, with whom they communicated, have cordially accepted the proposal; and an expedition to Assyria is in course of equipment, the result of which are in many quarters anticipated with much eagerness.

“ “ “ Recently at Woodfordsworthy, near Brideford, England, large placards were carried round bearing the well known verse "Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim," and on the strength of this assurance inviting all, dissenters as well as churchmen, to meet in the afternoon at the parish church, "that those who had toiled together in the harvest field might thank God with one accord, and might afterward join in breaking of bread and drinking the stingless cup." The appeal met with general response, the entire people turned out, all the clergymen participated, and, for the time at least, denominational distinctions and barriers were forgotten.

“ “ “ The London Telegraph reminds the government that Russian advances in Asia mean Constantinople, not India. Another journal says: The subjugation of Khiva or even the possession of Central Asia, which must inevitably happen, are nothing in themselves to England. But, after this, the supremacy of England in the East is involved, and this will tax the skill and knowledge of English statesmen. There is nothing to indicate that Russia will not fight for the possession of Constantinople rather than negotiate. England is not favorably disposed to negotiation, having been defeated twice recently—in the Alabama claims and the San Juan boundary questions. There is every prospect, therefore, that Russian aggrandizement must cross the path of English supremacy in the East, and that the right of possession must be settled sooner or later by the arbitrament of war.

“ “ “ A Geneva dispatch announces the dangerous illness of Dr. E. B. Pusey, the originator of the "Puseyite" movement in the English church, which, under the more vigorous leadership of Newman, developed into the Anglo-Catholic party whose early members finally went over to the Romish church. The movement commenced in 1833 with the publication of the "Tracts for the Times," by Oxford theologians, Dr Pusey being a professor at that university. Several years later he was suspended from preaching on account of his understood advocacy of the doctrine of transubstantiation. That seems to have frightened him, for he halted, while Newman, Caswell and others of the Oxford movement kept on in the path they had taken until it led them into the Roman Catholic church and the monastic Order of the Oratory.

Dr. Pusey has been charged with stopping short in his course through a love of the flesh pots of the English church, but such, we know, was not the opinion of his bolder colleagues who knew him most intimately. They attributed it to a constitutional hesitation at taking an irretrievable step, a "moral cowardice" in fact. His course has been an exemplification of the "fear" of the poet, which > "Back recoiled, it knew not why,

> Even at the sound himself had made."

Dr. Pusey is now nearly seventy three years old.

The Christian Life.

"Whiter than Snow."

What can be as white as the crystal snow?
Falling with softness where'er it may go;
Can aught be as white as the crystal snow?

The heart that is washed in the Savior's blood,
And cleansed from all sin in that purple flood,
And filled with that peace which Christ doth bestow,
Is purer and whiter than crystal snow.

O, Lord, take my heart; I give it thee now,
And wash in that blood which for me once did flow,
And make my heart pure, and "whiter than snow."

—Exchange.

"Any of You."

"If any of you lack wisdom." (James 1, 5.)

"Well" says one, "I am quite out of all catalogues: I am one by myself." Well, but you are surely contained in this "any of you." "Ah!" says one, "but I have a private fault, a sin, an offense which I would not dare to mention, which I believe has damned me forever." Yet the text says, 'If any of you.' If I saw a door open, and it said, "If any of you be hungry, let him come in here," I should not stop outside because I feared that I was not quite the person intended; I should say, "It is their business who mean to keep me out, to be more specific in their invitation. They have put it "any of you." I am certainly one of the sons of men, and I will step in to the feast."

Ah, soul! if God had meant to shut thee out, he would have been more plain about it, but here is not a shutting-out word at all. It says, "If any of you lack"—well, that is you, surely—that lack of wisdom helps to include you within the boundary. It does not limit the character; it widens it to you, because you feel how [illegible] not get it," you are. Thou must not suppose God to be a liar. How can you suppose such a blasphemy? "Let him ask of God and it shall be given him." "But," says one, "suppose my sins should prove to be too great!" I cannot, will not suppose anything which can come in conflict with the positive word of God. "Let him ask of God, and it shall be given him." Do you think God does not mean what he says? O sinner, will you add to all your sins this one great sin of thinking that God would lie? O man, he invited you to ask of him wisdom, and he says he will give it to you; doubt not the Lord, distrust not the veracity of Jehovah, but come humbly, tremblingly, to the foot of the Savior's cross. Ask that the sun may not go down until you have received the promise which the text presents to you.—Spurgeon.

Unsuitable Apparel.

It appears as if the object in life of many women was dress, and that alone; and that no departure from correct feeling as well as good taste were too great, if it be but the fashion. But that which we all see, I understand, gives no idea of that which may be seen, especially in places of public amusement. This prevailing folly is not only, I believe, an awful sin, directly contrary to the spirit and purport of the gospel, but it brings our womanhood into great contempt.

I often feel as if I could weep and look down for shame at that which continually meets the eye. Did I not know that it is in accordance with the dictates of fashion that women thus attire themselves, I should conclude a large propotion of those we meet were not of a reputable character. It would seem as if many were not contented to wear Satan's chains within, but that these chains must be hung outside, that the wearers might be known to be his captives! How different from the words;—"In like manner also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with broidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array" (1 Tim. 11: 9); "Be not conformed to this world" (Rom. 12: 2); "For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world." (1 John 11: 16.) From these texts we learn that this practice of self-gratification is contrary to God's revealed will, and God has said nothing to us in his blessed book in vain. Surely a solemn responsibility rests on professing Christian women, to avoid, in this thing, the sin of disobedience.—From a lady's letter.

The Narrow Way.

There is to be found in the religious world not only a solid, substantial, consistent, and devoted Christianity; but there is to be found also what may be termed a pretty, genteel sort of evangelicism, which too well combines with the luxurious ease of the world and the flesh.

Such a religion will not prepare the soul for sickness death and eternity. It will, at best leave it a prey to the most fearful doubts, or, still more to be feared, to the delusions of false peace. The way that leads to eternal life is much more narrow than many of our modern professors are aware of. The gate is too strait to allow all their trifling, and self-will, and fastidiousness, and carnal mindedness to press through it. The gospel is a system of self-denial; its dictates teach us to strip ourselves that we may clothe others; they leave us hungry that we may have wherewith to feed others; and send us bare footed among the thorns of the world, rather than silver-shod, with mincing steps, to walk at our ease amongst its snares.—Leigh Richmond.

WE SOMETIMES see Christians contending so earnestly for the particular tenets of their own church that they are in danger of forgetting Christ. A fine illustration is given of this by the late Dr. Norman McLeod, of Scotland, in his toucing story of "Wee Davie, Johnie Morten and auld Andrew Gebbie, the first a "keen Burgher," and the latter "an anti-Burgher," living at different ends of the same house, and it was the bargain that each should keep his ain side o' the house aye weel thatched. But they happened to dispute so keenly about the principles o' their kirks, that at last they quarelled and didna speak at a'! So ae day after this, as they were on the roof thatching each on his ain side, they reached the tap, and looking ower, [illegible] face. What [illegible] Andrew took [illegible] Kalmarnock cap and scratching his head said: Johnnie, you and me, I think, hae been very foolish to dispute as we hae done concerning Christ's will about our kirks, until we hae clean forgot his will about ourselves; and so hae fought so bitterly for what we ca' the truth, that it has ended in spite. Whatever's wrang it's perfectly certain that it can never be richt to be uncivil, unneighborly, unkind, in fac, tae hate ane anither. Na, na, that's the devil's wark and no God's. Noo, it strikes me that, maybe, it's wi' the kirk as wi' this house. Ye're working on ane and me on t'ither, but if we only do our wark weel we will meet at the tap at last. Gie's your han' auld neighbor!" And so they shook han's and were the best o' freens ever after!

Correspondence.

From Our English Correspondent.

In addition to the judgments poured upon the apostacy, which were recorded in my last letter, new and important complications have arisen this week in Switzerland, and they are so serious that it is stated that the diplomatic relations between Switzerland and the Holy See have been broken off. The Papal Charge d'Affaires at Lucerne is expected at Rome with the staff of the legation. So that it is possible and even certain that Romanism will lose another of its national friends and props.

The government in Switzerland, alive to its interests as a worldly power, does not see fit to acknowledge the supremacy of the Vatican prisoner over the rulers of kingdoms, and, consequently, refuses to sanction the dismissal of priests, excommunicated by their bishops for not accepting the definitions of the Vatican concerning infallibility. Hence, the altercation with Rome, and the new disruption of "diplomatic relations."

On Sunday last the Swiss federal government made another step forward, wounding the "apostolic rights" (sic.) of the Vicar still more severely, for our news prints inform us that a "popular vote was taken in the Canton Soleure on the question of the periodical re-election of the ecclesiastics. The proposed law was accepted by 7,584 against 6,082 votes. Pastors in the above Canton will by this law only hold their cures for six years, unless reinstated by the suffrages of the commune. This measure has called forth much opposition from the cures, many of whom have threatened not to grant absolution to those who voted in favor of such an innovation." Thus, it may be safely reckoned that the Cantons of Switzerland have "cleared out and gone" from under priestly tyranny.

Looming in the distance is another cloud, though at present in size it is only as large as a man's hand. You know, I told you, in my last, that the cry in France by two thousand students after Rolin was, "Down with the Jesuits!" Now, it is stated that the French Ambassador to the Vatican, M. de Bourgoing, has resigned. "The principal ostensible motion for the resignation of M. de Bourgoing is that the French government have instructed the officers of the frigate Orenoque, stationed at Civita Vecchia, to pay their respects to the king at the Quirinal as well as to the Pope at the Vatican on new year's day. M. de Bourgoing sided with the view of the Pope, that the Orenoque being attached to the French embassy at the Vatican, the officers of the ship could not officially visit the king of Italy."

The Pope does not fall in with France in her recognition of Victor Emmanuel as king of Italy and Rome. But the French know what they are about, and we read "the resignation of M. de Bourgoing, the French Ambassador at the Vatican, is due to pressure from influential members of the Right, who wish to make it a pretext for again raising the Roman question on the meeting of the National Assembly, and attacking M. de Remusat." It is certainly very significant that Victor Emmanuel should be visited officially at the Quirinal in Rome. It means an acknowledgement of Italy's king, which the Pope cannot but interpret as an insult offered to himself. There is a storm brewing for the Papacy in France. It will shower down soon.

Austria, as I hinted in my last, will soon be saying to the Jesuits, "Begone!" New strength is being added to the popular feeling and impression for their departure. The Echo says plainly:

> "The agitation against the Jesuits is also gaining ground daily in Austria; but some of the leaders of that movement are accused by their own party even of merely trying to turn the influence of Jesuitism into the channel of Jewish stock-jobbery, aided by a powerful Hebrew journalism."

[illegible] shall be threatening Ardu, who will not decide that the foes of the Pope are they of his own house?

The above are new vicissitudes. The old ones are increasing in practical meaning and demonstration. Prussia is "doing business" for God in fulfillment of his Word. Thus, a Catholic organ writes concerning the evil befallen its "ism" in that country:

> "Bismarck and his henchman Falk must be credited with no small amount of ingenuity in devising means of coercion against the Catholic church. Two months ago Herr von Ledochowski, Archbishop of Posen and Guesen, issued a pastoral letter in which the 'increased difficulties' of the church, arising from the new education act and the expulsion of [illegible] regulars,' were greatly deplored. The pastoral was to be read in the churches of the diocese on the 8th inst.; thereupon the government issued a decree, according to which school children were not to attend mass, and the churches belonging to the state not to be opened on that day. This is doubtless meant for an installment of the promised 'separation of church and state.' On the other hand, the Catholic press is subjected to an unceasing systematic persecution in all parts of the country; not one of the Catholic organs but has been visited with a Pressprozess during the last few months. On the occasion of the centenary of the first partition of Poland, the liberal papers were unanimous in praising the Prussian annexation policy to the skies; a Catholic local paper, the Przyjaciel Ludu, of Kulm, ventures to differ from these, and reflects upon the impropriety of celebrating an infamous action; forthwith an information is lodged, and the editor, Herr Danielewsky, is sentenced to six months' imprisonment."

The Papal Allocution is very freely commented on by the press of this country. The Pope is come to be considered by many as a chronic complaint. And we think he has something to complain of. I will give you a few short extracts from paper references to the allocution. The Conservative says:

> "The Pope has delivered another allocution, but it is a devoid of novelty as a Christmas pantomime. The old jokes, the old denunciations, the old tags—nothing is changed. His Holiness preconised nine fresh bishops, six of whom were Italian. Such figures tell their own tale. He would give Italy the only thing of which it has already a superabundance."

The Rock remarks:

> "Face to face with a real grievance, Pope Pius IX. in his old age knows how to give a favorable papal complexion to the matter. He has to complain bitterly of the action of the Italian government. The law presented to parliament on the subject of religious corporations 'deeply wounds' the Pope's rights, and, as he indignantly remarks, 'violates the rights of our apostolic mission.' It appears, however, that this 'apostolic mission' is no more recognized and respected by the Italian government than it is by English Protestants, and the government frames its course accordingly. But the Pope brings his newly-found infallibility to the rescue, and this is his utterance ex-cathedra: 'We consequently declare void every acquisition of their property made under any title whatsoever.' Here is a fine opportunity for the proof of the dogma promulgated amidst the greatest display of man's arrogance and pomp, and of Heaven's wrath and displeasure. Will the acquisitions become void because the Pope has so decreed? It is significant that the concluding portion of the allocution was devoted to a recapitulation of the troubles of Rome, of its waning influence in Germany, in Switzerland, in the East, and even in Spain, that hitherto closely veiled land of the blackest darkness of ignorance and superstition. Verily the dogma of infallibility was thrust forth at the very moment when every kind of circumstance combined to expose its naked monstrosity, and its manifest impiety, deceit, and wickedness."

The Jesuits, expelled from continental harbors, are seeking a shelter in England. I need scarcely tell you that Protestants do not half like it, and are beginning to grumble aloud. The Rock of this week delivers itself in this strain:

> "The people of England know little or nothing about the Jesuits, and are unconcerned in proportion to their ignorance. They are not aware that this powerful class of Romish emissaries sprang into existence simultaneously with the reformation; that Ignatius Loyola and Martin Luther were nearly contemporaries, and that the main design of the followers of Loyola was and is, by every means, foul or fair, to suppress the reformation, and to reduce the world again to entire subjection to the Pope. For a long period the unscrupulous principles of this daring fraternity retarded their progress; but latterly they have not only with decided success, but, in truth, they now represent the whole policy of the Romish church. The present Pope is entirely under their dominion; and the declarations of the immaculate conception of the mother of our Lord—to whom Loyola originally devoted himself—and of the personal infallibility of the pope, were schemes of theirs for obvious purposes. There is an interesting book entitled Quirinus, which contains letters written from Rome to Dr. Dollinger and the Old Catholics of Germany during the recent papal council. It exhibits very clearly the power and policy of the Jesuits, which have led to such a serious revolt among the Romanists of Germany. It also gives important glimpses of the relative influence of the Jesuits and other Papal orders, formerly so powerful. Here is an extract from this work:
>
> "We may readily conceive the excitement in the Jesuit camp. After the patient, indefatigable toil of years of [illegible] come at last. Up to 1773 [the period of their suppression by Pope Clement XIV.], their order, from its numbers, the cultivation of its members, the influence of its schools and educational establishments, and its compact organization was unquestionably the most powerful religious corporation, but at the same time was limited and held in check by the influence and powerful position of the other orders. Augustinians, Carmelites, Minorites, and, above all, Dominicans, were likewise strong, and moreover leagued together for harmonious action through their common hatred of the Jesuits, or through the natural desire to escape being mastered by them. Dominicans and Augustinians possessed by long prescription the most influential offices in Rome; so much so, indeed, that the two congregations of the Index and the Holy Office were entirely in the hands of this order of preachers, to the exclusion of the Jesuits. Since the restoration of the Jesuits this is completely changed, and entirely in their interest. All the ancient orders are now in decline, above all in theological importance and influence; they do but vegetate now. Moreover the Dominicans have been saddled with a general thoroughly devoted to the Jesuits, Jandel, a Frenchman, who is exerting himself to root out of his order the Thomist doctrines, so unpalatable to the Jesuits. The youngest of the great orders—the Redemptorists or Liguorians—act, sometimes willingly and sometimes unwillingly, as the serving brothers, roadmakers, and laborers for the Jesuits. And hence, now that they enjoy the special favors of the Pope, they have come to acquire a power in Rome, which may be called quite unexampled. They have, in fact, become already the legislators and trusted counselors of the Pope who sees with their eyes and hears with their ears." . . . . "And thus if Papal infallibility becomes a dogma, what inevitably awaits us is, that the infallibility will not merely be worked in certain cases by the counsel and direction of the Jesuits; much more than that. The Jesuits will for the future be the regular stewards of this treasure, and architects of the new dogmas we have to expect. They will stamp the dogmatic coinage and put it into circulation."

The Germans clearly saw the object of the new dogma, viz., to furnish a powerful instrument, a living power or puppet in the hands of the Jesuits, from whose dictates there should be no appeal. Count Bismarck had no idea of succumbing to such a dangerous power any more than Dr. Dollinger and his friends. The German government, therefore, is effectually restraining and driving the Jesuits, with their unscrupulous and overbearing principles, out of Germany, while Great Britain is opening its arms to receive them.

But I have already been too long, and will now conclude.

From Luther Kerr, Highland Creek, Ont.

I cannot but take notice of the great controversy existing between God and man, between the possessors of the truth and the professors of it. Take Job as a sample of God's testimony, relative to the nature and destiny of man, and see what he says they are and vice versa what the Christians say of it. Job says, "Man dieth and wasteth away; yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he?" (Job. 14: 10.) He (Job) desired to be hid in the grave, not in heaven, and to be remembered at "a set time" [the resurrection] (ch. 14: 13.) "If a man die shall he live again? All the days of my appointed time will I wait till my change come." (ch. 14: 14.) The time of the change here referred to is at the resurrection; for Paul says, "the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." (1 Cor. 15: 52.) Again: "Thou [God] prevailest forever against him [man] and he passeth, thou changest his countenance and sendest him away. His sons come to honor, and he knoweth it not; and they are brought low but he perceiveth it not of them." (Job. 14: 20, 21.) "His [man's] soul draweth near unto the grave, and his life to the destroyers." (ch. 33: 22) "Shall mortal man be more just than God?" (ch. 4: 17.)

Now from all this array of demonstration, we infer that man is a fallible perishable and dying creature susceptible of calamities of all kinds; and dies both soul and body, and not as our orthodox friends would have us believe in the face of all truth that man is immortal (from which exegises they can derive no benefit), susceptible only of joy and happiness, id est, the man proper—the immortal soul—and goes direct to heaven upon the death of the body which is ipse dixit without the least shade of Biblical or even philosophical proof. Their position is, that the soul is the real man—the body being only the house in which the soul-man lives. Now let us compare orthodoxy's description of the nature and destiny of man with that of Job, and see how well they agree, by reviewing the ground gone over. Job: "Man dieth" (affirmative.) Orthodoxy. Man does not die, but goes to heaven. Job. "If a man die shall he live again? All the days of my appointed time will I wait till my change come." (See Paul's time of change.) Ortho. If a man live shall he die again? (that is, if he be brought into being or existence will he ever cease to exist?) No! he cannot die, he is immortal. The appointed time is until death, then a change takes place.

Job. "His [man's] sons, when he is sent away, come to honor and he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them." Ortho. His sons come to honor and he knows it; they are brought low, and he perceiveth it of them, being in heaven and essential to divine knowledge. Job. "His [man's] soul draweth near unto the grave." Orth. It is an impossibility for the soul to die, and thus draw near unto the grave, for it is immortal and cannot die. Job. "Shall mortal man be more just than God?" Orth. Man is an immortal being, a part of God.

Now can any one help seeing how Job and the so called orthodoxy disagree in their opinion relative to the nature and destiny of man. I trust others connot but take notice, as they read the Bible, and be able to discriminate between God's truth and man's tradition. For if men refuse to obey the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, and come not to the light, lest their deeds be reproved but love to stand in darkness, and holding it up for light, neither enter into the kingdom themselves, nor suffer them that are going to enter in, their destruction will be everlasting from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power, which will be death eternal. (2 Thes. 1: 8; Mat. 22: 13; 25: 46.)

From Peter Mitson, Elliota, Minn.

At home January 1. Want to go to Cresco, some eighteen miles away; team sick; not able to go so far. My son took it and carried me eight miles, and then went back, and I continued my way on foot, with my heart filled with love to God and my fellow-men. Stopped over night with Br. Russell, in Cresco; put a notice in the paper to preach there the 9th, and took the cars for Ridgeway. I found the brethren had written me the day before to come and attend the M. E. Q. M. One belonging to the M. E. church had asked the minister in charge to show from the Bible at what time in the past God gave man immortality, etc. Said he could not tell. He then sent the same question in writing to the presiding elder. They wanted me to hear the answer he would give. I visited with those that had got on the track of truth; found them growing strong and thanking God for the light of the precious Word. I found some of those who would not come out to hear us at the first had now become interested and had sent for books and THE TIMES. One sister who had THE TIMES sent to her brother, in Dubuque Co., Iowa, has received a letter from him speaking of the paper very favorably. On the evening of the 4th I went to hear the presiding elder preach. He did not fire very heavy shots. I felt that if there be a people on the earth who have the truth it is those who cling to the Word of God. Sunday forenoon he said he had heard that the religious views of some had been disturbed, and they might think he would discourse on that point, but that battle had been fought years ago, the victory won, and the contest given up with the exception of here and there a little one rising up; and he did not purpose to go over the ground again. But in the evening he dwelt briefly on the nature of man, trying hard to make the people believe in the duality of human nature. It is claimed that he is one of the "heaviest guns" of the M. E. church in Iowa. He said, in the course of his argument, "I know there is not a man in the house that is a man but what knows he has both a spiritual and material nature." He reiterated the assertion very emphatically, as if proof lay in the enforcement. In closing, he said the week following, according to the Evangelical Alliance had been set apart for prayer, and that the pastor in charge would meet with the people every night through the week. I went home with one of his most prominent members who told his wife that the elder's argument that evening had decided him; and as she had already embraced the truth fully, the husband's decision was received with heartfelt gratitude to God. That sermon helped those who had embraced the truth and others who were studying, more than I could have done had I preached myself. The next morning the brother above-mentioned, who was a steward in the church, and whose defection had been made known, was called upon to define his postion. Having his Bible at hand he propounded a few questions therefrom to the elder, Scriptural questions upon cardinal points of doctrine, propositions in direct conflict with several articles in the church formula of faith. The elder being unable to answer them, the brother called for his name, giving them the requirement of the word, that each professing faith in the Lord should be able to give to everyone that asketh a reason for the hope that is in them, with meekness and fear; at the same time asking if there were any charges against himself, wife, or daughter. As there were none he called for their names also, and all left the church.

As the school house was to be occupied through this week we met on Monday night at the house of Br. Bolles, and organized a church of eight members, Br. B. being appointed deacon.

The Word is working wonders here. Blessed be God for his mercies! Though this past week has been one long to be remembered because of the fearful storm that has raged throughout the northwest, notwithstanding the warring of the elements and the strong opposition, the truth has obtained a foothold here that will tell to the salvation of souls in the day of the Lord Jesus.

From A. J. Winter, near Madelia, Minn.

I am a member of the Baptist Society, and have been for eleven years. About three years since, my uncle, who lives at Burlington, sent me "Whitmore's Immortality," and "The Plan of Redemption," which lit our lamp of understanding and bade us go on our way rejoicing. There are quite a number, probably more than half of the church to which I belong, that are rejoicing in hope of the resurrection and the glorious appearing of our Lord. "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?" "I verily thought with myself that I ought to do many things contrary" to the faith of which this is a part, which thing I also did by way of condemning the truth. The orthodox say we are beside ourselves. Our answer is, we are not, but speak forth the words of truth and soberness. The Baptist minister at Madelia says that the modern Sadducees, (as he inappropriately calls us,) are "spasmodic." Well, I suppose they are spasmodic, if the disciples were, when "the whole multitude of the disciples began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice for all the mighty works that they had seen, saying, blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord; peace in heaven and glory in the highest." Let us be zealously affected about every good thing. The minister mentioned above is now in possession of "Whitmore on Immortality." I hope he may see the light.

Eld. Bursell stopped here last October while on his way home from Windom, and preached three sermons for us, making our hearts to burn within us as he reasoned of the coming of Jesus, the resurrection of the saints, and of the kingdom that shall never be destroyed. Glorious hope! "Then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written: Death is swallowed up in victory! O Death, where is thy sting? O Grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin; and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Br. S. C. Wellcome came and preached for us about one month after Br. Bursell was here. Also Eld. Perry gave us a call while Br. Wellcome was here. May the Lord bless the ministering brethren, and give them grace and strength to proclaim the truth as it is in Jesus to a world lulled into a stupid lethargy by the cry, "Peace! Peace!!"

From Joseph H. Dillier, David's Island, N. Y. H., Jan. 22, 1873.

I submit to you a brief sketch of my life, hoping that it may serve as a warning to other young Christians, to beware of the army and to stay in the citizen's life where they can freely and openly serve the Lord their Master. I was born of Roman Catholic parents and brought up in that faith until I was twelve years old. My mother died before my third year, and I lived with my father some nine years afterwards, when I entered the world for myself, "on my own hook," and found employment in a Protestant family. In 1862 I entered the army as a drummer, serving until 1865. I then came to Jefferson, Illinois. While boarding there in a hotel, I became acquainted with a Christian lady, (Mrs. Garlow,) who one evening invited me to her evening prayers, which invitation I accepted. She asked me to pray, which I acknowledged I was unable to do. From that day I was fast mending in the way of the Lord and studied the Scriptures.

In my wanderings I entered the city of Chicago and there made the acquaintance of a Baptist brother, and after a short time was baptised, under the motto, "Search the Scriptures," which I purposed zealously to do. Some time after I attended a "colored" prayer-meeting, where I met a sister (E. Snyder) who invited me to the Advent chapel on Green street. Br. Grant was preaching in his convincing way, and I became more and more interested in the Holy Bible and also interested in the Advent papers, among which THE TIMES has ever since been a comfort to me. I continued serving in that church up to the lamentable disaster which put Chicago in ashes. I was, with thousands of others, made homeless, and not finding any work, I resolved to enter the army and enlisted for five years!

I am now serving in the Third Artillery, and stationed on David's Island, New York Harbor. There are but few citizens living here, and fewer men that care for religion, which is entirely neglected. It is hard, very hard, indeed, for me to serve the Lord; I meet with so many obstacles and so much persecution and have nothing to lean upon but my Bible, which I carefully peruse in my leisure hours.

I conclude by asking the brothers and sisters to pray for me, and hoping that my example may show others how blessed a gift they enjoy in being able to serve their Lord without opposition or hindrance.

Br. Thomas W. Raymond, Bergen, N. Y. writes:

Mr. Editor: I saw a notice in the TIMES that has stirred me up to write this letter to you. It was an appeal to the readers of THE TIMES to aid in behalf of the paper with money and pen; and I am in hopes to be able to do something in both ways. To be sure it will be but a little; but it will be spared by economy in our living, by self-denial. But I feel that I must do something to help the cause along. I have distributed tracts and lent my books for the purpose of giving light to others, besides hailing men in the place of my business; and I am in hopes to see fruit. And I am looking for the Master, and feel he cannot come too soon.

I attend the Methodist church, have a class of young ladies who are taught the mortality of man, and the life eternal through faith in Christ and the resurrection from the dead. The Superintendent sometimes leaves the school in charge with me, and I find there is a great many who believe in the Advent doctrine, or the plain literal declarations of God's word. I had the oversight of the School last Sabbath and our lesson was Gen. ch. 1. They manifested a good interest and were all desirous of hearing the truth, and by a large majority they voted against their church discipline in favor of simple Bible truth. I gave a Baptist deacon some of our tracts to-day. He is a good man and will receive the truth. He is a Union Christian. I can see fruits all around which have come through the giving of tracts. We must "sow beside all waters" and God will "give the increase." If we sow in faith and tears we shall reap in joy. I have been trying to go and hear Br. Whitmore, but have not as yet. Yet I intend to as soon as possible.

From Wm. McCullock.

By the overruling providence of God I have been detained in this place, much beyond our expectations. The extreme severity of the weather, in connection with the prevailing horse epidemic has rendered it impracticable to hold meetings in the country; and it is with much difficulty that they can be held in the city—every few evenings so cold and blustering, with frequent storms interfering greatly with a hearing of the precious truths we have to preach, or the people we wished to hear them. But we have continued the effort in the name of the Lord in Maryville, till some have been made to yield, and are now rejoicing in hope, and the interest is still rising.

The brethren here have rented a very nice and commodious hall, opposite the Public Square, just south of the court house, where they can feel at home and worship God, without resorting to the streets as heretofore. I think there is a brighter prospect before the church at Maryville. They have been receiving some additions to their numbers, and have been cheered, and with the labors of Br. Hink, I have great reason to believe that the good work already begun will go on till several more will be added to their number.

I expect to leave this city to-morrow (Jan. 23), for the North, stopping a few days at the Highland church, then I shall be subject to the wishes of the brethren in S. W. Iowa, and probably finish the winter campaign in that region, as the Lord may seem to indicate by his providence. Meanwhile pray for me.

From L. W. Wood, La Crosse Co., Wis.

One more year of the world's history is in the past, and while many of our brothers and sisters have taken away and are now in the enemy's land, there to remain until the last trump shall sound, you and I are spared thus far; and my prayer is, that while time lasts you may be abundantly blessed with health and means so as to continue sounding to the world the last gospel message. We have reason to think that some of the seed scattered in this region years ago was not sown in vain, but is producing fruit to the glory of God. And well it might, for the Lord has caused his truth to be proclaimed all through this region of country by mighty men. And in order to work more successfully in the cause of Christ, arrangements have been made for Br. Foster, (formerly of the M. E. church, but now pastor of the Advent church in Sparta), to organize a church and divide his labors equally between that place and this, commencing January 26. We hope the Lord may bless his labors abundantly and crown our efforts in this place with success. We have great faith in the efficacy of prayer, and would therefore ask an interest in the prayers of all God's people that this effort may be successful.

From H. M. Benson, Ohio.

The spirit of the Lord is stirring the people in this vicinity. In Norwalk there have been four hundred conversions. They have formed themselves into delegations to go out into the little towns and districts and speak, and they are indeed doing a great work. It is called the Young Men's Christian Association. Oh! that they had the truth. I have attended some of their meetings, but heard nothing of the coming of the Lord, but plenty about the immortal soul. Last Thursday eve seven came out here and held a meeting. One, a lawyer wanted every one that believed he had an immortal soul to save to rise to their feet. I was the only one present in all that audience that did not rise.

I feel that the time has come to work and I want to be up and doing and striving to let my light shine. I hope to be able to do something to spread the truth. Enclosed you will find the money for my paper this coming year. My two little girls have each a little "bank" in which they deposit all their pennies, which they call "the Lord's money." They wish me to send it to you for the Publishing Fund. My paper I send to friends that I think will read them, and I lend them around the place, wherever I can find any one who will read. Let us gird on the whole armor, and fight the battle manfully.

From F. J. Houghton, Ripley N. Y.

I have wished to let you know that the truth is spreading slowly in this locality. It is not quite two years since I first heard an Advent sermon which was delivered by J. W. Taylor, although I had been induced to read the Crisis a little by a neighbor. Aside from this I knew nothing but misrepresentation. But the truth has set me free. Although myself and wife belong to another church, we are not there in sentiment, and they know it; for we are not afraid to give them a reason for our hope, and earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints. And others begin to think that the Bible means what it says, and that if the dead rise not, then they, also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished. I gave Elder Smith, a Christian preacher, Whitmore's Immortality, also Futurity by Sheldon, and he is now preaching to an organized church of Adventists, a few miles from here. I might write of others that are receiving the light, but enough for this time.

From Mary F. Bishop, Izzard Co., Ark.

Ever since I have been reading the papers and books on the advent of Christ I find it to be the true hope of the child of God. I would that I were able to do something for the press. My prayer is ever in behalf of the cause you advocate; and, as the Lord prospers me, I will help the cause, though I am a poor girl, trying to serve God, and take care of my aged mother. I have but little at any time to help with, only my prayers daily to my God for the cause.

I do value THE TIMES above any paper that I ever yet read. I dont't see how I can do without it, though it does seem to me that I cannot get money to pay you for it. It has ever been a source of comfort and consolation to me in my lonely hours to read the letters from so many of God's believing ones, and to hear the glad news of our speedy coming. I can only leave it to your decision whether the paper shall come or not. I ask an interest in your prayers, and promise to pray for you and the good cause that you are engaged in until Christ comes.

If the world should agree to speak nothing but the truth, what an abridgement it would make of speech!—Silliman.

As long as there are evil ears there will be evil tongues.

Our Young Folks.

"Whosoever."

There were children on the floor,
Conning Bible verses o'er.

"Which word, all the Bible through,
Do you love best?" queried Sue.

"I like faith the best," said one;
"Jesus is my word alone."

"I like Hope;" "and I like Love."
"I like Heaven, God's home above."

One more small than all the rest—
"I like Whosoever best;

"Whosoever—that means all,
Even I who am so small."

Whosoever! Ah! I see;
That's the word for you and me.

"Whosoever will," may come,
Find a pardon and a home.

A Letter.

To the young folks, readers of the ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES.

Dear Children: I conclude that most, if not all of you are accustomed to attend Sunday School in your neighborhood. Some of you perhaps are privileged to attend a Sunday School where the teachers, and the superintendent are what we call intelligent students of the Bible; and who, under its heavenly teachings, have their understandings enlightened, and their hearts and lives brought into sweet subjection to them. From such a superintendent, and from such teachers you cannot fail to have learned something which even children could understand, in regard to the mortal, sinful, dying natures of all mankind, which they have inherited from Adam, the progenitor or head of the human race; and you have all been reminded time and time again, of what you feel and know to be true, that you individually as children have sinned, and come short of the glory of God; and that need a savior, one who can save you from your sins, and sin's consequences; and impart unto you a righteousness, which shall make you acceptable to a just and holy God; who hates sin, and who will not permit it to exist in his presence. They cannot fail to have told you, how that God, even the holy and the righteous God, so loved the world as to give his beloved son to die for them; and how Jesus so loved them, as to be willing to lay aside the glory which he had with the Father before the world was, and take upon himself our human nature, and in that nature to humble himself, and become obedient unto death, even the death of the cross.

All this, and much, very much more, they cannot fail to have told you about, God's love to you in Christ Jesus; his death, his resurrection, his ascension unto glory, what he, as High Priest, is doing for all those who are truly his disciples, as their Advocate and Intercessor before God the Father. You know John the beloved disciple, when he had become quite aged, never wearied of speaking of the love of Jesus; indeed love, love, was his constant theme; as he himself, seemed to live in an atmosphere of love. He felt assured of two things, of which you ought and must be assured, if you would be happy and useful as the disciples of Jesus. These two things were, that Jesus loved him, and he loved Jesus. This is what we would have you understand as a reciprocal love. Jesus first loved us, even when we were enemies, and gave himself for us. If he had not first loved us, we should have remained in our sins; and never should have been brought to love him. John in his letter says:—"We love him because he first loved us." This dear children is the divine arrangement, and a very necessary arrangement it is, too. The Lord very well knew our utterly ruined condition; and that if left to ourselves, we never would, or could love him.

There is a wonderful transforming power in love. Love begets love, as hatred begets hatred among wicked men. Did you ever read those words of the apostle, where he says, "The love of Christ constrains us, because we thus judge; that if one died for all, then were all dead. And this love of Christ constrains us, that as he died for all, we who now live, [have new and spiritual life now and have hope of eternal life at his coming,] should not henceforth live unto ourselves, but unto him who died for them and rose again." These words of the apostle, children, you will find in 2 Cor. 5: 14, 15., and for the benefit of those of you who have made a profession of Christ, and with a desire that you would live a life consistent with such a profession, I desire you to read, and think much upon those words contained in v. 17. "Therefore if any man [or any person, man, woman or child] be in Christ, (what then?) he is a new creature, [or as the marginal reading is, let him be a new creature.] Old things are passed away, and behold all things are become new." New life, new hopes, new and joyful prospects for the eternal future. New relations altogether, and with the change comes responsibilities to live to the honor and glory of your divine Master and Lord, who loved you and gave himself for you.

You must never, no never forget that you are not your own, but bought with a price. Not with silver and gold. Oh no! but with the precious blood of Jesus. Therefore you ought to "glorify God with your body and your spirit which are his."

O ye children, ye lambs of the flock of Christ, hear O hear him speaking to you: "If ye love me keep my commandments. And by this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye do whatsoever I command you. Every Christian should in his life and deportment be a living epistle of the truth, know and read of all men. Oh! what a different world this would be to-day, if all the professed followers of Jesus who have lived and those who are now living, would have but followed out these faithful, reasonable and affectionate exhortations of the Savior and his apostles. And when ever little children, disciples of Christ have done so God has blessed them, and made them useful in his service. May the Lord bless all the lambs of his flock and keep them to his heavenly kingdom. Affectionately yours,

L. D. F. A.

Willie's Home.

"This is my home!" cried the little one, a treasure boy of six summers, as, fresh and rosy, he came from school at the close of a short Winter's afternoon. "Indeed, little Willie," said his father, "why is it? Suppose you go and try at the next door; suppose you step into the entry, throw off your little coat as you have done here, and go into the parlor, would not that be your home?"

"No, indeed," said Willie, "it would not be."

"But tell me why not?"

Willie had never thought of this. He paused a moment, then directing his eyes to where his mother sat sewing, he replied, with an earnest gesture, "MY MOTHER lives here."

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, February 4, 1873.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.
Sent Three Months on trial for Thirty-five cents.

The officers of the Association are as follows
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON.
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK.
Treasurer—AMBROSE W. TUCKER
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS. L. H. DAVIS,
A. S. CALKINS.
EDITORIAL COMMITTEE
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH,
A. H. BABCOCK.
BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES

☞ Address all communications to Wm. L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago, and

☞ Make all Postal Orders and Drafts payable to him, and always state the amount of money enclosed plainly at the head of the letter.

☞ Give your Post Office address in full in every letter.

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions.

Business Department.

THE WESTERN RURAL.—To any one paying us $3.50, we will send the Western Rural, the popular and excellent Rural and Family Weekly of the West for one year, and credit one year's subscription paid to our own paper. The Western Rural, alone, is worth $2.50 per year, and every family in the West ought to have it. [tf

The "Times" to Ministers.

We send THE TIMES to ministers of any denomination for one dollar a year—half price. Those who wish to send the paper to preachers can take advantage of this fact.

To Correspondents.

A. F. MOORE. The church where Satan's seat is or was held fast to the name and did not deny the faith of Jesus. Their reward was "the hidden manna" and a precious stone containing the hidden name which secured a blessing to the holder of it. May such be your lot.... J. S. THORP. We have not the men nor the means to send them into your section of Kansas. We feel deeply for you. Hundreds of others are in the same situation, crying for help and no helper save God and his Word, and a few tracts and books. May the Lord stir up the spirit of his people to most many work in the highways and hedges.... H WILLETT. We are always glad to hear from you in the way you speak of.... B. J. BROWNELL. Br. Whitmore has undertaken a series of articles on that very subject as soon as he can find time. They will appear in THE TIMES.... H. WILLETT. The appointment came too late for insertion last week.... J. F. ADAIR. We could not make out the name of the postoffice you gave for books to be sent to. Write again.... J. B. NOYES. According to our list your subscription commenced last July, and you owe for six months.... J. J. TUTTLE. Hope you may have good success.

Letters Received

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notice to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

A M B Graham
S W Bird
B F Wise
S J Cox
H Welty
W M Rankin
C Fox
S W Rider
R E Huff
J W Cowles
C W Stephenson
B F Retherford
J F Adair
N Branch
S S Halstead
A D Hearn
O D Gibson
A C Spencer
A C Abbott
H M Ringlcke
S K Gibson
M E Prouty
M A Tibbetts
J Taylor
A Collins
J F Nicholson
R Russell
C Kelley
J Monaghan
E Spotswood
J Shaw
D F Trask
A E Rathburn
P C Campbell
H Ziegenfuss
M A Randolph
C C Marston
L Hellaberg
S Warner
N W Wait
T Peacock
J N Porter
J W Ballard
C A Walker
G Irwin
H M Wheeler
B Kessler
E W Davis
C L Jones
N A Hitchcock
S Gale
W J Watrous
D H Crocker
H Cushman
M G Cook
D Shannon
E H Durand
J W Johnson
J F Wilcox
J Massey
F G Williams
H Fest
J R Turner
J G Huntington
T Allen
R H Bateman
C B Clapp
L Sturdevant
J J Tuttle
L C McKinstry
S B Mabey
J M Dalton
G Thompson
C M Keach
S C Wellcome
E Strong
H Brown
J H Whitmore
C Barnes
W McCulloch
J S Lawter
A Lewis
U Waffle
W Dunbar
J B Noyes
W Branch
S C Clark
A E Babcock
G W Miller
A Baly
J H Patterson
E F Cook
Z Cutler
A H Briggs
G W Farrior
S J Child
E Bird
J Kerr
W Siddall
G W Annis
H Willett
E S Mapes
Green Ives
G Wright
J Johnson
R F Shattuck
R W Wilson
C Miers
F J Houghton
J F Gerald
M Eaton
M H Gilbreath
B N Meigs
C W Pitcher
W Hall
L Kerr
J R Turner
O Smith
J D Garey
W M Lamb
N H Young
D C Abbott
J H Paton
N Bowles
M M Caswell
C C Marston
R W Wilson
G C Bowles
W W Reddington
J N Adrian
M Hilton
L Snodgrass
O B King
C Churchill
W Maudlin
S W Sage
A Edwards
J S Thompson
D Brown
L Fitch
W L Reddington
I C Wellcome
A Stoneberg
W P Cunningham
H McCammond

Publishing Fund.

F J Houghton $1.85; D Barroughs 50; W Dunbar 2.75; Henry Welty 1.00; W M Rankin 50; M E Prouty 1.00; D F Trask 1.00; A E Rathbun 5.00.

Notice.

Those who may desire my labors in the gospel field, in trying to save sinners and declaring the Word of Truth and uprooting error, I would say that I am now ready to attend to such calls. My purpose is to devote my whole time to this work till Jesus comes, or, should I be called to sleep in death, to be found with the whole armor on. R. H. BATEMAN, Gloversville, N. Y.

Marriages.

CHAMPLAIN—HARRIS. At the residence of Mr. S. Champlain, by Eld. John M. Snook, Mr. Charles Henry Champlain, of Jackson, and Miss Emma Jane Harris, of Guelph, Ontario.

TRUE—REED. At Shelby Center, N. Y., Jan. 29, 1873, by Eld. S. W. Vreeland, Mr. Moses E. True, of Carryville, N. Y., and Miss Hannah Reed, of Wheatville, N. Y.

Obituary.

KINNEY—Fell asleep in Jesus in town of Sunfield, Mich., Friday, Jan. 31, 1873, Sr. Kinney, aged 51 years.

She had been a sufferer for five years. She was a firm believer in the blessed hope; and it was blessed to look upon her reconciled countenance. She believed she would yet have the victory when Jesus comes. She leaves a circle of mourning friends. The text chosen by her for the funeral occasion was "I am the Resurrection and the Life." (John 11, 25.)
P. HOLLER.

TAYLOR. Died, in Sandy Hill, New York, Jan 11 1873, at the residence of her uncle N. W. Wait, Miss Pamelia Jane Taylor, aged 21 years.

She was the daughter of Wm. S. Taylor, of Green Bay, Wis. She was an exemplary Christian, and sleeps in Jesus.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

The first Q. M. of Neponset District is called to meet with the church in Oneida, eve. Feb. 6, continuing over the following Sunday. Br. C. C. Marston is expected to be with us. Let us see a good representation at this meeting from all parts of the district. Rally, brethren—time is short!
L. F. COLE, Sec'y.

New Rutland, Feb 10-21 and longer as the Lord may direct. C. C. MARSTON.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Preaching in Advent Mission Hall, 619 West Lake Street, every Sunday 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening
D. R. & M. S. MANSFIELD.

Genoa, Oct. 27, and every other Sabbath until further notice. E. H. BURINGTON.

Jericho Church, 2:30 p. m., Sabbath, Feb. 9.
Afton, 11 a. m., and 7 p. m., Feb., 16.
Squaw Grove, in the Methodist church, 11 a. m., Feb. 23
Eagle S. H., Sugar Grove, 2:30 p. m., same day.
Beemerville, 11 a. m., and 7 p. m., March 2.
C. W. SMITH.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.
Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.
Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co., at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.
Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S H 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.
ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Nov. 10, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.
Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Nov. 17, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

Amboy, Lee Co, preaching the second and fourth Sundays of each month.
C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

add ill
Plato, 7 p. m., Feb. 8, as Br. McArthur may arrange.
Udina, 11 a. m., Feb. 9, and onward as the interest may demand. Br. H. G. McCulloch will be present to help preach the Word.
E. H. BURINGTON.

MICHIGAN.

The next Q. M. of the Northern District of Michigan will be held with the church in Hesperia, Friday, Feb. 14, and over Sunday. Let there be a general rally. Bring your tithes and offerings into the store house and obtain the blessing.
E. B. SCOTT, Sec'y.

To the churches in Branch County, Michigan, I would say that my appointments for the year 1873 will be as follows:
East Gilead, Jan. 5, 10 a. m., and every two weeks afte
California, Jan. 12, 10:30 a m and every two weeks after.
Algansee, every Sunday 2:30 p m and evening. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening.
J. R. PRESTON, Pastor.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.
Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

The third Q. M. of the Southern District will be held in Rives, Jackson Co., commencing Thursday, Feb. 13, and continue over Lord's Day. A full representation is desired, and we trust that all our preaching brethren will be present. We cordially invite all who can, to come filled with the Spirit, and to work for the salvation of the perishing. Brethren will stop off at Leslie, where teams will be in waiting except on Sunday. C. FOX, Sec'y.

Lexington Lake Shore Advent Chapel, 3 miles north of village, Sabbath, Jan. 26, at 3 p. m., and every two weeks after.
Lexington Ridge, White S. H., Feb. 2, at 3 p. m. and every two weeks after.
Marlette, Advent Chapel, Tuesday and Wednesday eve. Feb. 11 and 12, at 7 p. m., and every 4 weeks till further notice.
GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

Elk Corner, Vancamp's Hall, Thursday eve. Feb. 13.
Fremont, Red S. H., eve., Friday, Feb. 14.
Port Hope, eve. Tuesday and Wednesday, Feb. 18 and 19, as Br. Durand may arrange.
Port Crescent, Sabbath, 11 a. m. and 7 p. m., as Mr. Daniel Day may arrange, Feb. 23.
GEO. WRIGHT.

The third Q. M. of the Eastern District of the A. C. Conference of Michigan will be held with the A. C. church of Marlette, Sanilac Co., commencing at 2 p. m., Thursday, March 6, and continuing over Sunday.
Brethren come, as far as possible, and come to work. We earnestly hope this church will be prayerfully remembered, and the quarterly gathering will be a great blessing to them. They have a good and comfortable chapel, and we have reason to believe the brethren at Marlette will cordially greet all who may attend.
JOHN H. PATON, Sec'y

WISCONSIN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.
Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.
A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

Celaburgh, eve. Feb. 1, and once in four weeks.
Norris S. H., 11 a. m., Feb. 2, and once in four weeks.
Pine River, eve. Feb. 2, and once in four weeks.
ANSON BROWN.

The third Q. M. of the Western District will be held with the church, at Gilmanton, Buffalo Co., Friday eve., Feb 7, and hold over Lord's day. All the friends of Jesus are requested to make this meeting a special subject of prayer, that God may make his power known at that time in strengthening believers and converting sinners. Why should we not expect it? God is unchangeable. He gave his Son to save the perishing, and will he not hear prayer to that end? Let us not be straitened in ourselves. God will hear prayer. P. W. HOUGH.

LaCrosse, corner of Main and Sixth Streets, Dec. 1, and once in two weeks. JOB BROWN.

MINNESOTA.

Ridgeway, Feb. 8 and 9, and once in four weeks.
P. MITSON.

Annual Conference, Monticello, Feb. 5 and over Sabbath.
Eagle Lake, Byers S. H., Thursday eve., Feb. 13.
Winnebago Agency, New S. H., Friday eve., Feb. 14.
Medo, Western S. H., Saturday eve., Feb. 15.
Medo, at Br Bates' house, 2:30 and 7 p. m., Sunday, Feb. 16.
Owatonna, Fitzsimmons S. H., Tuesday and Wednesday eve., 7 o'clock, Feb. 18 and 19.
S. C. WELLCOME.

The Annual Meeting of the Minnesota A. C. Conference (the eleventh) will be held in Monticello, commencing Wednesday eve., Feb. 5, and hold over Lord's day.
Churches throughout the Conference are requested to report by delegate or by letter. All ministers of the Conference are requested to attend personally, as business of importance will be transacted.
Church officers will please forward to the Conference Treasurer (L. C. Collins, Monticello,) the contents of the Mission Boxes, and collections from other sources for the Conference.
Churches reporting will direct to the Secretary at Monticello, Wright Co., Minn.
S. C. WELLCOME, Sec'y.
GEO. W. MILLER, Pres't.

IOWA.

Odel S. H., Wednesday eve., Feb. 5.
Elk Creek, Thursday eve., Feb. 6, and over the following Sabbath. J. RIDLEY.

We, the undersigned, members of various churches of the Iowa Christian and the Iowa Advent Christian Conferences, realizing the obligations we are under to God and his truth and his people, and realizing, too, that in our present divided condition we cannot possibly accomplish as much good as we might if all the elements among us were heartily united in concerted action and with undivided front, do hereby propose and call a convention, to be composed of two delegates from each church, to convene in the city of Manchester, April 15, to take into consideration the matters which now divide us, with a view to an arrangement which shall once more unite us in a single, undivided conference organization.
Signed:—T. E. Cook, J. Ingalls, J. Gilder.leve, Dr. Banton, and many others.

Preaching in Thompson's Hall, Delmar, Clinton Co., Jan. 5, and every two weeks until further notice. C. W. PITCHER.

Manchester, the first and third Sabbaths of each months, at 2 and 7 p. m.
J. RIDLEY, Pastor.

Q. M. of the First District of the N. W. Missouri and S. W. Iowa Conference will be held at Troublesome Creek, six miles east of Atlantic, Cass Co., Iowa, commencing Friday eve., March 14. Brn. Hubbell and Nokes will be expected to come and help at this meeting. We also expect Eld. Wm. McCulloch. This is a good field, and the truth has a firm hold. Come, brethren, praying and ready for work. WM MURPHY, Sec'y.

Romig S. H., near Milford, Feb. 2, and every fourth Sunday.
Waveland, Pottawatamie Co., Feb. 9, and once in four weeks.
Troublesome Creek, Feb. 16, and every fourth Sunday.
Heding's S. H., Feb. 23.
Let the brethren circulate these appointments fully. WM. MURPHY.

The next Q. M. of the Southern Iowa and North Missouri Conference will be held at Corydon, Wayne Co., Iowa, commencing Feb. 22, and holding over Sabbath. We hope to see all the ministers belonging to this conference and others who can be present at our meeting. We cordially invite all who can to come and labor with us for the good of the cause of Christ. Br. S. K. Gibson is expected to be with us.
L. Z. LOTSPEICH.

Dudley S. H., Vernon Co., commencing Thursday eve., Feb. 17, a protracted meeting with lectures on the prophecies. Br. A. Foster of Sparta, will help JOB. BROWN.

NEW YORK.

Elmira, Feb. 10. JOHN T. ONGLEY.

Saratoga Springs; meetings every Sunday in the Lower Town Hall, corner of Broadway and Lake Avenue, at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday School and Bible class directly after morning service.
Prayer meeting every Thursday eve., at the residence of the pastors, 213 Broadway, nearly opposite Town Hall.
WM. A. & M. L. DURAND.

PENNSYLVANIA.

East Troy, Bradford Co., Feb. 6, 7.
South Creek, Bradford Co., Feb. 9.
JOHN T. ONGLEY.

KANSAS.

The Kansas Advent Christian Mission Association will hold its annual session at Bero, Cherokee Co., Feb. 10. Officers for the ensuing year are to be chosen, and other business of importance transacted. A general attendance is desired. T. BOZLEY, Sec'y.
H. J. MUNSON, Pres't.

ARKANSAS.

The first Q. M. for the Blue Mountain District will be held at the Turkey Creek Meeting House, Richwood Township, Saturday, March 1, and continue over Sunday. J. B. BROWN.

MISSOURI AND IOWA.

The second Q. M. in District No. 2 of the S. W. Iowa and N. W. Mo. Conference will be held at Quitman, Nodaway Co., Mo., commencing Friday eve., Feb. 28 and holding over Sunday. Eld. Wm. McCulloch will be with us. A general invitation is given to all who love our Savior and his appearing. Come, brethren, to help us and cheer us with your presence.
JAMES C. SMITH, Sec'y.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Bienny St.
JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y, 257, St. Joseph St.

Advertisements.

List of Books, Tracts, etc., kept on sale at the Advent Christian Times office.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c. By D. T. Taylor.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—Unabridged, $5, by express. Condensed, sufficiently full for ordinary purposes, by mail, $1.75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures. With maps and useful tables. 45c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: with engravings, maps, and tables. $1.50. By mail, $1.75

BIBLE DICTIONARY: by Smith & Barnum. The best abridgment of Smith's larger work. Leather $6. cloth $5. By express.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $12 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDANCE. With Greek and English index. $8 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. $7.50. by express.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock. $2.50, Post-paid.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The Phenomena of Modern Spiritualism. By N. Field, M. D. 15c.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions to the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 30c. post-paid.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 45c. post-paid.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3:1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 60c. Postage, 5c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY of God: and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 15c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy; the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC meetings. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 5c. a hundred.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; with a review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabath By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added History, Statistics and Tables. Cloth, $2; leather 2.50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By Wellcome and Good. 460 pp. $1.25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATTHEW, 24 and 25, 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen. The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one adress, post-paid, for $4.00.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH; a history of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on earth during the past 2,000 years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth. $1

LAST DAY TOKENS: by S. S. Brewer. 35 cts.

FUTURITY; by Wm. Sheldon. 20 cts.

THE INDEX BOOK MARK; 25c a dozen.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. Nothing so good on this topic. Cloth $1. Paper, 50c. 3 copies for $1, post paid.

GOOD TIDINGS; a general view of Advent doctrine. By an Association of Authors. 428 pages. Cloth 65c, Paper 40c. Post paid.

THE NATURE AND DURATION OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT: By Henry Constable, Prebendary of Cork. 40c. Post paid.

THE FAITH OF ST. PAUL; showing it to have been neither Pharisaic nor Sadducean, but Hebrew. By L. C. Collins. 10c.

THE STATE OF THE DEAD; a Discussion between N. Field, M. D. and T. P. Connolly, Esq. pp. 300. 50c. Post Paid.

THE JUBILEE HARP. $1. $9 a dozen.

HADES AND SHEOL; By L. C. Collins. The best published exposition of the parable of Dives and Lazarus. 10c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL; a choice collection of spiritual songs. Flexible cloth, 20c. $2.15 a dozen. Paper, 15c. $1.50 a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP; Cloth, 75c, Leather $1.

HYMNS OF THE MORNING; A new and rich collection. Cloth 50c. Leather, 80c.

SCIENCE AND THE RESURRECTION; By D. T. Taylor. 5c.

PAULS EARNEST EXPECTATION and hope; (Phil. 1: 21: 26.) By O. R. Fassett. 5c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT: containing the original Greek text of the New Testament with an interlineary word for word English translation and a new emphatic version. 884 pp. Cloth $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE ADVENT TIMES and Banner, one year for $2.50 if pre-paid. Address Wm. L. Himes, 25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.
Published by the Women's Christian Association, $1.00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address, 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Ablest Tariff Journal in the U. S.

The American Working People.

Published monthly, is a welcome visitor to One Hundred Thousand firesides. Finely printed, handsomely illustrated, ably edited—has no rival! $1.50 per year. Sent on trial three months for 25c.

The Iron World

Is the largest and most valuable Metal Price Current in the world. $4.00 per year. Sent on trial one month for 25c. All the State Geologists are contributors.
Marion watches, fine silver plated ware, pen and pocket cutlery, and other desirable premiums to getters up of clubs for our monthly.
IRON WORLD PUB. Co.
—487. Pittsburgh, Pa

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Rich Man and Lazarus.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.

LOUIS REIMER,
1026 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn

POCKET HYMN BOOK

With Music.

COMPILED BY CHAS. C. BARKER.

"Hymns of the Morning"

is for sale at THE TIMES Office, at the following

REDUCED PRICES:

Cloth Binding 50c
Morocco " 75c

Sent postage free on receipt of price.

TWELVE COPIES FOR $4.75.

A liberal discount to agents.
This book is suitable for all religious occasions, containing the sublimest of religious songs, and the cream of musical composition.
For special terms for quantities, address the publisher, C. W. SARGENT,
Box 436, Concord, N. H.

☞ For sale at THE TIMES office, in large or small quantities.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which every one should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey, and a little care taken in examination of Routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.
The "C., B. & Q. R. R.," running from Chicago through Galesburg to Burlington, has achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading Passenger Route to the West. At Burlington it connects with the great Burlington Route which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories; and passengers starting from Chicago on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the C. B. & Q. and Burlington Route.
This Line has published a pamphlet called "How to go West," which contains much valuable information; a large correct map of the Great West, which can be obtained free of charge by addressing the General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. Burlington, Iowa.

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 15 months and best Bee book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1873. Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.
Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee Keepers," (a 36 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, or for stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York city

☞ THE TIMES and Bee-Keepers Journal one year for $2.50. Address Wm L. Himes 25 W. Lake St. Chicago.

THE CHRISTIAN:

A LARGE, LIVE, MONTHLY, RELIGIOUS, Family Paper, containing anecdotes sketches, records of Providences and answers to prayer, true stories, poetry, music, etc. No sectarianism controversy, politics, puffs, pills, patent medicines novels or continued stories, allowed in its columns.
Each subscriber receives a large and splendid Bible reader's map, free. This map exhibits not only Palestine, but all Bible Lands. It is printed on a sheet, 29x39 inches, is beautifully colored, and contains—
(1) View of the Land of Canaan, with its valleys, mountains, rivers and lakes, as seen at a glance from Pisgah, where Moses stood to behold it, before he died. (2) Jerusalem and its Environs, the holy places, valleys, streams, pools, "the mountains round about Jerusalem," etc. (3) St. Paul's journeys, and the world as known to the ancient Hebrews. (4) A view of Jerusalem, as seen from Olivet, where Jesus beheld the city and wept over it. (5) Map of Palestine, "from Dan to Beersheba," giving the inheritances of the different tribes of Israel, colored separately. (6) Peninsula of Mount Sinai, and the journeys of Israel from Egypt to the Promised Land. (7) A Chart of the seasons, months, productions, weather, and temperature of Palestine.
Besides all these, the map contains the ancient and modern names of all known places; the heights of the mountains; and references to the texts of Scripture where the different places are mentioned.
This map is given to subscribers for The Christian.
Terms—in advance: With the map on paper, beautifully colored, One Dollar a year; with the map varnished and mounted on rollers, a Dollar and a Quarter.
Four copies of The Little Christian, a child's paper, to one address, sent at the same rate as one copy of The Christian.
Ten thousand agents wanted to get subscribers for this map and The Christian.
Honest, intelligent, energetic men, women and children, can have pleasant and profitable employment, without risk or capital. For specimens and instructions, address H. L. HASTINGS,
30 Hanover St., Boston, Mass.

☞ The Times and Christian one year for $2.40. With map on paper, $2.70. With map on rollers, $2.95. Address W. L. HIMES,
25 West Lake St., Chicago.

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.---NO. 28. CHICAGO, FEBRUARY 11, 1873. WHOLE NO. 459.

Advent Christian Times.

Contents of This Number.

First Page.

Brief Editorials

Second Page.

Vigilate; The Rat that Renounced the World, poems; The Judgment at Hand, (third article) E. C. Bronaugh; The Ministry of Angels, Mrs. H. V. Reed.

Third Page.

The Life of a Justified Man, (third article) London Quarterly Journal of Prophecy; Restorationism—Confessions of its Friends, Nemo; Union in Iowa; An Inspired Life

Fourth Page.

Brief Editorials; Editorial Gleanings; Judge not that Ye be not Judged; Birth of Christ in Heathen Expectations; Aged Ministry.

Fifth Page.

An Excellent Receipt; News — At Home, Abroad.

Sixth Page.

A [Feathered Messenger, (poetry)]; A Pardon Locked Up; "That's Me;" A Savior for All; English Letter; Letters from Wm Siddall, I Adrian, S. J. Bentley, and B. J. Goodwin.

Seventh Page.

Letters from a friend, S. W. Bird, Martha Slack, S. C. Wellcome, Sr. Rensbreits, and J. W. Thompson; Unchanged though Long Absent, Rainbow; The Infant Reasoner; The Helpless Victim; A Child's Morning Prayer.

Eighth Page.

Business Department; Obituaries; Notices; Appointments; Marriages; Advertisements.

DR. GIESELER, in his Ecclesiastical History (vol. 1. p. 67) says, that the Christian belief in the second century concerning the state of the dead was that 'the souls of the departed were to be kept in hades, and the opinion that they should be taken up into heaven immediately after death was considered a Gnostic heresy.

WE do not recall just now anything more incongruous than the citation of Ps. 50: 21, 23 by an advocate of eternal misery against Restoration. True the passage is pertinent enough against the latter theory, but how a threat to 'tear in pieces' can conserve the notion of eternal preservation of one's being is not so clear.

THE mediumship of Mr. Potts—Beans passed through the ceiling—A button dissolved and passed through the floor.' Such is the heading of an article in a leading Spiritist journal, giving an account of certain 'wonderful mediums.' Exalted business for spirits, that—taking beans, decomposing them into gas (?) and passing them through a ceiling, to be recomposed into beans and dropped into the owner's hat!

IT may be a comforting thought to believers who feel that they are unappreciated, or do not receive the notice or attention they should, to be reminded that only three out of the eleven apostles find any mention in the New Testament after the ascension. Let those who sometimes feel slighted, recall this fact; and, also, honestly answer themselves the question, whether they wish their reward here or in the hereafter.

THE Fathers do not always speak after a fashion to command our respect. Undeniably they sometimes 'blow both hot and cold;' are not infrequently turgid; often tiresome, and inane. But they had some clear notions of the truth if Bp. Patrick speaks truly. He says: 'Many of the ancient Fathers look upon the expulsion of Adam from Eden as a merciful dispensation, that man might not be perpetuated in a state of sin.'

CALVIN called the Soul sleepers of his day 'Hypnologists,' or sleep-preachers. Lest any should think our opposers then exhibited more refinement in the choice of epithets than those of later days, we may add that he also styled the Hypnologists babblers, madmen, dreamers, drunkards, etc. We can readily believe that his celebrated, Psychopannychia was 'hot, furious, and abusive,' as one of his reviewers declares.

IT is worthy of remembrance that in the time of Leo X, under whose reign the Lateran Council officially proclaimed the notion of the immortality of the soul as an article of Christian faith, the most notable philosopher of Italy in that age, Pietro Pompanazzo, taught that the soul is mortal. Leo fulminated a bull against him, declaring he must retract or be proceeded against for heresy—a style of argument not yet entirely out of vogue

THOMAS DE QUINCEY in Hogg's Instructor Aug 21, 1852, says: 'I separately, speaking for myself only, profoundly believe that the Scriptures ascribe absolute and metaphysical eternity to one sole being, viz., to God; and derivatively to all others according to the interest they can plead in God's favor.' It seems to us that this proposition carries the stamp of truthfulness upon its very brow. It is inconsistent to suppose that a being unreconciled and irreconcilable to God should eternally exist with him.

HARDLY too much stress can be laid upon the fact that, while never so much as once do the Scriptures indulge the use of the expression 'immortal souls' or 'spirits,' or any equivalent term or phrase, the words 'mortal man,' 'corruptible man,' and many terms and phrases of like import are in the Book. Does it mean nothing that some of the most frequently recurring expressions in human theology are utterly unknown to the Divine Revelation? We think the fact is an exceedingly suggestive one TRUER words were never uttered than those by J. Panton Ham when he said of the doctrine of the sleep of the dead: 'It adds new emphasis to the cry, "Come Lord Jesus!" and gives a prominence unknown to the popular view, to the official dignity of Christ as the "Resurrection and the Life."' While, as he adds, once established, it effectually undermines and forever overthrows the 'most enormous errors that have invaded the church—Purgatory, Indulgences, Saint-worship and the like; besides Mormonism, Spiritism and other formidable false theories of religion.

ON Sunday, says Justin Martyr, (as quoted by Scott), all Christians, in the city or country, meet together, because that is the day of our Lord's resurrection; and then we read the writings of the prophets and apostles. This being done, the president makes an oration to the assembly, exhorting them to imitate and do the things which they have heard; then we all join in prayer and after that we celebrate the sacrament —Why not adopt this primitive mode of worship, in some, at least, of our services.

IT is worthy of remark that the early creeds of the church agree with the New Testament in their continual reference to the doctrine of the resurrection. Is not this fact an striking contrast with the teaching and preaching of later days, which practically sets aside the hope of the New Testament and the early church, which is a future life by a resurrection? This idea is now well-nigh supplanted by another which makes man naturally the possessor of an eternal existence, and renders the resurrection no longer a necessity.

ONE of the oldest Congregational churches in old Massachusetts, has circulated a card, on the back of which the following subjects of discourse for the current month were announced:

'Deformed Feet,' 'The Strange Contents of a Lost Trunk,' 'The Tragic History of a White Lie,' 'Frosted Locks,' 'Go to Jericho,' (we can easily see under this topic, how an admirable application of the subject might be made to the preacher, says Zion's Herald,) 'Beautiful Shoes; their Prophetic Suggestiveness,' 'Salt Again.'

—This is sensationalism gone to seed. What next?

A great many ministers of the Established Church of England confess to having been brought into bondage by their obligation to recite the "damnatory clauses" of the Athanasian creed. The Christian Register sees no reason why they should continue to be bound and puts the case thus:

If fourteen deans, twenty-five archdeacons, one hundred and ninety cathedral dignitaries, one hundred and eighty metropolitan clergy, twelve queen's chaplains, to say nothing of the two thousand five hundred of more ordinary parsons, are distressed in their consciences because they are required to say what they don't believe, why don't they stop saying it? To be sure it might cost them their places, but we hope they are not ready to confess that they lie for a living.

LOOK at this picture, and then at that. Luther Lee, aided by Mr. Drew, says the soul, 'the real man,' is 'simple,' 'uncompounded' 'indivisible,' 'indissoluble:' without 'exterior or interior surface,' without 'extension,' and 'can never come into contact with matter.'

John Milton says: 'Man is a living being, intrinsically and properly an individual, not compound and separable, not, according to the common opinion, made up and framed of two distinct and different natures, as of body and soul, but the whole man is soul, and soul man: that is to say, a body or substance, individual, animate, sensitive and rational.—Treatise on Christian Doctrine.

Reader, which kind of man or soul are you? Are you a real man, a living soul, or a concentrated nothing.

AFTER recovery from his recent illness Spurgeon took occasion one day in the pulpit to say:

> Beloved, I beseech you love Christ, and live for him while you can. Work while opportunity serves. While I have been laid aside, and able to do nothing, the great sorrow of my heart has been my inability to do him service. I heard my brethren shouting in the battle field, and I saw my comrades marching to the fight, and I lay like a wounded soldier in the ditch, and could not stir, save that I breathed a prayer that you might all be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might. This was my thought: 'Oh, that I had preached better while I could preach, and lived more for the Master while I could serve him?' Don't incur such regrets in the future by present sluggishness, but live now for him who died for you!

—Wholesome advice, that. Don't refuse it because it costs you nothing.

THERE is a world of suggestion in the following paragraph from a sermon by A. K. Potter, of Springfield:

> We thought a pastor rather foolish, to speak mildly, who in the middle of the week left a place of recreation by the sea and a company of ministers and friends which he was greatly enjoying for one of the usual weekly meetings of his church, left greatly desiring to remain, almost tearing himself away, for no reason whatever save that little meeting which most pastors would not have hesitated five seconds in deciding to leave to the people at home. In thinking of his course, it has occurred to me, his long and successful pastorate, as harmonious to-day as at its commencement thirty years ago, his prosperous church fairly overflowing with life is due to his fidelity to the minister, to the fact that the man has killed every desire, conflicting with his office as a servant of the Lord, and of the people.

THE New York Sun in mention of the death and approaching demise of the more celebrated editors of the passing generation —Greeley, Raymond, Bennett and others—asks:

> What has become of all these men who are gone? Where are they now? Authentic intelligence on this subject would be read with deeper interest than any news that we shall ever publish. They differed in their religious views. If they are now truly wise and able to see the truth, they must know who was right and who was wrong.

—The only "authentic intelligence" concerning the state of dead editors or any other dead persons, is to be found in the Bible, which declares they are in a state of unconscious slumber, knowing 'not anything.' The question of right and wrong conduct is referred over to the day of judgment, when every man shall be rewarded according as his works may have been.

THE recent display of ill-humor in the New York Minister's Meeting, reminds us of a remark by James William Barlow, of Dublin University, to the effect that the dogma of eternal misery was 'the favorite doctrine of orthodoxy.' In proof of this he offered the assertion of his experience, that one might doubt about any other so called orthodox doctrine without exciting any special display of feeling; but denial of the future everlasting wretchedness of the lost was almost certain to provoke a display of temper in the mildest mannered 'evangelical.' And who that has any experience at all but can affirm the truth of Prof Barlow's opinion. If men are most easily and deeply moved concerning matters that lie nearest to their hearts, then certain it is, that its most horrible dogma is one of the most tenderly cherished doctrines of Christendom. The reason why this is so is not so obvious.

AMONG the remarkable statements of Immaterialism we remember none more so than this:

> "Despoil man of his essential, eternal consciousness, and what other adequate reason can be given for God's efforts in man's redemption?" And again: "If it cost nothing but the divine fiat, it would be a grand thing to raise up a decayed body and give it immortality. But when we reflect that the resurrection cost the sufferings and death of Christ, we cannot refrain from thinking it would have been better had man's unconscious dust slumbered on to all eternity, than that the holy Jesus should have suffered the indignities of a Roman cross!"

—Which is to say, not exactly that without the element of eternal consciousness man is not worth saving, but that without that attribute he is not worth the price paid.

These are the sentiments of Mr. B. U. Watkins, who recently undertook to fix up Mr. Braden's failure in a series of articles in the Standard each article to be devoted to one argument. About half a dozen articles, only, appeared, hence we conclude that the number of weapons in his armory is quite limited, which is perhaps just as well for his cause, if the above is a fair sample of his artillery.

IT is not, perhaps, a good thing to underrate ourselves any more than it is to overestimate our virtues or capacities; but certainly no one has a right to vilify himself after the occasionally-fashion of the disciples of the total depravity dogma. Man is bad enough, surely: but when the pious poet paints the average man after this fashion, we confess it looks to us like a strained humility. He says (The Temple Rebuilt):

"Is there a fiend in all the lists of hell
Whose secret knock has not my welcome gained
To work in fire and filthiness of sin?
However smooth and gilt the open life,
Infection has been rank within my heart
To make a ghastly sepulcher; a den
Of unclean spirits, hatred, lust, deceit,
Pride, malice, envy, jealousy, revenge;
My thoughts are crimes; my wishes dreadful wrongs;
Looks, fornication; anger, foul with blood!"

But when we are told further that ere we can know the divine love we must hear the Lord saying to us

"Go to thy place, thou false and filthy soul!
Down with the damned; and make thy fiery bed
In burnings everlasting; and with fiends
Prepare the endless battles of revenge," we confess to a disgust mingled with horror, and we feel our time can be better redeemed than in perusing such poetry.

WE have been asked our opinion of a 'flaming notice' of a work against our views. The advertisement referred to, from the Morning Star, is simply a misrepresentation. Eld. Rufus Wendell never renounced his 'annihilation views,' but holds them yet. The only change in his teaching was in regard to the intermediate state and the nature of man, he now holds that the spirit survives the body in some way a conscious entity, until the resurrection, when the wicked will be 'annihilated.'

Mr. McDonald's book is neither hard to answer nor difficult to meet. A tyro in our views can dispose of his case very readily. We have had the pleasure of reading an unpublished review of Mr. McDonald, by one of our youngest ministers (residing in Salem, Mass.) which disposes of him or his supposed logic very effectually.

And as to Dr. Clark's essay, when he undertakes a reply to Whitmore's damaging review of it, his friends may possibly have something to boast of. The only answer vouchsafed to Eld. Whitmore as yet is, that he 'misunderstood Clark's argument;' but how he misunderstood we are not told and cannot learn. They who have read both the essay and the review think Eld. Whitmore understood Dr. Clark's arguments better than he did himself. Indeed we cannot see how any reader of both documents can avoid that conclusion.

Recreant Ministers.

We clip the following from a secular paper.

> "The churches of all denominations have been sadly grieved in the last year or two by the falls into grevious sins of one or more of their popular ministers. So far as we remember no church of any size has been exempt in this particular, or has aught to boast of over their brethren of other churches. Many shallow reasoners have jumped to the conclusion that religion will be almost extinguished in our land, and all confidence in the clergy be destroyed by these sad occurrences. According to the last census of the United States, there were forty-eight thousand six hundred and eighty ministers of all sorts—Protestant, Jewish and Romish—in our country. Now if they had fallen in the same proportion with the twelve apostles under our Lord's immediate supervision, there would have been more than eight thousand of them who had fallen in the past three years, and yet one hundred, if not a less number, would include all who have fallen within that time. Whenever one falls now, his fall in all its aggravations, and often far beyond its real enormity, is proclaimed by every newspaper and telegraph line in the whole country. It was not so twenty five or thirty years ago. 'But,' said a young coxcomb the other day in our hearing, with a curl on his lip, 'the preachers are getting to be the worst men in the land.' 'Not so fast,' said we, 'young friend. Take forty-eight thousand doctors or lawyers, and apply the same strict test of moral conduct to them that you do to the ministers, every time one of them gets drunk or is otherwise guilty of immoral conduct, put his name in the newspaper, and telegraph him all over the world, and you would not have room enough in the newspapers were they ten times as large as the now are, for one in ten of the tales of scandal that would fill them.'
>
> "We say, after a long and intimate acquaintance with hundreds, yes we might say, with thousands of ministers of all churches and sects in our land, we have found the great mass of them neither impure nor intemperate.

The Cry of the Children.

The following timely and vigorous passage is from a recent article in the New York Independent. The statements are not only true of New York, but everywhere in the land an effort is made by teachers to exact from children an amount of intellectual labor that would be slow death to strong men. We write this with a lively realization of its truth, after spending an entire evening with a boy over his algebra:

> "The customs of the day actually make larger demands on the children for mental work than adult people themselves can possibly stand. Five and six hours in school, two or three hours at home, make a day's work, which would wear men and women out prematurely in the use of the brain. But this is about the average measure which we murderously demand of our children. It is infanticide. It is more refined, it is slower, it is more decorous; but it is scarcely less effectual than the exposure of young infants, as practised by the ancients. There is just one refuge left for the poor little children thus hunted down and helpless in our hands. They use it abundantly, and who can blame them? We require them to spend too much in ostensible study. That they have to do for we have the power. But the little persecuted sufferers have an alternative. They must study the prescribed hours; but they can study as listlessly as they please. Four hours daily, suitably distributed, they might, perhaps, spend with profit in good, downright mental application. But they must spend six or eight in application of some sort. It is quite impossible that they should spend them well. They therefore spend them ill. They spend them in slackening and scattering their powers of attention, instead of strengthening and concentrating them. In other words, they regularly and inevitably defeat the best object of their attendance at school in place of securing it."

THE preciousness of little things was never more beautifully expressed than by B. F. Taylor in the following:—"Little words are the sweetest to hear; little charities fly farthest, and stay longest on the wing; little lakes are stillest; little hearts are the fullest, and little farms are the best tilled. Little books are the most read, and little songs the most loved. And when Nature would make anything especially rare and beautiful, she makes it little—little pearls, little diamonds, little dews." Everybody calls that little which he loves best on earth.

Cultivate the idea that you are poor and owe much to yourself; piously believe that God loves his church, and will care for its interests; give as little as possible —but lay up your hundreds and thousands, and persuade yourself that you are both just and generous. Our cousin Ben. tried it satisfactorily forty years, and died rich. What a joy to him was a five-dollar bill.—Anon.

Vigilate.

Say, when h[illegible]meth will he find us waiting?
Our lamps [illegible]ght burning ready for our Lord?
Behold he com[illegible]h quickly—very quickly—
Bearing with him our wondrous great reward.

Few years ago our ears could hardly hear his footsteps,
For all our land was filled with war alarms;
On hill and shore where once the storm was raging,
Christ's little children sing triumphant psalms.

See once again the same sweet holy picture,
On which, long years ago, the angels smiled,
The starry night, the shepherds bending lowly,
The blessed virgin and her royal child.

As he came then, our Prince, our Lord and Savior,
So will he come again; Oh, hear his call,
His warning call, and go ye out to meet him,
For Christ may come, this advent, to us all.

No warning note shall sound at his appearing,
The sun will rise just as it did this day;
The mountain tops shall flush with golden glory,
The morning mists shall melt in light away.

All wait for him; none knoweth of his coming,
It may be eventide or early day.
We only hear his footstep on the mountain,
We only know he is not far away.

Oh wait and watch, for blessed are those servants
Who yet are faithful though their Lord delay,
Stand in your place, your lamps all trimmed and burning,
He cometh quickly — Christian, watch and pray.

—Selected by T. F. Sargent

The Rat that Renounced the World.

'Tis told
In a legend old,
How a certain rat grown tired of strife,
And the care that beset his ratship's life,
Wishing to meditate at his ease,
Took up his abode in a Holland cheese.

He found
This great round
Gave solitude, shelter, and plenty to eat,
And by diligent use of his teeth and his feet
He soon had a hermitage quite to his mind—
Its walls and its floors with good victuals lined.

This rat
Soon grew fat,
And he said to himself, "God bless his own!
My body now would be only skin and bone
If I hadn't turned hermit. I really must say
Renouncing the world's the better way.

To his cheese,
On their knees,
Came some representatives from the rats,
Saying: "Ratopolis is besieged by the cats;
We are going for aid to a foreign land;
Old neighbor, do lend us a helping hand.

We set out
Without
A dollar to pay the needful expense,
Do give us a shilling, or at least, a few cents;
We'll be very grateful, we'll surely repay,
If we live to return, on the next New Year's Day."

The rat
Said that
He no longer had interest in worldly affairs;
But for the sake of old friendship his two longest prayers
Were at their disposal. What could hermit do more?
He gave them his blessing, and—closed his door.

"Oh! the rarity
Of charity"
Among the rat family! If men live at ease,
And the world is to them a great Holland cheese—
When their friends are distressed and in sorry plight,
Do they give only blessings, then close the door tight?

The Judgment at Hand.

[Third Article.]

Lastly the saints were to "be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time" (Dan. 7: 25), by which is meant a period of 1260 years. This we prove as follows. In Rev. 12: 14 the flight of the church from before this same terrible persecution is prefigured under the type of a woman fleeing into the wilderness when we are told "she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time." In v. 6 of this same chapter this period of time is called "a thousand two hundred and three score days," during which they should feed the woman in the wilderness. The expression days is frequently used in the Bible to signify years: thus we read that the days of the years of the life of such and such of the patriarchs and other persons were so many years. And that in representing time, a day stands for a year and not a literal day, is clearly shown in Daniel's prophecy concerning the coming of the Savior, found in ch. 9: 25 to end.

When this prophecy was written the Jews, and Daniel among them, were captives in Babylon, and Jerusalem was lying waste and almost uninhabited. But it was here shown to the prophet that his beloved city should be rebuilt and inhabited by her people, and then he is told that "from the going forth of the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem unto the Messiah the Prince shall be seven weeks and three score and two weeks," or sixty-nine weeks, equal to 483 days. This commandment is quite generally conceded to have gone forth in the shape of the decree issued by Artaxerxes in the seventh year of his reign (Ezra 9: 7, 11, to end); that the wall was rebuilt in troublous times, as Daniel had foretold. (Neh. 4[illegible] to end.) This seventh year of A[illegible] our common chronolog[illegible] before Christ 557 yea[illegible] and [illegible] ches to our Savior's twenty-[illegible]venth year in which John Baptist be[illegible]n to proclaim him as Messiah. Ot[illegible]hronologists maintain that our common table is incorrect, and that this seventh year of Artaxerxes was B. C. 483. Be this as it may, our position that each day of Daniel's sixty-nine weeks represented a year is sufficiently established by either calculation. Moreover and above all this we know the fulfillment of the prophecy concerning these 1260 days, that they were not intended as literal days, for in that case they would cover a period of only three and a half Jewish years of 360 days each, whereas the Papal dominancy was centuries in duration, and if we add 1260 years to A. D. 528, the year in which, as above shown, the papal power began to exist as Daniel's persecuting "little horn," we reach A. D. 1796, the commencing of the terrible revolution which deluged the continent of Europe in blood, and during which revolution thousands of the Romish clergy perished; for then did the "judgment sit" and they began to "take away his power to consume and to destroy it unto the end." (Dan. 7: 26.) And with the downfall of the French Empire in 1871 the Papal temporal power ceased to exist.

The rise of that power was gradual, as the prophet here foretold its decline would be. The decree of the tyrant Phocas making Boniface III, Universal Bishop, and greatly enlarging the temporal power and dominion of the pontiff, was issued about A. D. 610 or 611, and 1260 years added to the latter date reach A. D. 1871. The temporal or civil power of the Pope, is to us a thing of the past. The Church of Rome is no longer in a position to impose her dogmas upon mankind by force. She can no longer make war upon the saints nor prevail against them. And yet it was written by the prophet, "I beheld and the same horn made war with the saints and prevailed against them until the Ancient of Days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High: and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom." (vv. 21, 22, 27.)

It is agreed among our standard commentators, that the willful king of Dan. 1: 31–40 is identical with the power represented by the little horn of ch. 7, and a majority of ablest modern expositors apply the remainder of the chapter from v. 30 to the end, to the same king or power, in which they are undoubtedly correct, though we have not space here to give their reasons, our present object being to direct attention to the fact that this prophecy reaches to "the time of the end," (v. 36, 40), when "many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake." (ch. 12: 1–4.) And to prove, if proof be needed, that this plain language is predicted of the time of the resurrection, and consequently of our Savior's literal second advent, as no Christian who believes in a literal resurrection will pretend that it can or will take place prior thereto; "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first." (1 Thes. 4: 14, 16.)

In 2 Thes. 2: 3–13 this same persecuting, blaspheming power is mentioned by Paul, as indeed is plainly manifested from a confusion of Scripture. In v. 4 we read, "Who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God or that is worshiped; so that he, as God, sitteth in the temple of God showing himself that he is God," which is precisely parallel with the language of Dan. 11: 36, 37; "and he shall exalt himself and magnify himself above every god, and shall speak marvelous things against the God of gods.........for he shall magnify himself above all."

This belief was common among the Jews prior to our Savior's time, that when he should appear it would be in the character of the most powerful of earthly monarchs, and that he would exalt the Jews above all the nations and make Jerusalem earth's capital city. And so when Jesus was proclaimed as the long promised Messiah they anticipated the immediate fulfillment by him, of this, their earnest but mistaken expectation. Thus we read in Lk. 19: 11, 12, that our Lord "spake a parable because he was nigh to Jerusalem, and because they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear. He said therefore a certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and to return." That Jesus intended to liken himself unto this nobleman, is selfevident from the context, and he meant to teach his followers, here as elsewhere, that his kingdom was not of this world, nor to be set up by man's instrumentality, or aid. His kingdom is the "stone cut out without hands." Now if you will turn to Dan. 8: 13, 14 you will there behold the scene of the investiture of our Lord with this identical kingdom which he has gone into that far country to receive for himself; for we there read, "I saw in the night vision and behold one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of Days and they brought him near before him, and there was given [illegible]im dominion and glory and a king[illegible]" etc. And now when he shall [illegible]receive that kingdom will be not return[illegible]e promised he would? Paul says [illegible] "shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom" (2 Tim. 4: 1), thus showing not only that he will appear on earth again so soon as he shall have received his kingdom, but that then the day of judgment will have come.

So strongly was the Jewish faith to which we have alluded above, rooted in the minds of the disciples that all the plain declarations of the Savior to the contrary, did not suffice to disabuse them of their error; for we hear them repeating, as their last words to him on earth, "Lord wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" (Acts 1: 6.) St. Paul seems to have been fighting against this deception in 2 Thes. ch. 2; for he charges the brethren not to be troubled or soon shaken in mind or deceived by word or letter as from him that the day of Christ was then near at hand; for, said he, that day shall not come except there come a falling away, or apostacy from the true faith, first, and that man of sin the son of perdition should be revealed. And he calls upon them to remember that when he was yet with them he told them these things, and now, said he, you know what it is that witholdeth, that is, prevents or hinders the immediate revelation or appearing of that wicked one: and he tells them that the same thing should continue thus to prevent and hinder, until it should be taken out of the way. Now the thing which did thus let or hinder the revelation of the Papal power was the Pagan Roman government, which had to be "taken out of the way," in order to the accession of Papal to the civil power of that government.

"And then shall that wicked one be revealed whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth and destroy with the brightness of his coming." (v. 8.) The Greek which is translated "the brightness of his coming" is, when literally translated, "by the appearing of the presence of himself." Parousia invariably denotes the actual personal presence of the person spoken of, and the "coming" or presence of our Lord here mentioned cannot be interpreted in a figurative sense without doing violence to the necessary import of the word. Thus Paul says in 1 Cor. 16: 17, "I am glad of the parousia (coming or presence) of Stephanus, etc." It is then by the actual appearing of the presence of our Lord that this man of sin or wicked one will be destroyed.

E. C. BRONAUGH.

The Ministry of Angels.

"Are they not all ministering spirits sent forth to minister to those who shall be the heirs of salvation?" (Heb. 1:14.)

The angels of God have always occupied a prominent position in the affairs of earth. In obedience to the mandate of Jehovah they worked out the problem of creation and drew from the halls of chaos the fair proportions of the new-born earth. They planted the floral bowers of paradise and taught the music-winds to play amid the baby shades of Eden. They tinged the first morning with the golden light of day, and drew the crimson robe of sunset across the evening sky. Until the light of revelation dawned upon humanity they formed the only medium of communication between God and his creatures. The "Elohim" or "Malach" of the Hebrews and the "Angelos" of the Greeks have ever been the representatives of God upon earth. The human eye has never rested upon the form of the eternal Jehovah (1 Tim. 6: 16), but the Elohim of the Lord—the angel of his presence—talked with our first parents beneath the cloudless skies of Eden.[1]

The coast of all past time still bears the impress of angel feet; they are imprinted upon the bright plains of Mamre, where were gathered the grapes of Eschol—the figs and pomegranates which were borne back to Joshua as the fruits of the "goodly land" upon which they were so soon to enter. Here, amid the blushing fruits of the East, the messengers of the Lord communed with Abraham. Here they opened to his eye of faith the blessings of futurity, and spread before his vision the panorama of coming ages. But they could not linger long in the patriarch's tent; another duty lay before them, and they hasted to the cities of the plain. Perhaps earth never witnessed a fairer scene than that laid out at the angels' feet. Before them was a plain which rivalled in fertility the richest of earth, and the silver waves of the river Jordan rippled through it, bringing joy to all the dwellers of the land. But the gems of the valley are the fine cities[2] which reflect the glory of an eastern sunset. Very beautiful are their towns and palaces where luxury reigns supreme! But they are the whited sepulchers of antiquity, the haunts of crime and homes of blasphemy. Long have they sinned against Heaven; they have defied God and insulted his children. But the bolt of vengeance is poised above their heads, and the messengers of the Lord are sent to warn the one faithful child of God to flee with his family from the impending wrath. The warning is heeded; the city is deserted by the chosen few. God's thunder-bolt has fallen, and the fiery waves of judgment sweep over the plain.

"'Tis the vintage of blood, 'tis the fullness of time,
And vengeance shall gather the harvest of crime."

Roll back the flood of time and see the bright summit of Mount Moriah before it was hallowed by the "House of the Lord" or desecrated by the Mosque of Omar. Its fair brow is crowned with a sacrificial altar whereon is laid the human sacrifice, and Abraham, with a faith that never faltered, is bending over his darling boy with the gleaming knife poised for the fatal blow. But the voice of the angel rang through the silence; the command of God was revoked, the child was saved, the lamb stood in the thicket ready for the offering, and the faith of the tried father was bright as molten gold.

No angel from the courts of heaven ever brought a more joyous message to earth than that which shed its sacred light upon the brow of Mount Moriah. The drapery of years is drawn over the scene, but it is pictured upon the canvass of history, and stands to-day as a witness of the faith of Abraham, the care and love of God for his children, and the ministry of angels in the affairs of earth.

Whenever an important message waited for the children of men; whenever the Lord of the whole earth communicated with his creatures, the angels of his presence brought the tiding to earth.

Moses wandered an exile from the court of Pharoah, and watched his flock amid the grandeur of mountain scenery. The dark veil of Egyptian bondage enveloped God's people, and the fetters of Israel were gilded only by the light of promise. But the hour of deliverance was near, for lo! on Moreb's rugged brow there gleamed a burning bush, and reverently before the sacred presence stood the chosen leader and received his high commission.

That burning bush was the forerunner of Israel's redemption, and its golden rays pointed to the promised land.

An angel sat beneath the oak of Ophra, and as Lideon threshed wheat by the wine press, the sacred messenger saluted him with the words,' 'The Lord is with thee thou mighty man of valor. Go in thy might and thou shalt save Israel from the hand of the Midianites." The commission was given, the burning rock identified the messenger, and the ashes of the burnt-offering sealed the testimony. The altar of Baal was cast down, the trees of the grove were fallen, and an altar to the living God hallowed the spot. The incense of the burnt offering arose on the midnight air and the stars of heaven looked down upon the worshipers.

The army of Israel was thinned until only three hundred chosen men remained; but the little band was led by the Lord of Hosts, and through the camp of Midian rang the fearful warcry, "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon." It was the herald of confusion to Israel's foes, "The sword of the Lord" had triumphed and his chosen people were saved.

The monarch of Assyria swayed his sceptre over the rich domain of an empire. Goodly cities paid him homage and spread their wealth at his feet. Nineveh, his capitol, presented to his gaze the trophies of eastern magnificence. With her stately towers and massive gates, with her marble palaces and gold-wrought temples; her splendor would have filled the heart of a less ambitious sovereign. But Sennacharib looked with envious eyes upon the "daughter of Zion."

The glory of Lebanon, with her imperial crown of cedars, and the fertility of Carmel he longed to possess. And within the precincts of his palace he said to his courtiers: "With the multitude of my chariots I am come up to the hight of the mountains, to the sides of Lebanon, and will cut down the tall cedars thereof, and I will enter into the lodgings of his borders and into the forest of his Carmel."

Had Jerusalem been ruled by a prayerless king its conquest would

---

[1] Sometimes the same divine appearance which at one time is called "Malach Jehovah" is afterwards called simply "Jehovah." Hence, oriental translators, as Saadias, Abusaidre, and the Chaldee Samaritan, wherever Jehovah himself is said to appear on earth, always put for the name of God, the angel of God. See "Gesenius' Hebrew Lexicon," p. 570. See also "Stuart's Sketches of Angelos," in "Bibliotheca Sacra," p. 88.

[2] Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, Zeboim, and Zoar.

Vigilate.

Say, when he [illegible]meth will he find us waiting?
Our lamps [illegible]ght burning ready for our Lord?
Behold he com[illegible]h quickly—very quickly—
Bearing with him our wondrous great reward.

Few years ago our ears could hardly hear his footsteps,
For all our land was filled with war alarms;
On hill and shore where once the storm was raging,
Christ's little children sing triumphant psalms.

See once again the same sweet holy picture,
On which, long years ago, the angels smiled,
The starry night, the shepherds bending lowly,
The blessed virgin and her royal child.

As he came then, our Prince, our Lord and Savior,
So will he come again; Oh, hear his call,
His warning call, and go ye out to meet him,
For Christ may come, this advent, to us all.

No warning note shall sound at his appearing,
The sun will rise just as it did this day;
The mountain tops shall flush with golden glory,
The morning mists shall melt in light away.

All wait for him; none knoweth of his coming,
It may be eventide or early day.
We only hear his footstep on the mountain,
We only know he is not far away.

Oh wait and watch, for blessed are those servants
Who yet are faithful though their Lord delay,
Stand in your place, your lamps all trimmed and burning,
He cometh quickly — Christian, watch and pray.

—Selected by T. F. Sargent

The Rat that Renounced the World.

'Tis told
In a legend old,
How a certain rat grown tired of strife,
And the care that beset his ratship's life,
Wishing to meditate at his ease,
Took up his abode in a Holland cheese.

He found
This great round
Gave solitude, shelter, and plenty to eat,
And by diligent use of his teeth and his feet
He soon had a hermitage quite to his mind—
Its walls and its floors with good victuals lined.

This rat
Soon grew fat,
And he said to himself, "God bless his own!
My body now would be only skin and bone
If I hadn't turned hermit. I really must say
Renouncing the world's the better way.

To his cheese,
On their knees,
Came some representatives from the rats,
Saying: "Ratopolis is besieged by the cats;
We are going for aid to a foreign land;
Old neighbor, do lend us a helping hand.

We set out
Without
A dollar to pay the needful expense,
Do give us a shilling, or at least, a few cents;
We'll be very grateful, we'll surely repay,
If we live to return, on the next New Year's Day."

The rat
Said that
He no longer had interest in worldly affairs;
But for the sake of old friendship his two longest prayers
Were at their disposal. What could hermit do more?
He gave them his blessing, and—closed his door.

"Oh! the rarity
Of charity"
Among the rat family! If men live at ease,
And the world is to them a great Holland cheese—
When their friends are distressed and in sorry plight,
Do they give only blessings, then close the door tight?

The Judgment at Hand.

[Third Article.]

Lastly the saints were to "be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time" (Dan. 7: 25), by which is meant a period of 1260 years. This we prove as follows. In Rev. 12: 14 the flight of the church from before this same terrible persecution is prefigured under the type of a woman fleeing into the wilderness when we are told "she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time." In v. 6 of this same chapter this period of time is called "a thousand two hundred and three score days," during which they should feed the woman in the wilderness. The expression days is frequently used in the Bible to signify years: thus we read that the days of the years of the life of such and such of the patriarchs and other persons were so many years. And that in representing time, a day stands for a year and not a literal day, is clearly shown in Daniel's prophecy concerning the coming of the Savior, found in ch. 9: 25 to end.

When this prophecy was written the Jews, and Daniel among them, were captives in Babylon, and Jerusalem was lying waste and almost uninhabited. But it was here shown to the prophet that his beloved city should be rebuilt and inhabited by her people, and then he is told that "from the going forth of the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem unto the Messiah the Prince shall be seven weeks and three score and two weeks," or sixty-nine weeks, equal to 483 days. This commandment is quite generally conceded to have gone forth in the shape of the decree issued by Artaxerxes in the seventh year of his reign (Ezra 9: 7, 11, to end); that the wall was rebuilt in troublous times, as Daniel had foretold. (Neh. 4 [illegible] to end.) This seventh year of A[illegible] our common chronolog[illegible] before Christ 557 yea[illegible] and [illegible]ches to our Savior's twenty-[illegible]venth year in which John Baptist be[illegible]n to proclaim him as Messiah. Ot[illegible] [illegible]hronologists maintain that our common table is incorrect, and that this seventh year of Artaxerxes was B. C. 483. Be this as it may, our position that each day of Daniel's sixty-nine weeks represented a year is sufficiently established by either calculation. Moreover and above all this we know the fulfillment of the prophecy concerning these 1260 days, that they were not intended as literal days, for in that case they would cover a period of only three and a half Jewish years of 360 days each, whereas the Papal dominancy was centuries in duration, and if we add 1260 years to A. D. 528, the year in which, as above shown, the papal power began to exist as Daniel's persecuting "little horn," we reach A. D. 1796, the commencing of the terrible revolution which deluged the continent of Europe in blood, and during which revolution thousands of the Romish clergy perished; for then did the "judgment sit" and they began to "take away his power to consume and to destroy it unto the end." (Dan. 7: 26.) And with the downfall of the French Empire in 1871 the Papal temporal power ceased to exist.

The rise of that power was gradual, as the prophet here foretold its decline would be. The decree of the tyrant Phocas making Boniface III, Universal Bishop, and greatly enlarging the temporal power and dominion of the pontiff, was issued about A. D. 610 or 611, and 1260 years added to the latter date reach A. D. 1871. The temporal or civil power of the Pope, is to us a thing of the past. The Church of Rome is no longer in a position to impose her dogmas upon mankind by force. She can no longer make war upon the saints nor prevail against them. And yet it was written by the prophet, "I beheld and the same horn made war with the saints and prevailed against them until the Ancient of Days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High: and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom." (vv. 21, 22, 27.)

It is agreed among our standard commentators, that the willful king of Dan. 1: 31–40 is identical with the power represented by the little horn of ch. 7, and a majority of ablest modern expositors apply the remainder of the chapter from v. 30 to the end, to the same king or power, in which they are undoubtedly correct, though we have not space here to give their reasons, our present object being to direct attention to the fact that this prophecy reaches to "the time of the end," (v. 36, 40), when "many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake." (ch. 12: 1–4.) And to prove, if proof be needed, that this plain language is predicted of the time of the resurrection, and consequently of our Savior's literal second advent, as no Christian who believes in a literal resurrection will pretend that it can or will take place prior thereto; "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first." (1 Thes. 4: 14, 16.)

In 2 Thes. 2: 3–13 this same persecuting, blaspheming power is mentioned by Paul, as indeed is plainly manifested from a confusion of Scripture. In v. 4 we read, "Who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God or that is worshiped; so that he, as God, sitteth in the temple of God showing himself that he is God," which is precisely parallel with the language of Dan. 11: 36, 37; "and he shall exalt himself and magnify himself above every god, and shall speak marvelous things against the God of gods.........for he shall magnify himself above all."

This belief was common among the Jews prior to our Savior's time, that when he should appear it would be in the character of the most powerful of earthly monarchs, and that he would exalt the Jews above all the nations and make Jerusalem earth's capital city. And so when Jesus was proclaimed as the long promised Messiah they anticipated the immediate fulfillment by him, of this, their earnest but mistaken expectation. Thus we read in Lk. 19: 11, 12, that our Lord "spake a parable because he was nigh to Jerusalem, and because they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear. He said therefore a certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and to return." That Jesus intended to liken himself unto this nobleman, is selfevident from the context, and he meant to teach his followers, here as elsewhere, that his kingdom was not of this world, nor to be set up by man's instrumentality, or aid. His kingdom is the "stone cut out without hands." Now if you will turn to Dan. 8: 13, 14 you will there behold the scene of the investiture of our Lord with this identical kingdom which he has gone into that far country to receive for himself; for we there read, "I saw in the night vision and behold one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of Days and they brought him near before him, and there was given [illegible]im dominion and glory and a king[illegible]" etc. And now when he shall [illegible] receive that kingdom will he not return [illegible]e promised he would? Paul says [illegible] "shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom" (2 Tim. 4: 1), thus showing not only that he will appear on earth again so soon as he shall have received his kingdom, but that then the day of judgment will have come.

So strongly was the Jewish faith to which we have alluded above, rooted in the minds of the disciples that all the plain declarations of the Savior to the contrary, did not suffice to disabuse them of their error; for we hear them repeating, as their last words to him on earth, "Lord wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" (Acts 1: 6.) St. Paul seems to have been fighting against this deception in 2 Thes. ch. 2; for he charges the brethren not to be troubled or soon shaken in mind or deceived by word or letter as from him that the day of Christ was then near at hand; for, said he, that day shall not come except there come a falling away, or apostacy from the true faith, first, and that man of sin the son of perdition should be revealed. And he calls upon them to remember that when he was yet with them he told them these things, and now, said he, you know what it is that witholdeth, that is, prevents or hinders the immediate revelation, or appearing of that wicked one: and he tells them that the same thing should continue thus to prevent and hinder, until it should be taken out of the way. Now the thing which did thus let or hinder the revelation of the Papal power was the Pagan Roman government, which had to be "taken out of the way," in order to the accession of Papal to the civil power of that government.

"And then shall that wicked one be revealed whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth and destroy with the brightness of his coming." (v. 8.) The Greek which is translated "the brightness of his coming" is, when literally translated, "by the appearing of the presence of himself." Parousia invariably denotes the actual personal presence of the person spoken of, and the "coming" or presence of our Lord here mentioned cannot be interpreted in a figurative sense without doing violence to the necessary import of the word. Thus Paul says in 1 Cor. 16: 17, "I am glad of the parousia (coming or presence) of Stephanus, etc." It is then by the actual appearing of the presence of our Lord that this man of sin or wicked one will be destroyed.

E. C. Bronaugh.

The Ministry of Angels.

"Are they not all ministering spirits sent forth to minister to those who shall be the heirs of salvation?" (Heb. 1:14.)

The angels of God have always occupied a prominent position in the affairs of earth. In obedience to the mandate of Jehovah they worked out the problem of creation and drew from the halls of chaos the fair proportions of the new-born earth. They planted the floral bowers of paradise and taught the music-winds to play amid the baby shades of Eden. They tinged the first morning with the golden light of day, and drew the crimson robe of sunset across the evening sky. Until the light of revelation dawned upon humanity they formed the only medium of communication between God and his creatures. The "Elohim" or "Malach" of the Hebrews and the "Angelos" of the Greeks have ever been the representatives of God upon earth. The human eye has never rested upon the form of the eternal Jehovah (1 Tim. 6: 16), but the Elohim of the Lord—the angel of his presence—talked with our first parents beneath the cloudless skies of Eden.[1]

The coast of all past time still bears the impress of angel feet; they are imprinted upon the bright plains of Mamre, where were gathered the grapes of Eschol—the figs and pomegranates which were borne back to Joshua as the fruits of the "goodly land" upon which they were so soon to enter. Here, amid the blushing fruits of the East, the messengers of the Lord communed with Abraham. Here they opened to his eye of faith the blessings of futurity, and spread before his vision the panorama of coming ages. But they could not linger long in the patriarch's tent; another duty lay before them, and they hasted to the cities of the plain. Perhaps earth never witnessed a fairer scene than that laid out at the angels' feet. Before them was a plain which rivalled in fertility the richest of earth, and the silver waves of the river Jordan rippled through it, bringing joy to all the dwellers of the land. But the gems of the valley are the fine cities[2] which reflect the glory of an eastern sunset. Very beautiful are their towns and palaces where luxury reigns supreme! But they are the whited sepulchers of antiquity, the haunts of crime and homes of blasphemy. Long have they sinned against Heaven; they have defied God and insulted his children. But the bolt of vengeance is poised above their heads, and the messengers of the Lord are sent to warn the one faithful child of God to flee with his family from the impending wrath. The warning is heeded; the city is deserted by the chosen few. God's thunder-bolt has fallen, and the fiery waves of judgment sweep over the plain.

"'Tis the vintage of blood, 'tis the fullness of time,
And vengeance shall gather the harvest of crime."

Roll back the flood of time and see the bright summit of Mount Moriah before it was hallowed by the "House of the Lord" or desecrated by the Mosque of Omar. Its fair brow is crowned with a sacrificial altar whereon is laid the human sacrifice, and Abraham, with a faith that never faltered, is bending over his darling boy with the gleaming knife posied for the fatal blow. But the voice of the angel rang through the silence; the command of God was revoked, the child was saved, the lamb stood in the thicket ready for the offering, and the faith of the tried father was bright as molten gold.

No angel from the courts of heaven ever brought a more joyous message to earth than that which shed its sacred light upon the brow of Mount Moriah. The drapery of years is drawn over the scene, but it is pictured upon the canvass of history, and stands to-day as a witness of the faith of Abraham, the care and love of God for his children, and the ministry of angels in the affairs of earth.

Whenever an important message waited for the children of men; whenever the Lord of the whole earth communicated with his creatures, the angels of his presence brought the tiding to earth.

Moses wandered an exile from the court of Pharoah, and watched his flock amid the grandeur of mountain scenery. The dark veil of Egyptian bondage enveloped God's people, and the fetters of Israel were gilded only by the light of promise. But the hour of deliverance was near, for lo! on Moreb's rugged brow there gleamed a burning bush, and reverently before the sacred presence stood the chosen leader and received his high commission.

That burning bush was the forerunner of Israel's redemption, and its golden rays pointed to the promised land.

An angel sat beneath the oak of Ophra, and as Gideon threshed wheat by the wine press, the sacred messenger saluted him with the words, 'The Lord is with thee thou mighty man of valor. Go in thy might and thou shalt save Israel from the hand of the Midianites." The commission was given, the burning rock identified the messenger, and the ashes of the burnt-offering sealed the testimony. The altar of Baal was cast down, the trees of the grove were fallen, and an altar to the living God hallowed the spot. The incense of the burnt offering arose on the midnight air and the stars of heaven looked down upon the worshipers.

The army of Israel was thinned until only three hundred chosen men remained; but the little band was led by the Lord of Hosts, and through the camp of Midian rang the fearful warcry, "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon." It was the herald of confusion to Israel's foes, "The sword of the Lord" had triumphed and his chosen people were saved.

The monarch of Assyria swayed his sceptre over the rich domain of an empire. Goodly cities paid him homage and spread their wealth at his feet. Nineveh, his capitol, presented to his gaze the trophies of eastern magnificence. With her stately towers and massive gates, with her marble palaces and gold-wrought temples; her splendor would have filled the heart of a less ambitious sovereign. But Sennacharib looked with envious eyes upon the "daughter of Zion."

The glory of Lebanon, with her imperial crown of cedars, and the fertility of Carmel he longed to possess. And within the precincts of his palace he said to his courtiers: "With the multitude of my chariots I am come up to the hight of the mountains, to the sides of Lebanon, and will cut down the tall cedars thereof, and I will enter into the lodgings of his borders and into the forest of his Carmel."

Had Jerusalem been raised by a prayerless king its conquest would

---

[1] Sometimes the same divine appearance which at one time is called "Malach Jehovah" is afterwards called simply "Jehovah." Hence, oriental translators, as Saadias, Abusaidos, and the Chaldee Samaritan, wherever Jehovah himself is said to appear on earth, always put for the name of God, the angel of God. See "Gesenius' Hebrew Lexicon," p. 570. See also "Stuart's Sketches of Angelos," in "Bibliotheca Sacra," p. 88.

[2] Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, Zeboim, and Zoar.

What loud hallelujahs will rend the air as the saints of all ages, nations, and climes shall speed their way through the air to meet him whom their souls love and whom they will delight to crown "Lord of all."

But while my very heart cries come Lord Jesus, and take to thyself thy great power and reign, I feel very unworthy to be a citizen of his righteous and everlasting kingdom. As I look back over my past life I am led to exclaim, I have been an unprofitable servant, and yet I have zealously tried to keep his Word and walk in all his commandments blameless. "The Lord is my refuge and fortress; my God; in him will I trust. He also is my righteousness and my salvation."

A Friend Writes us:

I wish to do or give my mite in spreading the truth, and THE TIMES is the best medium, I think, in many cases, especially of persons who want to be instructed and strengthened. One of the friends to whom I would send the paper, a minister, who is already committed, in fact has for some years preached the near coming of Christ, believing and preaching precisely like the great body of Adventists, with the single exception of the nature of man, &c. And on those questions he simply says he thinks there is much to support the views of the Advent people, though he does not feel called on to either preach one way or the other in an argumentative way, but to let the Bible stand as it reads and for itself, and every man's conscience will teach him the finally impenitent are wholly and hopelessly lost; and that he does feel it his duty to warn men now to flee from the wrath to come, and preach Christ at the door.

Another is just starting out to preach, has long felt it a duty, and can no longer remain at home. Opposition has held him, I learn, sometime; but he feels he can no longer resist the call without losing himself the favor of God. He is timid and not very self confident, would be an admirable helper as he is, but needs much to hold him up, while he holds up the truth. Hence I hope his convictions of present truth may be strengthened. He also believes the Lord is at the door, but will he have courage to tell it? I trust he may, and wish him to have the benefit of THE TIMES.

From S. W. Bird, Cherokee Co., Iowa.

We are in a new and sparsely-settled country, and are anxious to do something for the Lord. I have given away my papers after reading them, and find that they are gladly and even eagerly received. We think a great deal could be done here if we only had some one to preach the Word. There could be a small church established. We have a Bible class in which the heads of eight or nine families have taken a great interest, beside many younger persons. They are searching for themselves. The doctrine is new to them and they express surprise at its simplicity and harmony, and wonder why it is that it has not been preached before. Many of them have never heard of the Savior's second advent, only in a spiritual sense. I think other denominations are getting some light. A worthy Babtist divine preached on man as a subject of death, and he admitted that the Scriptures teach that the soul goes to the grave at death, and said there was "a great mistake" in the theology of the day.

From Martha Slack, Jewell Co., Kan.

We are living way out in the wilderness, among the "heathen" as far as the gospel is concerned. There are many of the lost sheep here, and no laborers. My companion and self are trying to serve the Lord by holding on to the faith. There are some of our relatives and some others that we are not acquainted with a few miles below here that are looking for the Lord. We would love to have some of the shepherds of the flock come and break to us the bread of life. May the Lord send us some one soon. I have not heard an Advent sermon for over a year. There was preaching a few miles from where we lived last summer, but I was not able to attend. My husband and our little girl were out to hear and enjoyed it very much. I have had very poor health for nearly three years. I desire a share in the prayers of the brothers and sisters that I may be healed or at least have strength to bear afflictions of this life.

From S. C. Wellcome.

I have been laboring for short time at Eagle Lake in the big woods in Blue Earth Co. Minn. God has poured out his Spirit upon the people and about twenty have been converted and reclaimed. Next week I expect to organize a church there. A deep interest in searching the Scriptures is manifested. Br. Kerns a Methodist preacher was with me three days, taking hold and laboring with the best of feelings. He is a noble man. Br. John Small and his companion have been praying for and laboring faithfully with this people for years and are now receiving an answer to their prayers.

The most fearful snow storm ever known in this State came suddenly upon us last week Tuesday and continued three days. Many persons have perished in it. God is speaking in thunder tones to the people to prepare for judgment, which is soon coming on a guilty world.

From Sr. Rensbreita, Bishop Hill, Ill.

I should be glad to meet with the brethren and sisters of like precious faith, but am thankful that there are a few of us here who can meet with each other and our Lord, with prayers and exhortations. I am glad I can read the paper some, and like especially to read the letters from the brethand sisters scattered abroad. Let all who love Jesus pray for us who do not understand your language, that we may have a desire to read our Bibles more. In the Bible we have a sure guide. Pray God to uphold his cause among us, that a good company here may be found ready when Christ comes.

From J. W. Thompson, Carbondale, Ill.

I want everybody to be looking for the coming of our blessed Savior. I have been trying to obey God for about twenty-eight years. Nearly two years since Br. F. Burr convinced me that I had not obeyed in baptism. Although a cripple I went to the water's edge on my crutches, gave myself into the hands of the brother and God. I am to-day strong in the faith of the soon coming of my Savior. I would like to do all I can to get every one to be on their watch, have oil in their vessels and their lamps trimmed and burning.

Unchanged, Though Long Absent.

In a man's training for eternal life, how much depends upon the state of the heart! There may be a mental perception of the pure and beautiful in the teachings of Christ, and a critical appreciation of the harmony of Christian doctrines as these are presented in the apostolic letters, without that clinging of the affections to the Savior personally which is, beyond doubt the surest test of discipleship. The "men in white," who stood by the "men of Galilee," as the ascending Redeemer disappeared from their sight, said not much, if measured by the number of words; but, judged by the vast interests involved in those words, they declared a double gospel which flashed gladness through the hearts of the disciples, and caused them to return from Olivet to Jerusalem with great joy. This is what they said: "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

The double gospel is, first, that he will come back, to "restore again the kingdom of Israel," and to do all the other glorious things which the prophets have assigned to him; and, secondly, that he will come back unchanged —"the same Jesus."

Are we then to understand that the meek, and gentle, and loving One, about whom the gray-headed saint delights to read, and the little child to hear, will, when he returns in all the splendor of his regal glory, be the meek, and gentle, and loving One still?

Have not the long ages, during which he has lived in heaven, where "angels and authorities and powers are subject unto him," wrought some change in the feelings with which he regarded the poor and the needy, when fishermen were his companions and poverty his condition? That is to say, will "the Man of God's right hand," when he comes with terrible power to destroy his enemies, have the same heart that led "the Man of Sorrows" to pity the widow of Nain, and weep at the grave of Lazarus? Centuries of homage from beings of lofty position in a region of light and purity, supply a marvelous contrast to the scorn and mockery he suffered from official insolence and mob barbarism in the days of Herod and Pilate; but the thought of any change in him, as the result, of consequence, of such a wonderful change of circumstances, is simply distressing to those who love him. We can not bear the thought! It is the "Jesus" of the gospels that has won our hearts, and we want to see him! True, he will be in great estate, and we thank his Father and our Father for the fact, as it is impossible for us to honor him as he deserves; but his heart will love as in the olden time, and his voice, though we have never heard it, will fall upon our ears like some delightful strain of music with which we have been long familiar.

Prince Zaphnath-paaneah was an Egyptian noble of the very highest rank, gorgeously attired, with a gold chain about his neck, and blazing with jewels. No wonder that the sons of Jacob, who had traveled through the desert in very uncourtly fashion, in obedience to the old man's request—"Go again; buy us a little food"—were "troubled at his presence." And who has not been moved as the wonderful story unfolds itself? Beneath the splendor of princely robes the brother's heart is beating hard, yearning and throbbing with impassioned love to his brethren. The pent-up fountain refuses any longer to be sealed by courtly etiquette. The man is greater than the prince, the brother than the man. The ministers of Pharaoh are commanded to depart. He will be alone with the terrified travelers from Palestine; gracious tears came to his relief; and, with an effort that shakes his manly frame, he says, "I am 'JOSEPH'!"

Now this grand climax mocks that of the elaborate fiction, over which sentimental beauty, that has no practical sympathy with the real sorrows of men, has been weeping! But this story of antiquity is true, and its power to move the heart is not weakened by the roll of ages. Neither the violent injustice Joseph had suffered at the hands of his brethren, nor the honors to which he was subsequently raised, had quenched his brotherly affection.

Is there anything typical about this fine biography? At any rate, it is surely suggestive. Jesus Christ our Lord is the same yesterday, and today, and forever. "Unto him that loveth us"—the true reading—expresses the unchanging feelings of the Savior towards his brethren. He rests in his love. When his presence is manifested, they will be overwhelmed with holy awe because of his majesty and glory; but the evidences of his identity with the brother born for adversity will be so complete, that their joy will be full. Mistake there cannot be. No other can come in the glory of the Father and the holy angels; no other will seek to take us to himself, that where he is there we may be also; and we shall know him as surely as if we had been with him from the beginning. The faith and fellowship that imprint his likeness upon the sanctified heart at present will give the power of recognition in the glory, and we shall see, with love and joy, that he is the unchanged Redeemer, Friend, Brother, and Lord whom we now trust, follow, and adore. Those tender traits of character which endear the Christ of the gospels to every true heart will be radiantly conspicuous in the King of glory. So far from forgetting us, he is employed on our behalf in the heavens; and when he returns, it will be to carry out and complete his unchanged original purpose respecting us. The voice of the Shepherd, which we hear and follow in faith now in the mortal pilgrimage, will be the same voice which will thrill us with joy in resurrection felicity. Circumstances change fickle and fallible men, but they have no such influence upon him who is at once the Head, the Life, and the Hope of the redeemed. Blessed be his name forever!—Rainbow.

Our Young Folks.

The Infant Reasoner.

Willie was a very interesting boy of five years, fond of asking questions, or hearing stories—in fact, like all other children, fond of receiving attention —but, as a general thing, easily pleased, and in consequence, he wore a happy, sunny look, which made us love him. One evening, after he had left us with a pleasant "Good night," I was startled to hear him say in an angry tone:—

"I shan't say my prayers to you! I shan't say them to-night!"

"What are you saying, Willie?" said I, quietly entering the room. He hung his head; but when his naughtiness was spoken of, the pride of resistence, as well as the unsubdued passion of his heart was aroused, and he answered sullenly:

"I can't see God, and I shan't pray to him."

"Do you only love those you see?" I asked, in a tone of surprise. "Then you only love your father and mother, and little brother when you can see them; and when you go to your home, far away, you will forget grandpa and grandma, and all of us. That's great love, isn't it?"

"O, Aunt Effie, I don't mean that, you know I don't, for I have seen you all, and we can come and see one another. But I never saw God."

"Suppose, Willie, you had never seen me, and to-morrow morning your mother should show you a beautiful book, and say, 'Aunt Effie sent this to you,' and in the afternoon there should come a dear, kind little girl, who should say, 'Willie, your Aunt Effie sent me to play with you, and she sent these bright flowers, so that we can play Fairy Queen;'—would you not think at once, 'How good and kind Aunt Effie is!' and would not you love her?"

"O, yes, Aunt Effie; it would be so plain, I should know you were good."

"But God does a great deal more than I have said. He does send beautiful flowers, so that you can find them everywhere; He has sent you so many good, kind friends to love you and take care of you, that I should grow tired to name them all. Besides, he takes care of you in darkness all the night."

"O, no, Aunt Effie; mother takes care of me—because when I cry, she comes to me in a minute."

"Yes; but who takes care of your mother?"

"Grandma."

"And who sakes care of her?"

"Grandpa."

"And who takes care of him?"

"He can take care of himself! Why, Aunt Effie!—a great, big man! he knows just what to do."

"Oh, yes Willie—very easy it seems when all is still and quiet; but what if God should send the quick lightning to burn the house in the night, or if a fierce robber should come, or if he should grow very sick, what then? could your grandpa hold the lightning back in the clouds, or, while sleeping, keep the robbers from the door? You see, Willie, that if God, who made everything, did not take care of us nobody could."

"Well, Aunt Effie," urged the child, with an expression of intense interest, "I see God takes care of us; but you said he made everything, and I don't believe that. You said yesterday we should not say what we can't prove; and you can't prove God made this beadstead!"

"Who made it?"

"Why a man to be sure."

"What did he make it of?"

"Of wood; can't you see?"

"Yes, but where did the wood come from?"

"It came out of trees."

"That is right. Now tell me who made the trees grow, who made the man, and who gave him sense enough to make the beadstead, and I will tell you who made it."

"Aunt Effie, grandpa makes trees grow!"

"No Willie; grandpa puts the little trees in the ground, and waters them; he wants them all to live; but some die. Those trees which you helped him to plant to-day only took the place of trees he put there last year, but which did not live. If he could make them grow, would he have done the work twice in the same place?"

"Aunt Effie, I know something now! God didn't make grandpa's axe! You can't say anything to that! You can't say he did."

"Willie, what is the axe made of?"

"Of iron and wood. I know about the wood; but the iron, Aunt Effie, I think it isn't made at all!"

"Well, where does iron come from?" I asked.

"I can't tell, Aunt Effie: but it did'nt grow, and man didn't make it.

"No, Willie; it is in the ground. God put it there, and man finds it, all mixed with the sand. He first digs it out of the earth, makes it very fine, then separates the grains of the iron from the sand, and puts it in a very hot fire, where it is melted and runs altogether in a large lump. Then he hammers it to make it solid; and after all this work, it is ready to be melted, to be made into different things for us to use. Do you think now that God has nothing to do with grandpa's axe? He made all things; and, though you should try all night, you cannot think of anything he did not make."

"O, Aunt Effie, just let me get in your arms while we talk about the blanket. Can you make me say he made that?" "O, yes, easily enough," I answered. "The blanket is made of wool. God makes wool grow on the sheep, and gives man knowledge to make it into blankets."

"And did he make moonshine and flowers, and rain, and sunshine, and every little thing?"

"Yes, Willie. And will you go to sleep without thanking him for his goodness, and asking him to take care of you, and make you good, and keep us all safe and well, and happy?"

"Well, Aunt Effie, I will say my prayers; but I wish you would talk so to me every night when I'm not bad."

Years passed. We were again together, and sat looking at some pictures, when Willie suddenly lifted up his earnest eyes to mine, saying, "Aunt Effie do you remember the night when I was a little fellow and wouldn't say my prayers, how you preached to me? I never remembered anything half so well."

At first I could not recollect; but by telling me what I had said, he recalled it to my memory; and I could not but feel, as I reflected upon his words, that the impressions we make upon the minds of children are more lasting than we imagine; After that early acknowledgement of God as Creator and constant benefactor, would that child become an infidel? Was Voltaire very far wrong as to the value of early impressions, when he said, "Give me the first five years of a child's life, and I will give you all the rest?"

The Helpless Victim.

I have read somewhere of an eagle in the far West. Soaring with steady wing, he saw far below him the grand scenes of American nature, clothed in the first snows of early Winter. As he rose higher toward the blue heaven, his keen eye saw floating on the distant river, whose margin was already frost-bound, the carcass of a huge buffalo. He paused in his upward flight; descended to settle and revel on this feast of corruption. He was borne calmly down the stream toward the fall of the rapids which lay below. Gorged with his foul meal, with drooping wing and dormant energies he slept on the fetid mass, and amid the oozing putrefaction. The blood, stiffened by the frost, bound his feet to the carcass; and onward was he borne until the roar of the cataract thundered on his ear. He struggled for liberty; his powers had been enfeebled with satiety; his drooping wings were bound to the frozen blood; his wild cries awoke the echoes; he made frantic attempts to throw off his horrid companion; looked up to the blue heaven he had abandoned. It was too late; hurried over the rapid, he was sucked into the boiling cataract, and dashed to destruction on the rocks beneath.

How does such an illustration find its analogy in human life! "His own iniquity," saith the Scriptures, "shall take the wicked himself, and he shall be holden with the cords of his sins." There is a deep and awful mystery in the downward progress of men, when he who was once the master of sin becomes the "slave of sin." Alas, there are scores of men in every neighborhood who would give all they have to begin life again. There was a time when they never intended to be vicious; but step by step they lowered themselves. Shame, truth, self-respect died. The lower elements of their nature first were freely indulged, then became importunate, then exacting, then domineering, then uncontrollable;

Dear young man, the pride of a mother, the hope of a father, with an intensity of yearning love I conjure you to pause ere you go into the way of sinners. It your feet have turned aside, retrace, I beseech you, your steps. Your strong "I will" now may, through God's mercy, turn you from the pit of infamy. But soon weaker will be your will, dimmer your sense of moral beauty, more desperate your passions, till at length you will feel bound, and then find yourself borne over the rapids a lost and helpless wreck.

A Child's Morning Prayer.

Many a Christian mother, who, at evening receives at her knee her little one, with folded hands and closed eyes, to say, "Now I lay me," before goinng to rest, has been puzzled to find an equally brief and suitable form of words in which to conduct the morning devotions of said little child. Possibly it would be a kindness to some such mothers if you should publish the accompanying stanza, which has done acceptable service in the circle where it had its origin in a mother's heart:

Jesus hear me while I pray;
Please to take my sins away;
Make me gentle, make me mild,
Make me thine own little child.
Amen.

—Congregationalist.

have been easy to the invading host. Their armies of horse and foot would have taken the city and lain the Assyrian yoke upon her children. But in the hour of danger he remembered him who had said, "Call upon me in the day of trouble, I will deliver thee," and before the eternal throne he pleaded for the safety of the Holy City. The prayer entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabbaoth, and through the prophet Isaiah came the quick response. "Thus saith the Lord concerning the king of Assyria. He shall not come into this city, nor shoot an arrow there.... By the way that he came by the same shall he return, and shall not come into this city saith the Lord."

The host of Assyria was encamped without Jerusalem. The bravest warriors of the empire slept upon their arms. With their spears and battle-axes, with their armor and shields ready for the conflict, they waited for the word of command.

The heart of the Assyrian beat high with hope as he surveyed the full ranks and numbered his troops. The end was near, the prize he coveted was almost within his reach, and he only awaited the morning. But in the solemn hush of midnight, the wing of the death-angel passed over the camp and the dead lay by thousands beneath its shade. One hundred and eighty-five thousand white foreheads bore witness to the fatal touch. What pen can portray the dismay of the baffled monarch when the morning light revealed the extent of his disaster? Man had led an army against Jehovah—the finite had dared to cope with the Infinite—the mortal had contended with him "who only hath immortality"—the earth worm of his footstool had made war with the King of Heaven—and this was the result. His army was cut off in a night by the angel of the Lord.

The king of Babylon slept, but dreams haunted the imperial pillow, and the vision of the "holy watchers" passed before his mind. It was the beautiful type of his own doom—the decree of the watchers, "That the living may know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will."

The golden goblet of reason was broken, and the humbled monarch wandered with the beasts of the field until the seven times were past. "And at the end of the days I Nebuchadnezzar lifted up mine eyes unto Heaven and mine understanding returned unto me, and I blessed the Most High, and I praised and honored him that liveth for ever and ever, whose dominion is an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom is from generation to generation."

The messenger of God walked with the three Hebrew children in the fiery furnace, and there was no smell of fire upon their garments.

Daniel, the faithful prophet, was cast into the den of lions, but the angel of the Lord was there, he closed the mouth of the forest king, the prophet was safe, and the God of David was glorified. He delivereth and rescueth and he maketh signs and wonders in heaven and in earth, who hath delivered Daniel from the power of the lions. MRS. H. V. REED.

The Life of a Justified Man.

[Third Article—Concluded.]

The life of the justified is the life of wisdom and truth. He has become "wise in Christ;" nay, "Christ has been made unto him wisdom" as well as righteousness. It is thus that he has become "wise unto salvation," and he feels that he must hold fast the truth that saves. To trifle with that truth, to tamper with error, would be to deny the cross. He by whom he is justified is himself the truth, and every man who receives that truth becomes a witness for it. By the truth he is saved; by the truth he is made free; by the truth he is made clean; by the truth he is sanctified; and therefore it is precious to him, in every jot and tittle. Each fragment broken off is so much lost to the spiritual well-being; and each new discovery made in the rich field of truth is so much eternal gain. He has bought the truth, and he will not sell it. It is his life; it is his heritage; it is his kingdom. He counts all truth precious, and all error hateful. He dreads the unbelief that is undermining the foundations of truth, and turning its spacious palaces into a chaos of human speculations. He calls no truth obsolete or out of date; for we know that the truths on which he rests for eternity are the oldest of the old, and yet the surest of the sure. To introduce doubts as to the one sacrifice on which he builds, is to shake the cross of Calvary. To lay other foundation than that already laid, is to destroy his one hope. To take the sacrificial element out of the blood, is to make peace with God impossible, because unrighteous. To substitute the church for Christ, or the priest for the herald of pardon, or the rite for the precious blood, or the sacrament for the living Christ upon the throne, or the teachings of the church for the enlightenment of the Holy Ghost—this is to turn light into darkness, and then to call that darkness light. Thus taught by that spirit who has led him to the cross, the justified man knows how to discern truth from error. He has the unction from the Holy One, and knows all things (1 John 2: 20); he has the anointing which is truth, and is no lie (1 John 2; 27); and he can try the spirits, whether they are of God. (1 John 4: 1.)

Want of sensitiveness to the difference between truth and error is one of the errors of modern Protestantism. Sounding words, well executed pictures, pretentious logic, carry away multitudes. The distinction between gospel and no gospel is very decided and momentous; yet many will come away from a sermon in which the free gospel has been overlaid, not sensible of the want, and praising the preacher. The conversions of recent years have not the depth of other days. Consciences are half awakened and half pacified; the wound is slightly laid open, and slightly healed. Hence the want of spiritual discernment as to truth and error. The conscience is not sensitive, else it would at once refuse and resent any statement, however well argued or painted, which encroached in the slightest degree upon the free gospel of God's love in Christ; which interposed any obstacle between the sinner and the cross; or which merely declaimed about the cross, without telling us especially how it saves and how it purifies. We need sensitive but not morbid conscience to keep us steadfast in the faith, to preserve our spiritual eyesight unimpaired, remembering the apostle's words, "he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins." (2 Pet. 1: 9.) Censoriousness is one thing, and spiritual discernment is quite another. To avoid the first we do not need to give up the second: though the "liberality" of modern times would recommend us to be charitable to error, and not very tenacious of any Bible truth, seeing that nothing in an age of culture can be received but that which has been pronounced credible by philosophy or science, and which the "verifying faculty" has adjudged to be true.

The life of the justified must be one of praise and prayer. His justification has drawn him nearer to God. It has opened his lips and enlarged his heart. He cannot but praise; he cannot but pray. He has ten thousand things to ask for; he has ten thousand things for which to give thanks. He knows what it is to speak in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in his heart to the Lord. (Col. 3: 16.)

The life of the justified is one of watchfulness. Forgiveness has altered all their circumstances and hopes. It has brought them into a new world, from which are shut out things they were formerly familiar with, and into which are introduced things which they knew not. They see and hear what they never saw nor heard before; and they cease to see and hear what but lately they delighted in. They are no longer satisfied with things as they are. They expect changes, and with that they have come. The present has become less to them, the future more; and in that future the more absorbing object is the reappearing of him, whom not having seen, they love. That the future should be a mere repetition of the present—with a few scientific and political improvements—is quite enough for the worldly man. But the man who, by his new connection with the cross, has been transported into a new region, is not content that it should be so. He wants a better future, and a more congenial world; he desires a state of things in which the new object of his love shall be all. And learning from Scripture that such a new condition of things is to be expected, and that of that new state Christ is himself to be the first and last, he looks eagerly out for the fulfillment of these hopes. Learning, moreover, that the arrival of this King and of his kingdom is to be subdued, he is led to wait and watch; all the more because everything here, in the world's daily history of change, and noise, and revelry, is fitted to throw him off his guard. His justification does not lull him asleep. His faith does not make him heedless of the future. It is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. It says, let us not sleep, as do others, but let us watch and be sober: watch, for ye know neither the day nor the hour when the Son of man cometh. Many a trial of her watchfulness has the church had, many a disappointment has her faith sustained; but she does not despond nor give way, remembering the promise, "He that shall come will come, and will not tarry." Her faith keeps up her vigilence, and her vigilence invigorates her faith. In the darkest hour faith says, "I am my Beloved's, and my Beloved is mine;" and hope adds, "Make haste, my Beloved, and be thou like to a roe or a young hart upon the mountain of spices."

The church watches because of present evil, and coming good; that she may be kept undefiled from the one, and may attain unto the other. Danger from enemies, and the prospect of speedy victory over them, keep her awake. Fear of losing sight of the cross, and so again walking in darkness; suspicion both of the good and the evil things of earth—its flatteries and its menaces, its toils, its cares, its amusements, its pleasures; anxiety about keeping her garments unspotted and her conscience clean; the sight of the sleeping millions around, and the knowledge that it is upon a sleeping world that the Lord is to come;—these things act powerfully as stimulants, and bid her be watchful. To be among the foolish virgins, without oil and with a dying lamp, when the midnight cry goes forth; to be near the door, and yet shut out; to hear the announcement, "The marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready," and yet not be ready; to be summoned to the festival, and yet to be without the bridal and the festal dress; to love, and then to fall from love; to draw the sword, and then in faintheartedness to sheathe it; to run well for awhile, and then to slacken speed; to war against Satan as the prince of darkness, and yield to him as an angel of light; to set out with condemning the world, and then to mingle with it; to cleave like Demas to the saints, and then to forsake them; to be among the twelve for a season, then to be a traitor at the last; to be lifted up, like Capernaum, to heaven, and then to be thrust down to hell; to be among the sons of light, and then to fall from heaven like Lucifer, son of the morning; to sit down in the upper chamber with the Lord, then to betray the Son of man with a kiss; to put on a goodly garment of fair profession, and then to walk naked in shame:—these are the solemn thoughts that crowd in upon the justified man, and keep him watchful. They who know not what it is to be accepted in the Beloved, and to rejoice in hope of the glory of God, may fall asleep. He dare not; he knows what he is risking, and what one hour of slumber may cost him; and he must be wakeful. He does not make election his opiate, and say, I am safe, I may sleep or wake as I please. He says, I am safe; but this only makes me doubly vigilent, that I may not dishonor him who has saved me; and even though I may not finally fall away, I know not how much I may lose by one day's slothfulness, or how much I may gain by maintaining that watchful attitude to which, as the expectant of an absent Lord, I am called. "Blessed is he that watcheth;" and even though I could not see the reason for this, I will act upon it, that I may realize the promised blessedness. He who has called me to vigilance can make me partaker of its joy. He can make my watch-tower, lonely and dark as it may seem, none other than the house of God, and the very gate of heaven.—London Quarterly Journal of Prophecy.

Restorationism;— Confessions of its Friends.

In a statement of faith, by the American Unitarian Association, in 1853, (Report of the Executive Committee of that body, for 1853, p. 38,) we find the following:

"It is our firm conviction that the final restoration of all is not revealed in the Scriptures, but that the ultimate fate of the impenitent wicked is left enshrouded in impenetrable obscurity, so far as the total declarations of the sacred writings are concerned;" and yet they go on to say, that they nevertheless "hold to the doctrine of the final universality of salvation, as a consistent speculation of the reason, and a strong belief of the heart." "Those of us who believe (as a large majority of us do) in the final recovery of all souls, therefore, cannot emphasize it in the foreground of their preaching, as a sure part of Christianity, but only elevate it in the background of their system, as a glorious hope," etc.

In February, 1870, Rev. Mr. Sears, in the Monthly Religious Magazine, says: "It is the average opinion of Unitarians, that Restorationism is not a doctrine of Revelation, fairly yielded by the interpretation of Scripture," but it is held, nevertheless, "as a deduction of the private reason," "a belief wrought from the prayers and reasonings of the individual soul, one of the glorious hopes of humanity."

Rev. T. Starr King, in a discourse delivered in the Hollis Street Church, in 1858, (Published by Crosby, Nichols, & Co.,) made the following frank confession:

"I freely say that I do not find the doctrine of the ultimate salvation of all souls clearly stated in any text or in any discourse that has been reported from the lips of Christ. I do not think that we can fairly maintain that the final restoration of all men is a prominent and explicit doctrine of the four gospels. We needlessly narrow the grounds of opposition to sacrificial orthodoxy, by attacking it from such a position." (p. 5.)

He thinks that the doctrine of eternal punishment is opposed to the principles of Jesus, as he construes them, and he also says that "this doctrine is, to my mind, dreadful and monstrous—at war with our constitutional instincts of justice and charity."

Mr. Theodore Parker, in a response to an inquiry of Rev. Nehemiah Adams, D.D., in 1858, made the following acknowledgement: "To me it is quite clear that Jesus Christ taught the doctrine of eternal damnation, if the evangelists—the first three I mean—are to be treated as inspired. I can understand his language in no other way." He rejects the doctrine, nevertheless, "because it is so revolting to the humane and moral feelings of our nature."

It is well to recollect in reading this testimony that the persons whose opinions are cited were all believers in immaterialism, and the future life of mankind was to them a dilemma, whose two horns were eternal misery or restoration of the whole of the race. They could not conceive of eternal death or extinction of being as an eternal punishment, because they considered it simply an impossible event. The horrible dogma they could not believe; the pleasing one they had to confess was not Scriptural—some of the ablest minds adopting restorationist views frankly confess this. The only foundation they can set up for their faith is that they cannot possibly believe that infinite suffering can be the doom of finite souls.

How that bane of all sound theology introduced by Satanic agency in Eden, perverts the judgment and leads into other errors. But I only wished to call attention to these confessions that restorationism is not of Biblical origin, but is what the heart of man would desire. Such sentimentalists may profitably study Ps. 50: 21, 22. "Thou thoughtest that I was altogether such an one as thyself; but I will reprove thee, and set them in order before thine eyes. Now consider this, ye that forget God, lest I tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver." NEMO.

Union in Iowa.

MR. EDITOR:—In a call for a Convention to meet at Manchester in April, I think the plan proposed involves a needless expenditure in view of existing circumstances. Could we unite upon some basis previous to meeting in convention, it might not prove an abortion. I will propose a plan for the consideration of both conferences: Let each church vote upon the question of difference, and the clerk of the church send a faithful record of the ballot to the convention, which shall assemble in Manchester, in April, to count the votes and transact such other business as may be required under the circumstances, to perfect the union; each conference pledging itself beforehand to abide the decision of the majority. MUCH INTERESTED.

An Inspired Life.

In young life I had a friend who died when we were both young, whose wide-awake, cheerful, unselfish every-day life was all alive with a holy spirit which, on a little thought, you saw was the Holy Spirit. Not that there was anything in him which in the least corresponded with the technical signs of inspiration; he did not speak with tongues; he did not attempt any wonders; he did not prophecy, though he often interpreted, if he had only known it—he did not know it; and he interpreted the eternal wonders in the most off hand and informal way. A few years ago I told two or three stories of the man's life—how he gave his heart to an Irish widow by giving her the privilege of picking up chips in a railroad station under his charge—because he did it as he did, with the divine Spirit; how he brought a new and deeper life into the home where he boarded; how he civilized and reformed the day laborers on a Georgia railroad which were put under his charge.

I told these stories in the pulpit, and a boy in the church asked me if I would print them with some sketch of the influence and power of that simple life. As it happened, the great moral philosopher, Dr. Wayland, had asked me the same thing, and last year I printed them. The stories were nothing in quantity, but if I could rightly have put them upon paper, everything in quality. Do you wonder that wherever that little story of an inspired life goes, the quality of it tells? One day it is an army surgeon on the plains, who writes to tell me that it is the religion he is seeking for; one day it is a leader of opinion in California; one day a boy in a dry-goods store; one day a poet whose words sweep hither and thither the sensitive hearts of thousands when they are sung from a Sunday-school in Troy; from a superintendent of schools in a great Western city, eager to impress his life on the public school system; from the boys just next to beggary, of a Mission school in New York, I have letters written to me asking for more of the incidents which will illustrate the life of an entirely unpretending Christian man, who had no secrets; had, I had almost said, no system; had no idea that he had anything to show or teach the world, simply because I had related two or three little stories of the spirit of his life, and because that spirit was the Holy Spirit.—Rev. E. E. Hale.

HANNAH Moore says. "Idleness among children, as among men, is the root of all evil, and leads to no other evil more certain than ill-temper." Little Willie seemed to know this; for, when he had nothing to do, he would say, "now mamma, I have nothing to do; I am on Satan's ground, you know."—The Children's Friend.

have been easy to the invading host. Their armies of horse and foot would have taken the city and lain the Assyrian yoke upon her children. But in the hour of danger he remembered him who had said, "Call upon me in the day of trouble, I will deliver thee," and before the eternal throne he pleaded for the safety of the Holy City. The prayer entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabbaoth, and through the prophet Isaiah came the quick response. "Thus saith the Lord concerning the king of Assyria. He shall not come into this city, nor shoot an arrow there....By the way that he came by the same shall he return, and shall not come into this city saith the Lord."

The host of Assyria was encamped without Jerusalem. The bravest warriors of the empire slept upon their arms. With their spears and battle-axes, with their armor and shields ready for the conflict, they waited for the word of command.

The heart of the Assyrian beat high with hope as he surveyed the full ranks and numbered his troops. The end was near, the prize he coveted was almost within his reach; and he only awaited the morning. But in the solemn hush of midnight, the wing of the death-angel passed over the camp and the dead lay by thousands beneath its shade. One hundred and eighty-five thousand white foreheads bore witness to the fatal touch. What pen can portray the dismay of the baffled monarch when the morning light revealed the extent of his disaster? Man had led an army against Jehovah—the finite had dared to cope with the Infinite—the mortal had contended with him "who only hath immortality"—the earth worm of his footstool had made war with the King of Heaven—and this was the result. His army was cut off in a night by the angel of the Lord.

The king of Babylon slept, but dreams haunted the imperial pillow, and the vision of the "holy watchers" passed before his mind. It was the beautiful type of his own doom—the decree of the watchers, "That the living may know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will."

The golden goblet of reason was broken, and the humbled monarch wandered with the beasts of the field until the seven times were past. "And at the end of the days I Nebuchadnezzar lifted up mine eyes unto Heaven and mine understanding returned unto me, and I blessed the Most High, and I praised and honored him that liveth for ever and ever, whose dominion is an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom is from generation to generation."

The messenger of God walked with the three Hebrew children in the fiery furnace, and there was no smell of fire upon their garments.

Daniel, the faithful prophet, was cast into the den of lions, but the angel of the Lord was there, he closed the mouth of the forest king, the prophet was safe, and the God of David was glorified. He delivereth and rescueth and he maketh signs and wonders in heaven and in earth, who hath delivered Daniel from the power of the lions. MRS. H. V. REED.

The Life of a Justified Man.

[Third Article—Concluded.]

The life of the justified is the life of wisdom and truth. He has become "wise in Christ;" nay, "Christ has been made unto him wisdom" as well as righteousness. It is thus that he has become "wise unto salvation," and he feels that he must hold fast the truth that saves. To trifle with that truth, to tamper with error, would be to deny the cross. He by whom he is justified is himself the truth, and every man who receives that truth becomes a witness for it. By the truth he is saved; by the truth he is made free; by the truth he is made clean; by the truth he is sanctified; and therefore it is precious to him, in every jot and tittle. Each fragment broken off is so much lost to the spiritual well-being; and each new discovery made in the rich field of truth is so much eternal gain. He has bought the truth, and he will not sell it. It is his life; it is his heritage; it is his kingdom. He counts all truth precious, and all error hateful. He dreads the unbelief that is undermining the foundations of truth, and turning its spacious palaces into a chaos of human speculations. He calls no truth obsolete or out of date; for we know that the truths on which he rests for eternity are the oldest of the old, and yet the surest of the sure. To introduce doubts as to the one sacrifice on which he builds, is to shake the cross of Calvary. To lay other foundation than that already laid, is to destroy his one hope. To take the sacrificial element out of the blood, is to make peace with God impossible, because unrighteous. To substitute the church for Christ, or the priest for the herald of pardon, or the rite for the precious blood, or the sacrament for the living Christ upon the throne, or the teachings of the church for the enlightenment of the Holy Ghost—this is to turn light into darkness, and then to call that darkness light. Thus taught by that spirit who has led him to the cross, the justified man knows how to discern truth from error. He has the unction from the Holy One, and knows all things (1 John 2: 20); he has the anointing which is truth, and is no lie (1 John 2; 27); and he can try the spirits, whether they are of God. (1 John 4: 1.)

Want of sensitiveness to the difference between truth and error is one of the errors of modern Protestantism. Sounding words, well executed pictures, pretentious logic, carry away multitudes. The distinction between gospel and no gospel is very decided and momentous; yet many will come away from a sermon in which the free gospel has been overlaid, not sensible of the want, and praising the preacher. The conversions of recent years have not the depth of other days. Consciences are half awakened and half pacified; the wound is slightly laid open, and slightly healed. Hence the want of spiritual discernment as to truth and error. The conscience is not sensitive, else it would at once refuse and resent any statement, however well argued or painted, which encroached in the slightest degree upon the free gospel of God's love in Christ; which interposed any obstacle between the sinner and the cross; or which merely declaimed about the cross, without telling us especially how it saves and how it purifies. We need sensitive but not morbid conscience to keep us steadfast in the faith, to preserve our spiritual eyesight unimpaired, remembering the apostle's words, "he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins." (2 Pet. 1: 9.) Censoriousness is one thing, and spiritual discernment is quite another. To avoid the first we do not need to give up the second: though the "liberality" of modern times would recommend us to be charitable to error, and not very tenacious of any Bible truth, seeing that nothing in an age of culture can be received but that which has been pronounced credible by philosophy or science, and which the "verifying faculty" has adjudged to be true.

The life of the justified must be one of praise and prayer. His justification has drawn him nearer to God. It has opened his lips and enlarged his heart. He cannot but praise; he cannot but pray. He has ten thousand things to ask for; he has ten thousand things for which to give thanks. He knows what it is to speak in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in his heart to the Lord. (Col. 3: 16.)

The life of the justified is one of watchfulness. Forgiveness has altered all their circumstances and hopes. It has brought them into a new world, from which are shut out things they were formerly familiar with, and into which are introduced things which they knew not. They see and hear what they never saw nor heard before; and they cease to see and hear what but lately they delighted in. They are no longer satisfied with things as they are. They expect changes, and with that they have come. The present has become less to them, the future more; and in that future the more absorbing object is the reappearing of him, whom not having seen, they love. That the future should be a mere repetition of the present—with a few scientific and political improvements—is quite enough for the worldly man. But the man who, by his new connection with the cross, has been transported into a new region, is not content that it should be so. He wants a better future, and a more congenial world; he desires a state of things in which the new object of his love shall be all. And learning from Scripture that such a new condition of things is to be expected, and that of that new state Christ is himself to be the first and last, he looks eagerly out for the fulfillment of these hopes. Learning, moreover, that the arrival of this King and of his kingdom is to be subdued, he is led to wait and watch; all the more because everything here, in the world's daily history of change, and noise, and revelry, is fitted to throw him off his guard. His justification does not lull him asleep. His faith does not make him heedless of the future. It is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. It says, let us not sleep, as do others, but let us watch and be sober: watch, for ye know neither the day nor the hour when the Son of man cometh. Many a trial of her watchfulness has the church had, many a disappointment has her faith sustained; but she does not despond nor give way, remembering the promise, "He that shall come will come, and will not tarry." Her faith keeps up her vigilence, and her vigilence invigorates her faith. In the darkest hour faith says, "I am my Beloved's, and my Beloved is mine;" and hope adds, "Make haste, my Beloved, and be thou like to a roe or a young hart upon the mountain of spices."

The church watches because of present evil, and coming good; that she may be kept undefiled from the one, and may attain unto the other. Danger from enemies, and the prospect of speedy victory over them, keep her awake. Fear of losing sight of the cross, and so again walking in darkness; suspicion both of the good and the evil things of earth—its flatteries and its menaces, its toils, its cares, its amusements, its pleasures; anxiety about keeping her garments unspotted and her conscience clean; the sight of the sleeping millions around, and the knowledge that it is upon a sleeping world that the Lord is to come;—these things act powerfully as stimulants, and bid her be watchful. To be among the foolish virgins, without oil and with a dying lamp, when the midnight cry goes forth; to be near the door, and yet shut out; to hear the announcement, "The marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready," and yet not be ready; to be summoned to the festival, and yet to be without the bridal and the festal dress; to love, and then to fall from love; to draw the sword, and then in faintheartedness to sheathe it; to run well for awhile, and then to slacken speed; to war against Satan as the prince of darkness, and yield to him as an angel of light; to set out with condemning the world, and then to mingle with it; to cleave like Demas to the saints, and then to forsake them; to be among the twelve for a season, then to be a traitor at the last; to be lifted up, like Capernaum, to heaven, and then to be thrust down to hell; to be among the sons of light, and then to fall from heaven like Lucifer, son of the morning; to sit down in the upper chamber with the Lord, then to betray the Son of man with a kiss; to put on a goodly garment of fair profession, and then to walk naked in shame;—these are the solemn thoughts that crowd in upon the justified man, and keep him watchful. They who know not what it is to be accepted in the Beloved, and to rejoice in hope of the glory of God, may fall asleep. He dare not; he knows what he is risking, and what one hour of slumber may cost him; and he must be wakeful. He does not make election his opiate, and say, I am safe, I may sleep or wake as I please. He says, I am safe; but this only makes me doubly vigilent, that I may not dishonor him who has saved me; and even though I may not finally fall away, I know not how much I may lose by one day's slothfulness, or how much I may gain by maintaining that watchful attitude to which, as the expectant of an absent Lord, I am called. "Blessed is he that watcheth;" and even though I could not see the reason for this, I will act upon it, that I may realize the promised blessedness. He who has called me to vigilance can make me partaker of its joy. He can make my watch-tower, lonely and dark as it may seem, none other than the house of God, and the very gate of heaven.—London Quarterly Journal of Prophecy.

Restorationism;—Confessions of its Friends.

In a statement of faith, by the American Unitarian Association, in 1853, (Report of the Executive Committee of that body, for 1853, p. 38,) we find the following:

"It is our firm conviction that the final restoration of all is not revealed in the Scriptures, but that the ultimate fate of the impenitent wicked is left enshrouded in impenetrable obscurity, so far as the total declarations of the sacred writings are concerned;" and yet they go on to say, that they nevertheless "hold to the doctrine of the final universality of salvation, as a consistent speculation of the reason, and a strong belief of the heart." "Those of us who believe (as a large majority of us do) in the final recovery of all souls, therefore, cannot emphasize it in the foreground of their preaching, as a sure part of Christianity, but only elevate it in the background of their system, as a glorious hope," etc.

In February, 1870, Rev. Mr. Sears, in the Monthly Religious Magazine, says: "It is the average opinion of Unitarians, that Restorationism is not a doctrine of Revelation, fairly yielded by the interpretation of Scripture," but it is held, nevertheless, "as a deduction of the private reason," "a belief wrought from the prayers and reasonings of the individual soul, one of the glorious hopes of humanity."

Rev. T. Starr King, in a discourse delivered in the Hollis Street Church, in 1858, (Published by Crosby, Nichols, & Co.,) made the following frank confession:

"I freely say that I do not find the doctrine of the ultimate salvation of all souls clearly stated in any text or in any discourse that has been reported from the lips of Christ. I do not think that we can fairly maintain that the final restoration of all men is a prominent and explicit doctrine of the four gospels. We needlessly narrow the grounds of opposition to sacrificial orthodoxy, by attacking it from such a position." (p. 5.)

He thinks that the doctrine of eternal punishment is opposed to the principles of Jesus, as he construes them, and he also says that "this doctrine is, to my mind, dreadful and monstrous—at war with our constitutional instincts of justice and charity."

Mr. Theodore Parker, in a response to an inquiry of Rev. Nehemiah Adams, D.D., in 1858, made the following acknowledgement: "To me it is quite clear that Jesus Christ taught the doctrine of eternal damnation, if the evangelists—the first three I mean—are to be treated as inspired. I can understand his language in no other way." He rejects the doctrine, nevertheless, "because it is so revolting to the humane and moral feelings of our nature."

It is well to recollect in reading this testimony that the persons whose opinions are cited were all believers in immaterialism, and the future life of mankind was to them a dilemma, whose two horns were eternal misery or restoration of the whole of the race. They could not conceive of eternal death or extinction of being as an eternal punishment, because they considered it simply an impossible event. The horrible dogma they could not believe; the pleasing one they had to confess was not Scriptural—some of the ablest minds adopting restorationist views frankly confess this. The only foundation they can set up for their faith is that they cannot possibly believe that infinite suffering can be the doom of finite souls.

How that bane of all sound theology introduced by Satanic agency in Eden, perverts the judgment and leads into other errors. But I only wished to call attention to these confessions that restorationism is not of Biblical origin, but is what the heart of man would desire. Such sentimentalists may profitably study Ps. 50: 21, 22. "Thou thoughtest that I was altogether such an one as thyself; but I will reprove thee, and set them in order before thine eyes. Now consider this, ye that forget God, lest I tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver." NEMO.

Union in Iowa.

MR. EDITOR:—In a call for a Convention to meet at Manchester in April, I think the plan proposed involves a needless expenditure in view of existing circumstances. Could we unite upon some basis previous to meeting in convention, it might not prove an abortion. I will propose a plan for the consideration of both conferences: Let each church vote upon the question of difference, and the clerk of the church send a faithful record of the ballot to the convention, which shall assemble in Manchester, in April, to count the votes and transact such other business as may be required under the circumstances, to perfect the union; each conference pledging itself beforehand to abide the decision of the majority. MUCH INTERESTED.

An Inspired Life.

In young life I had a friend who died when we were both young, whose wide-awake, cheerful, unselfish every-day life was all alive with a holy spirit which, on a little thought, you saw was the Holy Spirit. Not that there was anything in him which in the least corresponded with the technical signs of inspiration; he did not speak with tongues; he did not attempt any wonders; he did not prophecy, though he often interpreted, if he had only known it—he did not know it; and he interpreted the eternal wonders in the most off hand and informal way. A few years ago I told two or three stories of the man's life—how he gave his heart to an Irish widow by giving her the privilege of picking up chips in a railroad station under his charge—because he did it as he did, with the divine Spirit; how he brought a new and deeper life into the home where he boarded; how he civilized and reformed the day laborers on a Georgia railroad which were put under his charge.

I told these stories in the pulpit, and a boy in the church asked me if I would print them with some sketch of the influence and power of that simple life. As it happened, the great moral philosopher, Dr. Wayland, had asked me the same thing, and last year I printed them. The stories were nothing in quantity, but if I could rightly have put them upon paper, everything in quality. Do you wonder that wherever that little story of an inspired life goes, the quality of it tells? One day it is an army surgeon on the plains, who writes to tell me that it is the religion he is seeking for; one day it is a leader of opinion in California; one day a boy in a dry-goods store; one day a poet whose words sweep hither and thither the sensitive hearts of thousands when they are sung from a Sunday-school in Troy; from a superintendent of schools in a great Western city, eager to impress his life on the public school system; from the boys just next to beggary, of a Mission school in New York, I have letters written to me asking for more of the incidents which will illustrate the life of an entirely unpretending Christian man, who had no secrets; had, I had almost said, no system; had no idea that he had anything to show or teach the world, simply because I had related two or three little stories of the spirit of his life, and because that spirit was the Holy Spirit.—Rev. E. E. Hale.

HANNAH Moore says. "Idleness among children, as among men, is the root of all evil, and leads to no other evil more certain than ill-temper." Little Willie seemed to know this; for, when he had nothing to do, he would say, "now mamma, I have nothing to do; I am on Satan's ground, you know." —The Children's Friend.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, Tuesday, February 11, 1873.

Please do not write for the paper with red ink. Use the blackest you can procure, (Thomas' if you can get it.)

According to the census there are in this country 9,377 homeless churches. The organizations are 72,459 in number; the church edifices are only 63,082.

We learn from Dr. Tafel, that the second number of the new Interlinear Translation the Scriptures has been delayed by a misunderstanding on the part of the German stereotyper. But the plates are completed, and the number will be printed as soon as they arrive in this country.

We find that we have a good number of long articles on hand and a deficiency in briefer contributions. Brethren who use the pen, give us articles of from one-half to one and a half columns in length. If some subjects cannot be treated so briefly, then let them alone, and select topics that can be thus treated.

It is religious news, brethren, that we want, and not accounts of rides over circuits, dinners, suppers, social meetings of friends, and brethren, and such like things. What is the Lord doing through you in converting sinners, edifying saints, extending the cause, building up the church and glorifying his name? We know you get your meals, sleep somewhere, etc., and so that may pass.

So says an exchange, and so say we.

A Good sister sends us some poetry—very fine as poetry—expressive of a desire on the part of the church and individual Christians to go to heaven. Now we cannot find this feeling to be Scriptural. We read 'the meek shall inherit the earth,' in many places and the same truth is implied in many ways; but the hope of going to heaven is certainly unscriptural, and we believe it is anti-scriptural. Poetry has been the means of teaching a great deal of incorrect theology. We really cannot knowingly lend our columns for it to do more harm. Let our hymns and songs and poetry be Biblical, or else let us content ourselves with truth in plain prose.

We have heard of the 'tests' made of holiness at camp meetings. We would like to offer one in season for the meetings next summer. Let the question be put, 'How many, when they were converted, felt that the blood of Jesus cleansed from all sin? How many then felt that Jesus was made to them wisdom, righteousness, and sanctification? How many felt that being justified by faith they had peace with God? How many that felt all this, and had not lost this 'first love,' could yet testify that they did not then give Christ the whole heart, that they did not then give up their own will, but yielded their full affections and submitted their own will fully to the Lord's some time afterwards?

If such a test were possible we should await the response with interest. Perhaps its suggestion may be useful. After all the great 'test' in every department of Christianity is in its outward manifestation. Any one can tell about what they think or how they feel, and no one can successfully dispute whether the thoughts and feelings exist; for 'what man knoweth the things of a man save the spirit of man that is in him?' But a life, especially a changed, improved, and reformed life is an irrefutable argument. 'By their fruits ye shall know them,' is a divine test, and is also common-sense. Now those who assume any position ought to be ready to answer the inspired test: Bring forth the fruits. Those who have had the blessing bestowed upon the disciples at Pentecost can demonstrate it in works much easier than in words. Few will admit the oral claim. But if they live better, act more consistently than other men, and the works inseparably connected with the 'baptism of the Holy Spirit' follow, there can be no effectual reply to that train of reasoning.

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

The meetings by Brn. Fox and Branch at Bath, Mich., resulted in conversion of nine souls. A church was set in order.——The interest at Magnolia, Wis. still continues, indeed is increasing. More than fifty have been seeking the Lord.——Brn. Cummins and Smart have been holding meetings at Cass, Michigan. Nine have been converted.——Br. Wm. McCulloch's work in S. W. Iowa has been suddenly suspended by an acute attack of inflammation of the eyes. He was confined to a dark room for seven days, suffering greatly, and is still in doubt whether he will be able at present to resume work. He will remain a little time, however, at Lewis, when if his sight is not restored he will feel compelled to return to his home. For two weeks his P. O. Address will be Lewis, Cass Co., Iowa, care of W. Murphy.

"Judge not that Ye be not Judged."

A WORD OF WARNING TO OFFENDERS AGAINST TRUTH AND CHARITY IN RELIGIOUS CONTROVERSY.

The following letters were written to a clergyman, who asked my opinion of an anonymous pamphlet on the doctrine of Eternal Evil. There is nothing new in them; but if you think that their publication will be likely to do any good, as a protest against a crying sin, which seems to reach its hight on this particular subject, they are quite at your service. The unfounded aspersions, too often indulged in by a certain class of controversalists, are a disgrace to our common Christianity. And every one who sees the evil should lift up his voice like a trumpet to tell the people their transgressions, and the house of Jacob their sins. "Thou shalt in any wise rebuke thy neighbor, and shalt not suffer sin upon him." Nor is it always sufficient, or even possible, to do so "between thee and him alone." They that sin before all, must be rebuked before all, that others also may fear. And even anonymous calumniators may possibly be brought to some sense of shame—why should we not hope to repentance also?—by having their sin plainly put before them. I am keenly alive to the danger pointed out in the words, "Answer not a fool according to his folly lest thou be like unto him." And if in this, or anything else I have written under a strong feeling of righteous indignation there be evidence of such infirmity, I earnestly pray that it may be pardoned and blotted out in the atoning blood of Jesus Christ. I am, etc.,

Samuel Minton.

I.

Dear Sir:—It is really impossible for me to read, still less reply to, everything that is written against the great scriptural truth of immortality in Christ alone. I have read quite enough to know all that can be said on the subject. One attack is just the same as another—a mere repetition of the same palpable fallacies, and too often the same unchristian spirit. There is not one of their arguments which has not been distinctly answered—to go no further—even in my own works, The Glory of Christ, The Way Everlasting, and The Harmony of Scripture on Future Punishment. I will just point your attention to two things only, on which my eye has accidentally fallen, in the little tract you have sent me: one illustrating the state of the writer's head, the other that of his heart.

In page 15 he argues that, because consciousness remains after the first death, therefore it will remain after the second. How any one can be deceived by this a single moment, passes my comprehension. Because the soul can retain consciousness after the body has been killed, therefore they can both retain consciousness or sensibility after they have both been killed! That which dies does not retain consciousness; for consciousness is the exclusive property of life. There may be life—vegetable, for instance—without consciousness; but there can be no consciousness without life. The reason that consciousness does not cease, in man's case, with the death of the body is, that such death "is not able to kill the soul." But our Lord declares, in contrast to this limited power, that God is able to destroy both soul and body; in which event, if there be any meaning in words, the whole man—body and soul—will be reduced to the same condition to which the body is reduced when it has been destroyed—namely, to absolute unconscious lifelessness. What is said about the possibility of keeping a corpse in continued "existence," hardly deserves an answer. If a marble statue remained uninjured forever, it would have an "eternal existence." Is it such an existence that the wicked are supposed to retain for ever in Gehenna? If not, what is the difference? The statue has eternal existence. They have eternal—what?—why, life, of course—a living existence; in plain words, "eternal life." Yet to escape from the crushing fact that eternal life, immortality, living forever, is invariably attributed in Scripture to union with Christ—the gift of grace offered to all who will accept it, and seek for it in him,—they actually deny that the wicked will have eternal life in Gehenna, and accuse us of confounding eternal life with eternal existence. According to them, the wicked will eternally exist, and remain eternally conscious, yet all the time not be alive!! That which is alive must have life; and if it remains alive forever, it must have eternal life—the special privilege of those who are in Christ; a privilege which carries everything else with it, because of the revealed truth that all evil is to be put an end to; so that any one who lives forever must share in the universal blessedness.

So much for the writer's logic. The state of his heart is but too apparent from page 31. Were it not for previous experience in other cases, I should fear that he was himself the concealed infidel, which he implies that everyone must be who does not accept his interpretation of Scripture. For if he really believed Christ's words, "With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again," he would hardly dare to pen such calumnies against his brethren. "More honorable"—in men who base their entire belief on the plain, direct, positive, unvarying declarations of Scripture—if they were "to throw revelation honestly overboard, and take their stand upon their own conclusions as to what appears to them right and fitting." I will venture to predict—if the Word which Christ has spoken is really to judge us at the last day—that no sentence has ever been penned in professed defence of God's truth, which will bring down sterner rebuke in that day than this dastardly insinuation. I pray God that this writer, and others, alas! too like him, may be brought to repentance, so that these grievous sins may not be laid to their charge. Otherwise, unless the Judge utterly falsifies his own words, they will assuredly find that all their fiery zeal for orthodoxy will avail them nothing, and that the Lord will reward them according to their works.

Believe me, etc.

P. S.—Is is not a little remarkable, that just when this anonymous assailant is boastfully declaring 'the impossibility of making Scripture teach what he calls "annihilation," a writer in the Contemporary of this month, who denies the doctrine, candidly admits that it is manifestly the plain and positive teaching of the letter of Scripture. Referring to my own writings, he says, they "show very conclusively, that, if we are bound by the letter of Scripture, we cannot refuse his belief."

II.

Dear Sir:—On referring to your own letter, after writing mine, I noticed what had entirely escaped me, that the author of the tract is a personal friend of yours. But I can see nothing in what I have written that is undeserved or unnecessary. The evil is so great, that it needs to be dealt with unsparingly. Only think of a professed disciple of him who said, "Judge not, and ye shall not be judged; condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned," openly suggesting that all who will not accept his dictum as to the meaning of certain passages of Scripture, are "subtle" infidels, who dishonorably conceal their infidelity in order the more effectually to carry out their nefarious designs!

Can the utmost stretch of charity enable us to doubt that when he said, "The whole controversy resolves itself into one simple question, Is the Bible the Word of God, or is it a cunningly devised fable?" he knew perfectly well that that is not the question? Can he have read our writings without knowing that we believe the Bible to be the Word of God as firmly as he does, and are as honestly and earnestly anxious to ascertain what it actually teaches? Yet he dares to say, with the most arrogant Papal assumption, in italics and capitals, that to receive his interpretation of the disputed texts is to receive "the true sayings of God," while to receive any other is to "allow yourself to be carried away by the utterly conflicting opinions of men;" thus making himself to be God, and those who deny his infallibility, to be only men.

"Reject the Scriptures you may, but twist them to teach either Annihilation or Universalism you cannot." That is, you may deny that God is able to destroy the component parts of man's being—his soul and his body—in Gehenna, but you cannot twist it into meaning anything else, than that God is able to keep body and soul together in living, conscious, unceasing, hopeless agony to all eternity! To pretend that destroying them means putting an end to them, is making the Bible "a cunningly devised fable!"

You will see from the Way Everlasting, herewith forwarded to you, that your friend is far from being the only offender. And if you will procure my Harmony of Scripture, you will be able the better to appreciate his reckless charges of infidelity. Should he repudiate the plain meaning of his own words, and say he does not charge with infidelity those who differ from his interpretation of Scripture, it then comes to this, that he has dared to "add unto" the closing words of revelation a third wo, involving a far heavier penalty than either of the other two, for what would appear to be a far lighter offence. "If any man shall mistake the meaning of the words of the prophecy of this book, he shall never die, but shall be punished with an everlasting life of misery in the world to come." Suppose the mistake should happen to prove on his side, and he be judged out of his own mouth! What measure will have to be meted to him? May God deliver him, and me, and all of us from this snare of the devil! May he keep us by his grace from biting and devouring one another, lest we be consumed one of another. Believe me, etc.

—Rainbow.

The Birth of Christ in Heathen Expectations.

The account given of the visit of the magi to Jerusalem to see the new born king (Mat. 2: 1–12), is an indication that even in heathen consciousness the time had arrived for the occurrence of some signal event. The prophet had called the Messiah "the desire of all nations," and in a dim, shadowy manner the expectations of the heathen (nations) was generally excited about the time of the Savior's birth. The origin of this largely undefined hope we may not be able to trace. Some ascribe it to the influence of the Hebrew Scriptures, whether as translated and read by the learned, and their prophecies thus, with some modifications, incorporated with their own works, or as made known by the Jews scattered abroad. Others assume a common source whence tradition carried down to posterity an ancient promise, known to all, of the advent of the great King. And yet others, finding no satisfactory solution of the problem in either of these hypotheses, fall back upon direct inspiration. They would not accept the authors of the sacred books of the Persians, the Greeks, the Romans, et al., as prophets of God; but God used them in their capacity as teachers of the people to foreshadow the advent of the coming Deliverer.

As intimated, the clearest evidence of a shadowy anticipation of the birth of Messiah among heathens is found in the pilgrimage of the magi to Jerusalem. The form of their hope is not clearly given. They inquired, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? Yet it was not simply a Jewish king that they came to see and worship. Hopes centered in him of an extraordinary, though perhaps not all of a spiritual character. Who were those magi, or wise men; what were they? They were from some country to the eastward from Jerusalem, as the passage above referred to indicates. The specific country from which they came is not known. Justin, Tertullian and many other ancient and modern divines have fixed on Arabia; Chrysostom, Theophylact and others of Persia; while some have conjectured that they were from Parthia, from Babylonia, and even from Ethiopia. If they belonged to the original magi, and the Evangelist seems to imply this by calling them magoi, then they came from Persia or Mesopotamia. Among the people of these countries, and among the Medes the magi were a high sacerdotal caste, "who constituted the king's privy council, and cultivated astrology, medicine, and occult natural science." From them came the magical arts, of which many professed to be masters among the Syrians, Arabs, Greeks and Romans in the time of Christ. But those who came to the manger where Jesus was cradled doubtless belonged to the earlier class, who were sincere and earnest in their researches.

In heathen antiquities we also find indications of a hope of the dawn of a period of restoration, and sometimes even of the birth of a personal redeemer. We must, however, guard against transferring our modern ideas of a redeemer, or of the Redeemer, to the expressions employed by the heathens. Even the Jews failed to apprehend the Messiah in his true character with the light of revelation to guide them. Among the nations of classical antiquity the Greek and Romans were doubtles most conversant with the expectations of the Jews. Hence their writers occasionally refer to them, as for instance Suetonius, as well as Tacitus. Their own hopes of a future were also somewhat modified by these oracular prophecies of the Jewish seers. Hesiod looked for the return of better days, and accordingly sang:

O that I had been born a companion of the fifth of men!
O that I had died before, or had not been born so soon!
For the present race of men is one of iron!
Zeus will also one day destroy this race of divine men.

The Sibyline books also indicated the existence of certain Messianic anticipations. These books contained the utterances of the Sibyls, the name given to certain prophetic women, who lived in Greece and Italy. The most celebrated of these was the Sibyl of Cumæ. To a prophecy of this Sibyl it is supposed Virgil refers when he states that even "during the consulship of Pollio, in whose honor the ode is composed, the expected boy will be born and the golden age return." And Pollio's son, and even Pollio himself, in connection with other god-befriended heroes, are described by him as occupying just the position of the pretended or forged Sibylline prophecy assigns to the Messiah and the chosen race.

The Avesta, or sacred books of the Parsees, strongly hint at "the end of the world, the coming of a new prophet, who helps to overcome Angramainyus and restore the happiness of the world, which he has destroyed." The Persians looked forward to a golden era when there "will be neither night, nor cold nor hot winds, nor decay, nor fear of death;" and those hopes were associated with the appearance of one who is "endowed with superhuman power and dignity." The Persian Savior King, whom they expected, was called Caoshyac, who, according to Spiegal, was "to bring to pass the resurrection, and then establish a dominion full of undisturbed prosperity." In the Bundehesh he is called Sosiosh, a name very similar to Joshua, who, it is said, will bring the dead to life.

Zoroaster, the legislator and reformer of the Parsees, taught "that in the last days a man will appear * * * who will adorn the world with religion and righteousness." Some of these doctrines respecting the age in which Oshanderberga, as he calls this man (man of the world), will live and reign are very much like the prophecies of Isaiah concerning the prosperous reign of Messiah. Thus he says: "He will make true religion victorious; rest and peace will reign in his day, all contentions will cease, and all grievances disappear. Zoroaster even taught that this Savior should be born of a virgin, that at his birth a bright star would appear by day, with the sign of the virgin in the center, and that on its appearance his disciples would arise to worship the child and bring him their presents.

In all these sayings, current among the heathen before the birth of Christ, we see a vague hope highly similar to the expectations of the Jews. Whether they were the result of Jewish influence or imbibed from the reading of Hebrew literature, we do not seek to determine; but that they point to the Messiah can hardly be doubted. Truly, as these hopes were so widely and tenderly cherished, we see in them a verification of the prophet's saying, that Christ was and is "the desire of all nations."—Church Advocate.

The Aged Ministry.

This is not a question for men advanced in life only, but for us in the prime of our manhood and ministry, for you just on the threshold of this life-work, for as sure as the world moves along its orbit to-day, so certain shall we sooner or later reach the same place and fall under the working of the same inexorable law. Gray hairs are coming thick on some of us, and it begins to be difficult to do what we did ten years ago. There are exceptions, of course, but, as a rule, age is at a discount in the ministry if in no other profession. Its learning, experience, and wisdom are too little regarded, while youth is at a premium, the hotter-headed the higher the price. It is a death-working law. It may not seem so to you, gallant brother, with your young and trim ship, waving in flags and full of promise for the voyage, but by and by, when you stagger into the harbor, rigging worn, hull impaired, and flags in tatters, the matter will look very differently. The toughest thing a minister is called to do is to step down; not down to a secretaryship, not down down to a professorship, nor down to an editor's chair, nor clear down to the insurance business, but down from the prominent station ie has filled before the denomination and the world, down one step on the waning side of reputation and popularity. Dying would be easy up there, n comparison with that one awful step. But the time will come, beloved when a hundred things will say to us, go down. Happy the man who looking at the brother on the next step below, waiting for his place, shall say, 'He must increase but I must decrease." And why may not one say it gracefully and heartily and John Baptistically when the coming man is a roduct of his own preaching, the outrowth of his example and influence, why not say it in recognition of the act that God does not make men alike or for like times and circumstances? Vill it not ease the descent and take he sting from the dying, to consider hat these coming after us and crowding us along and down ought to be etter and stronger and more taking nen because reaping benefit from our nstruction and experience? Twenty-five and thirty years ago this mortiying work was going on as now, the ounger crowding the older, and the uffering brethren of to-day then rode allantly on the highest wave of popularity. A farmer ought to be a better husbandman to-day than his grandather or improved agriculture means othing, or failures and costly and ide experience are of no value. The oldier of to-day would make short ork with one of Napoleon's old uard.

And if underlying this principle hich I have been discussing is the eeper one, the root out of which the ery gospel starts, that is the law and rinciple of sacrifice outspringing from e very heart of God, then self-deni , dying, sacrifice, in any direction, assing from the zenith to the nadir, iving way for those who are increasg, and accepting the personal decease as a divine necessity, must work e in us and in the various departents of the church of God. From e buds of April and the blossoms of ay we have watched our orchards as ey came out into fuller foliage, and her and richer promise of harvest. eek by week the autumnal pledges panded as earth and air and sun and oud lavished their unstinted favors, l only yesterday the golden and crimn fruit bent every branch and yielded treasures with liberal hand. And st then, when the grand trees had ached the fruition of all their hopes d our hopes, when it had come in e fullest, overflowing sense to the reization of the divine purpose in all e spring and summer work, just then and the orchards shudder at the ention—just then they begin to die, eir fruit of gold and crimson is meressly torn away, just then the folie falls from its own ripeness or feels e keen blade of an enemy that alks by night. Look at the tree now, l, melancholy, dead to all appearces. But its fruit is feeding the peo or crowding storehouses with treares for times of need, and its leaves only because the life of another ar is even now pushing its forces and dges out to every twig and bud. p that working of death and we p soon the working of life; stop it sacrificial work and soon neither e, nor fruit shall know perpetuation resurrection.—A. K. Potter.

An Excellent Receipt.

I have found a receipt that makes an ellent medicine for me and others.

Directions. A good dose as soon as wake in the morning. Take ugh to last until after breakfast; n after eating, and through the day, fore and after eating. No danger of ing too much, and I hope they will e freely, for I know it is good. I k the complaint is deep-seated on ie, but this will cure by observing directions strictly. Here is the rept.

Cure for Scandal. Take a little good ure, a little mind-your-own-business, ttle charity for others, a little keepr-tongue-between-your-teeth; simr well in a vessel called circumspec.

The symptoms are, a violent itching the tongue when you are in compa with a class of people called gossips. when you feel a fit coming on, take ood dose, and keep your mouth shut il you get home. If you can get of that complaint, you will keep ar of many others.

The Times.

AT HOME.

.... On the 4th inst. A. B. Swanson, recently sentenced to the penitentiary for the term of fifteen years for wife murder, suicided by means of a razor, while in the jail at Monmouth, Ill.

.... A man named Dalrymple was blown to atoms, and his wife and two children killed by the explosion of nitro-glycerine, at his residence near Tidioute, Pa. He was engaged in filling a torpedo.

.... Among the parties who obtained divorces from an Illinois court one day recently was one lady who had to obtain her divorce so as to get married to a new husband in twenty minutes, in order to reach the train which they were to take on their bridal tour.

.... A pretty specimen of the devil fish, which Victor Hugo has immortalized, is in the possession of a gentleman who lives near the coast of Florida. He has it carefully preserved, and it—in its horrid claws—had quite as carefully, when caught, a diver. It is an immense thing, and is four feet in diameter.

.... Lake Ontario has lately thrown another tidal wave upon its shores near the mouth of the Genesee river. The river was closed with solid ice, and without a moment's warning the water began to rise, and the ice toward the mouth of the harbor began to creak, as if great waves were rolling under it. In less than four minutes, water, ice, and all, had risen over three feet and a half. This advance of water receded in a short time.

.... A poor seamstress was arrested the other day in Brooklyn, N. Y., on charge of stealing garments which she had taken home to sew. Upon her examination, it appeared that she was employed by a certain Miss Pillsbury of New York city, who paid her seventeen cents for making four pairs of pantaloons, fifty cents for making twelve pairs of drawers, twenty five cents for making six shirts. She did not finish the pantaloons as soon as she agreed to, and the gentle Pillsbury refused to pay her; whereupon she pawned the articles to keep her family from starving. As she could not have belonged to the Tammany ring, it is probable she was sent to jail for three months. A sad case of woman's inhumanity to woman.

.... Another evidence of the good effects of the just and humane policy adapted by the President toward the Indians comes to us from Idaho. It is stated that nearly five hundred of one of the tribes settled in that Territory have heartily embraced the gospel. A still more noteworthy fact connected with these Indians is, that they have decided to give up the use of tobacco. Though very fond of it they affirm to have discovered an admonition against the habit in the Scriptures, where it stands written: "If thy right hand offend thee, cut it off." An exchange from which we learn the incident very pertinently observes: "Such an interpretation of the Bible, and such a carrying out of the self-sacrifice which these Indians believed it to teach, by the whole Christian church, would double the efficiency of all missionary institutions in the world."

.... Notwithstanding the frequent warnings that have been given by the medical journals of the deadly nature of hydrate of chloral, there is reason to believe that its use is still largely indulged in by the general public. A few years ago, when this substance was introduced, it was said to be an exceedingly safe hypnotic or producer of sleep. Grave consequences have, however, attended its administration to patients. The sleep which it produces too frequently terminates in the sleep of death. Whatever temporary relief may be obtained from the use of such medicines under strict medical supervision, it must be remembered that they do not and can not serve as a substitute for regular habits in eating, working, and sleeping. Nature can not be cheated; she will punish rigidly every violation of her laws. Those who persist in thinking they obtain a triumph over the laws of good health, simply deceive themselves, and are certain, sooner or later, to find out their mistake.

.... Phrenologists now have an opportunity to locate beyond doubt the position memory holds in the convolutions of the brain. A man in Elmira, N. Y., struck his head against a beam three years ago and was rendered insensible. He rapidly recovered, prospered in business, and enjoyed perfect health until a few days ago, when he experienced acute pains in the head. These soon passed away, he regained his physical health, but his memory from the time he struck his head against the beam, to the present is a blank. He remembers distinctly all that transpired up to the time of the accident, but is puzzled to account for his two children born since that time. He addresses his business partner as the schoolmaster, which position he held previous to the accident. The case is a curious one, and unaccountable to medical experts.

.... The commissioners appointed to investigate the cause and management of the Boston fire have made a report. They find that the fire was not the work of an incendiary, that it commenced in the rear of the basement of the building first destroyed, that for many minutes after it was discovered no alarm was given, though a crowd of people were watching its progress; that as soon as it was known to the patrolman on the beat he gave an alarm promptly, but the engines were slow in reaching the scene, because the engine horses were sick. There was a scarcity of water and of fuel, and it soon became apperent that the engines were not powerful enough to throw effective streams of water upon the high buildings in the neighborhood. The firemen worked bravely and the aparatus was in good condition, but there was a want of system, and though the chief of the department is praised for his courage, the report throws doubts upon his fitness to command in such an emergency.

.... The Hagerstown (Md.) Mail says: On Tuesday last, between the hours of 11 o'clock in the morning and eleven o'clock at night, the most extraordinary sounds were heard in that portion of our valley which is bounded by the Conococheague on the west and the base of South Mountain on the east, and, as we learn, at Mechanicstown, in Frederick county. Within this range it was heard in Hagerstown, Funkstown and Beaver Creek, where persons ran out to see what was the matter with the excited cattle and dogs. It was heard at Smithsburg, Ridgeville and all through that region; also at same time at Middlekauff's, Downey's, Hardscrabble, Zeller's, and Kershner's. The sound in all those places is similarly described as the distressed cry of some wild beast. It everywhere created the greatest alarm among cattle and dogs. It was heard at many places at the same time, they being remote from each other. What caused it no one can surmise, but it is supposed to have been produced from some atmospherical cause.

ABROAD.

.... A terrible earthquake has occurred in the island of Samos, Greece, causing great destruction of property and loss of life.

.... From to Jaffa to Jerusalem by rail will soon be the order of things where David and Solomon used to travel with horses (?) and camels.

.... There has been another rise in the price of coal in England, which, on the 4th, sold at forty-eight shillings, per ton, and during the day advanced to fifty-three. Many furnaces and mills have been compelled to suspend work.

.... Bismarck has submitted a proposition to the German Federal Council for an appropriation of 45,000,000 thalers for the erection and improvement of fortifications at Cologne, Bolsigsberg, Wilhelmshoe, Kiel, and Posen.

.... Recent advices represent the Carlist cause as flourishing in numbers, arms, and resources. They have lines through all the northern provinces of Spain. Valles, an insurgent general, has entered Arragon. Rodes, in command of the right wing, in Asturias, is marching on Leon and Castile.

.... The city of Lehras, Beloochistan, (an extensive country of Sothern Asia), was almost entirely laid in ruins on the 4th inst. by an earthquake. Over five hundred persons perished, so sudden was the shock that they had only time to run into the streets where many were killed by their houses falling upon them. All that was left of the population of about six thousand fled into the mountains as soon as the first shock was over.

.... There are two islands of the west coast of Ireland called North and South Inishkea, where the inhabitants are absolutely heathens. The religion of these islanders is confined to the worship of a large wooden idol. This is a rudely carved image of a man about eight feet high, dressed in a long flannel gown. This is kept in a shed, and when storms arise it is taken to the shore and besought to abate them.

.... Baptist Noel, whose full name is the Hon. and Rev. Baptist Wriothesly Noel, long known as one of the most active of English writers in the field of polemic divinity, died yesterday, at the age of 73. He began his ecclesiastical life as chaplain to the queen, but resigned this position in 1848, when he seceded from the established church. He then joined the Baptists, and was one of their ministers until within a year or two. As a preacher, philanthropist, and controversial writer, Baptist Noel held a high rank.

.... The report that Sirdar Abdul Rahman had captured Fort Hesser at the instigation of the Russians, and was making other aggressive movements in Afghanistan is contradicted. The latest advices from Bokhara represent that city and surrounding country as tranquil. Per contra, it is stated that the Russian forces in Central Asia are strong enough to defy any attempt of the British to check their progress, and England is powerless. Russia is only waiting for a false step on the part of England. And European diplomats doubt Russia's sincerity. Whether this is to be a war or only a rumor of war is yet in doubt.

.... The Official Gazette, of St. Petersburg Feb. 5, in an article on the movements of Russia in Central Asia, contrasts the indifference with which Great Britain views the growth of the United States of North America wath the jealousy with which she watches the growth of Russia. The Gazette says the British journalists are simply beside themselves with anger, and concludes its article by advising the British government to take no more notice of the progress of Russia than she does of that of the United States. The Russian fleet now on the Baltic will soon sail for the Mediterranean.

.... Death appears to have had a rich harvest last year in British India. A sort of fever, upon which medicine has no effect, and which was never heard of before, called the "new fever," committed great ravages among the population. Within a few weeks over one hundred people are reported to have died in a single small village. But fatal as this strange disease is, it lost all terror in comparison with the cholera, which has raged with fearful violence in a number of the districts. The mortality is still continuing, and many natives begin to fear a return of those dark days when whole cities were almost entirely depopulated by the plague. The gov. does what it can, but that is not much.

.... A telegraphic dispatch to Lloyds, from their agent at Cadiz, Spain, states that it was the Spanish steamer Murillo which ran into and sank the emigrant ship Northfleet, off Dungeness lighthouse, on the 22d inst. The steamship, however, was not sunk herself, as was at one time believed, but has arrived at Cadiz in safety. Her destination was Lisbon, for which port she had a cargo, but, upon entering that harbor, she was signaled not to land, as there is an extradition treaty between Portugal and Great Britain, under which her officers would have been surrendered to the British authorities to answer the charges brought against them. She consequently put to sea again, and proceeded for Cadiz, as there is no extradition treaty between Great Britain and Spain. The Murillo sustained no damage by the collision. Her officers and crew will soon be examined at Cadiz in relation to the disaster.

.... The London Saturday Review finds it impossible to doubt the growing intemperance of the working classes in England. Personal observation on such a point may sometimes be misleading, but the same story comes from all points of the country. As a rule, high wages seem to mean only more drinking; and drinking means wife-beating at home and fighting in the streets.....Anybody who reads the police reports will see, the Saturday Review says, the steady increase of cases of brutal assaults, especially on women, which may be traced to drinking. "The present 'genial season' has been appropriately celebrated—a woman supping with her husband and a friend suddenly flung out of a window; a man stabbed by his wife, a wife by her husband, a girl by her sweetheart. 'Thank God, Christmas is over!' we heard a poor woman say the other day as she steadied her staggering husband up the steps of a railway station."

.... The town of Soonghur, which was recently destroyed by an earthqurke, with such terrible loss of life, is located 144 miles north of Bombay, with which it is connected by railway and telegraph. It is an appendage of the capital city of Baoda, which is an independent state, bound to the British only by offensive and defensive treaties. The town was thickly populated, and situated in the midst of a very productive country, which in point of monetary and commercial resources is one of the most important localities in India. Rice, maize, wheat, barley, indigo, sugar cane, opium, and tobacco are raised in great quantities, and many valuable drugs are indigenous. Nearly all Great Britain's supply of nitre and nitrate of soda came from the locality of this unfortunate town.

.... A very simple incident which has occurred recently in the Tyrol is gradnally assuming the dimensions of a great State question, and will no doubt soon be the subject of warm debates in the Austrian Reichsrath. A certain Miss Angelini, of Quenspruck, set her heart on building a convent, and although both the municipality and the government authorities refused their permission, she built it in spite of them, and installed herself in it with a number of novices. The municipality having called her attention to the illegality of these proceedings, she declared that she had acted under the authority of "letters from court." This evasion of the law has excited a tremendous uproar among the liberal press, and the affair will doubtless be used as another means of shaking the influence of the clerical party.

.... At the wedding ceremony of Miss Kate Fox, well known as the medium through whom spiritual manifestations began in this country, gentle raps were heard in the vicinity of the altar, and again at the wedding breakfast the spirits offered congratulations by loud and frequent raps in all parts of the room. According to the London Times, Miss Fox's mother sent a message to the groom expressing her approval of her daughter's choice. The spirit of James B. Taylor, whose will created such a sensation a few years ago, made itself heard and offered congratulations. Then the spirits grew jovial. Mr. Taylor rapped: "Jencken is no longer his own master," whereat all the other spirits rapped in appreciation. The the bride cheated the Atlantic Telegraphic Cable Company out of a heavy sum by sending a long message to America by a spiritual Mercury. The most astonishing feature of the breakfast, however, was the raising of the heavily laden table several times from the floor.

.... No wonder that Spain holds to Cuba with the grip of a drowning man. With but fifteen per cent of cultivated land, and under wretched management, she exports annually agricultural productions to the value of ninety millions of dollars. She has yielded a yearly revenue of thirty-seven millions, of which the government obtained but ten millions, the balance being expended on officials sent to govern the island. We call ourselves a great and prosperous nation, and yet with our large population and immense area our exportations are not to exceed five times that of this little island of the sea. The possibilities of Cuba, if rightly managed, can hardly be exaggerated. More than a third of the island is still covered with the rarest timber, costly woods of many kinds and of the most valuable character. It is rich in mineral wealth, gold, copper, lead, and iron, that only need development to add immensely to its wealth and resources. There is probably no spot on earth of an equal size under the sun possessing more intrinsic wealth than Cuba, and that Spain should relinquish such a prize without desperate resistance is no more to be expected than that a miser should freely relax his grasp on a bag of gold.—Inter-Ocean.

.... Of the 'character of Napoleon,' Wilkes' Spirit of the Times writes: We hear France spoken of in contempt, because of her unrest and perpetual troubles; rather should she be loved as almost the only country of Europe that is not at peace, that cannot rest, that is forever struggling with herself and her rulers, that longs to be free, that cannot remain still and be enslaved. When she is thus at peace—then all Europe may despair. It was from this nation that Louis Napoleon accepted the trust of a defender of the rights of the people; not without doubt, but as a menace to legitimate royalty, the young and liberal France gave to him the guardianship of the Republic. What might he not have done with it, could he have been true to the golden opportunity of the century? Imagine the influence on Europe had the Republic of 1848 remained to this day, as it might have remained had its president kept his oath, and had he not been dazzled by the idea of founding a Napoleonic empire. Freedom in Europe has been put back fifty years by the treachery of this one man. Louis Napoleon had superior merits of his own, no doubt; but that which enabled him to gain the throne was the name of his predecessor, than whom no greater man of the world has perhaps ever lived. He did much in his way for France, and served Italy well when he reached her fairest provinces from the Austrian. It is not strange that Milan should wish to build him a monument. But the history which will be written, which unlike the history of the past will not record the triumphs of monarchs, but the struggles of the people, will give him his well earned eminence among the betrayers of liberty. That treason was his great deed.

THE NORTHFLEET DISASTER.

The details of the terrible disaster to the ship Northfleet are published, from which it appears that at 10:30 o'clock at night the captain and others were alarmed by the cry from the officer of the watch, "a steamer is right onto us." The captain and pilot rushed on deck, but before they had got there the steamer had run into the vessel, striking her amidships and cutting her down below water-mark. The carpenter quickly reported her nearly half full of water. The pumps were started promptly and the crew worked hard at them for some minutes. But when it was found the water was rapidly gaining a panic seemed to seize both crew and passengers, and afterward they could not be kept in check. A crowd of men and women had rushed up from their berths, many of them only half clothed. The passengers had mostly retired, but a few were undressing. The noise of the collision is likened by one of them to a peal of thunder, and such was the violence of the shock that those standing were knocked down. It appears that the steamer rebounded and came a second time in collision with the Northfleet. The water began to pour in, and in a very short time the passengers' quarters were swamped. The women were slower to rush on deck than the men, and many were not in condition to go till the waters rose threateningly around them. No one on board the steamer was heard to speak, although the loud and eager shouts from the Northfleet must have made their crew aware of the terrible danger that existed. She backed for two or three minutes, and then steamed rapidly away and was soon out of sight. For half an hour the scene on the deck of the Northfleet was appalling. Women shrieked, men cursed and swore, and fought their way toward the boats, while the captain and first mate roared out commands to them to keep back and allow the women to get to the side of the vessel, but apparently without success. Rockets were fired and blue lights burned. A gun was loaded, but the screw of the ramrod became detached from the handle and the piece could not be discharged. The signals of distress were seen by several vessels, but appear to have been regarded as signals for a pilot, for no assistance was rendered. Meanwhile the scene on deck baffled description. The captain, finding the men determined to leave the ship, went below, armed himself with revolvers, and, ascending the poop, declared his determination to shoot the first man who tried to leave the vessel before the women were saved. The first boat launched was lowered by a number of passengers by cutting the ropes. There being no ladder at hand the only way of getting into it was by leaping or dropping some twelve or fifteen feet. As there was a terrible rush toward the boat, the scene was one of distressing confusion, and many fell into the water and were drowned. The officers did all they could to force the men who first got into the boat to leave it that the women might be saved, but to no purpose. About thirty persons having got into it, the boat put off. Not one of the crew were in it. Another life boat was launched. A man got into it and was ordered to leave. He refused and the captain shot him in the calf of the leg. Then Captain Knowles placed his wife in the boat and said to the boatswain, who had already got in: "Here's a charge for you boatswain: take care of her and the rest, and God bless you." Wringing his wife's hands he bade her good by, saying: "I shall never see you again."

It is impossible to describe the panic that raged all this time. Heartrending scenes were witnessed on all sides. One passenger, seeing the captain's wife in the boat, threw his own wife into the boat, tossed the baby to her, and entered the boat himself. A little girl was thrown into the boat by her father who tried to save the rest of his family, but the seething, maddened crowd pressing toward the side of the vessel prevented, and with his wife and two other children he went down with the ill fated vessel. The engineer made frantic efforts to save his wife and children, but was jammed between the cook house and the gunwale and received such dreadful injuries that though afterward rescued he was in a precarious state. Only two of the seven boats aboard were launched, owing no doubt to the panic, and they were more seriously injured as the tackle was cut and the boat fell into the sea.

When the second boat had got off it seemed to become a question of moment. The quarter deck was still crowded by men, women and children, some crying, some swearing and many praying. The captain and pilot were together, and the latter was heard saying, "If you want to save yourself make for the topmast," to which many of the poor people rushed. In a quarter of an hour a tug picked up the second boat with thirty occupants and then steamed for some time round the spot where about three quarters of an hour after being struck, the Northfleet went down head first, with about 327 souls on board.

At that moment the first boat was one hundred yards and the second boat only twenty or thirty yards from the vessel. The crew of the first boot, after landing the women, rowed around the scene of the wreck and saved five men trying to swim to the shore. A lugger took off the occupants of the second boot, thirty-four passengers, and a pilot cutter rescued the pilot and ten men who, having gone down with the vessel, rose to the surface and clung to the main top-mast rigging. The vessel lies in eleven fathoms of water.

The survivors say the captain displayed the greatest heroism and maintained his presence of mind from the first to the last. He strove hard to put an end to the panic, and did his duty bravely to the end. He was at the last moment going across the wreck in hope of enabling some of the crowd crushing round the boats on that side to get away from the ship. Survivors say the other boats got adrift when the ship sunk, and express the belief if the passengers had allowed them to be lowered properly, they could have saved at least one hundred more lives. "Unfortunately the women could not climb the masts, although we did all in our power to help them. Consequently all the women and children, with the exception of the captain's wife and another and two children were drowned."

paired, and flags in tatters, the matter will look very differently. The toughest thing a minister is called to do is to step down; not down to a secretaryship, not down down to a professorship, nor down to an editor's chair, nor clear down to the insurance business, but down from the prominent station ıe has filled before the denomination ınd the world, down one step on the waning side of reputation and popularity. Dying would be easy up there, n comparison with that one awful step. But the time will come, beloved when a hundred things will say to us, go down. Happy the man who looking at the brother on the next step below, waiting for his place, shall say, 'He must increase but I must decrease." And why may not one say it gracefully and heartily and John Baptistically when the coming man is a roduct of his own preaching, the outrowth of his example and influence, vhy not say it in recognition of the ıct that God does not make men alike or for like times and circumstances? Vill it not ease the descent and take he sting from the dying, to consider hat these coming after us and crowdıg us along and down ought to be etter and stronger and more taking ıen because reaping benefit from our ıstruction and experience? Twenty-five and thirty years ago this mortiying work was going on as now, the ounger crowding the older, and the uffering brethren of to-day then rode allantly on the highest wave of popularity. A farmer ought to be a better husbandman to-day than his grandther or improved agriculture means othing, or failures and costly and ide experience are of no value. The oldier of to-day would make short ork with one of Napoleon's old uard.

And if underlying this principle hich I have been discussing is the eeper one, the root out of which the ery gospel starts, that is the law and rinciple of sacrifice outspringing from e very heart of God, then self-deni , dying, sacrifice, in any direction, assing from the zenith to the nadir, iving way for those who are increasg, and accepting the personal deease as a divine necessity, must work e in us and in the various departents of the church of God. From e buds of April and the blossoms of ay we have watched our orchards as ey came out into fuller foliage, and her and richer promise of harvest. eek by week the autumnal pledges panded as earth and air and sun and oud lavished their unstinted favors, l only yesterday the golden and crimn fruit bent every branch and yielded treasures with liberal hand. And st then, when the grand trees had ached the fruition of all their hopes d our hopes, when it had come in e fullest, overflowing sense to the reization of the divine purpose in all e spring and summer work, just then and the orchards shudder at the ention—just then they begin to die, eir fruit of gold and crimson is merlessly torn away, just then the folie falls from its own ripeness or feels e keen blade of an enemy that alks by night. Look at the tree now, l, melancholy, dead to all appearces. But its fruit is feeding the peo or crowding storehouses with treares for times of need, and its leaves only because the life of another ır is even now pushing its forces and dges out to every twig and bud. p that working of death and we p soon the working of life; stop ıt sacrificial work and soon neither e, nor fruit shall know perpetuation resurrection.—A. K. Potter.

An Excellent Receipt.

I have found a receipt that makes an ellent medicine for me and others.

Directions. A good dose as soon as wake in the morning. Take ugh to last until after breakfast; n after eating, and through the day, ore and after eating. No danger of ing too much, and I hope they will e freely, for I know it is good. I ık the complaint is deep-seated on ıe, but this will cure by observing directions strictly. Here is the rept.

Cure for Scandal. Take a little good ure, a little mind-your-own-business, ttle charity for others, a little keepır-tongue-between-your-teeth; simr well in a vessel called circumspec l.

The symptoms are, a violent itching the tongue when you are in compawith a class of people called gossips. when you feel a fit coming on, take ood dose, and keep your mouth shut il you get home. If you can get of that complaint, you will keep ar of many others.

The Times.

AT HOME.

.... On the 4th inst. A. B. Swanson, recently sentenced to the penitentiary for the term of fifteen years for wife murder, suicided by means of a razor, while in the jail at Monmouth, Ill.

.... A man named Dalrymple was blown to atoms, and his wife and two children killed by the explosion of nitro-glycerine, at his residence near Tidioute, Pa. He was engaged in filling a torpedo.

.... Among the parties who obtained divorces from an Illinois court one day recently was one lady who had to obtain her divorce so as to get married to a new husband in twenty minutes, in order to reach the train which they were to take on their bridal tour.

.... A pretty specimen of the devil fish, which Victor Hugo has immortalized, is in the possession of a gentleman who lives near the coast of Florida. He has it carefully preserved, and it—in its horrid claws—had quite as carefully, when caught, a diver. It is an immense thing, and is four feet in diameter.

.... Lake Ontario has lately thrown another tidal wave upon its shores near the mouth of the Genesee river. The river was closed with solid ice, and without a moment's warning the water began to rise, and the ice toward the mouth of the harbor began to creak, as if great waves were rolling under it. In less than four minutes, water, ice, and all, had risen over three feet and a half. This advance of water receded in a short time.

.... A poor seamstress was arrested the other day in Brooklyn, N. Y., on charge of stealing garments which she had taken home to sew. Upon her examination, it appeared that she was employed by a certain Miss Pillsbury of New York city, who paid her seventeen cents for making four pairs of pantaloons, fifty cents for making twelve pairs of drawers, twenty-five cents for making six shirts. She did not finish the pantaloons as soon as she agreed to, and the gentle Pillsbury refused to pay her; whereupon she pawned the articles to keep her family from starving. As she could not have belonged to the Tammany ring, it is probable she was sent to jail for three months. A sad case of woman's inhumanity to woman.

.... Another evidence of the good effects of the just and humane policy adapted by the President toward the Indians comes to us from Idaho. It is stated that nearly five hundred of one of the tribes settled in that Territory have heartily embraced the gospel. A still more noteworthy fact connected with these Indians is, that they have decided to give up the use of tobacco. Though very fond of it they affirm to have discovered an admonition against the habit in the Scriptures, where it stands written: "If thy right hand offend thee, cut it off." An exchange from which we learn the incident very pertinently observes: "Such an interpretation of the Bible, and such a carrying out of the self-sacrifice which these Indians believed it to teach, by the whole Christian church, would double the efficiency of all missionary institutions in the world."

.... Notwithstanding the frequent warnings that have been given by the medical journals of the deadly nature of hydrate of chloral, there is reason to believe that its use is still largely indulged in by the general public. A few years ago, when this substance was introduced, it was said to be an exceedingly safe hypnotic or producer of sleep. Grave consequences have, however, attended its administration to patients. The sleep which it produces too frequently terminates in the sleep of death. Whatever temporary relief may be obtained from the use of such medicines under strict medical supervision, it must be remembered that they do not and can not serve as a substitute for regular habits in eating, working, and sleeping. Nature can not be cheated; she will punish rigidly every violation of her laws. Those who persist in thinking they obtain a triumph over the laws of good health, simply deceive themselves, and are certain, sooner or later, to find out their mistake.

.... Phrenologists now have an opportunity to locate beyond doubt the position memory holds in the convolutions of the brain. A man in Elmira, N. Y., struck his head against a beam three years ago and was rendered insensible. He rapidly recovered, prospered in business, and enjoyed perfect health until a few days ago, when he experienced acute pains in the head. These soon passed away, he regained his physical health, but his memory from the time he struck his head against the beam, to the present is a blank. He remembers distinctly all that transpired up to the time of the accident, but is puzzled to account for his two children born since that time. He addresses his business partner as the schoolmaster, which position he held previous to the accident. The case is a curious one, and unaccountable to medical experts.

.... The commissioners appointed to investigate the cause and management of the Boston fire have made a report. They find that the fire was not the work of an incendiary, that it commenced in the rear of the basement of the building first destroyed, that for many minutes after it was discovered no alarm was given, though a crowd of people were watching its progress; that as soon as it was known to the patrolman on the beat he gave an alarm promptly, but the engines were slow in reaching the scene, because the engine horses were sick. There was a scarcity of water and of fuel, and it soon became apperent that the engines were not powerful enough to throw effective streams of water upon the high buildings in the neighborhood. The firemen worked bravely and the aparatus was in good condition, but there was a want of system, and though the chief of the department is praised for his courage, the report throws doubts upon his fitness to command in such an emergency.

.... The Hagerstown (Md.) Mail says: On Tuesday last, between the hours of 11 o'clock in the morning and eleven o'clock at night, the most extraordinary sounds were heard in that portion of our valley which is bounded by the Conococheague on the west and the base of South Mountain on the east, and, as we learn, at Mechanicstown, in Frederick county. Within this range it was heard in Hagerstown, Funkstown and Beaver Creek, where persons ran out to see what was the matter with the excited cattle and dogs. It was heard at Smithsburg, Ridgeville and all through that region; also at same time at Middlekauff's, Downey's, Hillscrabble, Zeller's, and Kershner's. The sound in all those places is similarly described as the distressed cry of some wild beast. It everywhere created the greatest alarm among cattle and dogs. It was heard at many places at the same time, they being remote from each other. What caused it no one can surmise but it is supposed to have been produced from some atmospherical cause.

ABROAD.

.... A terrible earthquake has occurred in the island of Samos, Greece, causing great destruction of property and loss of life.

.... From to Jaffa to Jerusalem by rail will soon be the order of things where David and Solomon used to travel with horses (?) and camels.

.... There has been another rise in the price of coal in England, which, on the 4th, sold at forty-eight shillings, per ton, and during the day advanced to fifty-three. Many furnaces and mills have been compelled to suspend work.

.... Bismarck has submitted a proposition to the German Federal Council for an appropriation of 45,000,000 thalers for the erection and improvement of fortifications at Cologne, Bolnigsberg, Wilhelmshoe, Kiel, and Posen.

.... Recent advices represent the Carlist cause as flourishing in numbers, arms, and resources. They have lines through all the northern provinces of Spain. Valles, an insurgent general, has entered Arragon. Rodes, in command of the right wing, in Asturias, is marching on Leon and Castile.

.... The city of Lehra, Beloochistan, (an extensive country of Sothern Asia), was almost entirely laid in ruins on the 4th inst. by an earthquake. Over five hundred persons perished, so sudden was the shock that they had only time to run into the streets where many were killed by their houses falling upon them. All that was left of the population of about six thousand fled into the mountains as soon as the first shock was over.

.... There are two islands of the west coast of Ireland called North and South Inishkea, where the inhabitants are absolutely heathens. The religion of these islanders is confined to the worship of a large wooden idol. This is a rudely carved image of a man about eight feet high, dressed in a long flannel gown. This is kept in a shed, and when storms arise it is taken to the shore and besought to abate them.

.... Baptist Noel, whose full name is the Hon. and Rev. Baptist Wriothesly Noel, long known as one of the most active of English writers in the field of polemic divinity, died yesterday, at the age of 73. He began his ecclesiastical life as chaplain to the queen, but resigned this position in 1848, when he seceded from the established church. He then joined the Baptists, and was one of their ministers until within a year or two. As a preacher, philanthropist, and controversial writer, Baptist Noel held a high rank.

.... The report that Sirdar Abdul Rahman had captured Fort Hesser at the instigation of the Russians, and was making other aggressive movements in Afghanistan is contradicted. The latest advices from Bokhara represent that city and surrounding country as tranquil. Per contra, it is stated that the Russian forces in Central Asia are strong enough to defy any attempt of the British to check their progress, and England is powerless. Russia is only waiting for a false step on the part of England. And European diplomats doubt Russia's sincerity. Whether this is to be a war or only a rumor of war is yet in doubt.

.... The Official Gazette, of St. Petersburg Feb. 5, in an article on the movements of Russia in Central Asia, contrasts the indifference with which Great Britain views the growth of the United States of North America wsth the jealousy with which she watches the growth of Russia. The Gazette says the British journalists are simply beside themselves with anger, and concludes its article by advising the British government to take no more notice of the progress of Russia than she does of that of the United States. The Russian fleet now on the Baltic will soon sail for the Mediterranean.

.... Death appears to have had a rich harvest last year in British India. A sort of fever, upon which medicine has no effect, and which was never heard of before, called the "new fever," committed great ravages among the population. Within a few weeks over one hundred people are reported to have died in a single small village. But fatal as this strange disease is, it lost all terror in comparison with the cholera, which has raged with fearful violence in a number of the districts. The mortality is still continuing, and many natives begin to fear a return of those dark days when whole cities were almost entirely depopulated by the plague. The gov. does what it can, but that is not much.

.... A telegraphic dispatch to Lloyds, from their agent at Cadiz, Spain, states that it was the Spanish steamer Murillo which ran into and sank the emigrant ship Northfleet, off Dungeness lighthouse, on the 22d inst. The steamship, however, was not sunk herself, as was at one time believed, but has arrived at Cadiz in safety. Her destination was Lisbon, for which port she had a cargo, but, upon entering that harbor, she was signaled not to land, as there is an extradition treaty between Portugal and Great Britain, under which her officers would have been surrendered to the British authorities to answer the charges brought against them. She consequently put to sea again, and proceeded for Cadiz, as there is no extradition treaty between Great Britain and Spain. The Murillo sustained no damage by the collision. Her officers and crew will soon be examined at Cadiz in relation to the disaster.

.... The London Saturday Review finds it impossible to doubt the growing intemperance of the working classes in England. Personal observation on such a point may sometimes be misleading, but the same story comes from all points of the country. As a rule, high wages seem to mean only more drinking; and drinking means wife-beating at home and fighting in the streets.....Anybody who reads the police reports will see, the Saturday Review says, the steady increase of cases of brutal assaults, especially on women, which may be traced to drinking. "The present 'genial season' has been appropriately celebrated—a woman supping with her husband and a friend suddenly flung out of a window; a man stabbed by his wife, a wife by her husband, a girl by her sweetheart. 'Thank God, Christmas is over!' we heard a poor woman say the other day as she steadied her staggering husband up the steps of a railway station."

.... The town of Soonghur, which was recently destroyed by an earthquake, with such terrible loss of life, is located 144 miles north of Bombay, with which it is connected by railway and telegraph. It is an appendage of the capital city of Baoda, which is an independent state, bound to the British only by offensive and defensive treaties. The town was thickly populated, and situated in the midst of a very productive country, which in point of monetary and commercial resources is one of the most important localities in India. Rice, maize, wheat, barley, indigo, sugar cane, opium, and tobacco are raised in great quantities, and many valuable drugs are indigenous. Nearly all Great Britain's supply of nitre and nitrate of soda came from the locality of this unfortunate town.

.... A very simple incident which has occurred recently in the Tyrol is gradually assuming the dimensions of a great State question, and will no doubt soon be the subject of warm debates in the Austrian Reichsrath. A certain Miss Angelini, of Quenspruck, set her heart on building a convent, and although both the municipality and the government authorities refused their permission, she built it in spite of them, and installed herself in it with a number of novices. The municipality having called her attention to the illegality of these proceedings, she declared that she had acted under the authority of "letters from court." This evasion of the law has excited a tremendous uproar among the liberal press, and the affair will doubtless be used as another means of shaking the influence of the clerical party.

.... At the wedding ceremony of Miss Kate Fox, well known as the medium through whom spiritual manifestations began in this country, gentle raps were heard in the vicinity of the altar, and again at the wedding breakfast the spirits offered congratulations by loud and frequent raps in all parts of the room. According to the London Times, Miss Fox's mother sent a message to the groom expressing her approval of her daughter's choice. The spirit of James B. Taylor, whose will created such a sensation a few years ago, made itself heard and offered congratulations. Then the spirits grew jovial. Mr. Taylor rapped: "Jencken is no longer his own master," whereat all the other spirits rapped in appreciation. The the bride cheated the Atlantic Telegraphic Cable Company out of a heavy sum by sending a long message to America by a spiritual Mercury. The most astonishing feature of the breakfast, however, was the raising of the heavily laden table several times from the floor.

.... No wonder that Spain holds to Cuba with the grip of a drowning man. With but fifteen per cent of cultivated land, and under wretched management, she exports annually agricultural productions to the value of ninety millions of dollars. She has yielded a yearly revenue of thirty-seven millions, of which the government obtained but ten millions, the balance being expended on officials sent to govern the island. We call ourselves a great and prosperous nation, and yet with our large population and immense area our exportations are not to exceed five times that of this little island of the sea. The possibilities of Cuba, if rightly managed, can hardly be exaggerated. More than a third of the island is still covered with the rarest timber, costly woods of many kinds and of the most valuable character. It is rich in mineral wealth, gold, copper, lead, and iron, that only need development to add immensely to its wealth and resources. There is probably no spot on earth of an equal size under the sun possessing more intrinsic wealth than Cuba, and that Spain should relinquish such a prize without desperate resistance is no more to be expected than that a miser should freely relax his grasp on a bag of gold.—Inter-Ocean.

..... Of the 'character of Napoleon,' Wilkes' Spirit of the Times writes: We hear France spoken of in contempt, because of her unrest and perpetual troubles; rather should she be loved as almost the only country of Europe that is not at peace, that cannot rest, that is forever struggling with herself and her rulers, that longs to be free, that cannot remain still and be enslaved. When she is thus at peace—then all Europe may despair. It was from this nation that Louis Napoleon accepted the trust of a defender of the rights of the people; not without doubt, but as a menace to legitimate royalty, the young and liberal France gave to him the guardianship of the Republic. What might he not have done with it, could he have been true to the golden opportunity of the century? Imagine the influence on Europe had the Republic of 1848 remained to this day, as it might have remained had its president kept his oath, and had he not been dazzled by the idea of founding a Napoleonic empire. Freedom in Europe has been put back fifty years by the treachery of this one man. Louis Napoleon had superior merits of his own, no doubt; but that which enabled him to gain the throne was the name of his predecessor, than whom no greater man of the world has perhaps ever lived. He did much in his way for France, and served Italy well when he reached her fairest provinces from the Austrian. It is not strange that Milan should wish to build him a monument. But the history which will be written, which unlike the history of the past will not record the triumphs of monarchs, but the struggles of the people, will give him his well earned eminence among the betrayers of liberty. That treason was his great deed.

THE NORTHFLEET DISASTER.

The details of the terrible disaster to the ship Northfleet are published, from which it appears that at 10:30 o'clock at night the captain and others were alarmed by the cry from the officer of the watch, "a steamer is right onto us." The captain and pilot rushed on deck, but before they had got there the steamer had run into the vessel, striking her amidships and cutting her down below water-mark. The carpenter quickly reported her nearly half full of water. The pumps were started promptly and the crew worked hard at them for some minutes. But when it was found the water was rapidly gaining a panic seemed to seize both crew and passengers, and afterward they could not be kept in check. A crowd of men and women had rushed up from their berths, many of them only half clothed. The passengers had mostly retired, but a few were undressing. The noise of the collision is likened by one of them to a peal of thunder, and such was the violence of the shock that those standing were knocked down. It appears that the steamer rebounded and came a second time in collision with the Northfleet. The water began to pour in, and in a very short time the passengers' quarters were swamped. The women were slower to rush on deck than the men, and many were not in condition to go till the waters rose threateningly around them. No one on board the steamer was heard to speak, although the loud and eager shouts from the Northfleet must have made their crew aware of the terrible danger that existed. She backed for two or three minutes, and then steamed rapidly away and was soon out of sight. For half an hour the scene on the deck of the Northfleet was appalling. Women shrieked, men cursed and swore, and fought their way toward the boats, while the captain and first mate roared out commands to them to keep back and allow the women to get to the side of the vessel, but apparently without success. Rockets were fired and blue lights burned. A gun was loaded, but the screw of the ramrod became detached from the handle and the piece could not be discharged. The signals of distress were seen by several vessels, but appear to have been regarded as signals for a pilot, for no assistance was rendered. Meanwhile the scene on deck baffled description. The captain, finding the men determined to leave the ship, went below, armed himself with revolvers, and, ascending the poop, declared his determination to shoot the first man who tried to leave the vessel before the women were saved. The first boat launched was lowered by a number of passengers by cutting the ropes. There being no ladder at hand the only way of getting into it was by leaping or dropping some twelve or fifteen feet. As there was a terrible rush toward the boat, the scene was one of distressing confusion, and many fell into the water and were drowned. The officers did all they could to force the men who first got into the boat to leave it that the women might be saved, but to no purpose. About thirty persons having got into it, the boat put off. Not one of the crew were in it. Another life boat was launched. A man got into it and was ordered to leave. He refused and the captain shot him in the calf of the leg. Then Captain Knowles placed his wife in the boat and said to the boatswain, who had already got in: "Here's a charge for you boatswain; take care of her and the rest, and God bless you." Wringing his wife's hands he bade her good by, saying: "I shall never see you again."

It is impossible to describe the panic that raged all this time. Heartrending scenes were witnessed on all sides. One passenger, seeing the captain's wife in the boat, threw his own wife into the boat, tossed the baby to her, and entered the boat himself. A little girl was thrown into the boat by her father who tried to save the rest of his family, but the seething, maddened crowd pressing toward the side of the vessel prevented, and with his wife and two other children he went down with the ill fated vessel. The engineer made frantic efforts to save his wife and children, but was jammed between the cook house and the gunwale and received such dreadful injuries that though afterward rescued he was in a precarious state. Only two of the seven boats aboard were launched, owing no doubt to the panic, and they were more seriously injured as the tackle was cut and the boat fell into the sea.

When the second boat had got off it seemed to become a question of moment. The quarter deck was still crowded by men, women and children, some crying, some swearing and many praying. The captain and pilot were together, and the latter was heard saying, "If you want to save yourself make for the top-mast," to which many of the poor people rushed. In a quarter of an hour a tug picked up the second boat with thirty occupants and then steamed for some time round the spot where about three quarters of an hour after being struck, the Northfleet went down head first, with about 327 souls on board.

At that moment the first boat was one hundred yards and the second boat only twenty or thirty yards from the vessel. The crew of the first boot, after landing the women, rowed around the scene of the wreck and saved five men trying to swim to the shore. A lugger took off the occupants of the second boot, thirty-four pasengers, and a pilot cutter rescued the pilot and ten men who, having gone down with the vessel, rose to the surface and clung to the main top-mast rigging. The vessel lies in eleven fathoms of water.

The survivors say the captain displayed the greatest heroism and maintained his presence of mind from the first to the last. He strove hard to put an end to the panic, and did his duty bravely to the end. He was at the last moment going across the wreck in hope of enabling some of the crowd crushing round the boats on that side to get away from the ship. Survivors say the other boats got adrift when the ship sunk, and express the belief if the passengers had allowed them to be lowered properly, they could have saved at least one hundred more lives. "Unfortunately the women could not climb the masts, although we did all in our power to help them. Consequently all the women and children, with the exception of the captain's wife and another and two children were drowned."

The Christian Life.

A Feathered Messenger.

A sparrow lighted chirping on a spray,
Close to my window as I knelt in prayer,
Bowed by a heavy load of anxious care.
The morn was bitter, but the bird was gay,
And seemed by cheery look and chirp to say—
What though the snow conceals my wonted fare,
Nor have I barn or storehouse anywhere,
Yet I trust heaven even on a winter's day.
That little bird came like a winged text
Fluttering from out God's Word to soothe my breast
What though my life with wintry cares be vext,
On a kind Father's watchful love I rest.
[illegible] this moment's need, I leave the next,
And always trusting, shall be always blest!

[illegible]

"Be still my heart! these anxious cares
To thee are burdens, thorns, and snares;
They cast dishonor on the Lord,
And contradict his gracious Word."

A Pardon Locked Up.

Hugh Stowell says: "In the Isle of Man, as I was one day walking on the sea shore, I remember contemplating with thrilling interest an old, gray, ruined tower, covered with ivy. There was a remarkable history connected with the spot. In that tower was formerly hanged one of the best governers the island ever possessed. He had been accused of treachery to the king during the time of the civil wars, and received sentence of death. Intercession was made on his behalf, and a pardon was sent; but that fell into the hands of his bitter enemy, who kept it locked up, and the governer was hanged. His name is still honored by the many; and you may often hear a pathetic ballad sung to his memory, to the music of the spinning-wheel. We must feel horror-struck at the fearful turpitude of that man who, having the pardon for his fellow-creature in his possession, could keep it back and let him die the death of traitor. But let us restrain our indignation till we ask ourselves whether God might not point his finger to most of us and say, 'Thou art the man! Thou hast a pardon in thine hands to save thy fellow-creature not from temporal, but eternal death. Thou hast a pardan suited to all, sent to all, designated for all. Thou hast enjoyed it thyself; but hast thou not kept it back from thy brother, instead of sending it to the ends of the earth?'"

"That's Me!"

Sitting down in the Orphanage grounds upon one of the seats, we were talking with one of our brother trustees, when a little fellow, we should think about eight years of age, left the other boys who were playing around us, and came deliberately up to us. He opened fire upon us thus:

"Please, Mr. Spurgeon, I want to come sit down on that seat between you two gentlemen."

"Come along, Bob, and tell us what you want."

"Please, Mr. Spurgeon, suppose there was a little boy who had no father, who lived in a orphanage with a lot of other little boys who had no fathers, and suppose those little boys had mothers and aunts who comed once a month, and brought them apples and oranges, and gave them pennies, and suppose this little boy had no mother and no aunt, and so nobody ever came to bring him nice things, don't you think somebody ought to give him a penny? Cause, Mr. Spurgeon, that's me."

Somebody felt something wet in his eye, and Bob got a sixpence, and went off in a great state of delight. Poor little soul, he had seized the opportunity to pour out a bitterness which had rankled in his little heart, and made him miserable when the monthly visiting day came round, and, as he said, "Nobody never came to bring him nice things."

Turning the tables, we think some grown-up persons, who were once little Bobs and Harrys, might say, "Suppose there was a poor sinner who deserved to be sent to hell, but who was forgiven all his sins by sovereign grace, and made a child of God, don't you think he ought to help on the Savior's cause, 'cause, Mr. Spurgeon, that's me."

A Savior for All.

A friend who is with me has been telling me of a class of little boys he teaches at Philadelphia, on Sunday nights. One evening a newspaper boy met him in the street, and said, "Oh, Captain, I'm mighty glad to see yer! There's poor Billy, he's so badly, and so wants to see yer."

My friend went with the little boy, and found Billy lying on some rags in the corner of a wretched room, very, very ill. Billy was so delighted when the captain went in! The room was dark, and Billy, with a feeble voice, said: "I'se here, captain; I'm mighty glad to see yer." My friend was filled with pity for him, and asked him if he could send him a nurse, or some medicine, or some nice food. "No, captain, it wasn't that I wanted yer for. I wanted to ask yer two questions. The first is, Did you tell us the other night as how Jesus Christ died for every feller?"

"Yes, I did; for Jesus Christ tasted death for every man." Billy then said, "I thought so. Now, I've another question. Did you tell us how Jesus Christ saves every feller that axes him?" "Yes," said my friend, "for every one that asketh receiveth.' Billy replied, with a very feeble but happy voice, "Then I know that he'll save me, because I axes him." My friend paused to wipe away the tears that gushed from his eyes, and then bent down to speak to the boy. But Billy's head had dropped back on the pillow of rags, and his happy spirit had gone to Jesus. He will be at the feast, and "yet there is room"—room for everyone that asks—room for you!

Correspondence.

From Our English Correspondent.

The Papaline decline is daily more sepulchred. In Scripture, the fourth universal kingdom in its "clay" aspect was to be supported by kings and governments, who were represented therein under the symbol of 'heads." Then the scarlet colored woman was to "fall" from these heads, and alight on the people, and sit upon "many waters"—the many waters meaning peoples and nations, and tongues. Need I say that Papal Rome is the kingdom referred to, and she must gradually lose her support, being thrown by the nations on which she has ridden, on the sympathies and means of private individuals, phrased as "the Catholic World."

This is of God, and is the history of Catholicism in advance. And believing it, I have been watching for the events predicted, being daily persuaded and assured that God has given me an understanding of his word.

To day we are about to see the last vestiges of this prophecy pass into the cloth of actual fact. It has already, in a measure, been woven into that aspect. This prophecy has been partly fulfilled. When the first country threw off her guidance and control, the word commenced filling up. But now we are looking, watching the completion of the last title of inspiration. And I have reason to think that the fullness of this prophecy, in all roundness and completeness, is about to be revealed.

I think, after a few months the very last secular arm will be withdrawn from Rome, even its moral influence, and the only friends left to the apostacy then, will be those devoted but misguided men, who dance all over the world at the piping of their priestly rulers. And in this thought I am not alone; for Cardinal Cullen, one of their own dignataries, said in language truly anticipatively if not prophetically true, in a sermon preached by him in Doublin on the last Tuesday in December: "In old times the Papacy rested in kings; it now rests in the hearts of the people."

The late allocution of the Pope has and will have much to do in hastening this destiny. You know how Pio Nino in that allocution inveighed against Germany, refraining not from words of provocation. And Germany is provoked. The German priests, it seems, first received a translation of the allocution from a Jesuit paper named Voce della Verita, in which it was plain that the insulting language of the Pope was purposly softened and weakened. But the authentic Vatican versions were procured, and more faithful renderings were given to them in the papers of the Empire. Translations of parts referring to Germany were made: but the Spener Gazelle says if an exact German translation were given, there would be a decided prospect of having preceedings instituted against them by the public prosecutor. It also says:

> "The series of gross insults which the head of the church, in his address, which was delivered to the Cardinals with the object of being promulgated to the clergy and laity of the whole Christian world, ventured from his high position to bring in the face of the German Empire and its illustrious ruler, is hard to equal in modern history.
>
> The impudence of Benedetti towards the king is here far surpassed. (The Pope uses the word 'shameless.') The national feeling of Germany towards Rome will be as litle disavowed now as then towards France. The language used towards the Emperor is a greater insult than the Ems outrage."

How did Germany receive this "fling" of the Most Holy Pope (!)? The answer is that the North German Gazette insists that the cynicism directed in the recent papal address against the German Empire and its Emperor cannot be allowed to pass scot free, and says:

> "While we feel that the attack upon the Emperor's honor involves the more unpardonable insult to the German nation, the higher the authority of him who does not blush to abuse his religious mission in such an unprecedented manner is to decry the authority which derives its power from the Almighty, our moral indignation at such colossal impudence can only be soothed by the conviction of an imperative necessity that the limits between church and state must immediately be clearly defined by law."

Such an insult from any other power, I mean secular power, would have immediately called forth a demand for explanation and apology, or, failing that, a notice to prepare for war. But who—what first-class power—would think the ravings and sputterings of a childish old man guarded by the patrols of a few Swiss soldiers sufficient to call for a battle? Such an infinitesimal and paltry enemy would be considesed a foe unworthy of the steel of a splendid force, and no first rate power would deign to notice such an enemy at the point of the bayonet. So it is with Germany. The fact is the nation does not like it; but then the foe is not worth much notice. Who fears a caged lion? Who trembles at the rage of a tigress prisoner? Yet it serves to alleviate the German government, and it will help on events toward the consummation, when Rome shall be cast off and out of Germany. I read that "the official papers are full of indignation at the last allocution of the Pope, so outrageously violent against Germany, and that it will be very disappointing to lookers-on if nothing comes out of such a 'petty quarrel.'"

In fact something has come of it already. The German authorities charged the German Secretary of Legation accredited to the Vatican to make himself scarce at the Papal reception on New Year's day, fearing that the Pope might express himself even more violently toward Germany on that day. Herr Stumm informed Cardinal Antonelli of his "orders" on the 30th of December, and immediately quitted Rome "on an indefinite leave of absence." An Italian paper notices his departure, and says "it is believed that he will not at present be replaced." The Liberte also says that though diplomatic relations have not been formally broken off between Germany and the Vatican, yet Herr Stumm has left Rome on account of the recent allocution attacking the Emperor of Germany. The Secretary is at Berlin, and God knows when he will return to Rome. Perhaps, never!

I must now say a few words respecting France. M. de Bourgoing was its accredited representative at the Papal palace. But word was sent him by his government that on New Year's day the officers Oronoque, a war frigate, were to pay an official visit to the Pope and the king of Italy, the one at the Vatican and the other at the Quirinal. The Pope felt hurt and wounded at this because it was tantamount to an acknowledgment that the Savoyard was King of Rome, which the Reverend Papa never would admit. He complained of the French ambasador, and the ambassador took his side. In order to get out of the affair M. de Bourgoing resigned and left Rome on last Saturday week. M. de Corcelles was sent to Rome in his place. Meanwhile the intended honor to be done to Victor Emanual was countermanded, on account of the refusal of the officers of the ship to obey orders, and an intimation was given in the Union from Cardinal Antonelli, that, thanking the French government for the use of the Orenoque for the past three years, if the Pope should be compelled to leave Rome he would not avail himself of the said vessel. M. de Corcelles was considered to be just the man for the delicate duty to be performed at the Vatican (to pacify the Pope) and M. Thiers pressed upon him the acceptance of the situation. He was one of those who undertook the task of confronting his holiness during his exile at Gaeta." And the semi-official Bien Public said:

> "As a fervent Catholic, he is perhaps the man most calculated to dispel religious apprehension, while, on the other hand, his relations with the French government lead us to rely on the wise reserve and extreme prudence compatible with our national interests."

But he would not be definitely appointed till he was certain of his success. So the matter lay there. He would not, we read "accept the ambassy to the Vatican, without first consulting the Pope personally, in order to ascertain whether his appointment would be agreeable to his Holiness." He was authorised to say at Rome, that the resignation of Comte Bourgoiong was not due to any action of the French government, which did not intend modifying its policy toward the Pope and Italy. This "and Italy" was a trifle too much for him; and the Giornale di Roma writing of the French Ambassador at the Vatican, said it had reason to believe that M. de Corcelles, in consequence of an interview with Cardinal Antonelli, is no longer willing to accept the post of French Ambassador at the Vatican."

Subsequently M. Thiers said: "I am not the author of the Italy of to-day. I may say that of all the men of my time I have the least contributed to that unity. But it exists—it is an accomplished fact. There is an Italy which has taken its place among the great powers of Europe. What do you wish us to do? Let us speak frankly—there must be no mistake. You must not force us to adopt a policy which would end in what you publicly disavow, viz. war." This declaration holds just as good now as it did then.

So that, though M. Thiers could not have "made" Italy, he cannot ignore its existence, even if the Pope wishes him to do so. We may be very sure that M. de Corcelles, who by the way is a friend of M. Thiers, and brother-in-law of M. de Remust, the foreign Minister, stated his case very plainly at the palace of the Popes. The Opinione tells us by telegram, at his first interview with Pius and Antonelli, he "stated with great courtesy, but at the same time with firmness, that the attitude of the clerical party toward M. Thiers constituted a danger for France, because France had need of M. Thiers and those who opposed him opposed the interests of the nation. M. de Corcelles added that M. Thiers appreciated the advantages of good relations with Italy, and that henceforth France must, in her relations with the Holy See, hold in view and have guaranteed its independence from all attack, but that it would be impossible to think of restoring the temporal power, or of even making reservations with regard to accomplished facts. France required peace and concord, which it was impossible to attain by the policy of the clerical party, which placed France in conflict with the whole of Europe and would make her lose her legitimate influence." Thus then there is really a disruption between France and the Pope. France cannot but acknowledge and pay its respect to Italy, for it exists, and is a European power; but she cannot do this except she offend the Pope.

From Wm. Siddall, Willi Co., Ohio.

Four years ago this wir, being engaged as teacher of a Bi class in a Methodist Sunday school, which I had taught for two years, the subject of the destiny of man and the intermediate state forced itself upon me for careful investigation. This I engaged in with all the energy I could command, invoking divine assistance that I might be enabled to learn from God's Word and to understand the truths therein contained. I applied myself to the study of the Scriptures almost day and night, firmly determined to believe the truth though it proved every man a liar and undermine my preconceived opinions. I had always believed in the immortality of the soul, a conscious intermediate state, and the eternal toment of the wicked. But I had to confess that if this doctrine were true God's Word dip not teach it. Therefore, I soon concluded it was not true.

If men that have a disposition to know the truth and to be made free by it would cut loose from creeds, prejudice, and the teachings of the "mystic doctors," and carefully study the Bible, they would learn that everlasting punishment and everlasting destruction or everlasting punishment by or in everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of his power, does not mean everlasting torment or everlasting life in misery, called "everlasting death," by many good but blinded men; blinded by the Platonic doctrine of the inherent immortality of the soul. The Bible doctrine of immortality is that God possesses it, and that he, through our Lord Jesus Christ, whose soul was made an offering poured out unto death as a ransom for the sins for the world, will bestow immortality upon the justified.

We must be justified from actual sin by forgiveness; then we are fit subjects for Christ's kingdom. May God help us to be so sanctified; so given up to his service that we may remain in this blessed state of justification, having immortality by faith, eternal life "hid with Christ in God," until we are changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump, when, by the Spirit of God that dwells in us now, by which we are his begotten children, we shall be quickened into an endless life with all the redeemed of all ages.

This is the Bible doctrine of immortality—and a glorious doctrine it is. Eternal life and eternal death are before us, and it is for us to say which we will have. O! that we may be wise unto salvation!

I was alone at first in the faith of the Bible, and rejoiced in God tha I was thought worthy to suffer perse tion for Christ's sake, which by th grace of God I have been able to bea with meekness; and have not bee idle, and some of my pious persecutorh—or rather the persecutors of the trut of the Bible—will testify; for they giv me credit for doing much more than have done.

Your books and tracts and papers have proved effective workers.

From Isaac Adrian.

I left home on Dec. 12 and arived at Manchester, Iowa, the 14th. Met Br. Ridley, preached in the Universalist house in the afternoon, and two miles north in the evening. We began immediately a protracted meeting, and a number have turned from their idols to praise the living God, and wait for his son from heaven. Among the number was an old man nearly sixty years of age, who has been a skeptic all his days—a lawyer, a man of a good sound mind; and, best of all, he is now clothed in his right mind, and can tell it to others. We closed the meeting for a while to attend conference at Boylan's Grove. I started for the Grove the first day of January. I found myself blocked in for five days by a terrific storm at Clarksville. The young church at this place is trying to live. Eld. Samuel Cronce is now living here but is very much out of health. He is a good brother, and longs to be well and in the field. The churches will do well to call him out as soon as he is able to speak.

I was able to get to the conference in season, but found myself alone. I began the meeting, hoping to see a gathering of ministers: but some started and were snow bound; others wrote that they expected to come but could not. I went on with the meeting and it was a success. One of the believers in Ellen White's visions has been trying to mimic the thunders of Sinai and shower on the people a storm of Law. But the glorious gospel of him who said to the storm, "Peace be still!" has but to speak, and all is well. My home while here was with Br. Overturf, well known to many dear pilgrims. Sr. O. is wasting with lung disease, but strong in the faith. These dear pilgrims have been for twenty years giving of their earthly substance to scatter the truth. I have been sick a few days, and am stopping with Br. Louis Jones a few days to rest. From here I go to Charles City and Little Cedar.

From S. J. Bentley, Sauk Co., Wis.

There is nothing in this world that can give real lasting happiness but the religion of Jesus. I have learned this by experience, and I wish I could make all my friends see the fact as I see it, see the joy, the perfect peace that is found when the heart is filled with love for Jesus and his cause. I have found it good to serve the Lord, and can say to-day (after four years' experience), that I am more earnest, more determined than ever to serve him unto the end. No thought of going back. No! I want to "press toward the mark, for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

How good God is to us—how patient, how forbearing! Ought we not do all we can for him? I often wish that I could preach; for blessed indeed it seems to me it must be to sound the notes of warning to a perishing world, and to be the means (under God) of bringing perishing ones to repentance. But all can do something. One example can preach, and, God helping me, I mean that mine shall be better than it has been.

When I see so many all around me all engrossed with the world and its follies, going on the broad road to destruction, I feel that my life must be such that it will tend to influence them for the right, and notto be a stumbling block in their way. May God help me and all other professed Christians to "abstain from all appearance of evil," and to have our lamps trimmed and burning, and be "like unto men how are waiting for their Lord."

From B. J. Goodwin, Williamstown, Iowa.

The year to which many have looked with interest as being the year of release to the righteous, release from death to some, and from sin and mortality to all, has at last dawned upon us. To me it looks more than ever before as it would indeed bring in the long looked for rest which remains to the people of God. My heart burns within me as I contemplate the scene of the glorious advent of our Lord Who would not forego the enjoyment of all that worldlings covet that they might be accounted worthy to escape the last great tribulation and be caught up to meet the returning Nobleman and give him a hearty welcome?

What loud hallelujahs will rend the air as the saints of all ages, nations, and climes shall speed their way through the air to meet him whom their souls love and whom they will delight to crown "Lord of all."

But while my very heart cries come Lord Jesus, and take to thyself thy great power and reign, I feel very unworthy to be a citizen of his righteous and everlasting kingdom. As I look back over my past life I am led to exclaim, I have been an unprofitable servant, and yet I have zealously tried to keep his Word and walk in all his commandments blameless. "The Lord is my refuge and fortress; my God; in him will I trust. He also is my righteousness and my salvation."

A Friend Writes us:

I wish to do or give my mite in spreading the truth, and THE TIMES is the best medium, I think, in many cases, especially of persons who want to be instructed and strengthened. One of the friends to whom I would send the paper, a minister, who is already committed, in fact has for some years preached the near coming of Christ, believing and preaching precisely like the great body of Adventists, with the single exception of the nature of man, &c. And on those questions he simply says he thinks there is much to support the views of the Advent people, though he does not feel called on to either preach one way or the other in an argumentative way, but to let the Bible stand as it reads and for itself, and every man's conscience will teach him the finally impenitent are wholly and hopelessly lost; and that he does feel it his duty to warn men now to flee from the wrath to come, and preach Christ at the door.

Another is just starting out to preach, has long felt it a duty, and can no longer remain at home. Opposition has held him, I learn, sometime; but he feels he can no longer resist the call without losing himself the favor of God. He is timid and not very self confident, would be an admirable helper as he is, but needs much to hold him up, while he holds up the truth. Hence I hope his convictions of present truth may be strengthened. He also believes the Lord is at the door, but will he have courage to tell it? I trust he may, and wish him to have the benefit of THE TIMES.

From S. W. Bird, Cherokee Co., Iowa.

We are in a new and sparsely-settled country, and are anxious to do something for the Lord. I have given away my papers after reading them, and find that they are gladly and even eagerly received. We think a great deal could be done here if we only had some one to preach the Word, There could be a small church established. We have a Bible class in which the heads of eight or nine families have taken a great interest, beside many younger persons. They are searching for themselves. The doctrine is new to them and they express surprise at its simplicity and harmony, and wonder why it is that it has not been preached before. Many of them have never heard of the Savior's second advent, only in a spiritual sense. I think other denominations are getting some light. A worthy Babtist divine preached on man as a subject of death, and he admitted that the Scriptures teach that the soul goes to the grave at death, and said there was "a great mistake" in the theology of the day.

From Martha Slack, Jewell Co., Kan.

We are living way out in the wilderness, among the "heathen" as far as the gospel is concerned. There are many of the lost sheep here, and no laborers. My companion and self are trying to serve the Lord by holding on to the faith. There are some of our relatives and some others that we are not acquainted with a few miles below here that are looking for the Lord. We would love to have some of the shepherds of the flock come and break to us the bread of life. May the Lord send us some one soon. I have not heard an Advent sermon for over a year. There was preaching a few miles from where we lived last summer, but I was not able to attend. My husband and our little girl were out to hear and enjoyed it very much. I have had very poor health for nearly three years. I desire a share in the prayers of the brothers and sisters that I may be healed or at least have strength to bear afflictions of this life.

From S. C. Wellcome.

I have been laboring for short time at Eagle Lake in the big woods in Blue Earth Co. Minn. God has poured out his Spirit upon the people and about twenty have been converted and reclaimed. Next week I expect to organize a church there. A deep interest in searching the Scriptures is manifested. Br. Kerns a Methodist preacher was with me three days, taking hold and laboring with the best of feelings. He is a noble man. Br. John Small and his companion have been praying for and laboring faithfully with this people for years and are now receiving an answer to their prayers.

The most fearful snow storm ever known in this State came suddenly upon us last week Tuesday and continued three days. Many persons have perished in it. God is speaking in thunder tones to the people to prepare for judgment, which is soon coming on a guilty world.

From Sr. Rensbreita, Bishop Hill, Ill.

I should be glad to meet with the brethren and sisters of like precious faith, but am thankful that there are a few of us here who can meet with each other and our Lord, with prayers and exhortations. I am glad I can read the paper some, and like especially to read the letters from the brethand sisters scattered abroad. Let all who love Jesus pray for us who do not understand your language, that we may have a desire to read our Bibles more. In the Bible we have a sure guide. Pray God to uphold his cause among us, that a good company here may be found ready when Christ comes.

From J. W. Thompson, Carbondale, Ill.

I want everybody to be looking for the coming of our blessed Savior. I have been trying to obey God for about twenty-eight years. Nearly two years since Br. F. Burr convinced me that I had not obeyed in baptism. Although a cripple I went to the water's edge on my crutches, gave myself into the hands of the brother and God. I am to-day strong in the faith of the soon coming of my Savior. I would like to do all I can to get every one to be on their watch, have oil in their vessels and their lamps trimmed and burning.

Unchanged, Though Long Absent.

In a man's training for eternal life, how much depends upon the state of the heart! There may be a mental perception of the pure and beautiful in the teachings of Christ, and a critical appreciation of the harmony of Christian doctrines as these are presented in the apostolic letters, without that clinging of the affections to the Savior personally which is, beyond doubt the surest test of discipleship. The "men in white," who stood by the "men of Galilee," as the ascending Redeemer disappeared from their sight, said not much, if measured by the number of words; but, judged by the vast interests involved in those words, they declared a double gospel which flashed gladness through the hearts of the disciples, and caused them to return from Olivet to Jerusalem with great joy. This is what they said: "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

The double gospel is, first, that he will come back, to "restore again the kingdom of Israel," and to do all the other glorious things which the prophets have assigned to him; and, secondly, that he will come back unchanged—"the same Jesus."

Are we then to understand that the meek, and gentle, and loving One, about whom the gray-headed saint delights to read, and the little child to hear, will, when he returns in all the splendor of his regal glory, be the meek, and gentle, and loving One still?

Have not the long ages, during which he has lived in heaven, where "angels and authorities and powers are subject unto him," wrought some change in the feelings with which he regarded the poor and the needy, when fishermen were his companions and poverty his condition? That is to say, will "the M[illegible]ght hand," when he con[illegible] the power to destroy his enemies, have the same heart that led "the Man of Sorrows" to pity the widow of Nain, and weep at the grave of Lazarus? Centuries of homage from beings of lofty position in a region of light and purity, supply a marvelous contrast to the scorn and mockery he suffered from official insolence and mob barbarism in the days of Herod and Pilate; but the thought of any change in him, as the result, or consequence, of such a wonderful change of circumstances, is simply distressing to those who love him. We can not bear the thought! It is the "Jesus" of the gospels that has won our hearts, and we want to see him! True, he will be in great estate, and we thank his Father and our Father for the fact, as it is impossible for us to honor him as he deserves; but his heart will love as in the olden time, and his voice, though we have never heard it, will fall upon our ears like some delightful strain of music with which we have been long familiar.

Prince Zaphnath-paaneah was an Egyptian noble of the very highest rank, gorgeously attired, with a gold chain about his neck, and blazing with jewels. No wonder that the sons of Jacob, who had traveled through the desert in very uncourtly fashion, in obedience to the old man's request—"Go again; buy us a little food"—were "troubled at his presence." And who has not been moved as the wonderful story unfolds itself? Beneath the splendor of princely robes the brother's heart is beating hard, yearning and throbbing with impassioned love to his brethren. The pent-up fountain refuses any longer to be sealed by courtly etiquette. The man is greater than the prince, the brother than the man. The ministers of Pharaoh are commanded to depart. He will be alone with the terrified travelers from Palestine; gracious tears came to his relief; and, with an effort that shakes his manly frame, he says, "I am 'JOSEPH'!"

Now this grand climax mocks that of the elaborate fiction, over which sentimental beauty, that has no practical sympathy with the real sorrows of men, has been weeping! But this story of antiquity is true, and its power to move the heart is not weakened by the roll of ages. Neither the violent injustice Joseph had suffered at the hands of his brethren, nor the honors to which he was subsequently raised, had quenched his brotherly affection.

Is there anything typical about this fine biography? At any rate, it is surely suggestive. Jesus Christ our Lord is the same yesterday, and today, and forever. "Unto him that loveth us"—the true reading—expresses the unchanging feelings of the Savior towards his brethren. He rests in his love. When his presence is manifested, they will be overwhelmed with holy awe because of his majesty and glory; but the evidences of his identity with the brother born for adversity will be so complete, that their joy will be full. Mistake there cannot be. No other can come in the glory of the Father and the holy angels; no other will seek to take us to himself, that where he is there we may be also; and we shall know him as surely as if we had been with him from the beginning. The faith and fellowship that imprint his likeness upon the sanctified heart at present will give the power of recognition in the glory, and we shall see, with love and joy, that he is the unchanged Redeemer, Friend, Brother, and Lord whom we now trust, follow, and adore. Those tender traits of character which endear the Christ of the gospels to every true heart will be radiantly conspicuous in the King of glory. So far from forgetting us, he is employed on our behalf in the heavens; and when he returns, it will be to carry out and complete his unchanged original purpose respecting us. The voice of the Shepherd, which we hear and follow in faith now in the mortal pilgrimage, will be the same voice which will thrill us with joy in resurrection felicity. Circumstances change fickle and fallible men, but they have no such influence upon him who is at once the Head, the Life, and the Hope of the redeemed. Blessed be his name forever!—Rainbow.

Our Young Folks.

The Infant Reasoner.

Willie was a very interesting boy of five years, fond of asking questions, or hearing stories—in fact, like all other children, fond of receiving attention—but, as a general thing, easily pleased, and in consequence, he wore a happy, sunny look, which made us love him. One evening, after he had left us with a pleasant "Good night," I was startled to hear him say in an angry tone:—

"I shan't say my prayers to you! I shan't say them to-night!"

"What are you saying, Willie?" said I, quietly entering the room. He hung his head; but when his naughtiness was spoken of, the pride of resistence, as well as the unsubdued passion of his heart was aroused, and he answered sullenly:

"I can't see God, and I shan't pray to him."

"Do you only love those you see?" I asked, in a tone of surprise. "Then you only love your father and mother, and little brother when you can see them; and when you go to your home, far away, you will forget grandpa and grandma, and all of us. That's great love, isn't it?"

"O, Aunt Effie, I don't mean that, you know I don't, for I have seen you all, and we can come and see one another. But I never saw God."

"Suppose, Willie, you had never seen me, and to-morrow morning your mother should show you a beautiful book, and say, 'Aunt Effie sent this to you,' and in the afternoon there should come a dear, kind little girl, who should say, 'Willie, your Aunt Effie sent me to play with you, and she sent these bright flowers, so that we can play Fairy Queen;'—would you not think at once, 'How good and kind Aunt Effie is!' and would not you love her?"

"O, yes, Aunt Effie; it would be so plain, I should know you were good."

"But God does a great deal more than I have said. He does send beautiful flowers, so that you can find them everywhere; He has sent you so many good, kind friends to love you and take care of you, that I should grow tired to name them all. Besides, he takes care of you in darkness all the night."

"O, no, Aunt Effie; mother takes care of me—because when I cry, she comes to me in a minute."

"Yes; but who takes care of your mother?"

"Grandma."

"And who sakes care of her?"

"Grandpa."

"And who takes care of him?"

"He can take care of himself! Why, Aunt Effie!—a great, big man! he knows just what to do."

"Oh, yes Willie—very easy it seems when all is still and quiet; but what if God should send the quick lightning to burn the house in the night, or if a fierce robber should come, or if he should grow very sick, what then? could your grandpa hold the lightning back in the clouds, or, while sleeping, keep the robbers from the door? You see, Willie, that if God, who made everything, did not take care of us nobody could."

"Well, Aunt Effie," urged the child, with an expression of intense interest, "I see God takes care of us; but you said he made everything, and I don't believe that. You said yesterday we should not say what we can't prove; and you can't prove God made this beadstead!"

"Who made it?"

"Why a man to be sure."

"What did he make it of?"

"Of wood; can't you see?"

"Yes, but where did the wood come from?"

"It came out of trees."

"That is right. Now tell me who made the trees grow, who made the man, and who gave him sense enough to make the beadstead, and I will tell you who made it."

"Aunt Effie, grandpa makes trees grow!"

"No Willie; grandpa puts the little trees in the ground, and waters them; he wants them all to live; but some die. Those trees which you helped him to plant to-day only took the place of trees he put there last year, but which did not live. If he could make them grow, would he have done the work twice in the same place?"

"Aunt Effie, I know something now! God didn't make grandpa's axe! You can't say anything to that! You can't say he did."

"Willie, what [illegible] the axe made of?"

"Of iron and wood. I know about the wood; but the iron, Aunt Effie, I think it isn't made at all!"

"Well, where does iron come from?" I asked.

"I can't tell, Aunt Effie: but it did'nt grow, and man didn't make it.

"No, Willie; it is in the ground. God put it there, and man finds it, all mixed with the sand. He first digs it out of the earth, makes it very fine, then separates the grains of the iron from the sand, and puts it in a very hot fire, where it is melted and runs altogether in a large lump. Then he hammers it to make it solid; and after all this work, it is ready to be melted, to be made into different things for us to use. Do you think now that God has nothing to do with grandpa's axe? He made all things; and, though you should try all night, you cannot think of anything he did not make."

"O, Aunt Effie, just let me get in your arms while we talk about the blanket. Can you make me say he made that?" "O, yes, easily enough," I answered. "The blanket is made of wool. God makes wool grow on the sheep, and gives man knowledge to make it into blankets."

"And did he make moonshine and flowers, and rain, and sunshine, and every little thing?"

"Yes, Willie. And will you go to sleep without thanking him for his goodness, and asking him to take care of you, and make you good, and keep us all safe and well, and happy?"

"Well, Aunt Effie, I will say my prayers; but I wish you would talk so to me every night when I'm not bad."

Years passed. We were again together and sat looking at some pictures, when Willie suddenly lifted up his earnest eyes to mine, saying, "Aunt Effie do you remember the night when I was a little fellow and wouldn't say my prayers, how you preached to me? I never remembered anything half so well."

At first I could not recollect; but by telling me what I had said, he recalled it to my memory; and I could not but feel, as I reflected upon his words, that the impressions we make upon the minds of children are more lasting than we imagine; After that early acknowledgement of God as Creator and constant benefactor, would that child become an infidel? Was Voltaire very far wrong as to the value of early impressions, when he said, "Give me the first five years of a child's life, and I will give you all the rest?"

The Helpless Victim.

I have read somewhere of an eagle in the far West. Soaring with steady wing, he saw far below him the grand scenes of American nature, clothed in the first snows of early Winter. As he rose higher toward the blue heaven, his keen eye saw floating on the distant river, whose margin was already frost-bound, the carcass of a huge buffalo. He paused in his upward flight; descended to settle and revel on this feast of corruption. He was borne calmly down the stream toward the fall of the rapids which lay below. Gorged with his foul meal, with drooping wing and dormant energies he slept on the fetid mass, and amid the oozing putrefaction. The blood, stiffened by the frost, bound his feet to the carcass; and onward was he borne until the roar of the cataract thundered on his ear. He struggled for liberty; his powers had been enfeebled with satiety; his drooping wings were bound to the frozen blood; his wild cries awoke the echoes; he made frantic attempts to throw off his horrid companion; looked up to the blue heaven he had abandoned. It was too late; hurried over the rapid, he was sucked into the boiling cataract, and dashed to destruction on the rocks beneath.

How does such an illustration find its analogy in human life! "His own iniquity," saith the Scriptures, "shall take the wicked himself, and he shall be holden with the cords of his sins." There is a deep and awful mystery in the downward progress of men, when he who was once the master of sin becomes the "slave of sin." Alas, there are scores of men in every neighborhood who would give all they have to begin life again. There was a time when they never intended to be vicious; but step by step they lowered themselves. Shame, truth, self-respect died. The lower elements of their nature first were freely indulged, then became importunate, then exacting, then domineering, then uncontrollable;

Dear young man, the pride of a mother, the hope of a father, with an intensity of yearning love I conjure you to pause ere you go into the way of sinners. If your feet have turned aside, retrace, I beseech you, your steps. Your strong "I will" now may, through God's mercy, turn you from the pit of infamy. But soon weaker will be your will, dimmer your sense of moral beauty, more desperate your passions, till at length you will feel bound, and then find yourself borne over the rapids a lost and helpless wreck.

A Child's Morning Prayer.

Many a Christian mother, who, at evening receives at her knee her little one, with folded hands and closed eyes, to say, "Now I lay me," before goinng to rest, has been puzzled to find an equally brief and suitable form of words in which to conduct the morning devotions of said little child. Possibly it would be a kindness to some such mothers if you should publish the accompanying stanza, which has done acceptable service in the circle where it had its origin in a mother's heart:

Jesus hear me while I pray
Please to take my sins away;
Make me gentle, make me mild,
Make me thine own little child.
Amen.

—Congregationalist.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, February 11, 1873.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.
Sent Three Months on trial for Thirty five cents.

The officers of the Association are as follows
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON,
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD,
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK,
Treasurer—AMBROSE W. TUCKER.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS,
A. S. CALKINS.
EDITORIAL COMMITTEE
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH,
A. E. BABCOCK.
BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications to Wm L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

☞ Make all Postal Orders and Drafts payable to him, and always state the amount of money enclosed plainly at the head of the letter.

☞ Give your Post Office address in full in every letter.

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for The Times, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions.

Business Department.

THE WESTERN RURAL.—To any one paying us $3.50, we will send the Western Rural, the popular and excellent Rural and Family Weekly of the West for one year and credit one year's subscription paid to our own paper. The Western Rural, alone, is worth $2.50 per year, and every family in the West ought to have it. [tf

The "Times" to Ministers.

We send THE TIMES to ministers of any denomination for one dollar a year—half price. Those who wish to send the paper to preachers can take advantage of this fact.

To Correspondents.

C. M. K. It is rather lengthy, but we may find room for it by and by. T. F. SARGENT. Thank you. J. S. AMES. Will help you if we can. A. TROWBRIDGE. There is no Adventist paper published in Rochester. R. ROBERTSON. Accept our thanks for mileage, paper, and list of subscribers.

Publishing Fund.

J Brown 50c; A Brown $3.00; H Zader 2.00; J Sloan 1.00; [illegible] 5.00; P F Lyman 1.00; E Churchill 1.00 C C Lindbeck 50c; C Ostrom 2.00, Mrs P Montgomery 50c, J L Rees 1.00; R Visser 1.00, B F Workman 1.00 P W Hask 15.00; I Boddy 3.00; P W Wexell 1.50; J Avenell 85c; Mrs M P Hinds 2.00; A T Rice 5.00, J W Hodgson 5.00; Jean Templeton 5.00; John Cochrane 21.00.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

I Boddy
W McCulloch
J C Shaw
J C Moulton
E E Parker
W E Brown
O D Benton
J Baxendale
G W DeLong
D O Amos
O Fields
J J Goyer
I P Thomas
C R Danks
P Wezell
E Green
E B Holmes
G Dyson
S Kail
J Avenell
S Record
J M Jewett
L Martin
M P Hinds
M J P Thing
W E B Curtis
C W Wentworth
C Ostrom
V Hunt
P Montgomery
S S Brewer
T A Watkins
E B Scott
S W Neff
J L Rose
H J Moss
W J David
F S Morgan
T Barker
B F Wakeman
J S Ames
P W Haskell
E C Brubaugh
L C Snow
J F Adair
S Baldwin
L Million
T Clark
M J Liddell
S K Pershing
J Hummel
E Kennedy
M Trask
F G Williams
S H Bently
J W Thompson
A Tyler
J J Goldsmith
S Baldwin
S P Whitney
T Sloan
W H Black
W Geddes
M Potter
M C Tice
P F Lyman
G M Meyers
S Combe
E Blanchard
W S Wood
W V Antwerp
E Churchill
J F Wilcox
S E Lindbeck
P F Willoughby
E H Berington
W Johnston
C H Sweet
A T Rice
S P Burnham
P Hitchcock
J Hutchins
A M Deely
E E Goff
M Perkins
H H Tooker
S Lamson
S Kelley
A Roth
W McCulloch
J Read
M M Caswell
G Moree
A A Votaw
L S Hulett
A J Cottrell
M J Liddell
J Dunbar
W H Helm
G L Teeple
I Hodgkin
P P Hollister
A Billings
P Landon
C Heller
F Pelton
H Wedding
J Hodgson
C W Turner
P Brode
J Stinson
P Hobart
F A DeWolf
A Trowbridge
J Brown
M A Durand
J Andrew
J Lowry
J Dresser Sr
J Hamilton
J Hayes
J C Smith
E E Sturgeon

Books and Tracts sent by Mail.

S Reimer
G D Glowes
A Lewis
R Beller
L B Noyes
S Colman
J C Thorp
W Siddall
T Gale
M J Short
J H Turner
T Allen
C C Marston
J N Adrian
R V Philip
H C Ward
W W Reddington
S Pope
J P Nicholson
J Taylor
A Curtis
S K Gibson
A C Spencer
T T Halstead
B F Retherford
C W Rider
C Church
W M Rankin
Dr Horn
J C Smith
B Thompson
J Russell
Eld Edminster
J Hamilton
J Dresser
J Kirby
M Banker
W A Durand
R P Amsdean
J W Ballard
A Poyen
R V Philips
S Fitch
I C Wellcome
O M York
S Baldwin
W Hoyce
P Shaver
W H Black
J W Thompson
J A Smith
J Massey
J Sloan
A W Ramer

Discussion.

I have arranged a discussion with J. H. Hanson, a Mormon Elder of Council Bluffs, Iowa, to be held in or near Amboy, Ill., commencing Feb. 26, and continuing eight consecutive week-day evenings, on two propositions, involving the nature of man, and the validity of Mormon revelations. C. C. MARSTON.

Obituary.

STRODE—In Ionia, Ill., Feb. 4, 1873, Mary Strode, aged 79 years, 2 months, and 4 days.

Her sufferings are past and she sleeps in Jesus. Words of comfort by the writer,

M. McCULLOCK.

CHAPMAN—Died in August last, at St. Paul, Minn., Miss Eliza Chapman.

No more faithful, devoted Christian lives than she was—an earnest seeker of truth, a close student. When sixty years of age she commenced the study of Greek, and continued it until she could read her testament in the original. Being a fine French scholar she was engaged the last few years of her life in translating Madam Guion's writings—having some five hundred pages—a most accurate translation. At the age of seventy-three she fell asleep in Jesus, saying, "Not my will but thine be done. For into thy hands I commit my spirit. Glorify thyself."

A. J. M.

NOWLIN—Fell asleep at Dearborn, Michigan, Jan. 21, 1873, after a long and painful illness, Malinda Lighte, widow of the late John Nowlin, in the 71st year of her age.

Mrs. Nowlin was an earnest and devoted Christian, and greatly beloved by all who knew her. Kind hearted to all, of a loving and most generous disposition, she became greatly endeared to a large circle of friends and acquaintances. Her surviving friends feel assured that henceforth there is laid up for her a crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous Judge will give her when he comes to make up his jewels. Eld. Asher Mathers, of Detroit, preached the funeral sermon. J. H. W.

Notices.

Notice.

At the last annual session of the Hoosic Valley Conference the following brethren, viz., R. H. Bateman, Gloversville, and Wm. A. Durand, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., and Dennis Sears, Savoy, Mass., were set apart to the work of the gospel ministry by the imposition of hands and prayer, and are commended to the faithful in Christ wherever their lot may be cast.
R. MOSHER, H. K. FLAGG, J. WILBUR,
Minis'l Committee of the Hoosick Valley Conf.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

New Rutland, Feb. 10-21 and longer as the Lord may direct. C. C. MARSTON.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Preaching in Advent Mission Hall, 619 West Lake Street, every Sunday 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening
D. R. & M. S. MANSFIELD.

Genoa, Oct. 27, and every other Sabbath until further notice. E. H. BURINGTON.

Forreston, Feb. 25, 26.
Ackerman, 11 a. m., March 2.
White Rock, 2:30 p. m., same day.
Rochelle, eve., March 2.
Creston, Reed's Hall, March 3-7.
Byron, March 11-15.
Elida, March 16. C. C. MARSTON.

Afton, 11 a. m., and 7 p. m., Feb., 16.
Squaw Grove, in the Methodist church, 11 a. m., Feb. 23
Eagle S. H., Sugar Grove, 2:30 p. m., same day.
Beemerville, 11 a. m., and 7 p. m., March 2.
C. W. SMITH.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.
Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.
Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co., at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.
Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S H 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.
ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Nov. 10, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.
Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Nov. 17 and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

Amboy, Lee Co., preaching the second and fourth Sundays of each month.
C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

MICHIGAN.

The next Q. M. of the Northern District of Michigan will be held with the church in Hesperia, Friday, Feb. 14, and over Sunday. Let there be a general rally. Bring your tithes and offerings into the store-house and obtain the blessing.
E. B. SCOTT, Sec'y.

To the churches in Branch County, Michigan, I would say that my appointments for the year 1873 will be as follows:
East Gilead, Jan. 5, 10 a. m., and every two weeks after.
California, Jan. 12, 10:30 a. m and every two weeks after.
Algansee, every Sunday 2:30 p m and evening. Prayer-meeting every Wednesday evening.
J. R. PRESTON, Pastor.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.
Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

The third Q. M. of the Southern District will be held in Rives, Jackson Co., commencing Thursday, Feb. 13, and continue over Lord's Day. A full representation is desired, and we trust that all our preaching brethren will be present. We cordially invite all who can, to come filled with the Spirit, and to work for the salvation of the perishing. Brethren will stop off at Leslie, where teams will be in waiting except on Sunday. C. FOX, Sec'y.

P. S.—All those coming by rail will stop at Leslie, on the Jackson, Lansing, and Saginaw Railroad. Teams will be in waiting on the arrival of all trains from Thursday noon until Saturday noon. Any one wishing to come on Saturday evening train will write to me at Leslie, and a team will be there to meet them.
C. FOX, Sec'y.

I expect the help of Eld. Geo. Wright in a series of meetings with the church in Almont, commencing on Monday eve., Feb. 17, and continuing as long as the wisdom given to us may dictate. We ask to be remembered in the prayers of the whole brotherhood in our efforts. We are seeking the salvation of our fellow-men.
JOHN H. PATON.

Lexington Lake Shore Advent Chapel, 3 miles north of village, Sabbath, Jan. 26, at 3 p. m., and every two weeks after.
Lexington Ridge, White S. H., Feb. 2, at 3 p. m. and every two weeks after.
Marlette, Advent Chapel, Tuesday and Wednesday eve. Feb. 11 and 12, at 7 p. m., and every 4 weeks till further notice.
GEO. WRIGHT. Pastor.

Elk Corner, Vancamp's Hall, Thursday eve. Feb. 13.
Fremont, Red S. H., eve., Friday, Feb. 14.
GEO. WRIGHT.

The third Q. M. of the Eastern District of the A. C. Conference of Michigan will be held with the A. C. church of Marlette, Sanilac Co., commencing at 2 p. m., Thursday, March 6, and continuing over Sunday.
Brethren come, as far as possible, and come to work. We earnestly hope this church will be prayerfully remembered, and the quarterly gathering will be a great blessing to them. They have a good and comfortable chapel, and we have reason to believe the brethren at Marlette will cordially greet all who may attend.
JOHN H. PATON, Sec'y

WISCONSIN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.
Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.
A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

Celaburgh, eve. Feb. 1, and once in four weeks.
Norris S. H., 11 a. m., Feb. 2, and once in four weeks.
Pine River, eve. Feb. 2, and once in four weeks.
ANSON BROWN.

La Crosse, corner of Main and Sixth Streets, Dec. 1, and once in two weeks. JOB BROWN.

MINNESOTA.

Ridgeway, Feb. 8 and 9, and once in four weeks.
P. MITSON.

Eagle Lake, Byers S. H., Thursday eve., Feb. 13.
Winnebago Agency, New S. H., Friday eve., Feb. 14.
Medo, Western S. H., Saturday eve., Feb. 15.
Medo, at Br. Bates' house, 2:30 and 7 p. m., Sunday, Feb. 16.
Owatonna, Fitzsimmons S. H., Tuesday and Wednesday eve., 7 o'clock, Feb. 18 and 19.
S. C. WELLCOME.

The third Q. M. for the Southern District of Wisconsin will be held at Montfort, Grant Co., commencing Friday eve., March 14th, and holding over Lord's Day. We hope for a general attendance of the brethren throughout the district, and the preaching brethren in particular are requested to be there. Let all come praying that the blessing of our heavenly Father may rest upon the meeting, and that much good may be done in the name of Jesus.
GEORGE HOWARD.

I will commence a protracted meeting at Big Creek, Sauk Co., Wednesday, March 5. Will the friends of the cause of our coming Savior come and help us by their gifts and prayers?
P. W. HOUGH.

A protracted meeting in Baraboo, Sauk Co., beginning Friday eve., Feb. 28, and holding over Lord's Day. All are invited to attend. Come and help hold up the truth in this place.
E. P. GRAVES.

IOWA.

We, the undersigned, members of various churches of the Iowa Christian and the Iowa Advent Christian Conferences, realizing the obligations we are under to God and his truth and his people, and realizing, too, that in our present divided condition we cannot possibly accomplish as much good as we might if all the elements among us were heartily united in concerted action and with undivided front, do hereby propose and call a convention, to be composed of two delegates from each church, to convene in the city of Manchester, April 15, to take into consideration the matters which now divide us, with a view to an arrangement which shall once more unite us in a single, undivided conference organization.
Signed:—T. E. Cook, J. Ingalls, J. Gildersleeve, Dr. Banton, and many others.

Preaching in Thompson's Hall, Delmar, Clinton Co., Jan. 5, and every two weeks until further notice. C. W. PITCHER.

Manchester, the first and third Sabbaths of each month, at 2 and 7 p. m.
J. RIDLEY, Pastor.

Q. M. of the First District of the N. W. Missouri and S. W. Iowa Conference will be held at Troublesome Creek, six miles east of Atlantic, Cass Co., Iowa, commencing Friday eve., March 14. Brn. Hubbell and Nokes will be expected to come and help at this meeting. We also expect Eld. Wm. McCulloch. This is a good field, and the truth has a firm hold. Come, brethren, praying and ready for work. WM. MURPHY, Sec'y.

Ronig S. H., near Milford, Feb. 2, and every fourth Sunday.
Waveland, Pottawatamie Co., Feb. 9, and once in four weeks.
Troublesome Creek, Feb. 16, and every fourth Sunday.
Hebing's S. H., Feb. 23.
Let the brethren circulate these appointments fully. WM. MURPHY.

The next Q. M. of the Southern Iowa and North Missouri Conference will be held at Corydon, Wayne Co., Iowa, commencing Feb. 22, and holding over Sabbath. We hope to see all the ministers belonging to this conference and others who can be present at our meeting. We cordially invite all who can to come and labor with us for the good of the cause of Christ. Br. S. K. Gibson is expected to be with us.
L. Z. LOTSPEICH.

Dudley S. H., Vernon Co., commencing Thursday eve., Feb. 17, a protracted meeting with lectures on the prophecies. Br. A. Foster of Sparta, will help. JOB. BROWN.

NEW YORK.

Saratoga Springs; meetings every Sunday in the Lower Town Hall, corner of Broadway and Lake Avenue, at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday School and Bible class directly after morning service.
Prayer meeting every Thursday eve., at the residence of the pastors, 213 Broadway, nearly opposite Town Hall.
WM. A. & M. L. DURAND.

KANSAS.

The Kansas Advent Christian Mission Association will hold its annual session at Bero, Cherokee Co., Feb. 10. Officers for the ensuing year are to be chosen, and other business of importance transacted. A general attendance is desired. T. BOZLEY, Sec'y.
H. J. MUNSON, Pres't.

MISSOURI AND IOWA.

The second Q. M. in District No. 2 of the S. W. Iowa and N. W. Mo. Conference will be held at Quitman, Nodaway Co., Mo., commencing Friday eve., Feb. 28 and holding over Sunday. Eld. Wm. McCulloch will be with us. A general invitation is given to all who love our Savior and his appearing. Come, brethren, to help us and cheer us with your presence.
JAMES C. SMITH, Sec'y.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Blenny St.
JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y. 337, St. Joseph St.

Advertisements.

List of Books, Tracts, etc., kept on sale at the Advent Christian Times office.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c. By D. T. Taylor.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—Unabridged, $5, by express. Condensed, sufficiently full for ordinary purposes, by mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures. With maps and useful tables. 48c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: with engravings, maps, and tables. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

BIBLE DICTIONARY: by Smith & Barnum. The best abridgment of Smith's larger work. Leather $6. cloth $5. By express.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $22 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDance. With Greek and English index. $3 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. $7 50. by express.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock, $2 50, Post-paid.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The Phenomena of Modern Spiritualism. By N. Field, M. D. 10c

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions to the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 50c. post-paid.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 45c, post-paid.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY of God; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 12c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble, 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC meetings. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 6c. a hundred.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; with a review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added History, Statistics and Tables. Cloth, $2; leather 2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By Wellcome and Good. 460 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATTHEW, 24 and 25, 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen. The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one adress, post-paid, for $4 00.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH; a history of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on earth during the past 2,000 years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth. $1

LAST DAY TOKENS: by S. S. Brewer. 35 cts.

FUTURITY; by Wm. Sheldon. 20 cts.

THE INDEX BOOK MARK; 25c a dozen.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. Nothing so good on this topic. Cloth $1. Paper, 50c. 3 copies for $1, post paid.

GOOD TIDINGS; a general view of Advent doctrine. By an Association of Authors. 428 pages. Cloth 65c, Paper 40c. Post paid.

THE NATURE AND DURATION OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT: By Henry Constable, Prebendary of Cork, 40c. Post paid.

THE FAITH OF ST. PAUL; showing it to have been neither Pharisaic nor Sadduceean, but Hebrew. By L. C. Collins. 10c.

THE STATE OF THE DEAD; a Discussion between N. Field, M. D. and T. P. Connolly, Esq. pp. 200. 50c. Post Paid.

THE JUBILEE HARP. $1. $9 a dozen.

HADES AND SHEOL; By L. C. Collins. The best published exposition of the parable of Dives and Lazarus. 10c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL; a choice collection of spiritual songs. Flexible cloth, 25c. $2.15 a dozen. Paper, 15c. $1.50 a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP; Cloth, 75c, Leather $1.

HYMNS OF THE MORNING; A new and rich collection. Cloth 50c. Leather, 80c.

SCIENCE AND THE RESURRECTION; By D. T. Taylor. 5c.

PAULS EARNEST EXPECTATION and hope; (Phil. 1: 21: 20.) By O. R. Fassett. 5c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings. 15c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT: containing the original Greek text of the New Testament with an interlineary, word for word English translation and a new emphatic version, 484 pp. Cloth $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

Bible Banner.—A Monthly Illustrated Journal, edited by John Couch, Wm. Sheldon, and A. A. Phelps. A book given to every subscriber paying the full subscription price. Specimens, with book lists, sent free. $1 a year. Address Bible Banner, 14 Murray St., New York city.

N. B.—THE ADVENT TIMES and Banner, one year for $2.50 if pre-paid. Address Wm. L. Himes, 25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1 00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Ablest Tariff Journal in the U. S.

The American Working People.

Published monthly, is a welcome visitor to One Hundred Thousand firesides. Finely printed, handsomely illustrated, ably edited—has no rival! $1.50 per year. Sent on trial three months for 25c.

The Iron World

Is the largest and most valuable Metal Price Current in the world. $4.00 per year. Sent on trial one month for 25c. All the State Geologists are contributors

Marion watches, fine silver plated ware, pen and pocket cutlery, and other desirable premiums to getters up of clubs for our monthly.
IRON WORLD PUB. Co.
—437. Pittsburgh, Pa

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Rich Man and Lazarus.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.

LOUIS REIMER,
1006 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

POCKET HYMN BOOK

With Music.

COMPILED BY CHAS. C. BARKER.

"Hymns of the Morning"
is for sale at THE TIMES Office, at the following
REDUCED PRICES:

Cloth Binding..........50c
Morocco "..........[illegible]

Sent postage free on receipt of price.

TWELVE COPIES FOR $4.75.

A liberal discount to agents.
This book is suitable for all religious occasions, containing the sublimest of religious songs, and the cream of musical composition.
For special terms for quantities, address the publisher, C. W. SARGENT,
Box 436, Concord, N. H.

☞ For sale at THE TIMES office, in large or small quantities.

HOW TO GO WEST.

This is an inquiry which every one should have truthfully answered before he starts on his journey, and a little care taken in examination of Routes will in many cases save much trouble, time and money.

The "C., B. & Q. R. R.," running from Chicago through Galesburg to Burlington, has achieved a splendid reputation in the last two years as the leading Passenger Route to the West. At Burlington it connects with the great Burlington Route which runs direct through Southern Iowa to Nebraska and Kansas, with close connections to California and the Territories; and passengers starting from Chicago on their way westward, cannot do better than to take the C. B. & Q. and Burlington Route.

This Line has published a pamphlet called "How to go West," which contains much valuable information; a large correct map of the Great West, which can be obtained free of charge by addressing the General Passenger Agent B. & M. R. R. Burlington, Iowa.

The Bee-Keepers' Journal and National Agriculturist, on trial, three months, for ten cents, or 13 months and best Bee-book, German or English, for $1. Splendid premiums for 1873. Movable Comb-Hives, Italian Bees, &c., for sale. Fifty per cent. and great inducements to agents.

Sample of Journal, "Hints to Bee Keepers," (a 88 page pamphlet) Price List, &c., sent free, for a stamp. Write now, and don't forget it. Address H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York city.

☞ THE TIMES and Bee-Keepers Journal one year for $2.50. Address Wm. L. Himes 25 W. Lake St. Chicago.

THE CHRISTIAN:

A LARGE, LIVE, MONTHLY, RELIGIOUS, Family Paper, containing anecdotes sketches, records of Providences and answers to prayer, true stories, poetry, music, etc. No sectarianism or controversy, politics, puffs, pills, patent medicines novels or continued stories, allowed in its columns.

Each subscriber receives a large and splendid Bible reader's map free. This map exhibits not only Palestine, but all Bible Lands. It is printed on a sheet, 22x39 inches, is beautifully colored, and contains:—

(1) View of the Land of Canaan, with its valleys, mountains, rivers and lakes, as seen at a glance from Pisgah, where Moses stood to behold it, before he died. (2) Jerusalem and its Environs, the holy places, valleys, streams, pools, "the mountains round about Jerusalem," etc. (3) St. Paul's journeys, and the world as known to the ancient Hebrews. (4) A view of Jerusalem, as seen from Olivet, where Jesus beheld the city and wept over it. (5) Map of Palestine, from Dan to Beersheba, giving the inheritances of the different tribes of Israel, colored separately. (6) Peninsula of Mount Sinai, and the journeys of Israel from Egypt to the Promised Land. (7) A Chart of the Seasons, months, productions, weather, and temperature of Palestine.

Besides all these, the map contains the ancient and modern names of all known places; the heights of the mountains; and references to the texts of Scripture where the different places are mentioned.

This map is given to subscribers for The Christian. Terms—in advance; with the map on paper, beautifully colored, One Dollar a year; with the map varnished and mounted on rollers, a Dollar and a Quarter.

Four copies of The Little Christian, a child's paper, to one address, sent at the same rate as one copy of The Christian.

Ten thousand agents wanted to get subscribers for this map and The Christian.

Honest, intelligent, energetic men, women and children, can have pleasant and profitable employment, without risk of capital. For specimens and instructions, address H. L. HASTINGS,
39 Hanover St., Boston, Mass.

☞ The Times and Christian one year for $2.40. With map on paper, $2.70. With map on rollers, $2.95. Address W. L. HIMES,
25 West Lake St., Chicago.

LIBRARY COPY

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.---NO. 29. CHICAGO, FEBRUARY 18, 1873. WHOLE NO. 460.

Advent Christian Times.

Contents of This Number.

First Page.

The Judgment at Hand. (fourth article—concluded,) E. C. Bronaugh; Imperfect Sympathies; Spasmodic Interests.

Second Page.

The Long Ago, (poetry); Spiritism in England, W. K.; The Captivity and its End, G. W. Bailey; Napoleon III.

Third Page.

Our Blessed Obligation; Premiums, C. W. S.; Do n't Spoil Your Beauty, Fanny Reynolds; Prayer and Conference Meeting, F. A. DeWolf.

Fourth Page.

Brief Editorials; A Talk about that "Debt"; Horrors of Theology; Uncertainties.

Fifth Page.

Editorial Gleanings; "Present Truth"; Sons and Servants; The Resurrection; Editorial Impersonality; News—At Home, Abroad.

Sixth Page.

A Religion of Faith; Preparation of Trouble; Sowing Seed by the Way; The Man of Charity; From Our English Correspondent; Letter from Thomas Sloan; From an Occasional Correspondent; From California, D. A. R.; From England, R. R.

Seventh Page.

From South Carolina, T. G. B.; Letters from A. A. Fletcher, N. C. Miller, Thomas Porter, A. Trowbridge, and E. K. Tibbetts; Mesmeric Power; On Slang; A Boy's Heroism.

Eighth Page.

Business Department; Obituaries; Notices; Appointments; Marriages; Advertisements.

The Judgment at Hand.

[Concluded.]

I have placed before the reader a few of the reasons why I believe our Lord's coming to be at hand, hoping with God's blessing to be instrumental in awakening you to investigation upon this most momentous subject, if you have not already satisfactorily considered it. Possibly the cause of second Adventists has suffered material injury from the over confident attempts of some of our number to arrive at the time, from a consideration of the various dates given in prophecy, when we are to look for these things to come to pass. The lapse of time has shown that many such writers were in error in their calculations and anticipations. But a careful consideration and comparison of several of those calculations made by more cautious minds has left its impression upon my own mind that such a remarkable approach to agreement amongst so many able chronologists is not without its meaning, and while I accept none of these calculations as probably entirely correct, I hesitate not to confess my conviction that the Lord's coming is at hand, although I know not the day nor the hour thereof. It is far from my purpose to impugn the motives or reflect unkindly upon the teachings of those who honestly differing from me may dispute these conclusions. But I do beseech not only such, but the careless and indifferent, to take heed that they be not deceived and taken unawares by the Master's coming, that they turn not away their ears from the truth unto fables (2 Tim 4: 3, 4), in the shape of fanciful theories of human progress and the triumph of the church over the world, but consider well the import of such Scriptures as 2 Pet. 3: 3, 4; 1 Tim. 4: 1; 2 Tim. 3: 1–6; 2 Pet. 3: 1–3; Jude 18, 19.

The inspired apostles looked only to the day of our Lord's personal return to earth as the day of the church's victory, and that blessed hope now almost entirely lost sight of by her, was to them a chief source of joy and object of anticipation as is evidenced by their frequent recurrence to the subject; as to which see Rom. 8: 17–24; 1 Cor. 1: 7–11; 6: 2; ch. 15; 2 Cor. 4: 14 to 5: 11; Phil. 1: 6; 2: 16; 3: 10–12; Col. 3; 1–5; 1 Thes; 1: 9, 10; 2: 12–19; 3: 13; 4: 13–18; 5: 1–11; 2 Thes. 1: 7–12; 2: 1–9; 3: 5; 1 Tim. 6: 12–19; 2 Tim. 1: 12; Heb. 4: 9–12; 9: 28; 10: 12 13, 37; 11: 39, 40; 12: 22; 13: 14; James 5: 7–9; I Pet. 1: 3–8, 13; 5: 4; 2 Pet. 3; 1 John 2: 28; 3: 2, 3; Jude 14, 15, 24, 25.

Such also was beyond controversy the faith and hope of the primitive church for more than two hundred years after our Savior's ascension to heaven, and it was only as corruptions began to creep in that this doctrine began to be lost sight of. During the long dark night of the Papal reign it lay buried in the hearts of a faithful few, to burst forth again in luminous clearness at the Reformation. About a hundred and fifty years ago Mr. Whitby led off in the modern new departure from the faith and the church alas, has followed to her undoing, until now that the Master stands at the door and knocks she lieth asleep all unconscious of the fact; and instead of proclaiming the day of the Lord's vengeance and the year of his redeemed as at hand, mistaken watchmen on the walls of Zion are soothing her fatal slumber with soft reports of "peace and safety," and delusive songs of a triumph that shall never be realized; proclaiming that she is "rich and increased with goods and has need of nothing;" whereas her Lord has declared that she is "wretched and miserable, and poor, and blind and naked." (Rev. 3: 17.) Oh! that she would heed his counsel and "anoint her eyes with eye-salve that she might see" him approaching, and prepare to receive him. E. C. Bronaugh.

Imperfect Sympathies.

If the world of society and individuals suffers from any cause, it is, from the inability to understand the minds of other persons, and to be understood by them. The "iron rod of persecution," has been forged and used, simply because persecutors have had no power to comprehend the motives and affections of others. The quarrels of lovers, and the alienation of friends, the irritations of personal intercourse, the readiness to receive affront,—all these, and the like, come from the same difficulty. Still more, the hostilities of the races, the prejudices of color, the pride of aristocracy, the envy which the humble feel, these, too, come from imperfect knowledge of other's thoughts and feelings. And international wars, if they originate often in calculations of 'self-interest on the part of rulers and those who aspire to rule—persons who would exempt themselves from all thought of other's interests—international wars are inspired by national acrimonies, which never could be known if American and English, French and German, could all understand how much nearer the tie of humanity is than that of nationality.

One that thinks of his fellows cannot help but muse at times over the individual consciousness they may have in their special vagaries, their follies and vices, their virtues and their greatness. Who would not like, as a mater of philosophical and religious interest, to enter at times upon the consciousness of some other person, if it could be done without intrusion? One might like to know, not by observation' not by information from another's acount, but by sharing in the consciousness of another, what the character was of the train of thought, train of motive, course of affection or passion, that led to a certain evil deed; how far the condition of mind may have been overwhelming; what possibilities of resistance were in operation; whether any sense of justice and right, however disturbed, was in action; how much the sense of wrong and guilt was felt, and how active, too, was the sense of remorse after the commission. We may presume that we should sometimes find a moral stupidity, that took no notice of good and evil, right and wrong, and placed the evil-doer in an analogous position, morally, with an idiot who could not count, and was unable to distinguish food from poison. And still would not one like to visit the consciousness of some of the greatly good,—to know how it is that superior goodness becomes possible to them and is evidently not their rule alone, but their instinct, also,—so that they do good often without being aware of it and cannot endure, or feel themselves entitled to, the praise of it, but are moved onward by some power not consciously their own? Just as the earth carries all of us around every day with its surface, and we never know at all that we are moved. There are many good deeds done, resolutions taken, elevations of character secured, all of which we greatly admire, sure of our own inability to do the like; and we may well wish that we could get a nearer survey of the internal operations of the mind and heart that has been equal to them,—and so near a survey as only consciousness could give.

By such acquaintance with the sentiments and the experiences in general of other persons, we should certainly learn much that would be of inexpressible value concerning our own individual selves. How the sources of sin would be revealed! How moral mistakes would get explained! How we should learn to distinguish in our own past conduct at times the inevitable from the obligatory,—the inevitable evil that belonged to our moral inability from the obligatory good which the imagination saw, the conscience approved, and the will was helpless to attend to! How, too, we should learn perhaps of an immensity of goodness, on the verge of which we forever lived, and which only needed the smallest possible action of faith on our part to make it possible to us, to be acknowledged by us forever as our duty to become forever our peace, and to seem to be forever our necessity!

The power of penetrating to the consciousness of others is given to us in various degrees. Evidently the kindly, the genial, the sympathetic enjoy the possession of it more than the cold, however accurate, however conscientious, these last may be. The leaders and organizers of men possess large degrees of it. And however large an intellectual power a man may possess, great ability for knowledge of history, political measures, relationship of nations to one another, and of subjects and goveroments or administrations, a man, in so far as he is destitute of the power of entering into the minds of others, is destitute of the power to lead them, to persuade them, to organize, or govern them. At least, a man is so destitute gets no willing subjects; he initiates no wise policies; he lays no deep foundations of power. Very different is the stolid admiration that gazes at the mere conqueror of men, from the love that follows the footsteps of the loving, and is the inspiration of fame for many ages.

Without irreverence, we turn to the great Master, and find one source of his power, which keeps alive his name and his authority in this, "he knew what was in man;" knew and felt. His language to the sin-struck woman, "Neither do I condemn thee; go, and sin no more," equals in our apprehension the sublimest that ever fell from human lips. And columns of our paper would n't suffice to enumerate, and dwell briefly upon the instances, where he shows he felt the sorrow and sin of others, and comforted, loved and forgave, because he saw the workings of the sin of the heart within. And ages, we may well believe, will pass away, and men will yet be learning from his divine instructions, how deep the human heart is, and how tender, how much it contains, and how great are its possibilities.—Christian Register.

Spasmodic Interests.

Nothing is more unreliable than popularity. Chrysostom, the golden-mouthed, died in banishment. The interest taken by the public is a poor test of the value of anything. The masses live in the present, and look only at the aspects of the moment, and then even they may take a wrong view. That which absorbs the nations may, indeed, be somthing of the higest importance. It may, or may not. But the oracles of the living God are infallible. Those who follow the sure word of prophecy as a light that shineth in a dark place, and who do so earnestly, intelligently, and persistently, cannot be misled by an ignis fatuus. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away; but the word of the Lord endureth forever.

We have been led to make the remarks by the perusal of an article in a late number of the Signs of Our Times Amid the general and amazing indifference of Christendom to the promised advent of the Lord, the churches of Great Britain have been, comparatively, more intested in the subject than has been the case in other countries. But it seems that there, too, there has recently been a change, and that in contrast to the previous condition, a spirt of indifference has come over many, and caused them to settle down in the belief that the coming of the Lord has ceased to be "a topic of present interest."

To us this is just what might have been expected. Fearful judgments, without doubt, are impending over Protestantdom, and England especially; the divine plan of procedure is, that judgment begins at the house of the Lord, and falls first upon the less guilty. Politically there is a great agitation in England; the oppressed agricultural laborers in nearly all the counties are on the eve of a general uprising for their rights. The Established church of England, divided into the Ritualistic, Broad church, and Low church parties, seem to be on the brink of disruption; and, wonderful to say, but in the direct line of prophecy, Popery bids fair to regain control of the land. The public papers say but little of these things. A correspondent writes: "Among all other classes there is restlessness everywhere manifest. Workingmen are becoming conscious of the possession of power, and though the masses are hardly enlightened enough to use it aright, there may yet be serious trouble here. The downtrodden and oppressed, feeling so long the yoke, may possibly go to the extreme, when striving to relieve themselves of its galling influence. The religious state of the country is not most encouraging; 'tis true there are great meetings held, large financial reports, &c, but little spirituality. There appears to me to be much coldness, stiffness, and formality. I notice a fearful lack of earnestness. I noticed a statement made by a man lecturing in Arincester sometime since, which read thus: 'Instead of preaching in simplicity and truth, the Ranters are running after the Wesleyans, the Wesleyans after the church, the church after the Pope." These statements occur among miscellaneous topics, and were made with no eye to their bearing on events of which our pages treat.

During recent years England has been specially favored with Advent teaching. She has had a special warning. And now the decline of interest arising out of the fact that the years 1866 and 1868, to which so much undue attention was directed, have passed by, tests whether the expectations of the Lord's nearing return were solidly and patiently based on his word, or arose from a mere ebullition of temporary excitement

We would say to our readers, that one thing is absolutely certain; the coming of the Lord Jesus is nearer than when our Serial was commenced, ten years ago; and if that coming was already in the apostles' days the true pole-star and hope of the church, the true ground of comfort in affliction, and the grand incentive to every Christian duty, how much more so now, after the lapse of eighteen hundred years, and when the signs of the times, which our Head and Master has bidden us discern, indicate in a manner constantly increasing and intensifying, that his parousia is near, even at the door!—Prophetic Times

A GENERAL denial of the reasonableness of all Christian doctrine—finds a shade of justification in the perversions which have grown into, and crusted over, some forms of popular belief. The pure and altogether reasonable "faith once delivered to the saints" has, unfortunately, become tainted, to a greater or less extent, on almost all points of doctrine, with an unsavory admixture of superstition, as unreasonable as the veriest scoffer alive. "Baptismal regeneration," for example, in all its modifications, from the bare materialism of out-and-out Ritualists to the undefined, half-sceptical "covenant sealing" of the evangelical Puritan, or the miraculous proprieties claimed by some for the eucharistic feast—what a fine basis do these afford for sceptical taunts! The "popular creed," so far as it consists in these and kindred superstitions, invites hostile criticism, because its professors cannot appeal in their defense to the only source of reasonable religious faith, in the Word of God.—Examiner and Chronicle.

The Long Ago.

BY BENJ. F. TAYLOR.

Oh, a wonderful stream is the river of time,
As it runs through the realm of tears,
With faultless rhythm and a musical rhyme,
And a broader sweep and a surge sublime,
And blends with the ocean of years.

How the winters are drifting like flakes of snow,
And summers, like buds between,
And the year is the sheaf—so they come and they go,
On the river's breast, with its ebb and its flow,
As it glides in its shadow and sheen.

There's a magical isle up the river of time
Where the softest airs are playing;
There's a cloudless sky and a tropical clime,
And a song as sweet as a vesper chime,
And the Junes with the roses are staying.

And the name of the isle is the Long Ago,
And we bury our treasures there;
There are brows of beauty and bosoms of snow,
There are heaps of dust—but we loved them so!
There are trinkets and tresses of hair.

There are fragments of songs that nobody sings,
And a part of an infant's prayer;
There's a lute unswept and a harp without strings,
There are broken vows and pieces of rings,
And the garments that she used to wear.

There are hands that waved when the fairy shore
By the mirage is lifted in air;
And we sometimes hear, through the turbulent roar,
Sweet voices we heard in the days gone before,
When the wind down the river is fair.

Oh, remembered for aye be the blessed isle
All the days of life till night—
When the evening comes with its beautiful smile,
And our eyes are closing to slumber awhile,
May that "Greenwood of Soul" be in sight.

—Sel. by C. R. Stouffer.

Spiritism in England.

Up to the present we have not heard much of this spasm of Satan. In fact it has been considered of so little importance that no respectable papers have made much of it. It has generally been thought to be some cunning tricks of ledgerdemain. But now it has assumed sufficient size and prominence to receive notice by the public press. The Times came out lately with a four column article on the subject. The Echo gives the theme one or two columns. The Rock makes a leader of it. And altogether we have been made aware of its existence.

The Times, on more than one occasion, has published reports of wonderful doings by this last phase of wickedness. And now it calls science to the rescue. It says it cannot deny or discredit the reports given, and it asks an explanation of the phenomena by the scientists of the day. The Rock commenting on this says: "We have reached a point when the investigation of the subject, however repulsive in itself, can, in the interests of religion and morality, no longer be safely postponed." It says of science that laughs at it and pooh-poohs it as a take in, surely folly can go no farther than to suppose that 'inner consciousness' can make a table talk or spin, or 'unconscious cerebration sustain Mr. Home in his aerial flights!" Putting aside the idea that these "tricks" are the same with those of an ordinary conjuror, it proceeds:

"To suppose that any mere "trick," with its thousands of practitioners and its millions of dupes, should have escaped detection for thirty years is an idea too preposterous to be seriously entertained. But, apart from jugglery, only two possible modes of accounting for the phenomena have been proposed: they must either be due to some undiscovered force in nature, or be produced by the direct agency of spirits."

Then it interprets the whole as the work of spirits, as follows:—

And here we would gladly let the matter rest, were it not for the conviction that, while Spiritualism is on all sides making the most alarming progress, its course can never be checked so long as our pastors and masters shrink from denouncing it is the hateful and accursed thing it really is. Even Mr. Dircks, evidently a shrewd man, has a remark in his letter that points to what we cannot doubt is the true conclusion, "for the spirits," says he, "if spirits they be, are just as likely to be evil as good." Sure we are that it is only by regarding the movement in this light that we shall rise to a true perception of its gravity, or succeed in unraveling its mysteries and complications. And now, addressing ourselves to those who receive in its entirety the teaching of God's holy word, we would ask why we should regard it as a thing incredible that the "unclean spirits" of whom Scripture records such fearful things, should again be busy among us at the present day? No doubt they were exceptionally active and aggressive during the period of our Lord's earthly ministry, in order that his triumph over them might be the more signally displayed. But although, after the establishment of Christianity, those overt manifestations of Satanic agency were for a while suspended, still prophecy leads us to expect their reappearance before this dispensation shall have run its course. Suce was the declared opinion of Professor Birks, when, more than thirty years ago, he published his famous book, The Elements of Sacred Prophecy. Ten years later Mr. Dallas avowed his conviction that the marvels of mesmerism, clairvoyance, electro-biology, and so forth, were a first instalment of the lying signs and wonders of the last days. These were followed by the loathsome epidemic of table turning and spirit rapping—practices known, indeed, in the days of Tertulian, and referred by that early father to their true source, though welcomed among ourselves as an agreeable pastime, until Mr. Dibdin and others lifted up their warning voices against them. From that time things have gone from bad to worse, until we have reached a pass when, under the name of "Mediums," the soothsayers and the wizards, and the necromancers of a former age, are again in our midst, and attended, as of yore, by their familiar spirits. They say, to be sure, that the spirits with which they deal are those of the departed, but Scripture laughs such vain inventions to scorn, clearly asserting, as it does, that the keys of death and hades are in the mighty hands of God's own Son. Is it not, therefore, rank blasphemy to suppose that—before the resurrection morning—he shall open the doors of their prison house in order that the spirits of the illustrious dead may serve the greed of a wretched necromancer, and answer questions at so much a head? And yet this is what the mediums tell us the spirits of Shakespeare and Milton, of Luther and Calvin, have already done! We have left ourselves but little space to discuss the literature, or the relations, or—if it be not a profanation to use the term—the religionof Spiritualism. In this department the trail of the serpent is everywhere apparent. Provision is cunningly made for those who, recoiling from Atheism or Materialism, and haunted by misgivings as to their future state, yet obstinately refuse to enter the courts of the living God. And not they alone, but all mankind—sinners and saints alike—are assured of everlasting felicity. Even that fearful scourge of humanity, the first Bonaparte, and those notorious infidels Voltaire and Tom Paine, are represented as already enjoying a good measure of bliss, with the prospect of large accessions yet to come. Such is the easy creed that these seducing spirits offer to their wretched votaries, now numbering we are told, some twenty millions of our species!

You will not agree with all the foregoing concerning living spirits in hades, but you will see by it what I wish to show you, and that is that Spiritualism is calling for dealing at the hands of English as well as American Christians. W. K.

The Captivity and Its End.

I find a defect in the argument of some in making up the chronology of the world of some two or three years. It is, putting the "first of Cyrus" as the third year after the fall of Babylon, which I think is really the third of Cyrus. I think I have Bible proof that the first of Cyrus is the first year after the fall of Babylon. And them that had escaped from the sword carried he away to Babylon; where they were servants to him and his sons until the reign of the kingdom of Persia." (2 Chron. 36: 20.) It would be a very singular statement to say that a kingdom reigned without any king on the throne. This must refer to the king of Persia, which was Cyrus. Notice. Their service was to last until the reign of the kingdom (king) of Persia. Notice again, that when we reach the end of their service to "him and his sons" we reach the first of Cyrus. Their service to his sons ended when the last of that race was slain at the drunken feast when Babylon fell. Then comes in the first of Cyrus. But some say they "served" Darius two years before the first of Cyrus." But that could not be, as he was not one of the "sons," to whom the service was to be given. We find by Jer. 29: 10, "That after seventy years be accomplished at Babylon I will visit you, and perform my good word toward you, in causing you to return to this place." What event marked the end of the seventy years when they were to go up? It was not said that service was to be more than seventy years. "And it shall come to pass when seventy years (service) are accomplished, I will punish the king of Babylon." (Jer. 25: 12.) "In that night was Belshazzar the king of the Chaldeans slain." (Dan. 5: 30.) That was his punishment, and that ended the seventy years. When the king of Babylon was punished, the seventy years had ended, for he was to be punished when they were accomplished. Some say the seventy years did not end until two years after the fall of Babylon. If that be so, then Darius must be the king of Babylon. And if so, how could he be for two years after the Babylonian empire had ended. And how, also, was he as the king of Babylon, punished at the end of the seventy years.

Daniel said he understood by books that the Lord would accomplish seventy years in the desolation of Jerusalem. The decree of Cyrus in his first year, in permitting the Jews to return to their land, must have ended the desolation of the land. Did their service last until that time? It did. In 2 Chron. 36 21 we find that the desolation and sabbatic rest of the land were of equal length; "for as long as she lay desolate she kept Sabbath, to fulfill three score and ten years." We are informed that this service was to be long enough to fulfill the word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremiah, until the land had enjoyed her Sabbaths."

Daniel made his supplications to the Lord, and dates that prayer in the first year of Darius. (Dan. 9: 1.) And it was in relation to the city, and sanctuary which was desolate. "O Lord, hear; O Lord, forgive. O Lord, hearken and do; defer not." (v. 19.) He must have been looking for a decree for that purpose. Then Gabriel informed him, and said, "At the beginning of thy supplications the commandment came forth.... Know therefore and understand, that from the going forth of the commandment." (v. 25.) When did it go forth? "At the beginning of thy supplications." When was that? In the first year of Darius. Now as the commandment was by Cyrus in his first year, it follows that the first of Cyrus and the first of Darius are the same year. Daniel said: "Thy kingdom is diivded, and given to the Medes and Persians." So Darius did not get it all. It was divided and given to two parties, Darius and Cyrus. Daniel saw a ram having two horns. That kingdom began and ended with two horns, for the rough goat "smote the ram and brake his two horns." But we are told that Cyrus was the higher horn and he came up last. But Daniel did not see a ram with one horn. History informs us that Cyrus became higher before he took Babylon, and that he gave to Cyaxares, his uncle (the Darius of Scripture), after the conquest, the city of Babylon as his portion. If that be so, it shows which was the higher horn.

But the only reason I have ever seen offered why the first of Cyrus was not the year following the fall of Babylon is this, that Cyrus and Darius reigned conjointly those two years, and that it must refer to his reign as sole monarch. But that would make a break, as no date is given ending with the second of Darius, to make up those two years in chronology. But if it can be shown that because he did reign with his uncle two years, that therefore he did not reign, then it might be shown that his first year was after he had reigned two years.

G. W. BAILEY.

Napoleon III.

AND THE SECOND ADVENT.

Perhaps no man has ever lived upon whose existence men have staked higher and lost more. Startling the world by his sudden accession to power glorifying his deed by at least outward success, dazzling the eye with surface splendor, winning from France an overwhelming vote of approval and confidence; and then, after years of secret preparation, with all the aids of science and art, no mean military prestige, and the enthusiasm of a nation behind him, he throws himself against the gates of United Germany, meeting instead of the marvelous success of his uncle, which very many had accorded to him in advance, utter rout and ruin; after the whole, he dies an exile like his uncle before him, and with him the star of his "dynasty," for the present at least, has gone down a second time in darkness.

But the heaviest losers in this "game of the emperor," are those enthusiastic, fanatical, though undoubtedly honest men, who have fallen into the error of interpreting prophecy in advance of its fulfillment, and have linked the name or dynasty of Napoleon with the closing scenes of earth's history. With them, he has been indeed the "Man of Destiny," the "Man of Sin," the "Antichrist," who should go on in an uninterrupted career of conquest and victory, till the whole earth should be practically beneath his feet, when, crazed by success, and lured on to final ruin by the powers of darkness, he should claim divine honors; and in his chosen place, Jerusalem the Holy, he should sit as the representative of God on earth, and worshiped by that nation who years ago rejected the true Christ, revered finally by the masses in all nations for his prowess in war, if for naught else, he should lay his hand heavily on all who did not own his sway, and thus become the representative of the Great Apostasy, the flower of earth's rebellion, the veritable antichrist who should rule the nations and waste the heritage of God, until finally destroyed in the great day of wrath by "the sword of his mouth," and "the brightness of his coming."

Such was the "manifest destiny" of this man. And volumes have been written, and thousands of predictions have been made, bearing on this point. His name—Napoleon—in Latin and Greek, has been dissected and reconstructed on mathematical principles into the magic number 666, which was to designate the name of a person or system prominent in Apocalyptic prophecy. His movements have been watched with eagle eye; success has shown his grand coup d' etat to be near at hand; failure has only meant a deepening of the plot, rendering success more certain in the end. His Mexican expedition was the commencement of a series of movements which should give him a foothold whence to dictate terms to the New World, where he would forge one link in that chain of fortresses which should enable him to enslave the race. His failure there was only a "change of base,"—a part of that grand, strategic move through which, some fine morning, as in France some years ago, we should find Monsieur standing before our door, chapeau in one hand, chassepot in the other, begging our pardon for the necessity he must impose on us of receiving on our foreheads, and in our hands, the "mark of the beast"—L. N. B., before getting his royal permission to buy, sell, or even live.

The treasures of gold were his, whence he could outbid all competitors, because Algeria was garrisoned with French troops. The French fleet was the largest and most formidable in the world. His navy yards, dry docks, arsenals, fortresses, were all unsurpassed. And that standing army, which was all this time sapping the national life, was invincible, armed as it was with those dreaded and mysterious weapons, the mitrailleuse and the chassepot.

And what he could not do by the arms of France, he would accomplish by an appeal to the democracy of the nations, of which he would make himself the champion and head, only to use it in the end for his own glory and the oppression of the race.

Men have proposed, but, as so often before, God has disposed. Perhaps he, too, had dreams as wild and hopeless as this, though it is doubtful. He has as least acted many times as though he recognized no possibility of failure. And this reckless spirit doubtless aided in his overthrow. But from a hopeless beginning in life, through a career of apparent success, he has at last failed in everything, and flatterers, adherents, and prophets are alike struck dumb. To this there is perhaps no parallel, except "to compare great things with small," in the history of Victoria C. Woodhull, as graphically delineated by T. Tilton, where we see her feeble beginning, her towering ambition, her certainty of success, and remember her cell in Ludlow Street Jail at the end. And in both these cases, one hardly knows which to marvel at most, the presumption of the heroes, or the stupidity of the prophets.

But what next? What will our friends do now? Will they acknowledge themselves mistaken, or await in silence some other coming man, or transfer the glory which should have been his, to his "dynasty," and wait for the Prince Imperial to work out the problem? If the last, will there not be need of a change in the time? How can a youth of seventeen be expected to fulfill so wonderful a destiny before the year 1875, or even 1880? Or will they throw up their cards, and let Napoleon and his dynasty disappear from the prophetic drama? No one who has not followed closely the development of the Napoleonic exposition of prophecy, can realize what a stupendous structure has been reared on this foundation. Throwing out the chances for fulfillment in the son, the whole thing is now seen to be a stupendous fraud. Will those who have given this theory to the world, and labored so hard to make men believe it, have the honor and courage to admit their mistake? As far as Napoleon III. is concerned, they are unquestionably wrong. Will they admit that much? Having great confidence in the good intentions of some of these men, and viewing them personally only as tried and valued friends, we cannot avoid hoping they will they will take the right course in this matter.

One thing is certain, at any rate; in one instance, at least, Napoleon is now known to have told the truth, despite his reputation for saying the exact opposite of what he meant, when he said to an English deputation that waited on him in Paris, "Tell your friends at home that I am not the Antichrist." This was considered by many at that time as proof positive that he was the Antichrist. Now we know he told the truth.

There is one lesson to be learned from all this, evident to every Christian who does not "make haste"; the danger of being too positive in regard to the plans and purposes of God in earthly affairs. The years of God have no end, and the fleeting days of man's life lie before him as a little point on the mighty cycle of eternity. The waiting and watching for deliverance seems very long to us, but we may see the day when shall wonder at our impatience. Good and wise men, eighteen hundred years ago, waited and watched for "his Son from heaven," and died at their posts; and we are commanded to do the same. It is a long time since then, and we sigh as we think of the anguish and sin that cover this rolling earth; but he to whom a thousand years are as one day, who comprehends at a glance the vista of the (to us) uncertain past, and more uncertain future, before whom all human distinction of past and future disappear in the limitless expanse of unending present, he knows best when and where to "make an end of sin," and "bring in everlasting righteousness."

Doubtless "the day of the Lord hasteth greatly." The stars above that seem so fixed that the eye fails to note the slightest change, are all circling onward with inconceivable velocity to keep their appointed places in the great year of God. But to us they move so slowly, that we grow faint as we try to grasp the time when that mighty cycle shall be completed.

So this work of adjusting the accounts, and settling the difficulties, and closing up the business of the world, is no small matter. Nothing but infinite power and wisdom could ever do it; and were we permitted to view the workings of God's providence from his stand-point, we might see that even the measureless resources and unbounded energies of this infinite Power and Wisdom are all employed in speeding onward the day of the "great assize,"—that day when God shall vindicate his ways before the universe.—Zion's Herald.

Our Blessed Obligation.

"How much owest thou unto my Lord!" (Luke 16: 5.)

A question put by a rogue may be put to a righteous man. There is no harm in the words as such. They are capable of application to a good as well as to a bad cause; and as they suit the train of thought into which we wish to lead the minds of our Christian readers at the close of another year, we have no hesitation in adopting them.

It is assumed that we are under obligation, that we know our benefactor, and that we readily acknowledge our responsibility.

The question as to the amount—the "How much?"—is not for us to determine. That must be left to each debtor's self-consciousness. If the principle of integrity be a part of his mental constitution, he will judge righteously. He will think, and reflect, and summon his private secretary, memory, to his aid. He will unroll a long list of mercies, deliverances, special providences, and gracious benefactions. He will think of what he might have been and done but for the long suffering patience and wonderful goodness of his Lord. He will see clearly without the help of a moralist at his elbow, that, so far as his native virtues were concerned, he might have been an outcast from society, a felon, doing slave work in a land of freemen, a blasphemer of the holy name, or a wild scorner of the words which God hath spoken to our fathers by the prophets, and to us by his Son. And he will feel, without enlarging the possible sphere of his reflection, that, but for protection of a wiser head and a stronger arm than his own, he might have been to-day among the dead whose lives were a shame, and whose death was demanded as the penalty of outraged law. The possibilities in the case of any man are limited only by the extent to which human nature can go in the line of iniquity. But let us relieve the dark back ground by brighter tints.

1. We are under obligation. It is out of our power to draw up a catalogue of God's favors. David says as much. "Many, O Lord my God, are thy wonderful works which thou hast done, and thy thoughts which are to us-ward: they cannot be reckoned up in order unto thee: if I would declare and speak of them, they are more than can be numbered." (Ps. 11: 5.) "How precious also are thy thoughts unto me, O God! how great is the sum of them! If I should count them, they are more in number than the sand." (Ps. 139: 17, 18.) But out of the numberless multitude of benefactions, stretching along the whole line of life from birth to the present hour, we may select a few, each of which, let it be remembered, includes many others.

You are a Christian—a disciple, a follower, a friend, a brother of CHRIST! How much owest thou for that? Is there any service that human power can render too great, any consecration of which mind is capable too earnest, as a simple acknowledgement of this holy privilege and distinguished honor? Think for a moment of the long antecedent processes of Divine thought and arrangement necessary before you could become a Christian,—processes which had their starting point in God's heart in eternity, and their goal in yours in the day of your regeneration; processes set in motion by the love of the Father, and carried to completion by the love of the Son, that you might become a son to that Father, and a brother to that Son. Think, too, of your condition when that love embraced you, and won you from alienation to reconciliation, from darkness to light, and from the slavery of sin to the freedom of sonship. Obligation! Who has the piercing intellect which can see it all, or the affluence of speech necessary to describe it? As we gaze upon it, it becomes larger and more luminous—grows, expands, brightens—until we are awed by its majesty and and dazzled by its brilliance. We think of a man who is a child of God, a temple of the Holy Spirit, and a co-heir with Christ; of a man who was mortal only, but who is now a partaker of that divine nature which only hath immortality; of a man for whom creation was created, redemption accomplished, and the Holy Spirit sent down when the Redeemer took his place at the right hand of the Father; and of a man whom nothing can hurt, even though he be hunted like a wild beast, persecuted to the death, and burnt at the stake; for the charter of his privileges assures him that all things work together for his good, that his life is hid with Christ in God, and that his resurrection to incorruptibility and glory is absolutely certain; we think of such a man as this, and we say, "Yes, he 'owes' MUCH!"

But as there is great diversity in the degrees of light enjoyed by the Christian household, we shall suppose you one of those who are well instructed in the ways of God in consequence of habitually "taking lessons" at the feet of Christ, the great revealer of the Father. We suppose this for the purpose of adding another figure to the sum of your debt. If a man has only just as much holy light as is sufficient to show him the way of the cross, his obligation is great; but when the Lord entrusts a disciple with truths that shed sunbeams on many things which, to the vast majority of believers in Christ, are clothed in darkness, it must be obvious that his indebtedness is wonderfully enhanced. As is midday to dawn, so is his light to that of his brother; and it is simply absurd to say that their responsibilities are equal. If you have received ten pounds, to bring the interest of five is not an honest way of dealing with our Lord's money. If you have light sufficient to enable you to detect, and, of course, reject, the heathenism, the corrupt tradition, and the false philosophy which have been through successive ages incorporated with the pure, living, sublime, Godlike truths of revelation, then you owe more than refined gold or costly gems can represent.

II. We know our benefactor. "What a source of thankfulness!" Yes, truly; but this is not the point just yet. What does the fact mean? This: that his character is wonderfully glorious in all that is admirable, loveable, pure, trustworthy, and beneficent; that, in consequence of that character, it is just as natural to him to become the benefactor of the needy as it is for the sun to shine; and that the ineffable majesty of the giver invests all his gifts with an unspeakable relative value in addition to their intrinsic worth. Relative value is something well understood by men. Let us give an illustration. It will be but a poor twinkling light, but it will reveal the thought. You have three gems in your casket of equal intrinsic value. The first you bought with your own money, and it represents the sum you paid for it. The second is the gift of a friend, and it represents, in addition to its actual worth in gold, that genuine friendship which gold cannot buy. The third is the gift of your sovereign, and it represents the high honor with which royalty condescended to invest you. Which of these three precious stones would you part with first, if the pressure of necessity demanded the sacrifice? You would not hesitate. That which your own earnings purchased would go for something better than itself—bread. If the necessity recurs, and there seems to be no other way of escape, you will take up the gift of a friend, and, with a sigh of regret, part with it. But the third must not, cannot, under any circumstances, be sold. Why? It is the gift of the highest personage in the State, the august ruler of the realm.

But what comparison is there between the noblest potentate in the world and your divine benefactor? Literally, none! "O God, who is like unto thee?" (Ps. 86: 10.) "Among the gods there is none like unto thee, O Lord." (Ps. 76: 8.) "Who in the heaven can be compared unto the Lord? Who among the sons of the mighty can be likened unto the Lord?" (Ps. 89: 6.) And not only is the giver incomparably superior to all other rulers; the gift he has bestowed upon you is, in itself, immeasurably more valuable than all the gold and gems of the world. You could not buy it with money; your dearest earthly friend could not give it; and royalty, so far from having it to bestow, needs it as a free gift from God as much as the poorest among men."

III. We acknowledge our responsibility. When the steward called the land owner's debtors, he said to the first, "How much owest thou unto my lord?" The prompt answer was, "An hundred measures of oil." Now here is the principle from which the grateful Christian serves his Lord—an honest recognition of responsibility. If we have not that as a living impulse, our service will be intermittent and sluggish. We have received much of heaven's most precious treasures: to prove our gratitude by telling others of the giver and the gift should be our unceasing effort. "Freely ye have received," is an indisputable doctrine; "freely give," is its corresponding precept. "Ye are bought with a price," is a divine truth; "therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's is the evangelical command to which it gives birth. And who but the recipients of the "unspeakable gift" can do, or are expected to do, the things here required? Of ungodly men the Lord expects no holy obedience. Neither God nor may gathers grapes of thorns or figs of thistles. But the Christian is under law to Christ—the law of redemption, of thankfulness, of love, of union, of life—and to him he looks for fruits of righteousness to the glory of God the Father. If the ransomed from a great and bitter captivity fail to honor the ransomer, how are those still in bondage to hear of his mighty deeds? If men who know God in Christ do not clear his supremely beautiful character from the charges brought against it through the incorporation of pagan cruelty with the message of divine compassion, when will the churches be delivered from the fearful dogma of eternal evil? If the sons of God are not benevolent, how is it to be known that their Father is good? If they are not loving, who is to prove that he is Love! If they are not pure, how are others to conclude that he is holy? and if they are in darkness respecting the grace that has come and the glory that is coming, who shall assure the world that he is light?

The truth is, that the gospel was intended to make us like God. It rescues that it may transform. The Redeemer is also the model, for he is the image of the invisible God. It will not do, therefore, to acknowledge responsibility with the lip, and deny it with the life; for the life is the true exponent of the character, nay, the life is the character. Here is the proof, if proof be asked: "As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him; rooted and built up in him, and stablished in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving." (Col. 2: 6, 7.) "We are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them." (Eph. 2: 10.) "Ye were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord; walk as children of light." (Eph. 5: 8.)

In a word, those who know the Lord are his witnesses. They are called to bear witness respecting him, not by doctrine merely, but by deeds. The world is quick at understanding deeds. It is a poor theologian, but a good logician. Let us therefore give our Master some interest for his money before he returns to settle with us. Let us live to him as we live by him, and scatter the good seed of the kingdom broadcast. Some of it will fall on rocks, and some among thorns. Let it! What have we to do with that? There is abundance of it! Keep scattering! Some of it will fall on good ground, and bring fruit to perfection. The Holy Spirit will see to that. Nothing can exempt us from the holy duty. We ought to speak more to our friends, neighbors, and acquaintances about the King and the kingdom; for the privilege of doing so is great, the time to do it in is short, the world is hastening to a pre-ordained crisis, and the church stands in need of light on the perils of the last days and the glory that is coming. The Lord help us all to lay ourselves and our services at his feet, for O! our debt to HIM is very GREAT.—Rainbow.

Premiums.

Our Editor somewhat ironically intimates he may yet have to "offer premiums" for subscribers. Will he be kind enough to let the following have a place in the TIMES 'just this once.' If it does not cure this disease of those of his readers who may have it, then I'll send him another dose for their benefit. But the TIMES needs money. Then open your hearts and open your pockets,—unlock the money boxes and GIVE, GIVE. AND IT SHALL BE GIVEN UNTO YOU. Do you believe the words of your Master, the Christ of God? DO YOU BELIEVE IN GIVING.

Now is the your time to give while the money is needed. Not wait unlil the Lord comes, and on reckoning with his stewards, find that you (Steward-reader) have hid your Lord's money away, pretending to return it to him at his coming. That is not the purpose he gave you the money for. He wants you to USE IT IN HIS SERVICE, and gain interest of an eternal per centum on it. Now is a good chance to lend your money on the Lord's, usury plan. But here is the dose; take it all at once, and let it work a cure of the lusting after premiums.

C. W. S.

PREMIUMS TO SUBSCRIBERS.

If one of our readers happen to reach the age of Methuselah, or even half that number of years, and thinks of taking a wife, he will doubtless be able to furnish his house at a trifling cost, by availing himself of the liberality of periodical publishers. By subscribing for the Family Philosopher he will obtain a commodious cook-stove; a year's tolerance (paid for in advance) of the Prophylactic Prognosticator will be rewarded by the gift of a black walnut bedstead; and the subscription price of the Epizootic Essayist will be returned to him an hundred fold in the shape of a set of parlor furniture. We thus vaticinate, assuming that the "premiums" business will maintain the same rate of growth through the next cetury or two as in the last half-dozen years. On reflection, we find our expectations too modest; if, at the present time, a "premium" is given nominally twice as valuable as the periodical which it accompanies, our descendants, two generations hence, may reasonably count upon a corner lot, or a thousand dollar bond, as an appropriate "inducement to subscribers."

This "premium" business is being, to use an inelegant phrase, "run into the ground." Thousands of periodicals are alluring subscribers by the promise of what seems to be three or four times their money's worth. They virtually say, as a fond mother says to her sick child, "If you will take this unpleasant medicine (our periodical) we will give you something nice (a premium). "They virtually confess that intrinsically their periodicals do not deserve support. Now no reasonable objection can be made to the principle of offering "inducements" to subscribers; it is the practice, as now prevailing, that we find fault with. A chromo which costs the publisher twenty cents, is imposed upon the subscriber as "a joy forever," worth three to five dollars; the latter is requested to believe that he is receiving twice or three times as much as he gives, and is really induced to part with his money by false representations. If the publisher would frankly say, "This chromo, which we distribute to our subscribers, costs us only twenty cents per copy, because we buy it in immense numbers, but its market value is three or five dollars," they would relieve themselves from the suspicion of unfair dealing, and enable their subscribers to enter upon the transaction fully informed.—Literary World.

Don't Spoil Your Beauty.

A beautiful countenance without Christianity amounts to nothing in my eyes; but a cheerful pleasant countenance lit up with Christianity looks very beautiful to me in the most homely face God ever made. And lately I have been wondering at the influence for good which cheerful Christians have had over me all my life, which constrains me to recommend a cheerful Christianity.

When seven years of age I embroidered in the center of a Sampler this beautiful verse:

"'Tis religion that can give
Sweetest pleasure while we live;
'Tis religion must supply
Solid comfort when we die."

I was only impressed with the truth of this verse by the happy countenance of a dear old lady which always shone like a sunbeam when she came to our house. Mother once asked her where she lived now? Her answer, with an expression of great joy, was, "Lord bless you child, I live next door to the Lord!" Ah, yes! That was the grand secret. And I have often thought she might have truthfully said, I live in the same house with the Lord. It is a true saying that we get more like the people we live with.

Some years ago I remember several prayer meetings being entirely spoilt in the estimation of a great many people on account of the gloomy appearance of the pastor who would come in, dump himself down into his seat, hang his head, and nervously stroke and pull his long beard during the meeting. It was not customary for him to do so, which made us feel all the worse. But the society were greatly involved in debt for their ornamental building and we were afraid that his mind was off in Doubting Castle bound by anxiety concerning the payment of that debt.

In a very warm discussion which took place where I was present lately I saw several Cain-like expressions pass over the countenance of a dear brother whom I had looked upon for some years as one of God's lovely ones; and as he laid his fist heavily upon the table in trying to gain his point, I felt very sorry and thought if he could only see himself in the glass, and know how soon he "Spoilt his beauty," I am sure he would have gone out and wept bitterly for dishonoring Christ in such a manner. If we cannot convince people of the truth with kind, loving words, be sure we cannot hammer it into them. Hammering only makes Christianity repulsive and unlovely.

A short time ago I was at a business meeting connected with one of the city missions, and in the very countenance of the sister who presided over over the meeting one could plainly read that her faith and humble dependence in God would overcome all the difficulties she would meet with in her mission. As I left that meeting I felt to carry with me some of that sweet Christian spirit which she manifested.

We are books, dear brethren, in large letters which can be read without glasses. O! for more of the love of Jesus in our hearts which will enable us to cultivate a cheerful Christian spirit.

"Nothing on earth do I desire
But thy pure love within my breast;
This, only this, will I require,
And freely give up all the rest."

FANNY REYNOLDS.

Prayer and Conference Meeting.

In going to prayer-meeting we should bear in mind the object of going there.

1. We should go praying; asking God to go with us, to fill us with his love, to bless us that we may feel his loving influence.

2. We should be "on time." If meeting is appointed a two o'clock, is our duty to be there at two o'clock. And not only on time to go, but on time in doing our duty while there. In looking over God's record we find that he was always on time in everything. When God said unto Noah, "Yet seven days and I will cause it to rain upon the earth forty days and forty nights" it was done just as he had said. And it is so every time that God says "I will do" so and so. The thing is done when he says it shall be. And if we love God and are followers of Jesus, and take him for our example, we should be always at our post. Never let our seat in the prayer-meeting be found vacant, but always be found in it at the time of the meeting.

The prayer-meeting is a place appointed for worship. Will we neglect that place for the purpose of doing this thing or that? Why, my dear brother and sister, that is where we get our strength: this makes us strong in the Lord.

Let us who are looking for Jesus attend to our earthly worship in such a way that we may know that God is pleased with us. Let us have our work so arranged that we can leave it, and leave the care of it at home, and then we can go praying, with the mind clear, ready to receive the blessing the meeting affords.

Jesus is soon coming to reward all men; and to those whom he finds to be lovers of God more than of the world will he give a crown of righteousness and an entrance into his glorious kingdom.

F. A. DEWOLF.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, February 18, 1873.

ONE of our Chicago dailies in a recent issue put forth this remarkably incongruous expression: It says: 'Dr. Rauch presented the weekly mortality report. It showed that one hundred and seventy-one had put on immortality, being an increase of thirty-six over the preceding week.' And to make the incongruity still more incongruous the entire paragraph was headed 'dead.' Persons who have 'put on immortality' are reckoned dead!"

IT is not only too true, as is charged by a late writer that 'we enjoy having a new name to admire and laud, and after a litle while we enjoy equally its depreciation and denunciation. We all seem willing to lift a person to a certain hight, and we relish seeing him there as long as we can delude ourselves with the notion that we aided to put him in the position. Hearing others extol him, we grow envious and cynical; fall to piercing with arrows of the tongue, and are delighted when he is down, never to rise again.'

DR. TRUE remarked concerning his opinion of the end of the wicked—'I believe that I have the right to qualify the dogma of eternal punishment as much as any other Methodist preacher or writer, most of whom have during my own day departed from Mr. Wesley's view of the endless literal fire torments of the damned, besides projecting their intermediate state into the eternal.'—And can any one denounce that reasoning as heretical? Has one no right to an opinion out of the popular current?

A FRIEND in Shelbyville, Ill., calls our attention to an obituary of a little child, published in a local paper of that town by a Christian minister, as follows:

> The little sufferer lingered through a four months sickness of infantile consumption, but patient hands tended him through the weary hours, and bore him lovingly down into the dark, still land of death. The mother with three other children have already gone before to the better land where: "safe from temptation, safe from sin's pollution," she may train up her children in the school of the Redeemer.

—The 'Better Land' is a 'dark still land' where spirit-parents teach spirit-children, in 'the great school of the Redeemer.' Ought not such inconsistencies to set the people to thinking?

J. B. OWEN, an able church of England minister, when once approached by some zealous partizan of "The Fathers" who would have their writings placed on a level or nearly so with the Bible, "The Fathers!" he exclaimed, "good men some of them, but misty; neither doth their testimony agree. Then they were such copious writers that a file of their works, placed side by side, would reach more than half way down the street! So that it would take the wealth of a Crœsus to buy them, the patience of Job to read them, and the wisdom of Solomon to interpret them, and the life of a Methuselah to get through them!" Nor had he greater respect for the living fathers of the ecclesia: "Won't do, won't do," he was heard muttering, as he listened one morning in evident distress to a sermon in his own diocesan; and that self-same evening, when it was his turn to preach, he coolly took the bishop's text, and, without a word of personal allusion, quietly overturned all the positions, and refuted all the arguments of his right reverend chief'

A TALK ABOUT THAT "DEBT."

Since issuing THE TIMES for January 28, in which we called the attention of our friends to the critical condition of our affairs, we have had somewhat to cheer us and strengthen our faith, which, again, on the other hand, has been sorely tried. At times we have felt that we could take the whole burden alone to the Lord and lay the case before him with that faith which

"Laughs at impossibilities,
And cries, It shall be done."

Again, as the winds and waves of circumstances and the elements interested have seemed to us boisterous, we confess to feeling something of Peter's doubts when his faith was tried by the storm upon Galilee, and we have to refer the matter back again to the Great Master whom we serve, saying: "Not our will, but thine, O Lord, be done."

We have looked the question squarely in the face, and are ready to meet the issue manfully. If it is God's will that THE TIMES should take a "new departure," in the sense of occupying higher ground, upon a broader basis, and with more liberal facilities than ever before, we look for him to stir up his people to furnish the means necessary to remove the weights that have so long encumbered us, and so set us free. If, on the other hand, THE TIMES has failed in its mission, been a cumberer of the ground, barren and unfruitful, and is fit only to be cut down, or made over into some other hands or forms, this, too, will be manifested in due time, and we shall cheerfully submit to the rulings of Providence. Meanwhile we are hopeful.

Among the letters received the past week is one from a liberal friend of the paper and the Association from their origin. He writes:

A MOVEMENT IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION.

Dear Brother:—I have witnessed for several weeks, with great satisfaction, the growing interest in the support of our paper and Publishing Association. I confess that my own heart has been more deeply enlisted than ever in its behalf. I seem to have awaked up as from a sleep to see and feel the great importance of our weekly paper. Why, what should we do without it, in this great West? I, for one, would feel lost without its weekly visits. And I am willing now, more than ever, to do my part to help sustain it, with the tract interest.

You truly remark that it is "the few" who have done most of the burden-bearing, where the many should help, and make the load light. I am still willing to help with only the few, but wish to act intelligently. Do I understand that if the call by Brother Johnson is fully met, and one thousand persons (or their equivalent) contribute an average of five dollars each, it will place the Association upon a self-sustaining basis, so that hereafter we shall not be called upon to contribute to pay its debts?

This is an important thought, partly for myself, and even more so to others, to whom it will give courage, and they will become "cheerful givers" if they can know that their gifts will effectually set the Association "upon its feet." Such a prospect cannot but give us all heart in the matter, and invite a general rally to do up the work. Please give us information on this point.

We are glad this question has been squarely put. Something over a year ago we set on foot a movement to pay up our debt. It was interrupted by our removal; yet in a few months we had paid over five hundred dollars of obligations which were drawing interest. Our removal, with its attendant expenses, settling in a new place, fitting up new offices, with other circumstances, compelled us to abandon the scheme for paying up the debt, while at the same time our liabilities were considerably increased.

But we have no hesitation in assuring our patrons that the sum of five thousand dollars would, beyond question, at least so far as human foresight extends, place us "on our feet," as our correspondent expresses it, and beyond the necessity of such appeals as we now feel compelled to make. None of us can foresee the future; but with our debts paid and sufficient cash in hand to enable us to take advatage of the markets in purchasing material of various kinds at cash prices, with the blessing of God, there would be no such thing as failure.

WHAT HAS BEEN DONE.

Before giving our readers any further correspondence on this subject we will give them some idea of what has been already done this year. Brother Johnson proposed to be one of one thousand to pay five dollars each to enable our Western Association to pay all its outstanding obligations. There have been received for this purpose:

L. C. Collins,	$50.00	I. Boddy,	$ 5.00
J. W. Graham,	40.00	Sundry friends in s'ms fr 25c to $4	54.00
J. Cochrane, (Scotland)	21.00	'Worcester'	10.00
J. Templeton	5.00	'Chicago'	5.00
S. Nye,	25.00	J. W. Johnson,	5.00
F. W. Haskell,	5.00	D. Q. Kent,	8.00
A. Y. Rice,	5.00	A. E. Rathbun,	5.00
J. W. Hodgson,	5.00	C. M. Shepard,	10.00

This makes a total of $298.60 at the date of our last issue. Since then we have received the following:

'New York,'	$100.00	M. M. Maxwell,	1.00
R. H. Evans,	5.00	J. A. Churchill,	1.00
G. W. Place,	5.00	J. G. Junk,	2.25
J. Spanton,	5.00	F. Van Velzer,	1.00
S. Doolittle,	5.00	W. E. Hathaway,	2.00
'New Haven,'	25.00	C. M. Shepard,	10.00
A Friend,	.30	C. Crawshaw.	2.00

We have also a pledge of five hundred dollars, to be given to the Association provided the full amount of five thousand dollars proposed by Br. Johnson is raised. It will thus be seen that nearly one-fifth of the sum asked for is already subscribed or paid in—not, to be sure, exactly in the manner proposed by Br. Johnson; but we presume he did not mean to exclude those who could not give five dollars, but whose offerings must be in smaller sums down to twenty-five cents; and still less to prevent any who feel inclined to give ten, twenty-five, fifty, one hundred, five hundred, or a thousand dollars, from doing so. Every cheerful giver is heartily welcome, be his gift large or small.

A Minnesota brother writes: "Times are not very easy; but you must have money or the work cannot go on. One dollar will start another; and I send mine with one more given me by a good sister to use in the Lord's cause. I trust the appeal made will meet a general response."

A Nebraska brother, who has never failed to help us in time of need, promptly responds as one of the one thousand, and characteristically assures us he is ready to do more when that sum is raised.

A friend in New York sends us a draft for one hundred dollars, and says, after forbidding the use of his name in connection with his generous gift:

> "I am only sorry that the amount cannot be thousand instead of one hundred. I have for a long time been deprived of the privilege of aiding any in the work going on, and it has ever been a sore trial to me. For some reason God has apparently hedged up the way. But I have tried to suffer it quietly if not patiently. And God knows that I have tried in all to say, "Thy will be done." If in his mercy to me he gives the means hereafter, his and our cause will hear of it if others do not. But if God otherwise directs, then I will quietly remain in seclusion.
>
> I do wish God would put it into the hearts of those to whom he has intrusted means, to come forward and clear this establishment of debt and place it in free working order. But he knows best. He doeth and will do all things well. God uphold you in his mercy and grace, is ever my prayer.

Thousands are now seated over against the treasury, watching with varied emotions the gifts thrown in. Some are hopeful, others despondent. Some are waiting to see what will be done, others prefer to offer first their own gift, and then watch the movement. With us it is an anxious hour. We await the manifestation of the will of God in the action of his people.

HORRORS OF THEOLOGY.

At different times we have published extracts from the horrible Romanist tract called "The Sight of Hell," by Rev. J. Furniss—fit name for the author of such diabolical ideas. At the time we supposed that nothing equally disgusting had been issued from the modern Protestant press. But lately our attention has been called to an article in Vol. 18, No. 1 of the Living Christian, (Free Methodist Organ), by a person who claimed to have just received the blessing of sanctification, which equals in horror (though its notions are not so grotesque) the vaticinations of the Roman priest. After detailing how she was frightened into the love of God, (for she says she did not yield until, in her vision, the flames of hell "touched her feet,") she relates a vision of heaven—a "large square room," with angels with snowy wings," "all singing" and "playing on harps," etc., etc. Then she descended to hell, which she describes as follows:

> There were millions of people weeping, and wailing, and gnashing their teeth, in the lake of fire and brimstone. There were a great many souls in heaven, but they were few compared to the vast number that were groaning in hell. Everything was dark and gloomy. The fires did not light up the darkness, as earthly fires do. Neither did they look like earthly flames. There was as much contrast between them, as there is between natural fire, and water. They were of a dull, dingy, red color, and thick with brimstone, which looked yellow, and the smoke which ascended from them was blue and black. The flames were of enormous size, and the whole scene was hideous and frightful, beyond description. I saw all classes of individuals there except Christians. Among them, I saw backsliders, sinners, dancers, fiddlers, blacksmiths, grocers, merchants, cold-hearted professors of religion, and preachers. On every one's forehead was written, in large, black, capital letters, what he was on earth. The letters were so large that they reached from the hair down to the eyebrows. On backsliders it was written, BACKSLIDER, on sinners it was written SINNER, etc. Every one was encircled in flames, and there was a look of pain and anguish on every face. There were places like aisles in a church, and the devil was in spirit in every aisle, compelling them to do whatever was their business upon earth. The air was thick with flames, and the spirit of the devil. There I saw a merchant measuring off yards of goods. He had no customers, but that made no difference; he had to keep at work as fast, and as hard as he could; and such a look of distress was stamped upon his features, while the horrid flames encircled him, and upon his forehead was written, MERCHANT. He had stood behind the counter, until he was so tired he could hardly stand up; but he could never stop. There he must remain in that awful torment forever. I saw the grocer, weighing out groceries; and he, too, had the mark upon his forehead, and was enveloped in flames. And then I saw preachers, preaching and talking as fast and as loud as possible. But pen cannot describe the anguish they were in. They had made a lie of their profession while on earth, and now they were reaping their reward. Blacksmiths were pounding hot iron, and they were in flames, themselves. And there were the dancers, dancing in the flames of hell.—They had danced, and danced, until they were all tired and worn out; but he could never stop. There they were, and there they must remain to all eternity, in terrible sufferings. There were the fiddlers, all seated on a long, black bench, playing on large, black violins, each one encircled with flames. All classes looked tired, and were writhing in extreme agony.
>
> Some of the people were in more torment than others. They were all judged according to the deeds done in the body. There was one class that was in greater torment than any of the others. They were so enveloped in flames that I could see only part of them. Sometimes I could see their heads, sometimes their arms, and sometimes their limbs. I was not permitted to know what class they were. Perhaps they were Infidels, or Spiritualists, or something of that sort. But whatever they were, they were writhing in the utmost agony.

—She afterwards relates a supplementary visit to heaven, and closes with the following assertion:

"And here my vision instantly passed away, and I came back to earthly scenes again. And I knew that I was sanctified; for my soul would not have been pure and spotless, if I were only in a justified state."

—We leave these notions of justification, sanctification and the future punishment, without comment.

UNCERTAINTIES.

Some attention is being directed to the time of the beginning of the Jewish war. It is painful to see the difference between the statements of different historians, and the consequent uncertainty.

Eld. L. T. Cunningham, in the Crisis, in answer to Eld. J. S. White, gives the reckoning of Dion Cassius, as below. I put the statements of Josephus opposite:

	Dio.	Josephus.
August's' r'n	43 yrs 11 ms 4 d.	43 y. 6 m. 2 d. Ant. 18:2:2
Tiberius' "	22 " 7 "	22 y. 5 m. 3 d. Ant. 18:6:10
C. Calig's "	3 " 10 "	3 y. 8 m. Ant. 19:2:5
Claudius' "	13 "	13 y. 8 m. 20 d. Ant. 20:8:1
	81y. 4m. 4d.	81y. 5m. 25d.

In the first three reigns above, Dio is three months in excess of Josephus, but the last almost makes up for this. Not one statement agrees with the others of the same reign. Both, as I understand, compute the reign of Augustus from the battle of Actium; and that is fixed by an eclipse as the 2nd Sep. B. C. 31. The death of Augustus is also fixed by an eclipse, as Aug. 19, A. D. 14. So from the battle to his death is 44 years, minus 14 days. Both are in error, or reckon from some event after the battle.

Adding Tiberius' reign to the established date of the death of Augustus, brings us to March 23, A. D. 37, according to Dio. Josephus reaches only 22 Jan. Hales says he died March 16, 37. In War, 2: 9, 5, Josephus makes his reign a month longer. (Whiston's, Edinburg, 1828.)

From Dio's end of Tiberius, his period for Caius comes to 23 Jan. 41. From Hales' date, Jan. 16. 41. Josephus, from his own date, his own length of reign, Sep. 22, 40. Hales' date is 16 Nov. 40.

Next is Claudius. Dio gives him only 13 years; this added to his previous reigns, from the death of Augustus, comes to 23 Jan. A. D. 54. From Actium, all the reigns as given by him, 6 Jan. 54; as given by Josephus, 27 Dec. 53. Josephus, corrected by the date of the death of Augustus, and taking his period (13 y. 8 m. 20 d.) of the reign, 12 June 54. Dio says he died Oct. 13, while his own date from Actium brings 6 Jan. If we might add 17 days to his account at the death of Augustus, which the date of the eclipse requires, and 8 m. 20 d., to this reign, from Josephus, we would have exactly 13 Oct. 54, for the date of his death. We certainly cannot go back to a previous Oct. when Josephus gives him 8 months and 20 days longer reign.

Then it is probable that Nero's reign began on 13 Oct. A. D. 54. If that was his first year his twelfth would begin on Oct. 13, 65, and end Oct. 13, 66. The Jewish war began in the twelfth of Nero, second of Florus, seventeenth of Agrippa, in the month answering to our May and June. (Jos. Ant. 20: 11: 1; War 2:14: 4.) It must have been May—June, A. D., 66, even if his reign began as early as June 12, Josephus' date corrected as above.

Jerusalem was taken in A. D. 70. This is said to be fixed by an eclipse at Rome the year before. The sacrifice ceased the middle of July, the city was taken in the beginning of September. The temple was burnt the beginning of August; and from about that time 7 years and 5 months reach back 4 years before the beginning of the war. (War, 6: 5: 3.) May—June, 66, is thus the date of the beginning of the war, both by the story of the man who cried, "Wo! wo!! to Jerusalem," for 7 years and 5 months, and began 4 years before the war began, and was himself slain towards the end of the siege; and by the sacrifice ceasing "in the midst of the week," or 7 years' war, which ended by the taking of Masada, about the beginning of April. (War, 7:9: 1,) A. D. 73. (Usher.)

Again, the title of Book XX. of Jos. Antiquities says it contains "the interval of 22 years, from Fadus, the Procurator to Florus."

We think he means to include the government of Florus till it ceased by the beginning of the war, from what he says in the last chapter.

Fadus was appointed after the death of Agrippa, who reigned three years after Claudius succeeded to the empire. (Ant. 19:8 [illegible] was thus appointed in [illegible] llus, which was 44, as his [illegible] 'The interval of 22 years" added to 44 gives A. D. 66 for the beginning of the war.

So far as I see, the probabilities are all in favor of A. D. 66, yet there is some uncertainty arising from the conflicting statements of authors. But we find nothing in favor of A. D. 65 as the commencement of the Jewish war. Eld. C's article, before referred to, starts with an arithmetical error, 13 for 14, and is in reality an argument for A. D. 66. However, Eld. Grant's "computation" arrives at the same result as Eld. C's erroneous one; but as the elements of it are not given, we cannot be sure but he has some greater light on those times. We think we may say the true date of the war, and, consequently, of the 2300 days, is to some extent an uncertainty. A. A.

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

Brn. Smart and Cumins are having an interesting meeting at Grant, Mich Four have been baptised, and seven united with the church.——The proposed debate at Medora, Ill. has fallen through. No representative man among the Baptists could be found to meet Br Whitmore.——Br. J. Ridley has just spent a week with the Elk Creek church with good results. All are encouraged, and prejudi[illegible]eated away from some hearts.——[illegible] A. Cargile of Alabama (Baptist [illegible]ried for heresy the last week in th[illegible]. Of course the heresy is "the way [illegible]ll heresy," but which we advocate as truth.——Br H. G. McCullock is moving to Afton Center, Ill., and will serve the church there this year. His P. O. address will be still, DeKalb, Ill.——Brn. J. F. Adair and S. Baldwin have been holding meetings in Decatur, Iowa, resulting in the organization of a church with thirty-seven members, mostly heads of families. The answers to prayer were marked and convincing. Br. Adair is an effective worker, as his lists of new subscribers show——We are informed by good authority that Free Methodist minister of St. Louis, Mo. has adopted Advent views of the state of the dead, the inheritance, future punishment, etc. There are indications that he will be served as one minister in New York proposed to treat Dr. True. In ancient days they called it 'casting out of the synagogue.'——Br. Wm. A. Fenn has been laboring in Norwalk, O. We only hear that the results are good.

"Present Truth."

OR "MEAT IN DUE SEASON."

This is a little work on prophecy and chronology by Br. Jonas Wendell of Edenboro, Pa, setting forth the end of this age, this present year—1873.

A Br. in New Jersey has put in our hand seven hundred and fifty of this pamphlet for distribution, and requests us to say, that if any have not the means to pay postage or expressage on what they can prudently use, he will pay it for them, i. e. they will be sent free.

If the demand for these warrant it, he will gladly provide for a thousand copies more.

Send your orders to this office.

Sons and Servants.

[From "Solomon's Temple Spiritualized," By John Bunyan.]

As the trees were to be felled and stones to be digged, so there were for that matter select workmen appointed.

These were not of the sons of Jacob nor of the house Israel; they were the servants of Hiram, King of Tyre, and the Gibeonites; namely, their children that made a league with Joshua in the day that God gave the land of Canaan to his people. (Josh. 9: 22, 23; 1 Kings 5: ; 2 Chron. 2: 28.)

And these were types of our Gospel ministers, who are the men appointed by Jesus Christ to make sinners, by their preaching, meet for the house of God. Wherefore, as he was famous of old who was strong to lift up his axe upon the thick boughs, to square wood for the building of the temple, so a minister of the Gospel now is also famous if much used by Christ for the converting of sinners to himself, that he may build him a temple with them. (Ps. 7: 4, 5, 6; Rom. 16; 7.)

But why, some may say, do you make so homely a comparison? I answer, because I believe it is true; for it is grace not gifts that makes us sons of God. Gifts make a minister; and as a minister one is but a servant to hew wood and draw water for the house of my God. Yea Paul, though a son, yet counted himself not a son, but a servant, purely as he was a minister—a servant of God, a servant of Christ, a servant of the church, and your servant for Jesus' sake. (Tit. 1: 1; Rom. 1: 1: 2 Cor. 4; 5.)

A man then is a son as he is begotten and born of God to himself, and a servant as he is gifted for work in the house of his Father; and though it is truth the servant may be a son, yet he is not a son because he is a servant. Nor doth it follow that beause all sons may be servants, therefore all servants are sons; no, all the servants of God are not sons; and therefore when the time shall come he that is only a servant here shall certainly be put out of the house, even out of that house himself did help to build. "The servant abideth not in the house of the Lord forever;" the servant, that is, he that is only so.

So, then, as a son thou art an Israelite; as a servant, a Gibeonite. The consideration of this made Paul start; he knew that gifts made him not a son. (1 Cor. 12: 28—31; and 13: 1, 2.)

The sum, then, is, a man may be a servant, as he is employed by Christ in his house for the good of others; and a son as he is a partaker of the grace of adoption: but all servants are not sons; and let this be for a caution and a call to ministers to do all acts of service for God and his house with reverence and godly fear; and with all humility let us desire to be partakers ourselves of that grace we preach to others. (1 Cor 9: 25.)—Sel. by A. Armour.

The Resurrection.

In our investigation of this subject thus far we have confined our observations to the principal words used by the sacred writers, and from them have drawn the conclusion that the New Testament teaches the doctrine of the reanimation of our bodies in their essential identity. We say nothing as to any particular theory of such a resurrection, limiting ourselves to the simple question of a corporeal resurrection. We now proceed to some of the compound words used, and we anticipate a similar result to that reached in our previous investigations. The inquiry still is, what changes do the sacred writers predicate of the dead, of our dead bodies, in the hereafter, and that with special reference to what is known as the resurrection of the dead? We think it will not be disputed that the raising up of Christ has almost invariable reference to his resurrection, or the reanimation and standing up of his dead body. The only exceptions are such (Acts 3: 22. Rom. 15: 12.) as can be easily distinguished. The exceptions here noted are in the use anisteemi, while in that of egeiro the reference to Christ's physical resurection is, if anything, more clear and invariable yet. Besides in egeiro we have such expressions as these: "The dead are raised up" (Matt. 11: 5), with reference the literal, miraculous raising of the dead bodies; "The bodies of the saints which slept arose" (Ibid 27: 52), a phenomenon that was witnessed after Christ had suffered on the cross; "As touching the dead, that they rise" (Mark 12: 26,) and many similar ones. Now if any of the apostles should use egeiro to predicate a change in Christ's dead body in such a way as to show that he unmistakably meant what we call the resurrection of Chist; and if then without pausing he should predicate a similar change by the use of the same word, of men in general, or of saints in particular, would we not err in understanding the last predicate differently from the first? There seems no reasonable doubt. But this is what Paul does when he says (1Cor. 6: 14,) "And God hath both raised up the Lord, and will also raise up us by his power." The only difference in the words is that the first is simply egeiro, as Christ's body was not in the earth, and could not be raised out of, but only up; while the second is exegeiro, our bodies being after death in the the earth, and so require a raising up out of. We have then, in this use of a compound word, in the connection in which it stands, a striking proof of the resurrection of the body.

We now turn to another class of words simple and compound, which the apostles use to express a change which is to pass upon dead men. "The dead" is an expression that can rarely be misunderstood in the New Testament. The passages in which it does not refer to what in present common use is meant by it are so rare as not to at first suggest themselves. "Let the dead bury the dead," is the only palpable exception; in perhaps every other instance the reference is to men in a state after physical death. Now when it is said "the dead" shall be raised up, it can only mean what is meant when it is said of Christ, who was dead, and of "the dead," that he was raised up, or made alive. "Raising up," and "making alive," when the reference is to "the dead," are mutually equivalent. But is it ever said that the dead are made alive? So we understand the sacred writer. It is said (John 5: 21) that the Father raiseth up and quickeneth (maketh alive) the dead. And Paul, as Meyer well says, gives as the solemn charecteristic of the omnipotent God the phrase, The-Maker-alive-of-the-dead. (Rom. 4: 17.) The apostle, with profound penetration, sees the wonder-working power of Jehovah, which raises the dead to life, forshadowed already in the promise of Isaac. Hence further on (Ibid. 8: 11) he says He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also make alive your mortal bodies. The use of mortal and especially also (or better even) fully justifies the reference here to physical death. Even those commentators, (Calvin, Stuart, De Wette, et al,) which think the first reference is to something which takes place here, are also of the opinion that the words indicate the commencement of a work which will only be completed at the time of the literal resurrection.

Once more: We have several times taken occasion to show that the dead in opposition to the resurrected are emphatically the prostrate, recumbent ones; they are lying down, the living are standing up. Hence the words used to express the reviving of a dead man are such as we have had under consideration, which nearly all mean simply a standing up or getting or rising up. If, therefore, it is ever said of "the dead," in the New Testament, that they stand or stand up it is the same as to say they were raised, resurrected. In the Revelation of St John "the dead" are said to "stand before God," and to be given up by the sea, death and hell. The unrevived physically dead are nowhere regarded as standing. It is a virtual contradiction according to oriental conceptions to so regard them. And it is a position that at least cannot be successfully disputed, that our word die or dead, the Greek nekros (dead,) and words in other languages come from radical obsoletes that mean to become prostrate, to fall down, etc. So we have regarded "the dead" all through these articles; and so those must regard them who have respect to the power of correlative words.

The argument as thus presented is somewhat new in form, and is, we think, calculated to meet the vague objections which are at times thrown out against the doctrine of a literal resurrection. It might be developed to much greater length. We might especially refer to such texts as declare directly that a change shall be effected in "these vile bodies," but forbear. Should, however, our position be called in question we are prepared to answer objections, which we can in the main anticipate as likely to be made.—Church Advocate.

Editorial Impersonality.

It is not well for a public journal that its chief strength consists in the circumstance that one man, however able and eminent he be, is the power by which it is supported. This is seen in the case of the New York Tribune, as it has been in many preceding instances. The cases are numerous where the decline and final death of a paper resulted from the withdrawal or decease of an eminent editor. A celebrated name may for a time be of immense advantage, and so its withdrawal may be attended with untoward results. Multitudes of readers probably supposed Mr. Greeley wrote most of the articles which appeared as what was termed "editorial;" whereas had his pen been withdrawn for a month or more—as it occasionally was—they would have discerned no difference. So much for a great reputation.

Hence it follows that newspaper property should not depend, for permanent value upon any one man. In England they practice differently from us. People there neither know or care or care to know by whom a newspaper is conducted. It is all anonymous work, certainly so in journals of firm standing and ability. Here it is not uncommon, especially in the country, to print the name of the editor in a conspicuous place every week; as though it were a matter of any public concern who writes for the paper, provided, always, it be well conducted. The columns of such papers as the Tribune, Herald, Times, and Evening Post, are filled every day by the labor of several writers, and so of journals in other great cities. Probably the Tribune will have on its staff as able writers as money can procure, and perhaps, the paper be well sustained by the public; but the decease of Mr. Greeley will inevitably, for a time affect it. But New York is a great city, the Tribune has a national reputation, and in all probability will hold on its way and be a power in the land. The fact that fifty shares were sold a few days since for half a million dollars shows that there is too much property at stake to be lightly regarded by the share-holders, and that the very best talent will be employed the establishment affords.—Concord (N H) Daily Monitor.

The Times.

AT HOME.

" " " The literary critic of the Boston Globe says he has "sometimes thought that, to a few clergymen, the desire to get into the newspapers during life was almost as strong as the desire to get into heaven after death."

" " " The latest developments concerning J. T. Curry's movements would indicate that he is more knavish than insane in his claim to be 'the Elijah' that was to come. His Georgian colony is now broken up and he himself is in jail.

" " " Latest advices from the fruit regions of Michigan and Southern Illinois leave no doubt that the recent extreme cold weather has killed nearly all the peach buds. Our prospect for peaches the present year is very discouraging. Some varieties of grapes are reported to have been also killed.

" " " The dispatches published the morning of Feb. 10, tell the stories of six murders that had been committed in various parts of the country within the preceding forty-eight hours. The deplorable fact is that crime of all kinds is unprecedentedly prevalent at the present time, with no obvious hope of abatement.

" " " The profits on Ames' contracts for building the Union Pacific Railroad, as divided, were $29,854,960, and on the Davis contract, $7,802,135, or over $37,000,000, which were stolen. The government subsidy was $27,000,000, which, it will be seen, was wholly appropriated by the Credit Mobilier ring.

" " " The American Missionary Association state that their receipts for the last three months of 1872 were less by $9,281.66 than for the corresponding time the year previous, and there is danger that their work among the Freedmen may be crippled on account of the lack of funds.

" " " The Chicago Interior was started three years ago with a capital of $50,000, which was sunk during the first year. Last summer it was transferred to Rev. B. W. Dwight, LL. D., on the simple condition that he would assume the payment of the debts, which amounted to $10,000. But he found the load too heavy for him, and the paper has now been transferred to Cyrus McCormick.

" " " The criminal condition of New York, and the popular alarm thereat, may be understood by the appearance in Friday's Tribune, of that city, of the following paragraph, printed at the head of the column and in double leaded type: "Three new murders since one o'clock yesterday afternoon! A jealous husband wreaking his vengeance on his wife, a hot-headed boy killing his playmate after a childish quarrel, and a laborer brutally assaulting another in Hoboken—such is the startling array of crime for the last twelve hours. Where is all this to end?" Within forty-eight hours after this was published, there were two additional murders in the vicinity of New York.

" " " The Missionary Herald states that the field of Christian missions in what is distinctively known as the heathen world embraces a population of 700,000,000. Of these seven-eighths are attached to one or other of the three great systems—Mohammedanism, Hindooism and Buddhism. The first as yet relatively untouched, still pushes its proselytism in Africa, and everywhere stands as a barrier to the Christian faith. In India even university graduates celebrate the degraded rites of Hindooism. And Buddhism, with its 300,000,000 votaries, has hardly been touched by Christian influences. The Herald draws the conclusion that there is great deal of hard work to be done yet.

" " " It is time that this farce of investigations and trials should cease. We would even say that it would be almost advisable in the interest of public decency, to say no more about them. Not but that it is well to unveil infamy and punish crime; but as infamy is not punished when it is discovered, and as crime raises its head higher according as it is exposed; justice is only a mockery, the laws a dead letter, the courts a theater bouffe, and public punishment a mistification. If we had only one example made! But no, not one! No more in Washington than in New York. It has been sufficiently proved that members of Congress have sold their votes and committed perjury, and still there is no perspective of punishment.—Courrier des Etas Unis.

" " " Gloucester, Mass., is a dealer in fish, and has a clergyman, Rev. Mr. Emerson, who understands the fish business. On a recent occasion he preached a sermon to the fish dealers, in the course of which he said: "How happens it that herrings caught on the coast of Maine become Labrador herrings on touching the hands of some Gloucester dealers? How does it happen, too, that Bank codfish, worth $5 per quintal, become transformed—changed in the twinkling of an eye—to George's fish, worth fifty cents more? Can any one here tell me how these wonderful transformations take place?" It is not related that any of the fish-dealers answered this practical question, but the question does not lose its force nevertheless, and suggests a very valuable hint to other ministers in the matter of plain preaching. Would it not be well for some of our city ministers to institute some inquiries with regard to business, as for instance: how No. 2 barley becomes No. 1; how Jersey cider becomes sparkling Mumm and Dry Sillery; how turnip becomes horse-radish and turmeric becomes mustard; how smelts become sardines; how brass becomes gold, and oak leaves become tobacco? There are plenty of men in every congregation who are competent to explain these and numerous other transformations of articles of raiment, food, and drink, and a little plain preaching on these practical business matters might do as much good as long and turgid discourses on doctrinal theology, which does not concern any one in this world, or the next either. —Tribune.

ABROAD.

" " " A late census gives Brazil 10,000,000 of inhabitants.

" " " The Levant Herald shows that Russia has a large navy in the Caspian sea—some fifty vessels.

" " " The Emperor William of Germany fosters in the officers of his army that feeling of honor which insists upon dueling between conflicting persons. It is stated that he compelled several officers of a Polish regiment to resign for having agreed not to fight duels with each other in any case.

" " " "Corners" are institutions known even in Persia, but the descendant of Mohammed now ruling that country has a way of breaking them at once novel and effective. He cuts off the heads of the leading operators and gives away the commodity they would have sold at too high a profit.

" " " Spain has turned another leaf of her political history. Her Italian born king, Amadeus, found the cares and perplexities of his new realm were but poorly compensated by the honors it afforded. He has abdicated, unconditionally, and returned to Italy, while Spain has been declared a republic. Whether there is sufficient virtue and intelligence in the people of that destracted country to permanently maintain republican institutions, there is large room to doubt. What with priestcraft, and the ignorance and superstition born of Papal domination, we can hardly hope for Spain a different political future from that typified in the Mexican and South American republics: confusion, anarchy, and rapidly succeeding revolutions.

" " " Among other innovations which the Emperor of Japan has made, in assimilating the customs of that country to those of Europe, is one with reference to the days of the year. According to an Imperial order, recently issued, the 1st of January, 1873, was made the first day of the first month of the 2533d year from the accession of the first Mikado. A holiday is also to be kept on every seventh instead of every fifth day, and the division of the day hereafter will simply be twenty-four hours, instead of twelve stated periods of two hours each. The 25th of December (Christmas), is to be held sacred to the memory of Zimmu Tenno, the first Emperor of Japan.

" " " The London Times of January 25 says: "Except for the purpose of holding Persia within her grasp or invading Afghanistan, Russia can have no motive in overrunning the vast steppes of Southern Khiva or exploring the passes of Badakshan. Now, inasmuch as neither of these results could be attempted without the certainty of a rupture with Great Britain, it is both politic and straightforward to point this out amicably and in good time. Among the indications of the Queen's speech to Parliament is that the Anglo Russian question will be settled without bloodshed. The object in view is to fix the boundary line of the northern frontier of Afghanistan, so that the question may be definitely disposed of for some time to come. The Queen announces that correspondence looking at such a settlement has already passed between the two Governments, and it will be the universal hope that amicable adjustment will be the result.

" " " All the nations of Europe have now either withdrawn their support from the church or rid themselves of the dynasties which were in most intimaterelations with the Pontiff. Ferdinand, of Naples, Isabella, of Spain, and Louis Napoleon are driven from their thrones or dead. The Dukes of Parma, Modena, and Tuscany are swept away. Austria has gone back on all her concessions. And Rome is now the seat of Goverment of the House of Savoy. Kaiser Wilhelm and Bismark have expelled the Jesuits. In Italy the deepest hatred prevails between the Church and the State. Victor Emmanuel, it is true, desires to be relieved from the sentence of excommunication, and he wants the Pope to accept the do tation voted by the Italian Chambers. But public opinion has secularized the revenues of the church, and it has extinguished monastic houses.

The Italian Senate has recently forbid theologic instruction in the public schools. This action of the Senate is notable for the reason that it proves that Catholicism is no longer the ruling power in its old stronghold. Contrast this state of things with the educational condition of Catholic Italy twenty years ago, and what a change!—Baptist Weekly.

" " " A new phrase of the Eastern question is likely to arise, growing out of the recent announcement of the Sultan of Turkey that, during his absence at the Vienna Exposition, he will leave Youssouf Izeddin Effendi at Constantinople, and, before starting will proclaim him heir to the Turkish throne. The law which has regulated the succession to the Turkish crown for the last 500 years, has been that the crown passes to the eldest male of the Imperial family whose father was on the throne at the time of his birth. The present Sultan, Abdul Aziz, ascended the throne June 25, 1861, on the death of his brother, Abdul Medjid, although the latter left seven sons. The present Sultan has four sons, the eldest of whom, Youssouf Izeddin, was born Oct. 9, 1857, and consequently, under the operation of the law, was not on the throne. The people declared that the lawful heir is Maured Effendi, elder son of Abdul Medjid, who was born while his father was on the throne, Sept. 21, 1840. This view of the case is also taken by the old Mohammedan party, who claim that any other interpretation would be a violation of the Koran. The proposed action of the sovereign is based upon a scehme set on foot by the Court party to introduce the European plan of succession, and make his eldest son the heir. The question is creating great excitement in Turkey, and may yet seriously affect European diplomacy with regard to the Eastern difficulty, especially as there is a well-grounded fear at Constantinople that if the Sultan carries out his proposition, the princes of Servia and Roumania, the Khedive of Egypt, and the Bey of Tunis may seize the opportunity to declare themselves independent, rather than acknowledge a Sultan unlawfully placed upon the throne.—Chi. Tribune.

The Christian Life.

A Religion of Faith.

Not many miles from Boston, in a conferrence meeting, one evning, a pastor remarked to his people, "You may imaine that one who has an emotional nature like mine, believes in a religion of feeling. No; I believe in a religion of faith;" and then in his usual clear, childlike, simple way, he proceded to unfold and develop the idea.

A religion of faith! How many professing Christians posses it? There is a religion of feeling, of work, of idea, of action; but of simple faith,—a "taking God at his word," and resting therein and thereupon, how many possess it? Yet it is the great lack and need of the church to-day. It is for want of this that she is crippled in her energies, that she is blind, and lame and halting, that she does not move forward steadily. Muller, Dr. Cullis and others have done a good work in this direction, viz., strengthening the faith of God's people, and showing them the sin of unbelief.

Is not the pastor's thought worthy of consideration? Will not God be glorified, his son honored and souls saved by cultivating more simply a religion of faith? Such a religion is not mere assent to the truth, but such a belief as works by love, and has an outgoing, not only of rest, peace and joy, but of holy living and good works.

Preparation for Trouble.

Surgeons regard the life of the body as thrown into the greatest peril by wounds received upon a full stomach. So misfortune is most likely to work with evil effect against the life of the soul in the case of those who, when the stroke falls, are found pampering themselves with worldly affections and worldly indulgences. The soldier suffers physical injury with least risk, fasting; the Christian with least risk encounters temporal reverse, having kept back his feet from pleasure, in all questionable forms for the sake of virtue, in many lawful forms for the sake of abstinence—the great safeguard of virtue. Let us detach our hearts more and more from the things of this world—let us undo link after link of the habits which, with no special choice of our own, throw us, as it were, into their arms. If we quaff less from this fountain, we shall be less tempted to impatience, rebellion, and selfish, carnal grieving, should bitterness mingle with its waters, or drouth cut them off. Making God, in a higher degree, our portion and our joy, even while worldly things are in our hands, we shall diminish beforehand the power of the blow that strikes them from us, to overwhelm the soul with sorrow or betray it into sin.

Sowing Seed By The Way.

One morning as I was coming into New York on the Hudson River Railroad, I was attracted by the conversation of two gentlemen on the seat immediately behind me. At length one said to the other, "There are three things which all men desire, wealth, happiness, and long life."

Turning to them I said pleasantly:

"Gentlemen, I possess those three things."

They seemed a little surprised, and looked inquiringly at each other and then at me. Encouraged by their looks I proceeded:

"As to the first, I am one of the wealthiest persons in the world, for I have Christ and having him, I possess "all things." As to the second, I have found the secret of constant happiness, for "I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content," and as to the third, no one can live longer than I, for I have everlasting life in Christ my Savior.

They did not seem disposed to question what I said. But I could not fail to feel grateful that I possessed what all men need and are seeking, wealth, happiness, and long life. Reader have you got them?

"The Man of Charity."

Giles Tillman, one of the martyrs of Brussels, may truly be spoken of as "the The Man of Charity." Though possessed of a private fortune, he adopted the trade of a cutler, in order to gratify his love for work and his desire to do good. Every farthing he could spare he gave to the poor. He kept a baker, a shoemaker, a tailor, and an apothecary purposely to assist him in his ministrations among the needy. His house was always open to strangers and to the sick; he even visited persons ill of the plague, and while tending their bodies, he did not neglect to make known to them the Word of God. During a famine he sold a property by auction, and employed the proceeds in maintaining a large number of persons who would otherwise have been starved. But the curate of the church of La Chapelle denounced Giles as a heretic, and he was thrown into prison. He was condemned to death, but there was great danger of the people, by whom he was enthusiastically beloved, taking up arms to prevent his execution. It was therefore decided that it should take place at an early hour in the morning. On seeing the preparation for his martyrdom, the intrepid man exclaimed, "Why do you collect such a needless quantity of fuel for burning me? Have compassion on the poor, who are dying of cold, and send some of this wood to them." After having offered up a prayer, he took off his shoes, and besought them that they, too, might be given to some poor man. Then they set fire to the wood; he was burnt to death, and his ashes were cast into the river. But it is written in the Word of God, He who loseth his life for my sake, shall find it; and again, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Correspondence.

From Our English Correspondent.

The servant of the Lord Jesus Christ does not find it the easiest thing in the world to till the soil of the human heart. This intelligent "earth," which God commands to hear his Word, we are constantly finding to be closed against the reception of the truth. So is it in England. While some, and very few, are willing to listen to the Word of the Lord, others close their eyes and ears, and call for their favorite ministers who will preach them dreams out of their own hearts and visions of their own heads, and pamper their love of ease, pleasure, and carnality.

I think you know the society who call themselves the Evangelical Alliance. Well, according to their annual custom they issued their prayer syllabus for the second week in January, and desired Christians of all denominations to join them in petition. Of course, they are so very orthodox that if only a breeze of heterodoxy (so called) should have blown on one, he is not permitted to join them. Last week the denominations of the town met together, according to the will of man, to pray for what this Alliance directed. Everything was very decorous and pious. What was said was probably said sincerely; but oh, the darkness! The consummate ignorance of Christians, so called, is truly heart-painful, But on whom does the responsibility rest? In a great measure on the ministers, who, if they taught them out of the Word of the Lord, would lead them into a better, nobler course of action. But not altogether on the ministers, on the people, also, who are so foolish as to be led by the blind.

My heart has ached of late for the world's prospect, and the dealing they will receive at the hands of Christ. I go sorrowing for their condition. I wish I might be the means of saving some, but I fear that they are so huddled together in fancy and dream that truth has become distasteful.

I attended one of the prayer meetings—the one for the world's conversion. I can scarcely say how I felt. I know I was confused, ashamed, and pained. I really felt like praying God to give them a new mind.

Of course, I had no opportunity to speak, or I should have spoken the Word of the Lord in their midst. But Saturday evening I hired a boy to give away a number of bills, reading as follows:

"To-morrow evening, (Sunday), at half-past six, W. Kellaway, minister of the gospel of God, will, at Chalker's Reading Room, Maiden Street, Weymouth, show from the Word of the Lord that all the prayers of last evening for the conversion of the whole world were offered in ignorance and opposition of God's plainly revealed plan, and were thus an insult to him and an utter uselessness and waste of breath. And if any minister of the so called gospel is able to defend it by the Word of the Lord, for the good of the religious public he will meet that minister in any way and on any platform he may propose. The fact is the Lord Jesus is coming from heaven in flaming fire taking vengeance on them who know not God and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. And the Lord is even now at hand. Sinners ought, therefore, to repent and believe the gospel. But give a heathen's courtesy (as Agrippa to Paul), and come and hear for yourselves.

As I was helped so I laid the matter before those who attended, and, I trust not without some benefit. I asked how the world could be converted by the preachers of the gospel when each one of them practically ignored its sufficiency, and resorted to such scenes as had lately been enacted among us; the Congregational minister calling a Conversazione; the Baptist giving a dramatic rendering of Pilgrim's Progress; the Free Methodists holding a concert, and giving a lecture on "The House that Jack Built;" and last week, even while the prayer meetings were on, some of them absenting themselves to attend a mayor's dinner, where wine was drunk 'round, and they toasted each other and complimented each other amid conviviality and jocularity. I only desire that some one of them will come forward and take ground on his side, then I know the people will flock to hear, and they will hear the truth.

Pray for the English laborers, and send us a word of encouragement occasionally, to cheer us in our work for God and men.

From Thos. Sloan, County Grey, Ont.

The reading of THE TIMES and other publications, such as "Whitmore," "Faith of St. Paul," "Hades and Sheol," have created an inquiry into the truth, so that our Presbyterian brethren have admitted that the views of Adventists of the nature of man, his destiny and state in death accord with Scriptural doctrine. This has caused some little excitement in our midst, and a sermon in opposition has been called for, to reduce the heresy. This led to a proposition for a discussion, and the following correspondence was one of the results—not perhaps especially interesting, but it serves to show that there is some interest here, and the animus of the opposition.

THE CORRESPONDENCE.

EDITOR ADVERTISER.—I notice in your last issue, a letter signed "Lover of Truth," in which I am challenged to public discussion without knowing who is the challenging party. Allow me to say that I have neither "begged the question nor made assertions" which I am not prepared to prove. And although I am not disposed to notice every anonymous scribbler who rushes into print, hiding himself behind some fictitious name, or stoop to debate the subject with every man who wants to ally himself with the brute creation, yet I am prepared, (D. V.) to meet any respectable opponent and discuss the doctrine of the "Immortality of the Soul" in opposition to the "Soul Sleeping Theory," at any time and place that may be agreed upon, the Book of God to be the standard of appeal.

I am yours for the truth.

JAMES SCOTT.

Owen Sound, Dec. 31st, 1872.

EDITOR ADVERTISER.—Mr. Scott having preached "The Immortality of the Soul, in opposition to the Soul Sleeping theory" (as per advertisment), I challenged him to debate the question with one who held "the soul sleeping theory, and proves his position." Mr. Scott accepted the challenge, consenting to debate if the challenger proved to be respectable. Not waiting to write another letter for publication, I conferred with Mr. Scott, and told him I was the 'scribbler' who wrote the challenge, and asked him if I was respectable enough. Mr. Scott politely informed me that I was not respectable enough to debate with him! and that no other person in Owen Sound holding the soul sleeping theory was respectable enough either. I at once saw through the whole thing, and my wonder at Mr. Scott's boldness in taking up the challenge ceased. I write this to let those who saw the letters, see how the matter stood. I will not say anything about the lofty and bombastic style of Mr. Scott's letter the public, I think know Mr. Scott's attainments, or rather lack of attainments, as well as I do, so I will say nothing except in regard to my 'wishing to ally myself to the brute creation.' Mr. Scott here begs the question and I will prove it. Mr. S. cannot know my intentions but thinks that I wish to ally myself, &c., because I do not believe that the soul is immortal. Mr. Scott is shutting his eyes to the fact that the communion tables of many of the churches teaching the immortality of the soul are open to the drunkard and the profane, and those who do ally themselves to the brute creation, and if Mr. Scott wishes to know more I can tell him I have a hope which the Bible tells me purifies. It is the blessed hope of the coming of Jesus Christ; for we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him for we shall see him as he is." Let me say further that Mr. Scott had better let other people alone, and not 'advertise' sermons against those who are able to 'prove all things' that they believe, or let Mr. Scott prove his theory that 'thou shalt not surely die.'

I remain, Dear Sir, yours in the truth.

DAVID SPENSER.

From an Occasional Correspondent.

By the way, I am not a little surprised to see how some of our orthodox friends squirm at the doctrine of Christ's second advent, though I must not omit to mention how many gladly and fully receive it. During the week of prayer, at a union meeting in one church, the subject was the kingdom of heaven, spiritual, invisible, already reigning on the earth. I took occasion to speak of the earnest work of the early Christians, and the reason of the difference between them and us. Their position Paul gives us, (1 Thes. 1: 9, 10) "How ye turned to God from idols, to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven." A Christian lady told me how startled she was when she heard me advance Second Advent views! But after a short conversation she allowed that there might be more truth about them than she had thought.

Last Sabbath Rev. Dr. Bacon preached in our vacant pulpit from 1 Pet. 1: 13, "Hope to the end (or properly, perfectly,) for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ." He rendered it for us—"the grace that has been brought unto you," etc. When I reached home I went for my Greek Testament the first thing—the present participle is used—being brought—it is then, unquestionably, the grace being brought unto you—hope for that. The realization, the hope, the coming of Jesus, is future. Did the reverend doctor so dread the doctrine of that coming that he could venture so unwarrantably to change the apostle's language? And the majority of his hearers would unquestionably accept that false rendering.

In the afternoon I attended a meeting of the Radical Club, who advertised that they would discuss "Who and What was Jesus"—free dicussion permitted to all. I thought I knew something of him, and ought to help them to an understanding of the truth. I found some seventy present. A long written dissertation, and then the leader made lengthy remarks. After awhile I arose to address them. I told them, notwithstanding our different beliefs, we all stood on one common platform. They appeared pleased to learn what that was—we were all mortal—death was before us all, inevitable, and the question would come up, What after that? Revelation alone could tell us, and that they threw aside, or mangled it to suit their views. If we throw that aside there is nothing definite before us, a horror of a thick darkness. I wanted some thing to stand on. They could not throw aside the facts of history. The Jewish ceremonial taught one great lesson; it could not have grown out of man's proud heart, for it was directly opposed to that. And so the burden of proof was on those who denied it came from God. That lesson is, man is a sinner, and needs an atonement. The sinner brought his lamb to the door of the tabernacle, laying his hand upon its head, it was killed in his stead. 'Life for life' was the lesson taught. We need an atoning sacrifice. I had yet to see the man who could stand up before God and say he had not sinned. And Jesus was the Lamb of God. "God is love," we were told. Did we not learn this fact from this sacrifice? Look around on God's dealings—the distress, the desolation coming on so many. Think of infinite holiness, beauty, justice of God. How could I know he was also merciful? If we reject this manifestation of God, these offers of mercy, this sigh of the Crucified, he would reject us. But I may not further enlarge.

The leader said they wanted discussion and did n't want to be "exhorted nor to be considered as upon the anxious seat."

But one thought struck me I had not noticed before. These men, professing not entirely to reject the Bible, manage this way. What they like in the Bible they quote as reliable, what they do n't like they simply throw away as false. The orthodox, though we would not class them together, yet virtually do the same thing; what they like they quote as reliable, what they do n't like they do not professedly throw away, but they explain it away. "It is figurative, it does n't mean what it says," etc.

I observed, also, that our infidel friends had a way of misrepresenting what facts of Scripture they did allow. In one point I took occasion to correct and to flatly contradict the leader. He did not reply to that for I held my Bible in my hand.

I could not but notice how much stronger I felt in this contest with infidelity in that I had learned to interpret the Bible literally. I felt that now it is consistent and harmonious with itself, so that I had no fear but that I could see through their sophistries. May God bring his church rightly to understand his revealed Word in the future contest. I fear she must wage with infidelity.

From California.

To the Advent church in perilous times:

I hope the church will be apprised of the dangers we are in, in the last days. The love of gain; the love of praise; the love of great "I," the love of popularity; the love of a great name before men, these sins must be watched close, or the devil will get the advantage of us. We can be Adventists in profession and have all these sins trailing after us, and finally shut us out of the kingdom of God.

Paul tells us that he counted all things but loss for the excellency of Christ Jesus his Lord. The churches tell me, that if I will leave the doctrines out, I can come in and labor with them. But then where is the cross of Christ? Out of doors with the doctrine I left behind. Shall I treat Jesus Christ and his truth in this way? Never by the grace of God. Yet we can preach holiness and sanctification as much as we please in the churches, and no opposition to it, and no cross to bear either.

Martin Luther might have preached holiness and sanctification in the old Romish church, and all would have passed off without any persecution. But when he came to touch on the "man of sin," then the Devil was roused and "such a man is not fit to live," was the cry. And so might Paul and Peter have said: We must preach holiness to our brethren and get them prepared to receive the despised man of Calvary and his resurrection from the dead.

The doctrine of holiness and sanctification has always been truth, and ever will be, world without end. And now shall we leave the great cardinal doctrines of Christ's speedy coming, and the great doctrine of immortality through Christ alone, and preach holiness to please a backslidden orthodox church, and call this "meat in due season," and "the great headlight?" I say, No. It is only one way to keep a great truth smothered up and so "that day come upon us unawares."

The truth is as much despised in this ungodly world to-day, as it ever was; and the only way to prove it is to stand up like men of God and preach it, and live it too, and then we feel the power of the cross which always goes with truth. The only way to have a good healthy religion is to stand by the truth. That is why the apostles had such power with God. They stood in fore-front of the battle and preached that Jesus was the Christ.

What was the present truth in Luther's day. It was justification by faith in Jesus Christ. Not in confession to the Pope or priest, nor to any of their heathen dogmas; but all done through Christ. What was the present truth in the days of John Wesley? No conformity to the world, no countenancing sin in any way, but strict holiness to God. Happy would it have been for that people had they continued in that way. They would have been prepared to receive this great additional light which is darkness to them now. Israel of old, when Jesus Christ came into the world, were so badly backslidden that their cry was, "Away with him—he is not fit to live!"

So with this second advent message, the cry is, Away with it, we will not have it in our churches! Now shall I go into the churches and preach something to please them, and leave the great doctrines of Christ's speedy coming, and immortality, out? God forbid! Let us, like faithful embassadors of our Lord, preach the truth and take the cross with it. If we shun the cross we shall lose the kingdom.

We have a number of prosperous churches on this coast. They are sound in the faith and also in the doctrine of the Bible. In order for the church to shun the perils and dangers of these last days, they must understand the doctrine of the Bible which is as a light that shines in a dark place. Let the church arise and put on the whole armor of God. D. D. REED.

Santa Clara, Cal.

From England.

The material differences of opinion that prevail throughout Christendom as to the mysterious state of the dead, have led numerous persons to ignore the actual consequences attached to that highly important question, namely, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul, or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" (Mat. 8:36, 37), few persons perceiving that the soul is liable to destruction equally with the body, (Mat. 10:28.) Neither do they consider the magnitude of such divine punishment, which far transcends the irreparable loss of the possessions of "the world."

The original structure of man consists of body, soul, and spirit, or, as may be rendered, corporeal, spiritual, and mental. The soul, rather life, which constitutes the active part of the entire man, being more immediately derived from God the Father, who "inspired [breathed] into man an active soul," (Wisd. 15: 11), which, at the time of man's dissolution, "returns unto God who gave it," (Eccl. 12:7), an evidence that it is the only constituent part of the entire man that is preserved at his death. It may be here also necessary to remark that the Hebrew and Greek words nephesh and psuche, translated "soul" in the Scriptures, are sometimes used to denote the entire person, as "all the souls (persons) that came out of Egypt," (Gen. 46: 26.) At other times the spirit, or rather, mind, "Why art thou cast down (grieved) O my soul?" (Ps. 42: 5, 6.) And likewise the actual life, "In the hand of the Lord is the soul of every living thing." (Job 12: 10.) But heathen philosophy and papal abomination have, from ancient times, turned the principle of life to profitable account, by impressing into the minds of their votaries that, in the beginning, God created man with two distinct natures, namely, the soul, as an inner, etherial, conscious man, existing within the body, an outer and grosser conscious man; the former being gifted with superior mental powers, when disunited from the latter, which, if credible, would make it appear that the creation of the body was an act of supererogation.

By this vain delusion, however, pagan mythology and papal abomination have leagued together to erect a huge shrine of cannonized immortal souls or spirits, whereat they worship the Virgin Mary, invoke a host of etherial immortal saints, mutter prayers for the dead, and forge parchment indulgences, and, alas! no marvel that vaunted Protestantism, tainted with such filthy superstitions, has utterly marred its divine mission to proclaim "the gospel or glad tidings of the kingdom of God for a witness to all nations." Away, then, with such deformities of human life. The fiction of "immortal souls," can be none other than Satan's device to ignore "the resurrection," and erect a city and temple for mammon, which, ere long, like "a great millstone cast into the sea, shall sink to be found no more at all." (Rev. 18: 21; Jer. 51: 64)

Henceforth my Christian brother, "by evil report and good report," be it your sacred privilege, as a true minister of the gospel, to proclaim those glad tidings of the kingdom, whereby "life (eternal) and immortality were brought to light," (2 Tim. 1:10), and the faithful Christian believer, "delivered from the power of darkness," (Col. 1; 14), declare the plain testimony of the Scriptures, that "immortality, eternal life," is inapplicable to any constituent part of frail and fallen man, and that heavenly "gift" will be bestowed at "the resurrection of the just," upon those only who are "born of God," even "the children of God," for "if they are Christ's then are they Abraham's seed, and joint heirs with Christ of the divinely-promised, everlasting possession," or "pleasant land." Then, verily then, shall this mortal or corruptible body put on immortality or incorruption, and through no other means whatever than the "finished" work of our Savior, Jesus Christ, who, when he "ascended up on high led captivity captive, brought out the prisoners from the prison," (Is. 42: 7; 61:1), and received gifts (the Holy Spirit) for men, yea, for the rebellious, also, that the Lord God might dwell among them. (Ps. 68:18; Eph. 4:8, 9; Rev. 21: 3, 4.)

Earnestly contend against those abominable heresies of an inherent immortality of the soul (life) of man, also, any intermediate state of existence after death, clearly understanding that "God is not a God of the dead but of the living, for all live unto him," (Luke 20: 38), even as the stricken monarch exclaimed, "The living, the living he shall praise thee as I do this day." (Is. 38:19.) Verily we now see each fellow-man as "through a glass, darkly," (obscurely), and we now know each fellow man in part, only, but then, when this mortal shall put on immortality, we shall not only clearly behold each other, and understand with marvelous knowledge the righteous and equable dealings of God the Father towards all mankind, during their appointed pilgrimage, but confess, to his praise and glory, that "his mercy endureth forever."

Therefore, let those delusions, Spiritism, eternal torments, purgatory, immortal souls, and its pantheon of deified saints, be evermore accounted as some pestilential vapor, and so shall the verity of the Christian religion be duly maintained, and surely, your everlasting reward shall be "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Yours very faithfully, in the "blessed hope" of immortality, R. ROBERTSON.

Bermondsey, London, England.

From South Carolina.

One of our new churches is now ready to preach in, and the other will be in a few months. Glory to God! The truth is spreading in all directions. I am pressed to go to North Carolina to try and "strengthen the things that remain" in that section. Also in Florida. I expect to be in Jacksonville in that State, by the will of the Lord, the first Sabbath in next month. Surely the signs of the times indicate the speedy and triumphant advent of the Christ, the Messiah, to wind up this apostate and cursed Gentile domination, in the last, final, and everlasting destruction of all his enemies. Then God's great world will never be tainted again with evil of any kind, but all will be peace, and love, and joy, and life and immortality forevermore. O roll on ye suns! Fly swift ye years, and let that everlasting Sabbath dawn on these realms of wo and sin, when the saints from all ages and nations shall meet to join the everlasting Easter song—shall meet to part no more forever. Jesus will soon be here to make all things new. Amen!

PEYTON G. BOWMAN.

From A. A. Fletcher, Nebraska.

Six years ago this month I united with the Congregationalist church. Then I was a resident of Illinois. My object in so doing was not popularity, but being convinced of my sins, I felt there was no other hope for me but to seek God, beg for mercy and implore his blessings to rest on me and mine. I confess I found him a help even in the time of trouble. We had the privilege of attending worship each Sabbath and held prayermeetings Thursday evening in the church. I enjoyed the fellowship of my brethren as we held sweet counsel with the Father.

In the spring of 1869 I parted with friends in and out of the church and set out for Nebraska, hoping to find a more favorable country for the oppressed in this world's goods. I took the benefit of the homestead law and launched out on the prairie with a kind companion and a loving little son of two summers whom I placed great hopes upon as a comfort for the present, and a help in coming years. Time sped happily along until the fall of 1871, when one night our dear boy lay in our house a cold lifeless little form, and as we consigned him away to mother earth, I felt this to be the last time I should ever behold him. But thanks be to God that giveth us the victory through Christ, I have a hope of seeing that same sweet little face once more; and I feel that I cannot praise his name enough for removing the scales of tradition and false philosophy from my eyes.

Oh! that the world might take the Scriptures in their true light and understand what God meant when he declared they were for us and our children. I am endeavoring to throw a little light on this all important subject and invite my neighbors to come and hear from the word of God. But many are opposed to Christ, and hang their faith on man. I am branded as a traitor for preaching the views, and they have declared war against the Advent faith. But I am not satisfied with defensive warfare, but shall drive the battle into their camp, as they have not the defence, which is the word of God.

From N. C. Miller, Missouri.

Dear brethren in Southern Iowa: I have watched the space in THE TIMES giving notice of Conferences etc., very closely, hoping to get my eye on one for our bounds, but, as something seems to prevent one, and as I fear an appointment might be deferred too long to accomplish the desired end, I venture to make a call myself, hoping you will pardon my forwardness.

I want to see a tent in the field with one or two good soldiers to use it efficiently, and there are other matters that we ought to attend to immediately. Now I believe with a whole heart that we have a very few months to do our Advent work, or finish our mission as Adventists. Therefore call on the churches to hasten to the work. Without fail let the churches in Southern Iowa and at Brookfield, Mo., appoint delegates that they are sure will come, and confer with each other, at the McKinley S. H. eight miles east of Unionville, Putnam Co., Mo., March 14. I wish without fail to see Brn. Gibson, Baldwin, Philip, Harrison and Denslow there and then. Just see! five preachers, and myself and Br. McKinley thrown in! I have been laid by since December with my feet badly frozen, and Ican't wear my boots yet. I thought to do much preaching this winter, but have done very little on account of my feet. Remember the 14th of March.

From Thomas Porter

"'Seventy-two" is gone; passed away from us, leaving many sad reflections, mingled with a host of good ones. Some of our dear earnest laboring brethren and sisters are no more, only in remembrance and "in their works which do follow them." They are sleeping now, "resting from their labors." But blessed be God, through Jesus Christ our Redeemer, they will come forth from the graves in the resurrection of the just to an inheritance incorruptible and that fadeth not away.

Brethren and sisters the new year must undoubtedly bring new and greater responsibilities for us. Will we meet them like good soldiers of Christ, or let them go unheeded? God help us to do with all our might whatever our hands find to do. Our efforts at Volga are being put forth in greater union and consolidation for the prosperity of the church here and at large than ever before. We are looking for Br. Field in a short time to hold a series of meetings when, no doubt, the grain ready to be harvested, will be gathered into the garner. The words "Volga church" or "Advent church at Volga" are in nearly every mouth for twenty or thirty miles around. "What are they doing?" "What do they teach?" are the questions frequently asked. We desire to show them what we are doing and what we are teaching, and there is a prospect that other churches will grow up in this vicinity.

From Alaric Trowbrigge, Bristol, N. Y.

I received those pamphlets and three papers Saturday. So far as I have read them they are very interesting, and I hope they may instruct me in the subjects of which they treat, about which I have long desired to learn; for I am a little in the dark on the unconsciousness of the soul in death. I had an idea that the soul is conscious after death, but was reserved in darkness until the day of judgment, not being permitted to know or to have any more knowledge after death only to retain its identity; the wicked having no hope of going to heaven; but the righteous were in a place where they enjoyed peace and happiness; but I now see it in a different light. I am fully persuaded that all sleep until the resurrection. I feel that I am at rest on that, to me great and important subject.

I have no one to converse with on our faith hence I esteem your publications as of great value. I have been a disbeliever in endless torment for thirty years, and though I am in my sixty-fourth year, I have not yet heard an Advent sermon. Thus, you see, I have had a poor chance for information; all I get is from your paper, THE TIMES. I would like to have more of your publications if I were able; but I do not expect to remain on the earth many years. I will try to be content with my lot, endeavoring to do my Master's will.

From E. K. Tibbetts, Hamilton Co., O.

For several years THE TIMES has been a weekly visitor at our house, and I can say in sincerity that it is truly welcome: but such was not always the case. I did not see as I do now. It was some time before I could embrace the truth as it is shown to us through THE TIMES by our able brethren. Now all things are plain. "All things are new." It is a great satisfaction to know we have the truth, for we are informed that it "makes us free." To-day I sent several tracts and a copy of our good paper to a young man who is inquiring for something on which to ground his faith. He has been drifting about in his mind for several years; has been a skeptic, and inclines to the Darwinian theory. But, by the blessing of the Lord, I hope he is seeking in the right channel now. He was an inmate of our family for several weeks, and I tried to do my duty by him in kindly showing him what I thought to be the true ground. I hope the Lord will bless the seed sown. I am very sorry that I am situated so far from the church at Volga, Ind., of which I am a member. It has made great progress during the last two years. All their meetings seem to be blessed with glorious results.

Miscellaneous.

British Politics.

The speeches of Derby, Richmond, Salisbury, Ripon, and other Tory leaders in the House of Lords, as well as those of Disraeli and Horsman in the Commons, unmistakably betray the existence of a powerful undercurrent in England which may not be without its influence on British politics. There can be no doubt, as we indicated yesterday in our article on the opening of Parliament, that a large portion of the educated and thinking classes of England feel extremely mortified at what they consider a double defeat. They view the Alabama arbitration as an excuse for a surrender, and the San Juan award as a fraud under the mask of a judicial verdict. The former has hurt their self-esteem; the latter has injured their material interests. It is said that the national sentiment has been partly reconciled to the Alabama arbitration on the ground of commercial interests, and neighborly love. The merchants and traders feared a decline of the shipping interest and a future war, while the Quakers and dissenters were dismayed by the prospect of a fratricidal struggle. But in the San Juan award pride, self esteem, material interests—all that the Briton hold most dear—seem to them to have been outraged.

As far as the masses of the English people are concerned their patriotism has something capricious about it. In ordinary times it is latent; but by an appeal to the prejudices of certain classes it may be fanned into a white heat. Such was the case in 1823 when the people believed that the Czar, not content with being a despot at home, aspired to tyrannize over other countries. On the same principle Garibaldi could have received thousands of recruits in England if he had called on the masses to join him in a crusade against the Pope and the priests. But this trait partakes more of a class feeling than patriotism. Were the British Government to engage in a war whose object was either misapprehended or not understood by the bulk of the nation the army would secure very few recruits. It might even meet with violent opposition. These considerations should be borne in mind when we criticise the policy which England pursues in questions involving foreign complications and wars. That a profound dissatisfaction prevails among the intelligent and higher classes over the results of British self-abnegation cannot be doubted. Here and there a few prominent men may attempt to defend the pacific disposition of the Liberal Ministry. It is not long since a distinguished scholar wrote an essay to prove that the present position of England (twice as populous and thrice as wealthy as at the close of 1815) resembled that of Athens when she was exhausted by the Peloponnesian wars. But despite these extravagancies the middle and upper classes behold with profound sorrow and displeasure the loss of their country's prestige in Europe. Were an eloquent agitator to arise and recall the old spirit of the nation to life his words would inspire an enthusiasm of which England now appears to be utterly incapable.

A distinguished Whig politician, who has continually and faithfully supported the Gladstone Ministry, lately stated his opinion of it. As his views are those of a large number of intelligent Englishmen, without distinction of party, we quote the substance of them. Mr. Gladstone, says our old Whig, is not the man to govern England. He is a stupendous mistake. Gifted with an unusually fluent rhetoric and rare financial abilities, he is deluded by the idea that Providence has selected him to raise England to the position of a civitas dei. He has no conception of the ordinary feelings which govern men and shape the policy of nations. He considers it a part of his mission to preach to the rest of the world, to give it good precepts, just as if this world consisted of pure barbarians. He labors under the impression that he needs but to enunciate a principle and to embody it into a political action to have it admired and copied by the whole of Europe. He hates war. He deems it infamous and unchristian. Hence he infers that by adopting an unconditional peace programme the entire world must become equally peaceably inclined. The consequence is that England has lost all the influence she once enjoyed over Europe. And yet there are thousands among all classes of the population, except the very lowest, who mourn this humiliation sincerely and deeply. The most fervid and immediate bursts of enthusiasm evoked by a modern speech was recently called forth by the exclamation of a second-rate orator: "Oh! for only one hour of our Chatham." The whole audience was electrified, and rose to cheer for several minutes.

Though the party in favor of a vigorous foreign policy may now be in a minority in England there are many indications that it is rapidly gaining adherents. How soon it will become a majority available for the Tories depends on the earnestness and eloquence of its leaders. But, excepting in the pulpit, these two qualities are extremely rare on the other side, and even in the pulpit they do not appear to be very successful.—Inter-Ocean.

ASTOUNDING MESMERIC POWER.—A curious case of mesmerism is recorded by the civil surgeon of Hoshungabad. A young woman named Nunnee, aged 24, was married some twelve years ago; she, however, did not go to her husband's house for two years afterward. After staying with him for eight days she suddenly became insensible, and remained so for two or three days. She was taken back to her mother and soon got well. Then follows a very remarkable history. During the next four or five years she never entered her husband's house without falling insensible and remaining so. He was very kind and attentive to her; she liked him, but whenever he came into her presence, she fell at once into this state. This went on until she became emaciated and exhausted, and at last her parents applied to the court for separate maintenance for her. While she was in court the husband entered, and she instantly became insensible and was carried to the hospital, where the case was carefully attended to by Dr. Cullen, in March, last year. While in this state her pulse was regular, breathing soft, her body pliant, but she could eat nothing. Experiments were carefully made to see if there was no trick about it. While she was in bed her husband was muffled up and made to walk through the ward. She said she felt he was near her, and she was by no means well, but had not seen him anywhere about. Next day this experiment was repeated, and she actually became insensible as before. When the husband left the place she recovered. The experiment as to the influence of the husband's presence was tried in all sorts of ways. He was made to pass behind her, and to be near her in a separate ward, but this had no effect; but whenever he was brought to look on her face, though muffled up, or disguised as a policeman, as a sepoy, and so forth, she was at once influenced. The experiments continued for about a month, and the conclusion was that the husband unconsciously mesmerized her. The court came to the conclusion that it was impossible that she could live with him, and a separate allowance was ordered. The husband was asked to try if he could not remove the effect, seeing that he had the power to cause it; but he was frightened at the idea of having the power, and could not control it in any way.—Homeward Mail, India.

Our Young Folks.

Jesus.

Suffering Savior,
With thorn crown,
Bruised and bleeding,
Sinking down.

Heavy laden,
Weary worn,
Fainting, dying,
Crushed and torn.

Gentle Savior,
This for me,
So unworthy,—
All for me?

Holy Jesus,
Pure and mild,
I would ever
Be thy child.

On Slang.

Rev. Dr. Hall was sitting in his study one pleasant August afternoon, his thoughts intent upon his Sunday sermon, and his mind withdrawn from earthly cares, when his train of thought was rudely interrupted, and his attention distracted from his theme by the following conversation:

"Oh, Nellie, where are you—you'd ought to have been there—just the stunningest fellow."

Then a sound of running feet, and pretty soon he heard his daughter exclaim:

"Is that you, Maggie?"

"Yes, come down quick, I's got something to tell you."

"I'll be there in half a jiffy."

Then a door opened and shut, and in a few minutes,

"What do you think, as I was coming over here, there was just the stunningest fellow, right in front of me. Just as I got opposite the new church, my music-roll slipped, and every paper in it fell out on the sidewalk."

"Gracious! I should have been dumbfounded."

"And so I was, but it was so ridiculous that I almost died a laughing."

"Well, that fellow, do you think, stopped turned round and helped me to pick them up. I was all hunkey-dory then. He walked as far as here with me, and I thanked him of course, etc., etc. 'You know how 'tis yourself.'"

The good doctor scratched his head. Could that be his Nellie, whom he thought so lady-like? He opened the door, softly, a little crack, thinking, no doubt, that he had the right to play the part of a listener to so strangely mixed a conversation, and in his own house.

Very soon it was continued, this time his daughter commencing the conversation:

"There, how's that for high?"

"Oh, isn't that sweet, how much was it?"

"Only five dollars; cheap enough."

"Yes, indeed; but you said you were going to have pink, this is blue."

"Never mind, its all the same in Dutch."

The doctor peeped in to see what they were talking about—and Miss Nellie was exhibiting her new bonnet to the admiring gaze of her friend."

"It's raging hot here."

"Well I don't know as I can make it any cooler," said Nellie, looking round, "I 'spose father'd kill me if I'd opened a door." Her father requested the the day before to keep the doors closed.

"I guess its time for me to absquatulate," said Maggie, rising.

"Don't tear yourself away. Are you going to the lecture, to-night?"

"Yes, I had a staving old time last Tuesday night."

"George Sanders said he should go home with you to-night."

"Did he? He'd better spell able first."

"That's so. If there's anything I hate 'tis the boys bothering round; they ought to be put in a barrel and fed through the bung-hole until they are old enough to behave."

"I must bid you a fond adieu now, I've got thousands of errands to do."

"Well, good-bye."

"Oh, the dickens, I've left my parasol."

"Here it is."

"Now, good-bye, be sure and come to-night."

"Yes, good-bye."

Then the door closed, and Nellie went up stairs.

The doctor was surprised, but not too much so think of a plan that would be likely to cure the unfortunate habit into which his daughter had fallen. The plan was discussed with the young lady's mother, and adopted. The time for tea had arrived, and when all were fairly seated at the table, Mrs. Hall said, "My dear sir, will you have some tea?"

"In half a jiffy, Madam."

Nellie looked up, but her father took no notice.

"Really, this cake is quite stunning," went on the doctor as solemn as a judge. Just then his napkin fell to the floor. "Gracious, I'm con-dumbfounded," ejaculated the doctor, getting it a little wrong. Nellie gazed at her father in perfect amazement.

"My dear, this sauce is staving. Where did you buy it?"

"I made it," said his wife coolly.

"Oh, well, its all the same in German."

Nellie dropped her knife and fork.

"You must give me some money for the butcher to-morrow," said Mrs. Hall.

"You'll have to spell 'ability' first," growled the doctor savagely.

Then suddenly taking out his handkerchief, he gave his nose a tremendous blow. "There," said he, "how's that for high?"

"I know how 'tis myself," meekly replied his wife. This capped the climax. The knowledge that her father must have heard the afternoon conversation was too much for Nellie. She burst into tears and left the room. The sage doctor nodded wisely to his wife and when she got out of hearing, exclaimed, "There, wife, I guess we shall hear no more slang phrases from her."

The doctor was right, for Nellie was cured.

A Boy's Heroism.

"Oh, dear," sighed John Allen, as he closed the Sabbath School library book, "how I wish I had a chance to do something heroic! I am sick and tired of this humdrum life out here in the woods. Nothing to do but to drive the cows away in the morning, and drive them back at night—chop down trees and cut them up for fire-wood, plough, harrow, sow, hoe, and so on to the end. If something only would happen once in a while."

"When you have lived to be as old as I am," said his grandfather, a white headed man on the verge of the grave, "you will learn that there is heroism in every day life that is quite as sublime as those rare acts which are heralded from one end of the country to the other."

"Yes, I suppose you are right, grandpa—of course, you are; but I would like to do one of those rare acts myself. It would seem to make a great man of me; and I know it would make me very happy, too."

He took down his old straw hat as he spoke, and started off to the woods to hunt up the cows.

He found all but one, a favorite heifer which belonged entirely to himself, and which he was calculating would some day bring him a nice sum of money toward finishing his education. So, after driving the rest of the cows into the barn-yard, he went back to search for the missing animal.

As he was crossing the railway track he stopped suddenly and turned pale. Some wretch had had removed several rails, and, of course, unless the engineer could be warned in season, the express train, which would be along in half an hour, would be dashed to utter ruin.

John's heart seemed for a moment to stop beating, while his head grew dizzy. Only for a moment. The safety of hundreds, their salvation from a fearful death, depended upon him alone, for there was no time to call upon others for assistance.

With wonderful rapidity he at once gathered together a pile of brushwood, tossed it on the track, and set fire to it, which was an easy thing for him to do, as he had matches in his vest-pocket, and the light material was as tinder. Then he watched it, so carefully, so steadily, gathering more and more, and heaping them on, and keeping the flames high and bright.

As he heard at last the shrill whistle of the engine, his heart seemed to stop beating, and his head was so dizzy that he hardly realized that he was awake; it seemed some awful dream—a nightmare, indeed, which bound him with a spell.

By a wild effort he broke from the agony which embraced him, and starting ahead of the fire, ran boldly along the track, waving his hat and shouting at the top of his voice.

There was a careful engineer on the train; one who realized the precious value of the human beings confided to his care; and so, on the alert for accidents, he caught the glimpse of John's fire as soon as he turned the distant curve, and the short, sharp whistle nerved every brakeman to do his duty with electric rapidity. The train came to a dead stop a few rods from the scene of the miscreant's work; the passengers rushed to ascertain the cause of the sudden detention; and you may guess, little ones, how their faces whitened when they saw from what a terrible accident they had been saved. You may guess, too, their gratitude to God, and also to the young lad who, under him, had been their savior from such a sudden and fearful death.

"Let us pray," said a white-headed minister, who was one of the crowd, and instantly men, women, and children kneeled on the rough grass of that wild forest, and joined with him in thanks to the All-father and to the humble instrument of the blessed deed.

"What would you like best of all, my boy?" said he afterward, as, with the hundreds of others, he went up to John, and took the boy's hands and thanked him personally.

"To go to school, sir," was the prompt reply.

"And go you shall," said the aged man; and instantly he went about with uncovered head among the crowd, holding his hat and saying only, "The boy would like best of all to go to school."

And how many, many crisp banknotes and bright eagles found their way into the preacher's hat! Enough to educate him, too; for that was the darling wish of his heart.

"Was n't it lucky!" said he the next day to his grandfather, as he rehearsed for the fourteenth time what he meant to do hereafter; "was n't it lucky that 'Little Brin' strayed away? else I should n't have gone back—else—" he shut his eyes and turned white; the reverse of the scene was too terrible to think of.

"It was not luck, my son," said old Mr. Allen, solemnly; "not luck, but your opportunity; one given by God to test your heroism. Such do not often come, my boy; once only, perhaps, in a life-time; but opportunities to do good come every day, and in many of them there is a heroism which, in the sight of God, is as sublime as that of yours last evening; or is it harder, my son, to do a little act of kindness to a sinful boy or man, than to save the lives of hundreds?"—Guiding Star.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, February 18, 1873.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS. { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.
Sent Three Months on trial for Thirty-five cents.

The officers of the Association are as follows
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON,
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD,
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK,
Treasurer—AMBROSE W. TUCKER.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS,
A. S. CALKINS.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH,
A. E. BABCOCK

BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES

☞ Address all communications to Wm L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago, and

☞ Make all Postal Orders and Drafts payable to him, and always state the amount of money enclosed plainly at the head of the letter.

☞ Give your Post Office address in full in every letter.

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions.

Business Department.

THE WESTERN RURAL. To any one paying us $3.50, we will send the Western Rural, the popular and excellent Rural and Family Weekly of the West for one year, and credit one year's subscription paid to our own paper. The Western Rural, alone, is worth $2.50 per year, and every family in the West ought to have it. [tf

Whitmore's Immortality.

We desire to correspond with any friends who have a supply of this work on hand, and will spare us a few copies. Will any such please write and let us know how many they can let us have.

To Correspondents.

J. STINSON. Once before you thought you had renewed your subscription for the last time. We hope you may again be happily disappointed. FOWLER'S MILLS. We do not wonder that none of the papers publish your communications. You wrote to us two different communications on the same sheet, so intermingled that it took more time to make it out than ten letters should have done. Correspondents should pay some attention to the requests of editors. You do not even give your P. O. address. We have referred the matter of the Christian to H. L. H. The tract we have not. M. H. NORTON. Don't be anxious about the paper. It shall come as long as we have means to send it to the poor. Better have the fire here than hereafter. It is sad to see home burned up. But the Lord will provide. Trust him. A. SIPE. "Hold on, hold in, hold out." There are better times ahead—in the new world, if not in this. As for the paper, it shall come until you get "on your feet" again.. J. T. ONGLEY. No. We have only a few copies left.... L. KERR. Received the one dollar for M. F. B., and passed it to her credit. .S. W. BIRD. We have a department for that very purpose, called "The Editor's Drawer." Most of the questions sent require an answer too lengthy for such a department.. .S. DOOLITTLE. A friend had paid for M. F. B. for six months, so we applied one dollar to another paper to a destitute reader.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

M J Liddell
K Holles
A K Stone
J B Noyes
W B Augur
H A Plank
W S Todd
S Doolittle
J A Churchill
C M Gifford
N Brace
J H Melvin
N F Winchell
J G Junk
M A Tibbetts
J Smith
H Liederbach
E D Beardsley
K Cole
P Milton
J Turpie
A F Dugger
W Kidney
A Cleaver
J Coulter
E A Smith
R Spotswood
E VanVelzor
R B Dutton
J F Willcox
K Wolcott
J T Ongley
G W Miller
J Barker
E Everett
J H Whitmore
A D Kendall
S Dutcher
W Strode
D E Gibson
J Bearce
J N Sloan
J Gillies
J S Brandebury
W Page
M Thomas
A Brigham
L Kerr
A Goodwin
I Fancher
J Huxtable
L F Dockham
D Palmer
B Davis
H C Crook
J Spanton
E K Tibbetts
D Hayes
M Conklin
T Rines
A Sife
R Spotswood
M Gatta
N S Hemenway
A H Evans
W T Ader
P G Bowman
E Kariger
G W Place
D S Burson
P Duryea
C Crawshaw
J B Paton
M S Reed
A Cutter
T McDonald
W E Hathaway
T S Thomasson
G R Clarke
H A Smith
G C Stanbro
W Cain
A E Rathbun
V Hunt
J F Gerald
A Mann
S W Bird
H Palmer
W M Rankin
J Card
J M Corry
N T Withington
Z C Raymond
A A Votaw
T C Baker
J H Myers
M E Talbot
T Robjohn
S A Smith
A E Rathbun
J J Bromley
W J Cummins
O Warner
E B Mills
S Martz
C Wilson
D Ayers
S G Stevens
J S Madill
H Lewis
E H Tilley
H W Ruble
J Ridley
H M Spencer
J Green
S P Whitney
J W Thompson
J Campbell
Anderson

Books and Tracts sent by Mail.

C B Reynolds
T C Baker
S Pike
F H Henney
D W Spear
C W Turner
F Pelton
A Trowbridge
T Rives
R Spotswood
M Gatta
H Liederbach
Z C Raymond
J Card
H Palmer 3
J F Gerald
A Mann
C C Stanbro 3
V Hunt
M A Cleaver
E A Smith
W J David
E B Scott
S A Plank
E Wentworth
D Matthewson
Eld L F Cole 2
D D Reed
R Robertson
A Roth
A J Cottrell
M J Liddell
G Mozee 2
M H Tooker
S Lamson
Mrs R E B Curtis
C E Lindbeck
E Blanchard
S M Meyers
C Churchill
C E Ily
C H Sweet
L Scott
J Reed
J F Willcox
J G Huntington
R V Philip
W M Rankin
J Hayes
T Davidson
Mrs C H Danks
J J Goyer
J Averell
D O Amos
G W DeLong
J Hummel
W Geddie
G C Watkins
W C Malone
Dr Millie
Mrs H Gray
Rev B Lee
C Mallum
W Wadhams
E Falling
J A Newell
F S Morgan
J T Ongley
C M Pearce
H Campbell
S Fary
J F Wilcox

The "Times" to Ministers.

We send THE TIMES to ministers of any denomination for one dollar a year—half price. Those who wish to send the paper to preachers can take advantage of this fact.

Notice.

At the last annual session of the Hoosic Valley Conference the following brethren, viz., R. H. Bateman, Gloversville, and Wm. A. Durand, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., and Dennis Sears, Savoy, Mass., were set apart to the work of the gospel ministry by the imposition of hands and prayer, and are commended to the faithful in Christ wherever their lot may be cast.

R. MOSHER, H. K. FLAGG, J. WILBUR,
Minis'l Committee of the Hoosick Valley Conf.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

New Rutland, Feb. 10-21 and longer as the Lord may direct. C. C. MARSTON.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Preaching in Advent Mission Hall, 619 West Lake Street, every Sunday 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening
D. R. & M. S. MANSFIELD.

Genoa, Oct. 27, and every other Sabbath until further notice. E. H. BURINGTON.

Forreston, Feb. 25, 26.
Ackerman, 11 a. m., March 2.
White Rock, 2:30 p. m., same day.
Rochelle, eve., March 2.
Creston, Reed's Hall, March 3-7.
Byron, March 11-15.
Elida, March 16. C. C. MARSTON.

Squaw Grove, in the Methodist church, 11 a. m., Feb. 23.
Eagle S. H., Sugar Grove, 2.30 p. m., same day.
Beemerville, 11 a. m., and 7 p. m., March 2.
C. W. SMITH.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.
Prayer meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.
Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co., at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.
Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S. H. 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.
ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Nov. 10, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.
Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Nov. 17, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

Amboy, Lee Co., preaching the second and fourth Sundays of each month.
C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

MICHIGAN.

To the churches in Branch County, Michigan, I would say that my appointments for the year 1873 will be as follows:
East Gilead, Jan. 5, 10 a. m., and every two weeks after.
California, Jan. 12, 10:30 a m and every two weeks after.
Algansee, every Sunday 2:30 p m and evening. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening.
J. R. PRESTON, Pastor.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.
Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

Lexington Lake Shore Advent Chapel, 3 miles north of village, Sabbath, Jan. 26, at 3 p. m., and every two weeks after.
Lexington Ridge, White S. H., Feb. 2, at 3 p. m. and every two weeks after.
Marlette, Advent Chapel, Tuesday and Wednesday eve. Feb. 11 and 12, at 7 p. m., and every 4 weeks till further notice.
GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

The third Q. M. of the Eastern District of the A. C. Conference of Michigan will be held with the A. C. church of Marlette, Sanilac Co., commencing at 2 p. m., Thursday, March 6, and continuing over Sunday.
Brethren come, as far as possible, and come to work. We earnestly hope this church will be prayerfully remembered, and the quarterly gathering will be a great blessing to them. They have a good and comfortable chapel, and we have reason to believe the brethren at Marlette will cordially greet all who may attend.
JOHN H. PATON, Sec'y

I expect the help of Eld. Geo. Wright in a series of meetings with the church in Almont, commencing on Monday eve., Feb. 17, and continuing as long as the wisdom given to us may dictate. We ask to be remembered in the prayers of the whole brotherhood in our efforts. We are seeking the salvation of our fellow-men.
JOHN H. PATON.

WISCONSIN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.
Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.
A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

Celaburgh, eve. Feb. 1, and once in four weeks.
Norris S. H., 11 a. m., Feb. 2, and once in four weeks.
Pine River, eve. Feb. 2, and once in four weeks.
ANSON BROWN.

LaCrosse, corner of Main and Sixth Streets, Dec. 1, and once in two weeks. JOS. BROWN.

Dudley S. H., Vernon Co., commencing Thursday eve., Feb. 17, a protracted meeting with lectures on the prophecies. Br. A. Foster of Sparta, will help. JOS. BROWN.

MINNESOTA.

The first Q. M. of the St. Paul District will be held with the Minneapolis church, commencing Friday eve., Feb. 21, and over Sunday. A general invitation to all living in the district to attend.
The second Q. M. of the same district to be held with the West St. Paul church, at the S. H., near Br. Libbey's, commencing Friday, Feb. 28, and over Sunday. A full attendance is expected.
The first Q. M. of the Ottawa District will be held with the church at the Agency, commencing Friday eve., March 7, and over Sunday. Shall expect a full attendance of all the friends in the vicinity.
Second Quarterly Meeting for the same district will be held at Garden City, commencing Friday eve., March 14, and over Sunday. A full attendance is expected. G. W. MILLER, Evangelist.

Ridgeway, Feb. 8 and 9, and once in four weeks.
P. MITSON.

The third Q. M. for the Southern District of Wisconsin will be held at Montfort, Grant Co., commencing Friday eve., March 14th, and holding over Lord's Day. We hope for a general attendance of the brethren throughout the district, and the preaching brethren in particular are requested to be there. Let all come praying that the blessing of our heavenly Father may rest upon the meeting, and that much good may be done in the name of Jesus.
GEORGE HOWARD.

I will commence a protracted meeting at Big Creek, Sauk Co., Wednesday, March 5. Will the friends of the cause of our coming Savior come and help us by their gifts and prayers?
P. W. HOUGH.

A protracted meeting in Baraboo, Sauk Co., beginning Friday eve., Feb. 28, and holding over Lord's Day. All are invited to attend. Come and help hold up the truth in this place.
E. P. GRAVES.

IOWA.

I will commence a protracted meeting in Cascade, Wednesday eve., Feb. 19. Will those who love the cause of truth and perishing men, rally to the meeting. J. RIDLEY.

We, the undersigned, members of various churches of the Iowa Christian and the Iowa Advent Christian Conferences, realizing the obligations we are under to God and his truth and his people, and realizing, too, that in our present divided condition we cannot possibly accomplish as much good as we might if all the elements among us were heartily united in concerted action and with undivided front, do hereby propose and call a convention, to be composed of two delegates from each church, to convene in the city of Manchester, April 15, to take into consideration the matters which now divide us, with a view to an arrangement which shall once more unite us in a single, undivided conference organization.
Signed:—T. E. Cook, J. Ingalls, J. Gildersleeve, Dr. Banton, and many others.

Preaching in Thompson's Hall, Delmar, Clinton Co., Jan. 5, and every two weeks until further notice. C. W. PITCHER.

Manchester, the first and third Sabbaths of each month, at 2 and 7 p. m.
J. RIDLEY, Pastor.

Q. M. of the First District of the N. W. Missouri and S. W. Iowa Conference will be held at Troublesome Creek, six miles east of Atlantic, Cass Co., Iowa, commencing Friday eve., March 14. Brn. Hubbell and Nokes will be expected to come and help at this meeting. We also expect Eld. Wm. McCulloch. This is a good field, and the truth has a firm hold. Come, brethren, praying and ready for work. WM. MURPHY, Sec'y.

Romig S. H., near Milford, Feb. 2, and every fourth Sunday.
Waveland, Pottawatamie Co., Feb. 9, and once in four weeks.
Troublesome Creek, Feb. 16, and every fourth Sunday.
Hebing's S. H., Feb. 23.
Let the brethren circulate these appointments fully. WM. MURPHY.

The next Q. M. of the Southern Iowa and North Missouri Conference will be held at Corydon, Wayne Co., Iowa, commencing Feb. 22, and holding over Sabbath. We hope to see all the ministers belonging to this conference and others who can be present at our meeting. We cordially invite all who can to come and labor with us for the good of the cause of Christ. Br. S. K. Gibson is expected to be with us.
L. Z. LOTSPEICH.

MISSOURI AND IOWA.

The second Q. M. in District No. 2 of the S. W. Iowa and N. W. Mo. Conference will be held at Quitman, Nodaway Co., Mo., commencing Friday eve., Feb. 28 and holding over Sunday. Eld. Wm. McCulloch will be with us. A general invitation is given to all who love our Savior and his appearing. Come, brethren, to help us and cheer us with your presence.
JAMES C. SMITH, Sec'y.

MISSOURI.

There will be a special meeting of the Southern Iowa and Northern Missouri Conference at McKinley S. H., eight miles east of Unionville, Putnam Co., Mo., March 14 and onward.
N. C. MILLER.

NEW YORK.

Saratoga Springs; meetings every Sunday in the Lower Town Hall, corner of Broadway and Lake Avenue, at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday School and Bible class directly after morning service.
Prayer meeting every Thursday eve., at the residence of the pastors, 213 Broadway, nearly opposite Town Hall.
WM. A. & M. L. DURAND.

The Western District New York Conference will hold its second quarterly session in the Old Congregational Church, in Le Roy, commencing Thursday eve., March 6, 1873, continuing over the following Sunday. A general attendance is desired. The church here is in its infancy, and we hope the meeting may do them good in the name of the Lord. We hope all will come for the one object. Can we not see some there from the other districts? A. P. MOORE, Sec'y.

PENNSYLVANIA.

The next Q. M. of the Advent Christian Conference of Northern Penn. and Southern N. Y., will be held in the Wesleyan church, at Westfield, Tioga Co., Pa., commencing Friday eve., March 7, to continue over the following Sunday.
A. H. BRIGGS, Sec'y.

Warrensville, Lycoming Co., Feb. 23.
Quaker Hill, eve., Feb. 23.
Canton, Bradford Co., eve., 26.
Union, 3 miles from Canton, Feb. 27, March 1.
Segur S. H., Armenia Mountain, a. m., March 2.
Chase's Mills, Tioga Co., eve., and attend to baptism and Lord's Supper.
Sylvania, Bradford Co., March 3-5.
East Troy, March 6-7.
South Creek, Sunday, March 9, and attend to baptism. JOHN T. ONGLEY.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Bleury St.
JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y. 207, St. Joseph St.

Advertisements.

List of Books, Tracts, etc., kept on sale at the Advent Christian Times office.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World, 15c. By D. T. Taylor.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—Unabridged, $5, by express. Condensed, sufficiently full for ordinary purposes, by mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occuring in the Holy Scriptures. With maps and useful tables. 65c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: with engravings, maps, and tables. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

BIBLE DICTIONARY: by Smith & Barnum. The best abridgment of Smith's larger work. Leather $6, cloth $5. By express.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $12 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDance. With Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. $7 50. by express.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock, $2 50, Post-paid.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The Phenomena of Modern Spiritualism. By N. Field, M. D. 15c.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions to the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 50c. post-paid.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 45c, post-paid.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Cloth, $1, paper, 50c. Postage, 5c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY of God: and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 15c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble, 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC meetings. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 5c. a hundred.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; with a review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabath By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added History, Statistics and Tables. Cloth, $2; leather 2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By Wellcome and Good. 460 pp $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATTHEW, 24 and 25, 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $8 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen. The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one adress, post-paid, for $4 00.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH; a history of the Doctrine of the Reign of Christ on earth during the past 2,000 years. By D. T. Taylor. Cloth. $1

LAST DAY TOKENS: by S. S. Brewer. 35 cts.

FUTURITY; by Wm. Sheldon. 20 cts.

THE INDEX BOOK MARK; 25c a dozen.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. Nothing so good on this topic. Cloth $1. Paper, 50c. 3 copies for $1, post paid.

GOOD TIDINGS; a general view of Advent doctrine. By an Association of Authors. 428 pages. Cloth 65c, Paper 40c. Post paid.

*THE NATURE AND DURATION OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT: By Henry Con*stable, Prebendary of Cork, 40c. Post paid.

THE FAITH OF ST. PAUL; showing it to have been neither Pharisaic nor Sadducean, but Hebrew. By L. C. Collins. 10c.

*THE STATE OF THE DEAD; a Discus*sion between N. Field, M. D. and T. P. Connolly, Esq. pp. 300. 60c. Post Paid.

THE JUBILEE HARP. $1. $9 a dozen.

HADES AND SHEOL; By L. C. Collins. The best published exposition of the parable of Dives and Lazarus. 10c.

*THE ADVENT MINSTREL; a choice collec*tion of spiritual songs. Flexible cloth, 25c. $2.15 a dozen. Paper, 15c. $1.50 a dozen.

*HYMNS OF THE HARP; Cloth, 75c, Leath*er $1.

HYMNS OF THE MORNING; A new and rich collection. Cloth 50c. Leather, 60c.

SCIENCE AND THE RESURRECTION; By D. T. Taylor. 5c.

PAULS EARNEST EXPECTATION and hope; (Phil. 1: 21: 23.) By O. R. Fassett. 5c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT: containing the original Greek text of the New Testament with an interlineary word for word English translation and a new emphatic version, 434 pp. Cloth $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

PAULINE THEOLOGY; or, The Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as taught in the epistles of Paul. By H. L. Hastings 15c.

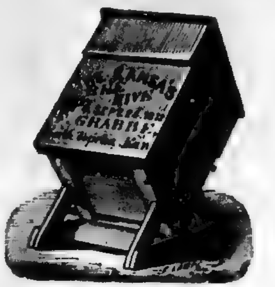
The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.
Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1.00 a year. Mrs. E. B. Jennings editor. Address: 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Rich Man and Lazarus.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.
LOUIS REIMER,
1806 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

The Kansas Bee Hive.



THIS CUT SHOWS
THE HIVE AS IN USE.
Four of its sides are made removable to permit easy access to the interior.

THIS IS THE BEST HIVE FOR PRACTICAL bee culture in the country. All who keep bees, and make honey a specialty—either box or frame—will find it to their interest to send for a descriptive circular and price list. Also, terms and conditions to agents, &c. Address P. GRABBE,
25 West Lake Street, Chicago.

500,000 SUBSCRIBERS WANTED.

The new volume of SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY will present a more brilliant array of contributors, a wider and more thorough discussion of the topics treated in its editorial departments, finer illustrations, and more uniformly good printing than any which has preceded it. The list of contributors just published contains nearly one hundred of the brightest names known to our literature. Among the features of special interest will be Dr. Holland's splendid serial, "Arthur Bonnicastle," also a series of brilliantly illustrated papers by Edward King, under the title of "The Great South," which will be alone worth the price of the Monthly. There will be also entertaining papers "About Authors, their Friends, Whims, and Ways." Papers on "The Decoration of American Homes." "Sketches, with Portraits, of Living American Writers." There will be Descriptive Articles, Tales of Travel and Adventure, the choicest Poems, the most Brilliant Essays, Editorials, Reviews, and Art Critiques. Departments relating to Home and Society, Nature and Science, and Culture and Progress, &c., &c., presenting nearly 2000 pages of the choicest illustrated literature by the best writers in the English language.
"Scribner's Monthly" has obtained something more than national recognition.
An eminent English author, in a note to the Publishers, says: "It is incomparably better than any magazine I have come across."
It claims to be "the foremost magazine of its class in the world."
Subscription Price $4.00 a year, payable in advance. November and December numbers sent FREE to all subscribers for 1873.
SCRIBNER & CO., 654 Broadway, N. Y.

"National Agriculturist and Bee Journal"

In its new form—16 large quarto pages—adorned with beautiful engravings, is now offered to subscribers with the choice of four beautiful Chromos, for $1.50; or with a choice Lithograph or Book, for $1.25 or for only $1.10 without any Premium. Only $1 10 in clubs of ten without any premium. One copy free, one year to the agent sending a club of ten, besides the regular cash commission or premiums; or one copy free as a premium for three subscribers. Send for a sample copy (sent free) and see our list of valuable Premiums and cheap outfit of Chromos, Lithographs, &c., offered very low to those who will act as agents. Write now before you forget it, to
H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York.
For The National Agriculturist and Bee Journal, and one chromo and THE TIMES, both one year for $2.90. Address W. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Bible Banner.

THIS PAPER IS EDITED BY
ELDS. JOHN COUCH, WILLIAM SHELDON,
A. A. PHELPS.

Published monthly, at $1 a year, with a choice book, or fine lithograph engraving, given to each subscriber. Furnished to subscribers of THE TIMES three months free, or both one year for $2.75, with a book or engraving free. All orders for the Banner and TIMES should be addressed to W. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill. All orders for sample copies (sent free) or for the Bible Banner ALONE, should be addressed to H. A. KING, 14 Murray St., New York.

POCKET HYMN BOOK

With Music.

COMPILED BY CHAS. C. BARKER.

"Hymns of the Morning"

Is for sale at THE TIMES Office, at the following

REDUCED PRICES:

Cloth Binding..60c
Morocco "...75c

Sent postage free on receipt of price.

TWELVE COPIES FOR $4.75.

A liberal discount to agents.
This book is suitable for all religious occasions, containing the sublimest of religious songs, and the cream of musical composition.
For special terms for quantities, address the publisher,
C. W. SARGENT,
Box 486, Concord, N. H.

☞ For sale at THE TIMES office, in large or small quantities.

THE CHRISTIAN:

A LARGE, LIVE, MONTHLY, RELIGIOUS, Family Paper, containing anecdotes sketches, records of Providences and answers to prayer, true stories, poetry, music, etc. No sectarianism controversy, politics, puffs, pills, patent medicines novels or continued stories, allowed in its columns.

Each subscriber receives a large and splendid Bible reader's map, free. This map exhibits not only Palestine, but all Bible Lands. It is printed on a sheet, 38x 28 inches, is beautifully colored, and contains—

(1) View of the Land of Canaan, with its valleys, mountains, rivers and lakes, as seen at a glance from Pisgah, where Moses stood to behold it, before he died. (2) Jerusalem and its Environs, the holy places, valleys, streams, pools, "the mountains round about Jerusalem," etc. (3) St. Paul's Journeys, and the world as known to the ancient Hebrews. (4) A view of Jerusalem, as seen from Olivet, where Jesus beheld the city and wept over it. (5) Map of Palestine, "from Dan to Beersheba," giving the inheritances of the different tribes of Israel, colored separately. (6) Peninsula of Mount Sinai, and the journeys of Israel from Egypt to the Promised Land. (7) A Chart of the Seasons, months, productions, weather, and temperature of Palestine.

Besides all these, the map contains the ancient and modern names of all known places; the heights of the mountains; and references to the texts of Scripture where the different places are mentioned.

This map is given to subscribers for The Christian.

Terms—in advance: with the map on paper, beautifully colored, One Dollar a year; with the map varnished and mounted on rollers, a Dollar and a Quarter.

Four copies of The Little Christian, a child's paper, to one address, sent at the same rate as one copy of The Christian.

Ten thousand agents wanted to get subscribers for this map and The Christian.

Honest, intelligent, energetic men, women and children, can have pleasant and profitable employment, without risk or capital. For specimens and instructions, address
H. L. HASTINGS,
19 Hanover St., Boston, Mass.

☞ The Times and Christian one year for $2.45. With map on paper, $2.70. With map on rollers, $3.00. Address W. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake St., Chicago.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

Advent Christian Times

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.---NO. 30. CHICAGO, FEBRUARY 25, 1873. WHOLE NO. 461.

Advent Christian Times.

Contents of This Number.

First Page.
Mission Work, T. F. Sargent; Helps by the Way, A. M. B. G.; The Prisoner's Prediction, A. Armour; Some Christians will Never Die, J. D. Carey.

Second Page.
To-day, (poetry); Our "seance" with Foster, J. B. Graves.

Third Page.
The Resurrection; The First Bereavement; The Bible Class.

Fourth Page.
Brief Editorials; What Our Friends Say; About Your "Piece"; Editor's Drawer.

Fifth Page.
The Battle of Armageddon; Personal, Wm. McCulloch; Inner Man, O. D. Gibson; Another Uncertainty, A. Armour; The Signals; Jesuit Morality; News.

Sixth Page.
Christian Life; Growth in Grace; How Shall I Become a Christian; The Kohinoor Recut; Correspondence; From Our English Correspondent; Letters from John R. McConnell, A. Farrow, J. L. Chadwick, C. C. Marston, Stevenson, Ala.; Brief Extracts; The Nearing End, an Argument to Prove it.

Seventh Page.
Compelled; Miscellany; Our Young Folks; Conference Minutes.

Eighth Page.
Business Department; Obituaries; Notices; Appointments; Marriages; Advertisements.

Mission Work.

As I read the religious journals of the West, the organs of different denominations, I am impressed that that section of country is a great field for missionary work, and there is a great call for more laborers. The colporteurs are doing a noble work, and their reports are interesting and suggestive. This carrying the Bible and tracts from house to house with a few words of exhortation, often is more effectual than many sermons.

When I think of the great harvest field and the efforts now put forth to save mankind, the open doors for the missionaries where not long since heathenism and Romanism barred the entrance, when I read of the blessed work in Italy, even at Rome, in Spain, Japan, Mexico, and other places, I ask myself the question, Are all the "jots and tittles fulfilled" that must be before Jesus comes, so that we can look for his coming even this year? Can it be that the gospel is not yet to enlighten those nations? Think of it; the entire policy of the governing powers of Japan changed in a day,—a policy pursued with inflexible rigidity for twenty-five hundred years, and the very opposite policy adopted. It is unparalleled in history.

In the past it has been called the "sealed kingdom," now it is open to the commerce of the world, and the Christian religion tolerated, and its ambassadors invited to the courts of Japan to teach the principles of the gospel and civilization. Spain, for more than three hundred years, the most inaccessible, the most persecuting of the Catholic nations, is now free for the missionary to teach and preach Jesus. Other nations, countries, cities and towns are waiting and calling for the gospel; the West and the South are giving the Macedonian cry! Never were so many millions accessible to missionary labor as now; never pleas so urgent, never such facilities for printing and circulating religious truths as now.

I rejoice to hear and know the Bible is circulated, and that the missionary can go with it to teach even all nations. None of us should be for sect or party in this great work; but all should unitedly labor that the people everywhere may be enlightened and saved by believing on Jesus. Repentance and salvation is the primary work; other kindred topics have their place in the school of Christ as we progress. For years I enjoyed salvation through Christ, not knowing the errors of doctrine I held, having been taught by tradition. Now I rejoice in light and truth concerning the soon-coming kingdom of Christ. How glad I am that I had learned of Jesus before; for I was in a path which has grown brighter and brighter and brighter! How beautiful is the plan of redemption! How tangible is the hope of the Christian!

The great call for mission work is very suggestive. Every Christian should inquire, What am I doing? What can I do? What is my gift and calling? Where is my work in the vineyard? The command is, "Go, work!"

The call of the Western Association for aid to prosecute their work in a section which has been and is the greatest field for home missions, should be responded to without delay. It is important and imperative that the great leading truths connected with Jesus' soon coming, and doctrines concerning the kingdom of God should be promulgated with wisdom, zeal, and power.

The combined effort of every Advent brother and sister is in demand in some way to help. I say sisters, for their labors have told in the West, and, as one brother says, "Come West, and you sisters will need no separate Association or paper, for our conferences, churches, paper and Association are open for your labor." (And it is now so East, with but few exceptions.)

I remember the article that appeared a while ago, by Br. Munger, asking for a little more "gravy;" and I am thinking that the sisters might make and serve that which perhaps might make the "meat" more palatable and savory as we read our weekly journals.

I am glad to know the Adventists as a people have always countenanced the labor of women in the church. At the National Convention of Adventists, a resolution was passed in favor of their teaching and preaching. I have thought daily of Br. and Sr. Mansfield's mission effort, now in its infancy, and hope and pray it may be a work prospered in their hands. It looks like a timely effort, and may it not lack for sympathy and aid. The effort to stay the tide of sin, and save a people from evil and crime by carrying the gospel in its humanity and Christianity to those starving for it, is a work should interest all devout hearts. May God bless every missionary effort, and multiply the laborers for such fields.

T. F. Sargent.

Concord, N. H.

Helps by the Way.

The Word of the Lord is the Christian's daily nourishment, and, if he is indeed the Lord's, he will "desire the sincere milk of the Word that he may grow thereby." (1 Pet. 2: 2.) The Bible is God's Word, written by men who "spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." Receive that Book, then, "not as the word of man, but as it is in truth, the Word of God." (1 Thes. 2: 13.) Yes, that Book which, perhaps, you have often looked upon as little better than a task-book—that Book is the Word of God. It contains all that an inquirer after religious truth need know. Here are the "words of eternal life." Here is spiritual food that can feed, bless, and save you. The Bible is the guide-post, as it were, to point poor wanderers to the kingdom. It is the compass which shows us, as we pass over the troubled waves of life, how we may reach the wished-for haven. It makes known God's will to man. In prayer we speak, as it were, to him; but here, in the Bible, he speaks to us.

What a blessing is it that God has given us a Book which lays open to us his will concerning us! Here is something genuine and substantial to depend upon. We can go to our Bible and read: "Thus saith the Lord;" "It is written." There are no "perhapses" in this holy volume: it speaks to us with authority.

No doubt you have often heard that in damp and marshy places it is not uncommon in the night to observe a certain bright appearance in the air which has sometimes been mistaken for a lantern or a light from a house. Many a lonely traveler, who has lost his way, has seen this light in the distance. A momentary feeling of joy has come across him, for he has thought within himself: "Surely there is some welcome habitation there in which I may find a shelter." He has followed the light only to get farther from the right road. It has led him into fresh danger, till at last he discovers that he has been following a will-o'-the-wisp, which deceived him.

And is it not thus that Satan sometimes endeavors to mislead us? He tempts us to follow other light than the true one. He is ever trying to draw us into the wrong road. God has given us a sure guide, if we will only follow it. "Thy Word, (says David), is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." (119:105.)

Before we go any further I would advise you to ask God's pardon (as I have done) for all your heedless, profitless reading of his Word. Ask him to forgive the great sin of an unheeded Bible, and henceforth make up your mind to take his Word as you companion and the guide of all your steps as you journey on to the kingdom.

Spurgeon says, "If you come to the Holy Scriptures with growth in grace and with aspirations for yet higher attainments, the Book grows with you. It is ever beyond you, and cheerily cries, Higher yet; Excelsior! Many books in my library are now behind and beneath me; I read them years ago with considerable pleasure; I have read them since with disappointment; I shall never read them again, for they are of no service to me. They were good, in their way, once, and so were the clothes I wore when I was ten years old, but I have outgrown them. I know more than these books know, and I know wherein they are faulty. No body ever outgrows Scripture; the book widens and deepens with one's years. It is true, it can not really grow, for it is perfect, but it does so to our apprehension. The deeper you dig in Scripture the more you find that it is a great abyss of truth. The beginner learns four or five points of orthodoxy and says 'I understand the gospel.' I have grasped all of the Bible. Wait a bit: and when his soul grows, and knows more of Christ, he will confess: 'Thy commandment is exceeding broad.' I have only begun to understand it!"

A. M. B. G.

The Prisoner's Prediction.

When Josephus, the Jewish warrior, was taken captive by the Romans, Vespasian was the Roman commander-in chief, and his son Titus the acting general. Hearing that he was to be sent to the Emperor, Nero, Josephus asked a private interview, and thus addressed Vespasian:

"Thou, O Vespasian, thinkest no more than that thou hast taken Josephus himself captive; but I came to thee as a messenger of greater tidings ....Dost thou send me to Nero? For why? Are Nero's successors till they come to thee still alive? Thou, O Vespasian, art Cæsar and Emperor, thou, and this thy son. Bind me now still faster, and keep me for thyself, for thou, Cæsar, art not only lord over me, but over the land and the sea, and all mankind; and certainly I deserve to be kept punished, if I rashly affirm anything of God."

This prophecy has been explained as being based on a prophetic dream, or some remains of the prophetic power of the high priests by the Urim and Thummim, Josephus being of the family of the high priests. But as he himself mentions no dream, or divine revelation; and has told us that the breast plate of the high priest left off shining two hundred years before, the explanation is not satisfactory. Neither is the theory of probability sufficient, for in history we learn that three persons were proclaimed Emperor, and attempted to reign after Nero's death, and before Vespasian; and it appears that Vespasian himself had not, up to this, thought of being Emperor. Nor can we think that Josephus hazarded this prediction on a mere chance. He dared not mock the Romans; if his prediction failed, crucifixion was the least he could expect. He must have had a very good ground for his prophecy made in such circumstances. If it was neither a dream, nor a guess, what could it be? I think the ground of his prediction was Bible prophecy.

Josephus believed "that the city should then be taken; and the sanctuary burnt by right of war, when a sedition should invade the Jews, and their own hands should pollute the temple of God." And "when somebody shall begin the slaughter of his own countrymen." This "oracle" seems an interpretation of Dan. 9: 27, "For the overspreading of abominations he shall make it desolate." Josephus saw the "abominations," the seditions and the 'slaughter of countrymen.' He knew the time was come, and the man was there. And he knew also that the leader of the invaders must be a prince, and that before Jerusalem was taken, for God had so written, "The people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary." (Dan. 9: 26.) So it must be, and so it was. Vespasian was Emperor, and Titus prince, before he began the siege of Jerusalem; and one of "the people of the prince"—a Roman soldier—set fire to the holy house, although Titus was very anxious to save it; and when he, in person, ordered the soldiers to quench the flames, they only set it on fire the more.

Josephus affirmed his prediction was "of God." And so it was, and given centuries before by Daniel. Josephus only claimed to be "a messenger."

A. Armour.

Some Christians Will Never Die.

"And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." (John 11: 26.)

This beautiful passage of God's revealed will has been wrested from its true position, and quoted to prove that all believers have inherent immortality, because Jesus said they "shall never die." But mark! Jesus did not say all believers should never die, but a certain class—"He that liveth." When Martha was lamenting the death of her brother, Jesus said to her, "Thy brother shall rise again." Then Martha replied, "I know he will rise in the resurrection of the last day." She did not console herself, neither did Jesus encourage the thought that her brother was then alive in some other world. Like any other true Christian, she looked by the eye of faith down the stream of time to "the last days"—the resurrection, when her brother would live again. She had not been with our Lord Jesus so long not to understand his doctrine of the resurrection. Hence her answer. Jesus then informed her that he was the resurrection and the life, and to convince her and all others who would believe that such was the fact, that he had the power to raise the dead at the appointed time, this was his special mission there at that time; for he told his disciples when he started—"Our friend Lazarus sleepeth, and I go to wake him out of sleep."

Jesus said then to Martha: "And whosoever believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live again." When Lord?

Why, at the time you were speaking about—at the resurrection in the last day—at the "appointed time;" at the time I said, "I will raise him up." Jesus did not say this in so many words, but his meaning is just as plain as though he had done so.

Jesus had now described one class of believers—those who would not be alive when the time comes to raise the dead in Christ. He then speaks of another class of believers—a class that would not be dead at that time, but a class who "live." "And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die:" and as before he referred to the time when the dead should live again. And this agrees with Paul, when he says: "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed in a moment—in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump." And this is the class Jesus said should "never die." No, they will not have to die; they will be "changed" without dying. There are thousands and tens of thousands living to-day who will never die. Thousands now "live" who will never see death, but will be changed in a moment when Jesus comes, which cannot be a far off event.

Yes, dear weary Christian, whoever you may be, "lift up your head, for your redemption draweth nigh." It is at the doors; there can be no doubt. We do not know the day nor hour, neither do we want to know what God has not seen proper to reveal; but we know as surely as summer follows the budding of the fig tree, that the advent of Jesus will follow the signs we have seen.

J. D. Carey

Scripture and the apostolic fathers teach "Eternal Life only in Christ"; so taught many of the reformers, and leading Christian philosophers of England.

To-Day.

BY LUELLA CLARK.

To-day, while the sun shines,
Work with a will—
To-day all your duties
With patience fulfill.

To-day, while the birds sing,
Harbor no care—
Call life a good gift,
Call the world fair.

To day love the goodness
That's better than gold—
And the truth seek, whose value
Can never be told.

To-day hold the kindness
That thinks evil never—
He who kindly to-day is,
Is kindly forever.

Live, to-day, in the beauty
Of earth, sky, and sea;
For beauty fails never
To you or to me.

To-day, then, love goodness,
And beauty and truth,
The crown of your living,
The grace of your youth

To-day scatter brightness
Wherever you go,
Gladness comes with the giving,
Waves grow as the flow.

To-day is the summit
Of duty and life,
The path of endeavor,
The arena of strife.

To-day is ours only
Work, work while you may,
There is no to-morrow,
But only to-day.

Our "Seance" With Foster, the Noted Test-Spiritist of New York.

This man, for many years past, the most noted and standard "Test-Spiritist" of the North—who, we suppose, has converted more intellectual persons to Spiritism than any other professor of the system—visited our city last week, and gave private seances to select companies at the Overton hotel. Simon Magus could not have caused a greater sensation in Samaria, than did Mr. Foster in this city. Could they have gained an audience, we believe that thousands instead of hundreds would have visited him, and a large proportion of them have acknowledged him "the great power of God"—truly, a real mediator between the living and the dead.

We are solicited, by Dr. S. Watson (the "Christian Spiritualist," and author of "The Clock Struck One"), to visit Mr. Foster for a test interview—to expose Spiritism in the person of its most prominent "test medium," or to acknowledge its reality. We learned that it was expected, by a portion of this community, at least, that we would consent to an interview, and put Mr. Foster to a fair test.

At half-past three o'clock on Sunday last we were introduced to the party gathered in his private room in the hotel. There were five ladies and one gentleman around an oblong table when we entered. He made room for an additional chair, and we joined the party for observation and experiment.

Each person wrote questions upon slips of paper, and, folding them, passed them up to Mr. Foster, who drew them through his fingers several times, and sometimes pressed them to his forehead, and then threw them into a pile before him. In this pile there would be scores of folded slips. The "seer" would diligently study his pile, and often, when not conversing, shade his eyes with both hands until touched or impressed by some "spirit" who came to give an answer to some one of the questions before him. This answer Mr. Foster would give verbally, or in writing, and pick out from the mass the folded slip containing the question, and return it. Though he seldom failed to select the right slip containing the question he assayed to answer, he several times failed to present the slip or address to the person in the circle who propounded the question!

The room must have been over-crowded with spirits that evening, for each questioner had several departed friends and relatives present—all of whom they inquired after, and many more; not one seemed missing, and each spirit "so happy to communicate!"

The departed ones, one and all, invariably reported themselves "very happy," loving dearly their living friends; and professed to be watching over and ministering unto them, and foretelling their future blissful meeting.

This test demonstrated that Spiritism rests upon the doctrine of the universal salvation of all, irrespective of the moral character possessed in the flesh! In further proof of this a gentleman obtained a communication, through Mr. Foster, from a friend who lived wickedly and died a swearer, who, when asked how he was getting along, replied: "I am having a h—ll of a good time of it." When asked if it was as bad as "Camp Douglass," replied: "Oh! a d—d sight better." Mr. Foster apologized for the language, but it was only the spirit's style! Yes that spirit was very happy!

I went prepared for a crucial test, believing Mr. Foster to be a seer and clairvoyant, as well as a powerfully developed mesmeric medium. The first test with me was: could all the spirits Mr. Foster could summon from the "vasty deep" enable him to answer one question the answer of which was unknown to me?

I presented to him questions prepared for me by my wife, Dr. George Snyder (my father-in-law), also by Col. Mathews and Major Burleson—questions which I had neither seen nor heard read (except one), but questions which the spirits professing to be communicating with him knew as well as they ever knew their own names—e. g., when and where did you die? Where was your father, etc. Not one of all these questions was answered, nor did he, during the whole sitting, answer one question the answer of which was unknown to me.

This test demonstrated one fact: that Mr. Foster was not in communication with any of my departed friends.

The first professed communication from spirits I received was this: Mr. Foster, picking up a slip I had handed him, threw it back to me saying: "The spirits say, 'Tell Mrs. Graves that they know nothing about the ten dollars she lost on Christmas day.'" This startled the company, and he asked me if it had any meaning. I answered that Mrs. Graves had informed us that on Christmas day she had taken a ten dollar bill to pay her cook; but, meantime company came in, and she received them with the money in her hand, and that was the last she ever saw of it, though upon their leaving, she searched the room diligently; and, like the woman in the parable, my wife was anxious to find it, and had asked the question. This was the one she told me she had in the list, and this Mr. Foster, as a "seer" (which he professed to be), read from the paper, though folded,. I opened the slip he handed me and read thus: "Mrs. J. R. Graves wishes to know where the ten dollar bill is that so mysteriously disappeared on Christmas morning?" No spirit was needed in all this.

Now came the second test: could we control, by our single power of will, his mind, and influence the answer he gave us? We had instructed Col. Mathews and Major Burleson how to aid us in this test, having prepared questions and agreed upon incorrect answers which we were to will the medium to give us. This test required great control over the mind and power of abstraction and concentration on the part of the experimenter to succeed. But these gentlemen were refused admittance with us by Mr. Foster, and we were left to enter the mental contest, single handed and alone, with this mesmeric gladiator.

He soon announced that our first wife was present, and very happy to be allowed the privilege of informing us how much she appreciated our fond love and constant kindness toward her while in the flesh; that she now, more than in life, appreciated it; that she loved us; had for the long years watched over us, and would to the end; and that our meeting would be blissful, etc. We failed to obtain from her any description of her person, or word, by which we could recognize the spirit as that of our first wife, save that she stated that she died in child-bed.

It is presumable that a thought of her was unconsciously upon our mind, and he read it, as any mesmeric medium could have done.

After some five minutes I was informed that my mother was present. I abstracted my mind, so far as possible, from her, and fixed it upon some thing else; and he gave me no description of her—not even the usual "I am very happy," and "ever with you," and "we shall meet again," etc.

I said: "If it is my mother, will she give me her maiden name?" He replied, "Yes." Some minutes passed and no reply. I again called his attention to the fact that my mother could not, or had not, given me her name. Giving me a card with the alphabet printed in capital letters upon it, he said, "She says if you will touch the first letter of her name she will sensibly impress you." I commenced touching each letter, and with a great effort to abstract my mind from my mother. I repeatedly touched the letter L, but felt no touch upon my person or impress upon my mind, though he imperatively ordered the spirit to impress or touch me. This seemed to him an unexpected failure. He told me to write down several names on a slip of paper, with her name among them, and she would designate her name. I remarked, "Your spirits are very capricious!" He asked what I meant. I replied, "I simply meant they are capricious. Why will not my mother tell you her real name, or write it for me?" I prepared the slip as he requested, which he took and tore off each name, and rolled it up in a little pellet, and then addressing the "spirit," requested her to pick out her name. Taking up a little ball, he said: Is this it? be quite sure. If it is your name, rap three times on the table by your son." I heard three dull raps, but seemed not to recognize them. He said: "Lay your ear against the table." I did so, and heard three touches, not unlike he could have produced by touching the table with his pencil. I said: "I hear touches, but they may be produced by yourself—you know wood is an excellent conductor of sound. Let me hear them distinct and clear, as though made upon the table directly under my ear." He ordered the spirit, very positively, to do so, but no rap came. He then threw the pellet to me, I opened it, and found it was the slip on which I had written "Lous!" This, the "spirit" said, was my mother's maiden name! She was named after Timothy's grandmother—Lois. She never wrote her name "Lous;" but I had fixed my mind upon this—the name of no one—to be given me for her name, and it was given! Let Spiritists give a satisfactory explanation of this. I can do so.

I then asked Mr. Foster if he could influence my father to write his name in full, and a fac simile of the hand he wrote in the flesh.

Mr. Foster answered affirmatively. My father dying when I was but a few weeks old, I never saw but one or two specimens of his writing, and the chirography was not at all familiar to me, but I knew I had one of his letters at home. It was for this very reason that I called for his fac simile. Mr. Foster prepared a slip of paper, and, putting a pencil upon it, held it, with one hand, under the table, while I thought only of my mother's maiden name! He drew forth the paper and it had but one name upon it—"Louis!" —the name and handwriting of neither parent in fact, but something like my mother's maiden name in sound!

Let Spiritists account for this if they can. Those acquainted with the laws of mesmerism can do so satisfactorily.

This was all the spirits wished, or Mr. Foster could communicate, about my parents; and it was evident they were not present, for if my father had forgotten the name he was called by in the form, my mother could certainly have told him, for Mr. Foster said she was present.

After some time, Mr. Foster, attending to the questions asked by others, said: "I am impressed; a beautiful spirit form stands beside me, with a halo round her head, and a sweet placid look. She is also Mrs. Graves, but not like the former spirit. Am I mistaken: have y[illegible]u two wives in the spirit [illegible] in the form?" I answer[illegible]o." He then said: "Mr[illegible]py to speak to you, and [illegible] known to you. You. Dr. [illegible]ves, ha[illegible]e peculiar characteristics [illegible]vorable to the spirits; I mean, noth[illegible]g repulsive about you to them, but [illegible]er attractive. You are rather impressive." He meant we had great power to impress him and the spirits, or were very susceptible to being impressed, we do not know which, but think the tests prove the former to have been his meaning.

I wrote on a slip: "If it is my wife communicating, will she answer me the questions following?" I did not know the correct answer, and thought of none, and RECEIVED NONE! I urged Mr. Foster to influence an answer, saying: "If Mrs. Graves is indeed present, and can talk and write, and wishes to convince me that it is her spirit, why will she not answer questions she knows as well as she knows her own name?" Mr. Foster was somewhat confused. I asked if she would write her own name, in the hand she wrote in life, so that I might recognize it as hers? Mr. Foster answered that she would. He placed the pencil on a piece of paper, against the under-side of the table. We saw the end of the pencil move in a moment. He held it up. "Lue S. Graves," (it looked as if it might have been written by Horace Greely), was written backward and bottom upward.

Mr. Foster asked if I was satisfied. I replied:

"If it is my wife, Mr. Foster, she can write her name, if she can write at all, so it can be read, and her chirography recognized by me."

"She says she will write through me." Mr. Foster wrote on the slip "Lou S. Graves," in an open, running hand.

He asked me if I was now satisfied. I replied, "It is not my wife's handwriting." He essayed it once more, and the result was "Lou S. Graves," in a small, cramped hand.

My wife's name was Lo[illegible] Jane. I sometimes wrote her nam[illegible]u Snider Graves. This, of course, wa[illegible] fixed thought, though I had no im[illegible]sion of her handwriting on my mind. She never so wrote her name. But here it was written in three different "hands," and spelled in different ways, and not her proper name once, nor once as she was accustomed to write it!

Let Spiritists satisfactorily account for this according to Spiritism. I can by the well known laws of mesmerism. Mr. Foster appeared dissatisfied, and turned his attention to others for some time. Some seemed pleased, especially those nearest and next to him. They were ladies, and ever and anon he grasped their hands, or laid his hand upon an arm or a shoulder. A mesmerizer would have done just so. One time when he seemed to have lost his power over the circle, he requested all to sit up closer to the table, and place their hands upon it—and a mesmerizer would have done just so. It was evident to me that he read their thoughts as a medium can do.

I had by this time become quite self-possessed. Dr. Watson remarked: "I wish you would convert my friend Dr. Graves, for he is an honest man and an honest inquirer."

"I don't try to convert any one, I only communicate what is given me," said Mr. Foster.

THE PINK WRITING.—Having heard of this manifestation, I asked Mr. Foster if he could give me the name of the wife professing to be conversing with me in pink letters on his hand. He readily consented, and held up the back of his hand to the light, and requested me to look. In the course of ten or fifteen seconds I could distinguish the letters "L. S. G.," in pink, upon it. They remained but a few seconds, and vanished out.

I am not prepared, at this time, to satisfactorily account for this appearance, nor would I have been able to account for what is effected by Mr. Foster and others by the gift of "seering," or clairvoyance, and mesmerism, unless I had some knoweledge of them. I have two very sufficient reasons for not believing it the work of the spirits of the departed:

1. What their spirits could not effect on my spirit or upon my body when in their bodies, their disembodied spirits can not effect. The death change does not produce any radical change upon the spirit, it affects the body only. It certainly does not improve their chirography, or orthography, or scholarship in any way, as Spiritism abundantly testifies!

2. If it was indeed a spirit, and the spirit of my wife, who traced those letters, why did she not write her own initials, and why the fanciful ones I had in my mind? It is simply absurd to suppose it was her spirit.

Why suppose it a spirit at all, good or bad? Who of us know but that Mr. Foster could, by the peculiar condition of his mind and body, cause them to appear by the force of his own will? Or why not suppose that he had the power to cause them to appear so written to our minds? A mesmerizer can cause his subject to hear or see anything he may see fit to picture up in his own imagination. This is a well known fact in mesmerism, and I have myself proved it to be true. With me it is not a speculation. But I have no knowledge of a medium producing such effects on the operator. It may have been, and may be done; and, if so, this effect is accounted for. I regarded Mr. Foster as the medium, and myself acting upon him, but he may have gained more or less control over my mind.

Spiritists are now granting that it is by means of mesmerism, etc., that spirits communicate with us. If so, why do they not tell the truth, if good spirits? And why can they not tell what they know, even if we do not know it? This plea is altogether too thin for practical use.

After some little time, Mr. Foster looked towards me, and said, "Mary Graves is here, and says she is a distant relative." I asked: "Will she tell me when and where she died?" No answer. I did not know, and Mr. Foster could not tell! This was crushing, and he evidently felt it.

He remarked: "I think I have given you proof of life after death, and of spirit influence—the writing under the table and upon my arm, etc." I replied: "I do not question either. I believe we live after this life, and I believe in the influence of spirits, and perhaps spirits have operated here; but the question is, what spirits are they? Are they the spirits of our departed friends? You have thus far demonstrated to me that those professing to be mine are not mine." "How so?" "You say they are here, standing by you, and that they can, and wish to, communicate with me, and convince me that they are here, and yet they can not answer the simplest question I ask—can not even tell me when or where, in what year or State they died!"

After some time he again looked towards me, and said: "George Snider. Have you no relative by that name?" "Yes, sir; what does he wish?" "To speak to you." "Is his name Dr. Geo. Snider?" "Yes, sir; that's his name—Dr. George Snider." "Will he tell me where he died?" A long silence, but Mr. Foster busily engaged answering others. Finally: "Mr. Foster, you keep the doctor waiting a long time; he is an impatient spirit unless greatly changed since last I saw him. Permit him to answer my question." He says you must write down several places, and the correct one among them, and he will indicate it." I did, so and folded the slips and handed them to Mr. Foster, who soon returned "Memphis." I called the special attention of the gentleman sitting by my side to the answer, when Mr. Foster anxiously asked me if it was correct. I informed him that Dr. George Snider had dined with me an hour since, and if this was indeed his spirit, he had died within the last hour. The company was only momentarily stunned, but each eagerly urged him to obtain answers to their questions.

Mr. Foster had no more communications for me during the rest of sitting! This "seance" was as decidedly unsatisfactory to my friend (Dr. Watson) as it was satisfactory to myself. It fully confirmed me in the positions I have presented, that much which passes for communion with spirits is only mesmerism aided by animal magnetism and clairvoyance.

If these were indeed the spirits of my friends, as Mr. Foster claimed, could they not have given him their real names? Would my father, whose name was Zuinglius Calvin, have given the maiden name of my mother for his own, and misspelled it at that? Who will believe it that is not given up to be deceived? He said he could and would write his name as he wrote it in life, and utterly failed to do so.

Why could not my mother give me her maiden name if she was indeed my mother? Why could she not write it? And why not rap upon my head or shoulder, as Mr. Foster requested her, as well as upon the table?

Why could not my wife, in the whole interview, in any way communicate to Mr. Foster or myself her own name? Why could she not tell the year she died?

How was Mr. Foster impressed that Dr. George Snider was dead, and wished to converse with me? How was it that he asserted that he died in Memphis, when he was smoking his cigar in my sitting-room?

We can only suggest here how Mr. Foster answered as he did, and always correctly when his questioners themselves knew the right answers.

Mesmerism is that singular power by which the medium is enabled to read every impression upon, and every thought that passes through the mind of any one with whom he is put in en rapport, or mesmeric connection. There is no doubt of this, for I have produced the state in others, and know what I say by experiment. Mr. Foster is a powerful medium, and by means of the circle, puts himself in mesmeric connection with every one at the table. He can, therefore, read their minds, tell the question they wish to ask, and give the answer they expect—were thinking about at the time; but he cannot answer questions the answers of which are unknown to the questioner. While I had prepared no question concerning my first wife, I cannot say that no thought of her, or the striking manner of her death, had passed through my mind while at the table, listening, as I was, to descriptions of the death of the friends in the circle around me. The message was so unexpected I was, at first, startled, and thought that possibly Dr. Watson, or some one else, had informed Mr. Foster that I had lost two wives, etc.; but a moment's reflection convinced me how it might have been. Mr. Foster, by the aid of all his spirits, revealed nothing to me that was not upon my own mind; and when my spirit impressed his, and dictated to him an answer or communication, he may have thought it was the spirit of Dr. Snider indeed. Why not?

If my theory is true, a man of self-will and positive elements of character, can obtain from Mr. Foster, or any other medium, just such answers and communications as he wills him to give. Let this test be tried; and when one cannot do this alone, let the circle be made up of those who are agreed upon the answers to certain questions, and it matters not one whit whether the spirit be catechised by the spirit of a dead friend or a dead flea, the answers will be those determined upon by the circle. Strange as this may seem, we advise its trial, and solicit a report of the results. If not true, why did Mr. Foster answer me as he did?

A writer asks, through the Avalanche (who must have been the gentleman at my left, whom I took to be one of the editors of that paper, since Dr. Watson denies the nom de plume), "how Mr. Foster could tell of my wife's losing the ten dollars on Christmas day in her own parlor?" Very easily done, if Mr. Foster possesses the power he confessed to us—i. e., that he was a seer (we said clairvoyant). A seer can read as well with his eyes shut as open, read writing through a thousand folds, read a book or paper held at the back of his head. The eyeless fish in the Mammoth cave are doubtless "seers." This is a rare and wonderful gift, possessed by but few, but certainly possessed. Our standard books on mental science admit it and treat of it. Mansfield, of New York, possesses it, remarkably developed. Letters have been sent him from the South, finely written, closely folded, put in an envelope and then quilted thoroughly, sealed with many seals, and sent to him, and he has returned the letter unopened, but every question it contained correctly stated, if not answered. Call it clairvoyance or seer-ing, Mr. Mansfield is constantly doing it, and those who do not believe, let them try him, sending along with the quilted and sealed letter the necessary X or half X. Mr. Foster told me that he was a "seer;" then, of course, he read my wife's question, written on the folded slip, and could say the spirits (within him) could not tell what became of it. "Investigator," in the Avalanche of the 14th, if ignorant of these known facts, is admirably qualified to be gulled by any lecturing or seancing Spiritists of this city, which Francis Train pronounced the "very paradise for gullers."

As it is not expected that the mass of readers are conversant with these facts, and to put them on their guard against those who exercise the gift, and attribute it to "spirits," I will quote a few paragraphs from standard authors. Sir Wm. Hamilton remarks:

However astonishing, it is now proved, beyond all rational doubt, that, in certain abnormal states of the nervous organism, perceptions are possible through other than the ordinary channels of the senses. (Hamilton's Reid, p. 246, note 2, Edinburgh edition).

Dr. Wayland says:

This subject has attracted considerable attention, both in this country and in Europe....It has been, I believe, proved beyond dispute, that patients under this influence have submitted to the most distressing operations without consciousness of pain; that other persons have cognized events at a great distance, and have related them correctly at the time; and that persons totally blind, when in the state of mesmeric consciousness, have enjoyed for the time the power of perceiving external objects......This subject seems to me well worthy of the most searching and candid investigation. The facts seem to indicate some more general laws of mental cognition than have yet been discovered. The matter is by no means deserving of ridicule, but demands the attention of the most philosophical inquirers.

Dr. Wayland gives the following facts stated in a letter to him by J. M. Brooke, of the United States Navy. Owing to its interest I give it in full:

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27, 1851.

SIR:—It affords me pleasure to comply with your request, made through my brother William, relative to some experiments performed on board of the U. S. steamer Princeton, in the latter part of the year 1847; she being then on a cruise in the Mediterranean. Nathaniel Bishop, the subject of the experiments, was a mulatto, about twenty-six years of age, in good health, but of an excitable disposition. The first experiment was of the magnetic or mesmeric sleep, which overpowered him in thirty minutes from the commencement of passes made in the ordinary way, accompanied with a steadfast gaze and effort of will that he should sleep.

In this state he was insensible to all voices but mine, unless I directed or willed him to hear others; he was also insensible to such amount of pain as one might inflict without injury, that is, what would have been pain to another. He would obey my directions to whistle, dance, or sing. When aroused from this sleep he had no recollection of what occurred while in it. That such an influence could be exerted, I was already aware, having previously witnessed satisfactory experiments. Of clairvoyance I had never been convinced; indeed, considered it nothing more than a sort of dreaming produced by the will of the operator. I became aware of its truth rather through accident than design.

It happened one day that some one of my brother officers asked a question which the others could not answer. Bishop, who had been a few moments before in a mesmeric sleep, gave the desired information, speaking with confidence and apparent accuracy. As the information related to something which it seemed almost impossible to know without seeing, we were very much surprised. It struck me that he might be clairvoyant; and I at once asked him to tell me the time by a watch kept in the binnacle, on the spar or upper deck, we being on the berth or lower deck. He answered correctly, as I found upon looking at the watch, allowing eight or nine seconds for time occupied in getting on deck. I then asked him many questions with regard to subjects at a distance, which he answered, and, as far as I could ascertain, correctly.

For example, one evening, while at anchor in the port of Genoa, the captain was on shore. I asked Bishop, in the presence of several officers, where the captain then was. He replied, "At the opera, with Mr. Lester, the consul." "What does he say?" I inquired. Bishop appeared to listen, and in a moment replied, "The captain tells Mr. Lester that he was much pleased with the port of Xavia; that the authorities treated him with much consideration."

Upon this, one of the officers laughed, and said that when the captain returned he would ask him. He did so; saying, "Captain, we have been listening to your conversation on shore." "Very well," remarked the captain, "What did I say?" expecting some jest. The officer then repeated what the captain said of Xavia and its authorities. "Ah," said the captain, "who was at the opera? I did not see any of the officers there." The lieutenant then explained the matter. The captain confirmed its truth, and seemed very much surprised, as there had been no other communication with the shore during the evening. I may remark that we had touched at several ports between Xavia and Genoa.

On another occasion, an officer being on shore, I directed Bishop to examine his pockets; he made several motions with his hands, as if actually drawing something from the officer's pockets, saying, "Here is a handkerchief, and here a box—what a curious thing! full of little white sticks with blue ends. What are they, Mr. Brooke?" I replied, "Perhaps they are matches." "So they are!" he exclaimed. My companions, expecting the officer mentioned, went on deck, and meeting him at the gangway, asked, "What have you in your pockets?" "Nothing," he replied. "But have you not a box of matches!" "O, yes!" said he. "How did you know it? I bought them just before I came on board." The matches were peculiar, made of white wax with blue ends.

The surgeons of the Princeton ridiculed these experiments, upon which I requested one of them (Farquharson) to test for himself, which he consented to do. With some care he placed Bishop and myself in one corner of the apartment, and then took a position some ten feet distant, concealing between his hands a watch, the long second hand of which traversed the dial. He first asked for a description of the watch. To which Bishop replied, "'Tis a funny watch, the second-hand jumps."

The doctor then asked him to tell the minute and second, which he did; directly afterwards exclaiming, "The second-hand has stopped!" which was the case, Dr. F. having stopped it. "Well," said the doctor, "to what second does it point, and to what hour; and what minute is it now?" Bishop answered correctly, adding, "'Tis going again." He then told twice in succession the minute and second.

The doctor was convinced, saying that it was contrary to reason, but he must believe. I then proposed that the doctor should mark time; and directed Bishop to look in his mother's house in Lancaster, Pa. (where he had never been), for a clock; he said there was one there, and told the time by it; one of the officers calculated the difference in time for the longitudes of Lancaster and Genoa, and the clock was found to agree within five minutes of the watch time.

Several persons being still unconvinced, I proposed that the captain should select a letter from the files in his cabin, and put it on the cabin table; and that Bishop should read it without leaving an apartment on the deck below the cabin, and some distance forward of it. Upon this the captain sent for me, and, telling me that all the discipline in the service would be destroyed, ordered me to discontinue the practice. As Bishop retained his power of clairvoyance, I often amused myself in sending him to the United States, and, although I cannot assert that he always told the truth, I believe that in many instances he did so, as I have surprised persons when relating to them for confirmation such experiments in clairvoyance as concerned actions unknown, as they supposed, to any one but themselves.

As it was in my power to control Bishop in his wanderings, I usually limited his powers of observation, and meddled only so far in the affairs of my neighbors as might be honorable.

The power which I acquired by putting him to sleep, remained after he woke, and was increased by its exercise. If not exerted for several days it decreased, sometimes rendering it necessary to repeat the passes and again put him to sleep. While awake and under my influence, I made many experiments, such as arresting his arm when raising food to his mouth, or fixing him motionless in the attitude of drinking. On one occasion I willed that he should continue pouring tea into a cup already full, which he did, notwithstanding the exclamations of those who were scalded in the operation. These influences were exerted without a word or change of position on my part. He remembered or forgot what he saw when clairvoyant, as I willed, of which I satisfied myself by experiment.

All his senses were under control, so completely, indeed, that had I willed him to stop breathing I believe that he would. You may wish to know something more with regard to my experience; if so, I shall be happy to inform you. I am, sir, respectfully, your obedient servant, J. M. BROOKE.

It will no longer appear supramundane that Foster, Mansfield and all their class of mesmerists and clairvoyants can perform the feats they do in reading the minds of their questioners, or the contents of folded slips or quilted letters. Leaving the idea of spirit communion out of the matter, an hour spent experimenting with Foster or Mansfield would be profitable to those prepared by previous study to investigate the subject of mesmerism and clairvoyance; but how few of those who visit Mr. Foster would give a nickel to understand either subject. But fives and fifties are as free as water to have an infidel mesmerist tell them there is no future endless punishment; tell them the Bible is not true, and Christ no more the Son of God than he himself is! J. R. GRAVES.

FACTS ADMITTED, BUT NOT ACCOUNTED FOR.

Our statements of facts have now been before the public for one week, and not one of them has been questioned by Mr. Foster or either of the two other gentlemen in the room. They are, of course, admitted. Why does not some Spiritist come forward and explain those manifestations by the principles of Spiritism, if it has any fixed principles? or why does not every heretofore professed believer in it frankly give it up as successfully exploded, and confess the fact indubitably established that the great test medium of America is practising mesmerism and clairvoyance upon the people for Spiritism? If any man or woman in America can get communications from the spirits of the dead, no Spiritist doubts that Mr. Foster can. If he ever did do it, did he not at the Overton Hotel test? But he did not do it then and there. We demonstrated to every one that he did not. Who will now say that he ever did? If Foster never did, Mansfield never did, and no one living ever did. We believe that the devil and his angels have aided, and will again aid, their mediums to perform wonders so great that, if it were possible, they would deceive the elect; but we do not believe in necromancy—communion with the spirits of the dead.—The Memphis Baptist.

The Resurection.

Christian men should not be "Children of the mist." They should know what they are looking for, and be able to declare the ground of their confidence. That which is our greatest concern should be our greatest certainty. In relation to the future life, that certainty may be gained; for "in the fullness of time" there came One into the world who was able to say, "I am the resurrection and the life." This was as the sound of a trumpet in the night, which no mortal could have sounded; it was a voice full of authority and full of power. The words have gone down to the deepest foundations of human nature, and among the noblest of men are treasured as a life within the life.

Philosophers had long been discussing in vain the immortality of the soul. Their words were beautiful, but evanescent. Like palaces and castles in the western sky, they were imposing, but without endurance. They were but theories. Of all who had gone down into the sepulcher, not one had returned to speak of what lay beyond it.

God teaches by facts. The resurrection of Christ was a great fact. The narrative given in Scripture of that marvelous event carries with it all the severe simplicity of truth. Ages before a voice had gone forth through the prophet Isaiah, "O death, I will be thy destruction;" and now the word was accomplished. He rose, and death was conquered. No tongues of men or angels could have given reality to the future life. It was needful that immortality should be made visible in the glorious resurrection of the second Adam, the Lord from heaven." Peter speaks of this as the sure ground of certainty,—"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath begotten us again unto a living hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead." It is as if he had said, "Our former hope we buried in the Master's grave. But now we have one which cannot die, because it is grounded in life; it is a hope which will grow brighter until our inheritance be revealed."

We are not formed to be satisfied with the present. We have all prophetic impulses after a better order of things, serene and enduring. "Hope springs eternal in the human breast," and we still keep looking forward to a happier economy. This fact alone would seem to indicate the possible destinies of humanity.—Sunday Morning.

The First Bereavement

I was turning in my mind, last evening, thoughts of my early experience, and there came up particularly a train of memories connected with early sorrows—the loss of my children. I remember as well to-night as I did at the time the night my oldest-born son died. I remember well the hope and the fear, and I remember the victory of submission. It was the first sorrow. I remember the spirit of prayer that seemed to fill the whole hemisphere, as I went down to the city, for the life of my child. I think if ever one came near throwing his soul out of his body, I did that night. It was a double sorrow, because I had given him up first and then taken him back again. It was in March, and there came a great storm, like that we have been passing through, and the whole ground was covered, and we went down to the graveyard with little Georgie, and waded through the snow. I got out of the carriage and took the little child in my arms, wading knee-deep beside the grave, and saw Winter down at the very bottom of it. We lowered the coffin in, and I saw the snow-flakes follow it, and then the earth hid it from me. If I should live a thousand years I could not help shivering every time I think of it. It seemed to me then as if I had not only lost my child, but had buried him in eternal snows. It was very hard for faith or imagination to break through the physical aspect of things and find a brighter feeling; but from that day to this I do not suppose there has ever been a snow-storm that first or last did not come back to my thought that picture and that experience. There has never been a winter or a snow-storm that had not a soul in it of memory. I date from that time a deep and enduring sympathy with suffering sorrow, so I do not know but it was a kind of ordination, or laying on of God's hands; at any rate, not an ordinary ordination; but, on the whole I can say I think it was better for me that I should have lost that oldest child; the happiness I should have had from him would not have been, on the whole, equal to the benefit I have derived from that first great sorrow of life.—H. W. Beecher.

Nobody is more like an honest man than a thorough rogue.

The Bible Class.

"Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name: That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, of things on earth, and things under the earth; and every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father!" (Phil. 2:9 11.)

Professor Stuart says that the words, "things in heaven, earth, and under the earth" is a common periphrasis of the Hebrew and New Testament writers, for the universe.

Dr. George Campbell says these words "include the WHOLE RATIONAL CREATION."

Albert Barnes says, "The whole universe shall confess that he is Lord. The meaning is that they shall all acknowledge him as universal Lord; all bow to his sovereign will; all be subject to his control; all recognize him as divine."

Dr. Lange says, it "comprises the entire realm of worshiping creatures."

It being settled that this passage is universal in its application, it inevitably follows that either the Universalist or the Destructionist theology is the true one; there is room for no other view but one of these. Confession of Christ "to the glory of God" can not refer to a forced acknowledgment of his power by millions of souls in torment; hence, when the prediction is fulfilled, all intelligent beings that have been unreconciled to God, will have become either restored or extinct. The following authorities sustain the view that the confession referred to is "spiritual worship:"

Dr. A. Clarke: "By confessing him to be Lord, we may understand that worship that all intelligent creatures are called to pay to God."

Dr. Barnes: "All shall bow to his sovereign will; all be subject to his control; all recognize him as divine."

Professor Stuart: "What can be meant by things in heaven bowing the knee to Jesus, if spiritual worship be not meant?" Of Rev. 5:13, in which it is said that the intelligent creation was heard to praise God, he writes: "If this be not spiritual worship, and Christ be not the object of it here, I am unable to produce a case where worship can be called spiritual or divine."

Dr. Lange: "It means the eloquent homage breaking forth from the heart and confessing itself to him."

BEZA renders 1 Cor. 15:45, 'Factus est prior homo Adamus animalvivens,' i.e., 'The first man Adam was made a living animal.' This is no more than the original Hebrew imports—living soul—being a term applicable to any and every creature. See GEN. 1:20, 21, 24, 30, etc.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, February 25, 1873.

'There is a spirit in man.'—Bible.

There is a separate moral-intelligent-spirit-entity in man, which with all its powers survives in a conscious state the death of its body.—Not Bible.

A San Francisco minister recently announcing the death of a brother clergyman, said, "I suppose you are all aware that Rev. Mr. ——— is dead, and in the arms of Jesus, for which we are all sorry. I will attend the funeral."

Is it not true, is it not terribly true, that

"Not all the preachers since Adam
Can make death other than death?"

And is it not also hopefully, blissfully true, that through the second Adam, Jesus Christ, death is a vanquished enemy, and life and immortality have been brought to light through the resurrection of the dead.

If continuity of life is destroyed, there can be no resurrection of man; only the creation of a new man, like the other.—Assertion of a zealous immaterialist.

Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able to subdue all things unto himself.—Paul.

Reader, which do you believe?

We have been censured for admitting the 'sarcasm' of certain writers upon sanctification theories into The Times. In view of this fact it may be well to note that the Washington correspondent of Zion's Herald, in a personal sketch of Mr. Inskip, the Magnus Apollo of the new movement, mentions his 'keen sarcasm' as one of the elements of 'a masterly effort' made by him. Is 'sarcasm' to be exclusively appropriated by the teachers of the unscriptural view? Moreover, is the use of sarcasm or irony unscriptural? Search and see.

One of our strictly orthodox exchanges says, editorially:

> A poet asks, "Where are the dead? the vanished dead, who trod the earth that now we tread?" If we were to make a random guess, we should say the most of them are buried—though this may not be the right answer.

—Our brother is good at guessing. If he could always hit the truth so exactly he would do well to keep on guessing. But his text books on the place of the dead will tell him that the dead are in heaven—neither dead nor buried.

In a recent obituary we find the following continuous contradictory assertions. We give them to provoke thought:

> We did not think his life was completed, but it was.
> The Master called him home.
> Joy there, sorrow here.
> As we laid him in the tomb we read these words upon the casket which contained his form
>
> "Our boy is dead."
> "He is not dead, but sleepeth"
> "He giveth his beloved sleep."
>
> No. He is not dead!
> He is risen!
> May the God of consolation comfort the hearts of the stricken parents and family.

Chronology of Romish Dogmas.—Penance, A. D. 157, Monkery, 328, Mass in Latin, 394, Purgatory, 593, Invocation of Virgin and Saints, 593, Extreme Unction, 600, Papal Usurpation, 606, Kissing the Pope's Toe, 709, Image Worship, 715, Canonization, 993, Baptism of Bells 1,000, Celibacy of the Clergy, 1,015, Indulgencies, 1,199, Dispensations, 1,200, Transubstantiation, 1,215, Auricular Confession, 1,215, Elevation of the host, 1,222, Inquisition, 1,233. The soul immortal and of the form of the body, Lateran Council, 1,513. How many of these do we find in the Bible?

Sense is sometimes sacrificed to rhetoric. A tract before us has the following remarkable sentence:

> Let us arise in the strength of Judah's Lion, and bow ourselves like Samson, and take hold of the pillars of Antichrist's temple, and make a united and last effort to defeat sin and Satan, and vindicate Christ and the gospel.

—Now if we remember aright, when Samson laid hold of the pillars of the pagan temple and bowed himself, he destroyed his enemies at the sacrifice of his own life. Let us not imitate him in our conflict with opposing elements.

A British prophetic journal says:

> It is considered most desirable to hold a Prophetic Conference of Second Advent believers in London, in the early part of 1873, perhaps about February, for three or four days, and to secure the presence of ten or twenty of the most advanced students of prophecy, as speakers, if a sufficient sum for its expenses is raised.... Very considerable publicity may be given to these prophetic views, by the press and otherwise, if a large conference is convened, and able speakers secured. In event of such conference being held, the afternoons would be devoted to what are termed open meetings, in which no set speakers are appointed, but any one who feels disposed may rise and express his opinions for ten or fifteen minutes, thus a dozen or more speakers may be heard in the course of the meeting.

Should such a meeting occur, our English correspondent will no doubt be present, and give our readers a report of the proceedings.

The Baptist (Memphis, Tenn.) publishes as sound doctrine, among others the following propositions;—

> The Resurrection of the Righteous.—There will be a resurrection of the righteous dead prior to the advent of Christ, who, with the living saints, will be changed in a moment, and caught up to meet the Lord in the air, to appear with him at his coming and judgment and punishment of the persecuting nations. (Deut. 33: 2. 1 Thes. 4: 16, 18. Zach. 14: 5. 1 Thes. 1: 3, 13. Jude 14: 5. 1 Cor. 15: 51, 55.)
>
> The Millennium.—At the coming of Christ he will judge and destroy the nations that have persecuted his people, take to himself all dominion and rule, and sitting upon the throne of his father, David, in Jerusalem as King and Priest, will rule with his saints over all nations for one thousand years.—(Dan. 7: 17, 22, 27. 2: 44. Mat. 25: 31, 46. Rev. 20: 1, 7. Is. 65: 8, 25; 63: 1, 7. Ps. 2. Mat. 5: 5. Ps. 37: 9, 11, 22, 29, 34. Is. 60: 21. Mat. 19: 29; 25: 34. Ps. 25: 13.)
>
> The Heaven of the Saints.—After this earth shall have been purified by fire, and the new heavens and new earth shall have been fashioned and prepared as a heavenly place for the final abode of the redeemed, Christ will descend out of heaven with his saints and his tabernacle will be with them. Then cometh the end when he shall have delivered up his scepter to the Father, and all things will then be conciliated and harmonious as before sin entered into the world.—(Rev. 21. 1 Cor. 15: 24, 29.)

—And we cordially endorse them with an amendment to the second in order, to the effect that of the reign of Jesus there will be no end, as the angel declares in Lk. ch. 1. It is absurd to limit the "no end" kingdom of the Redeemer to a millennium. Language better expressive of eternal duration cannot be found—Of his kingdom there shall be no end.

WHAT OUR FRIENDS SAY.

We have thought best this week to say nothing ourselves upon the interesting subject of our future, but give the space to our correspondents. It will be seen that a few more of the one thousand called for by Br. Johnson have come forward.

A brother in Connecticut, whose donation was acknowledged last week, says: "I take the liberty of sending you the enclosed draft to help out in the good cause. I owe not a little to yourself and the paper, and should sadly miss the weekly visits of the latter, were they to be suspended."

Br. Marshall McCullock writes:

I noticed with much interest the articles on "Our Future," "Our Responsibilities," and "The Time for Action." First, you ask the question (and a legitimate question, too), "Can we not rally to the uplifted standard? Can we not join you with heart and hand, and exalt the Lord Jesus Christ in making ready a people for his name?"

I answer in the affirmative. We can! And more than this, we will. I have already the promise of one new subscriber and five dollars, which will be forthcoming soon. I shall solicit donations for the Association at our next meeting.

This is right, churches should engage in this work as well as individuals.

A sister in Maine, always in the front to respond to every call, says: "I meant to have been one of the one thousand; but have had to settle certain bills contracted in a late illness, so I can send you but one dollar, with a prayer that many hearts may be moved to help in the cause of the soon-coming Redeemer."

An old friend in Rhode Island sends a draft for one hundred dollars, with this brief note, containing, indeed, a whole sermon:

"I see by the paper that you are in want of money to carry on the work of publishing the glad tidings of the kingdom at hand, and having a little surplus which I prefer to lay up in treasures in heaven rather than on earth, I send you the enclosed draft for $100. And may God give you wisdom to use it to his glory."

Next comes a kind word from the Pacific coast:

Dear Brethren of like precious faith: I want to add my testimony to the many that will be sent to The Times, I hope, ere this reaches the office. While reading The Times of Jan. 28, I could not help shedding a tear when I thought of the possibility of our paper, which myself and wife have learned to love, going down. And as our brother says, what a blank it would cause, and what a chasm it would leave; and how many dear and tender ties would thus be sundered, never to be restored. What can we do? Well, we can send five dollars, although we really need it ourselves. But we trust in the Lord, and he will take care of us. Bless his name.

Just here the passage comes to my mind, found in James, ch. 5—"Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth eaten. Your gold and silver is cankered, and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasures together for the last days." But I hope this will never be said to any of the readers of The Times. The Lord forbid.

Dear Brethren in Christ: Let us rally to the standard with all our might, which our brother has raised. Let us pray God in behalf of our paper, that it may be the means of great good in the future as it has been in the past.

James Spanton.

A friend in deed as well as in word, resident not far from Chicago, writes:

Well. I am glad The Times lives; and it will live if only half the people do their duty. I like the spirit of the "What do Ye?" article, and "Our Responsibilities." The United Presbyterian minister here gave me a copy of their minutes. I have given him works to read, and he is friendly; but when he asks me "What do ye?" as a people, what can I say? I am ashamed. I hope to be able to do a little this summer.

Our brother here refers to the fact that the people referred to pay annually some eleven dollars each for their general work, besides sustaining local interests.

Another, a sister in New York writes how she first subscribed for the paper to help the cause in the West. "I have continued it," she says, "from year to year, thinking that my means were so small, I could hardly afford it; but as each year drew to its close, I did not feel clear to withdraw my patronage. And how dare any disciple keep by him surplus property, when the cause of his Master is suffering? Five dollars each is all that is asked of them. The Lord help us to bring all the tithes into the store house, that the work of salvation may go on, souls be brought to a knowledge of the truth, and be thus prepared to escape the time of trouble which will soon burst upon this generation."

Other interesting letters are laid over for another week.

PREVIOUSLY ACKNOWLEDGED.

L. C. Collins,	$50.00	I. Boddy,	$ 5.00
J. W. Graham,	40.00	Sundry friends in s'ms fr 25c to $4	54.60
J. Cochrane, (Scotland)	21.00	'Worcester'	10.00
J. Templeton "	5.00	'Chicago'	5.00
S. Nye,	25.00	J. W. Johnson,	5.00
F. W Haskell,	5.00	D. Q. Kent,	8.00
A. V. Rice,	5.00	A. E. Rathbun,	5.00
J. W. Hodgson,	5.00	C. M. Shepard,	10.00
'New York,'	$100.00	M. M. Maxwell,	1.00
R. H. Evans,	5.00	J. A. Churchill,	1.00
G. W. Place,	5.00	J. G. Junk,	2.25
J. Spanton,	5.00	E. Van Velzer,	1.00
S. Doolittle,	5.00	W. E. Hathaway,	2.00
'New Haven,'	25.00	C. M. Shepard,	10.00
A Friend,	.50	C. Crawshaw.	2.00

LAST WEEK'S RECEIPTS.

'Rhode Island,'	$100.00	Mrs. S. A. Keyes,	5.00
P. W. Matts,	5.00	Mrs. R. H. Dibble,	5.00
A Sister,	2.00	A Friend,	20.00
T. J. Giddings,	1.00	W. Neville,	1.00
M. A. Tibbetts,	3.00	J. H. Gallop,	2.75
R. Tuttle,	.50

Looking over some scraps of poetry we found the following, which will express our own feelings. All is the Lord's. Let him do and direct as seemeth good to him.

THE LORD WILL PROVIDE.

In some way or other the Lord will provide;
It may not be my way,
It may not be thy way;
And yet in his own way,
"The Lord will provide."

At some time or other the Lord will provide;
It may not be my time,
It may not be thy time;
And yet in his own time,
"The Lord will provide."

Despond, then, no longer, the Lord will provide;
And this be the token—
No word he hath spoken
Was ever yet broken—
"The Lord will provide."

March on then right boldly, the sea shall divide;
Thy pathway made glorious,
With shoutings victorious
We'll join in the chorus,
"The Lord will provide!"

ABOUT YOUR "PIECE."

A New York editor so nearly expresses our mind upon a delicate question that we quote the following from his talk with correspondents:

> Sometimes a person desires to bring some matter in which he feels an interest before the public, and accordingly he writes it out and forwards his piece. We examine it and find it well or ill written, or treating a subject suitable or otherwise for publication; or from its authorship or the locality it comes from, or for its novelty or triteness, desirable or not; and so we decide upon its fitness for use. Probably the amount of matter accepted as worthy will at any time exceed our space, and so a part must be laid over for a more convenient time. We have found it impossible to adopt the miller's rule of "first come, first served," and therefore a paper once laid over may remain in the background indefinitely, and as most such papers relate to something in which the date of their appearance is a consideration, they are not frequently delayed past the time in which they could properly appear. It thus happens that some of the best and most approved of the pieces do not appear at all. Sometimes a writer sends to know what is the fate of his piece, having grown impatient at its non-appearance, often when it has had only time sufficient to get on file in our office; and though we have often given notice that we must not be expected to return unused manuscripts, yet each one assumes that his case must be an exception. So we get along in all such cases as best we may. Let, then, our correspondents indulge us in these things: 1. Send us no papers which you are not willing to submit to us without conditions. 2. Do not expect us to decide at once and finally in any case. 3. Remember that many things besides their literary excellence determine the fate of articles. 4. We ask for correspondence, and will cheerfully perform the labor it devolves upon us, but as to inserting or declining articles, we must be governed by the good of our readers, and the advantage, or otherwise, they will probably be to our paper.
>
> Many correspondents write too lengthily. We decline many fairly good papers simply because they are too long. Do not write controversial articles. If somebody has written something that you do not exactly agree with, do not write against him. The editor is supposed to be on the side of his correspondents, but what can he do if they fall out among themselves? We cannot afford to make the paper a debating arena. Bad spelling, grammar and rhetoric we can correct, though in that you can help us. After you have written your piece, strike out the whole of the first paragraph; then deal remorselessly with adjectives, adverbs, expletive clauses, and exclamations. Avoid figures of speech as far as possible, and quote poetry very sparingly.
>
> Letters giving us church news—especially of revivals, dedications, and other occasions of special interest—are always more than welcome.

A movement in the guise of a reformation, introduced among us from the Methodists, has been in progress for some time. The object of the professed reformation is to introduce the grace of holiness among us, it being tacitly assumed that Adventists generally have not heretofore been a sanctified people. As one of the results of this movement quite a large number of persons have made profession of attainment to a state in which they are quite free from temptation and are not liable to sin, and where they enjoy a certain indescribable sweetness in religious experience, and sensations of rest and peace and nearness to God such as they never knew before. This is the profession. We do not question its sincerity in most cases. But we have a right to inquire as to something beyond these professions of personal feelings. If this is the work of the Spirit, the only attestation of the Divine energy is to be found in the manifestation of the fruits of the Spirit. In the language of a late Methodist writer:

> If the present is a true work of the Holy Spirit, these "signs will follow." We shall not simply hear the story of seraphic experiences, but we shall witness the "acts of the apostles." We shall have a body of such spiritually wise, tender, and earnest, personal laborers in the vineyard as we have never had before. There will be an absence of censoriousness and harshness, and a presence of the gentle, forgiving, patient spirit of the Lord Jesus. There will be great readiness in accepting the laborious offices of the church, such as preaching in hard places, teach-in the Sabbath-school, and visiting from house to house. All the services of God's house, for Christ's sake and for the salvation of souls, will be conscientiously attended. In the contributions, now to be taken for the Missionary Cause, and all other Christian charities, these highly favored disciples will be the exemplars of the freedom and joy with which disenthralled souls can bestow their goods upon the Lord, in the form of the needy and suffering who come as his representatives to receive it. There can be no disappointment here. If Christ has given freely of his spiritual grace and power, there will be this involuntary response of holy love and conscious obligation.....
>
> The very smallest, least to be considered, hardly noticed by the apostles, result of powerfully renewing grace, is the personal joyous experience connected with it; the great end that transcends all others is its invincible, loving constraint to offer everything in active consecration to the Lord Jesus; not to account one's substance his own; to find it more than meat and drink to do the Master's will; to actually live no longer to self, but to him, in his appointed work, who died for us and redeems us by his precious blood, to account not even our lives dear unto ourselves. Such was the result of the baptism at Pentecost. It brought the church together in warm affection; it opened the hearts and purses, so that no call of Christian service or charity was neglected, and it sent forth believers preaching the gospel, and evangelizing the world wherever they moved.

—And there is another thought which may properly be considered in this connection, namely: that inasmuch as some persons claim that this sanctification is the result of, or is connected with a "baptism of the Holy Spirit" such as fell upon the apostles at Pentecost, and was manifested on a few other occasions, according to the New Testament history, they are also amenable to the same test. Anybody can profess to have received the baptism of the Holy Spirit: but are we bound to believe their testimony unless we have the corroborating evidence of the phenomena which the Scriptures attach to that gift?

Editor's Drawer.

In this department we shall consider such questions as may be answered briefly and suggestively. Topics requiring elaborate examination, or extended discussion may not be entertained.

S. W. B. The word in Jonah 2: 2 rendered 'hell' is sheol. In the margin it is rendered 'grave.' Jonah spoke of himself as in the grave, because humanly speaking there was no chance for the preservation of his life. To all intents and purposes he was a dead man: only the divine interference could save him. So he says in v. 6, 'The earth with her bars was about me forever'—referring not to the length of time he actually spent in the sea, but to the prospect before him at the time his prayer was uttered. He could only anticipate that the fish would be his tomb, and that the places that had known him would know him no more while time should last. But God delivered him.

The term 'hell' in Lk. 16: 23 is from the Greek equivalent of the Hebrew sheol, which is hades. It is probably here used in the sense attached to the term by the Phrisees, which is different from the Scriptural sense. On this point see Eld. Collins' pamphlet, 'Hades and Sheol.'

C. W. S. 1 Cor. 15: 29 has been always a field of dispute. We may some day give a summary of various opinions concerning it. At present we simply remark in the language of a late writer:

> 'Christian baptism, as is admitted by all standard commentators, is alluded to repeatedly by the apostles as a striking symbol of our burial and the resurrection of our bodies from the grave at Christ's second coming and entrance upon a new and glorious life, in bodies, raised and changed into immortal and glorified ones, like unto his own. The baptism of the apostolic Christians was, we say, referred to by the apostles as teaching the fact of the literal resurrection from the dead. Paul so uses it in his letter to the churches at Rome and Corinth: "For if we have been planted in the likeness of his death, we shall be in the likeness of his resurrection." "Else what shall they do who are baptized for the dead? If the dead rise not, why were ye baptized for the dead?" They were baptis-

' to represent and declare their faith in the urrection of the dead, and if there is no urrection of dead persons, why did they ofess a falsehood? Hence, there is to be a eral resurrection, or Christianity is a fable d a cheat.'

The Battle of Armageddon.

May it not be profitable to inquire,
'hat is the battle of Armageddon?
'hat is Armageddon? It is general-supposed by commentators that ere is to be such a battle, and that e scene of this final battle will be the mous plain of Megiddo or Estræd-
,in the center of Palestine, to the utheast of Mount Carmel, between e city of Samaria and Nazareth.
his is the view taken in McClintock
d Streng's Cyclopedia. There is t one place in the Bible where the ord "Armageddon" occurs, and that in Rev. 16: 16. In the Cyclopedia, in many commentaries, Armageddon made synonymous with "the ountain of Megiddo." But to ake Armageddon to be Megiddo is ly a guess of commentators, which e has copied from the other. At ast, until some further proof is given, shall that Armageddon is a totally stinct locality.

Besides, what proof have we that ere is to be any battle of Armagedn at all? It does not really appear the only passage where the word curs. The 14th verse speaks of he battle of that great day of God mighty." In this verse the gathered sts are, through the agency of the pirits of demons," who, "doing gns," gather "the kings of the land, d of the whole inhabited earth" to
tle. Then, in the verse 15th, is a lden transition to the first person gular, with no mention who the aker is. Verse 15th appears to be parenthetically, as if alluding to ther matter, making complete sense hout reference to the rest of the text, which makes complete sense hout it. Now to what antecedent s the ("them") in this 15th verse,
r? Can it be the ("spirits?")
! It might be the ("kings"); or ay refer to the "saints" alluded to verse 15, who have the promise, if y keep "the word of my patience, ill also keep thee (them) from the r of temptation, which shall come n all the world, to try them that ell upon the earth."

Vhat, then, is Armageddon? That s the plain of Megiddo, we find not article of proof, or that the battle the great day of God Almighty will fought there. That it is a locality re can be no doubt, and that there be a gathering there of some sort, ms equally plain. It is evident ugh that that gathering is to follow coming of the Lord as a thief, ler the sixth vial. (v. 15.) If so, it
bably has reference to the saints, not to the kings of the earth, men-ned in verse 14. But map not the mology of the word afford us light?
s expressly declared to be a Hebra-
c phrase, composed of two parts, and Mageddon. "That the Greek
" says a distinguished critic inke), "stands for the Hebrew Har, ch signifies 'a mountain,' is so n that it may be taken for granted."
have, then, the mountain of Maged-
. But what is Mageddon? "It is lently a participle form, although it o regular derivative, and nowhere urs in the Hebrew Bible, as such.
nay be derived either from the verb
jad, which means 'to be precious, tly, glorious,' or else, which is more ly, from the verb gadad, which is Hithpael, signifies 'to assemble.'
nageddon, then, may be translated er 'the mount of assembling,' or mount of glorious gifts.'"

Dr. Clarke, in his note on Rev. 16: speaks of the meaning of Armaged-in this manner: "The original his word has been variously form-and variously translated. It is har gddon, 'the Mount of the Assem-
;' or chormah gedehon, 'the de-ction of their army,' or it is har giddo, 'Mount Megiddo.'....But at is the battle of Armageddon?
w ridiculous have been the conject-
s of men relative to this point?
thin the last twenty years this bat-
has been fought at various places, ording to our purblind seers and inspired prophets! At one time it Austerlitz, at another Moscow, at ther Leipsic, and then again at aterloo. And thus they have gone and will go on confounding and ng confounded." And to these con-nding and being confounded con-
tures may be added one that this tle "has a typical reference to the rows and triumphs of the people of d under the gospel."—Zion's Her-ld.

—The idea of a battle of Armageddon is, no doubt, purely notional. God's saints will not be gathered to be armed with swords and guns to fight his enemies, but into a place by themselves, safe from "the great tribulation."—Ed. Times.

Personal.

After some three weeks of constant suffering with inflammation in my eyes, I feel compelled to take the advice of my brethren and retire for awhile from public labor that my sight may be restored. By rest and careful treatment I hope to regain my sight before long, while, if I continue to use my eyes, and expose them to the searching winds of this prairie country, I fear the permanent loss of my sight.

The various churches in this conference that I have not been able to visit will therefore please excuse me for the present, and, if the Lord so orders, I will return and visit them as I had intended. During the last two weeks I have tried to labor in the gospel field, many times being able to read scarcely a word, or see my congregation. I dare not continue such efforts longer.

Pray for me that I may soon be able to return to your midst.

My P. O. Address will be New Rutland, Ill., until further notice.

Wm. McCullock.

Inner Man.

It is constantly asserted that man is a double or dual being, from the fact that the Scriptures speak of an "inner man. Paul does indeed speak of the "inner man," but of whom does he speak as having this "inner man?" Of all men, or of the saints only? The saints, only. The wicked man has no "inner man." The why is evident from the fact that he tells us what the "inner man" is, and then says all men have it not. What, then, is it? It is Christ in the believer. What, literally? No, but in him by faith. (Eph. 3: 16, 17.) "That he would grant you....to be strengthened with might by his spirit in the inner man, that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith." Thus, faith in Christ, or Christ in our faith, or, as in Col. 1: 27, "Christ in you the hope of glory," is the inner man.

Again, Paul (2 Cor. 4: 13–16), says: "For which cause we faint not." Observe, he is not talking of physical faintings, but as in Heb. 12:3, "faint in your minds," as also the rest of the verse proves, which says: "But though our outward man [or physical strength] perish, [or waste away] yet the inward man is renewed day by day." Now, if we call this "inward man" an immortal part we take the responsibility of saying it needs renewing to keep it from fainting and perishing. But can immortality or anything immortal be renewed? Certainly not, if Webster has given us the true meaning of the terms. Immortality can not decrease nor waste, hence, can not be revived, replenished or renewed. But this inward man of Paul's can be renewed or revived, hence, is not anything immortal.

Turning back to v. 13 we find he calls it the "spirit of faith, according as it is written, I believed." Now, does belief or faith in Christ and his resurrection, as well as our own (v. 14), need renewing? Can faith decrease? Yes; hence, it needs "renewing day by day," "lest ye faint and grow weary in your minds."

Paul says: (Eph. 4,23), "And be renewed in the spirit of your minds." Thus, faith in Christ is the "inner man." But the wicked have nothing of this. (2 Thes. 3: 2): "For all men have not faith." Thus, none but the righteous have an "inner man," and they only so long as they keep it by being renewed.

O. D. Gibson.

Bankrupt.

Man in sin is bankrupt; wasting life without hope and without God in the world. The longer he remains on the barren lands of worldly-mindedness, in sin, the more difficult it is for him to be reclaimed. Now and then one breaks away from bondage and becomes "an heir of God, and joint heir with Jesus Christ."

Many may suppose that it is giving up everything to become a Christian. But not so. It is losing everything not to be one. The Lord wants men to be somebodies, and be worth something; and he offers poor fallen humanity a glorious dower "without money and without price," simply come and receive it by obedience. But, if men refuse it and stay away from him; yea, though they have piles of money here, yet, in relation to the future inheritance and riches beyond in the better world, they are not worth a cent, they are, as it were, in bankruptcy, and without hope.

Dear reader, do not stay away from Jesus and perish in the bankruptcy of this world at the last day, but receive life through Christ, and riches and joy forever more; soon to be given, even when he comes.

S. B. Mabey.

Another Uncertainty.

Where does Josephus begin his years of Nero? We would expect them to begin in June if his predecessor died then; but if he died Oct. 13, we would expect the years of Nero's reign to begin at that date. We find the month Jyar (second Jewish month) in the twelfth of Nero. (War 2: 14: 4.) Now when we pass the beginning of his years, as Josephus reckons them, it will be the thirteenth. But in War 2: 19: 6, we find the eighth of Dius (eighth month) is still in the twelfth of Nero. That is to say, Josephus' years of Nero do not begin anywhere between the second and the eighth of the eighth Jewish months. By calculation, the eighth of Dius was about Nov. 4, in A. D. 65. In A. D. 66 it fall about the 16th of October. When we come to the first day of Tamuz (fourth month) in the next year, it is called the thirteenth of Nero. (War 3: 7: 36.)

This is certain; Josephus' years of Nero do not begin between the second and eighth Jewish months, they do begin somewhere between the eighth and second months; perhaps he began the years of Nero along with the Jewish years, but, to me, the precise time is uncertain.

A. Armour.

The Signals.

The signal has been given, the tokens of an approaching Jubilee; and what shall the people of God do? Paul says, "We have the mind of Christ." Having the mind of Christ, that mind will be in Love and fellowship with his will and word. Then when we receive prophetic and apostolic telegrams, that he is about to visit his loyal citizens, and confer upon them special favor, will they understand their duty? It would seem that instinctively the telegrams must be circulated, and cause thorough preparation for the reception of his Royal Highness. Now then, in the first place, the predicted signs of our Lord's coming have so far had an unmistakable fulfillment, as a warning to this generation, that it is Scripturally timely to proclaim to all nations, as a witness, the oft-predicted signs and declare his coming near. No preconceived opinions, or prejudices for declaring it, or being mistaken in time, will shield minister or people from the responsibility of seeing the sword coming and warning the people.

When these signs do appear, as the telegraphic fulfillment of Christ's word, then, in addition to all the sacred truth that made us Christians by believing, we are brough into a new era. The shining light of the word by the prophets, Christ and the apostles, all converging to one central point by the brightness of Inspiration, all show conclusively where we are, and what must be done. From the telegraphic announcement, the sound will be raised, the lovers of the predicted King will hear, believe, and heartily respond. Tell them it is an unpopular sound, and it has no weight with them. They have read the heavenly telegrams; they see their fulfillment in prophetic order; the sound of them is blessed; and their disappointments, with the prolongation of time, fail to discourage; for every succeeding telegram lights with more certainty the old ship and her loyal crew into the port of glory.

Now, because some have made mistakes, and still do, giving unreliable interpretations of that word, is that any reason why we should not search it and believe its sacred declarations? If it is not, then have we not a standing place to maintain and defend? What, then, is the Bible position of the church? I mean by the church, all true Christians, all who "have the mind of Christ."

I think the ground is definable in the word of Jesus Christ. He says, "When ye see all these things come to pass, then know that he is near, even at the door." All turns on whether "these things have come to pass." Duty is plain to all who believe these things have been fulfilled in their order. It is to "watch." And why watch? Because you know he is near, and do not know the when. "Watch, for ye know not when the Master cometh," "at mid-night, or at cock-crowing, or in the morning." Now, because the wisdom of the Lord has left this spot, the time of his coming, in obscurity, shall we give up looking for and expecting him? By no means. All the light of past ages, with the predictions of the future, center here, and make it a time of terrible responsibility, specially to those whom God designs to lead on to certain victory. Other Bible doctrine and truth must be preached. The churches have their standard far too low. The race is terribly alienated, prone to evil. Leprosy is upon the human family. It is "carnally minded," "sold under sin." Mortal man belongs to a lost race. A change from nature to grace must be urged upon them. A change must be had, or their loss will be eternal. Repentance toward God and faith in Jesus he must accepted. They must experience justification by faith, and sanctification through the Spirit. The old man must be put off, and the new man put on, before they can be in Christ Jesus, "created in righteousness and true holiness" unto good works. The race must hear all these evangelic, life-giving truths. By the aid of the Spirit of God they must be urged upon them, and they must accept them experimentally; but the soon coming of Jesus to judgment must not be left out.

I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God, that we should rise unto spiritual manhood, and declare to this vain generation the gospel with a soon coming deliverer. Let the sound be sweet and clear. Sound it out in all its loveliness to cheer and comfort the desponding, toil-worn, suffering flock of God. If you ask, Where shall we go to give vent to this pent up message? "Go ye into all the world," and "as ye go, preach, saying, Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Wherever the door is opened for you, go in, and in all the fulness of the blessings of the gospel of Christ, give demonstration of the gospel that saves by bringing love, joy, and peace, and that you have been a partaker of its fruits. This is not the time to confer with flesh and blood, but to seek wisdom of the Lord.—L. Boutell, in Crisis.

Jesuit Morality.

With the approbation of the General of the order' Busenbaum teaches; "It is allowable to take an ambiguous oath when there is a just cause for this ambiguity, for where the truth is concealed without a lie, no violence is done to the oath." And in regard to the much disputed question as to the means, we have it in the most distinct white and black in this little book from the same authority: "If the aim is allowable, the means are also allowable." And on another page of the same author we find: "The means are also allowable to him to whom the intent is allowable."

This gem of the Jesuitical moral code has been so often denied that it is satisfactory thus to find it in their most accepted authors. Escobar writes: "The aim gives to actions their peculiar character, and through a good or bad aim, actions may be good or bad." And Casnedi, thus: "One can never sin if he has a good intention." Those who have doubted hitherto the existence of such teachings, may now confidently accept them as genuine Jesuitical authority.—Zion's Herald.

Drink nothing without seeing it; sign nothing without reading it, and make sure that it means no more than it says.

Don't go to law unless you have nothing to lose; lawyers' houses are built on fool's heads.

Put no dependence on the label of a bag, and count money after your own kind.

The Times.

ABROAD.

--- Pius IX. has witnessed the death of one hundred cardinals during his pontificate of a quarter of a century.

--- The last words pronounced by the Emperor Napoleon, in his dying moments, were addressed to his faithful friend, Dr. Conneau. They were:—"Etiez vous a Sedan?" (Were you at Sedan?) Subsequently the Empress held his hand in hers, and gently kissed it; the Empreror smiled, and his lips moved as if returning his wife's embrace, but he never uttered a word after that last thought—"Sedan."

--- The present winter is one of the mildest ever known upon the continent of Europe. In France, especially in the environs of Paris and in the gardens of the city, the trees are covered with leaves, and the spring flowers are beginning to bud, while in the center of France raspberry bushes are fruiting and early asparagus has appeared. About Vienna the fields are already full of violets, and South Germans drink their beer in the open air.

--- On New Year's day it is said that the Pope addressed his little army in a manner quite irreconcilable with his holy office. His mention of Judith and Holofernes was such as to leave the impression that the repetition of the tragedy would be pleasant to his feelings. A young girl, the daughter of an old Roman family, became possessed with the idea that she resolved to do the deed. To receive her confessor's approval she confided to him what she was going to do. But fortunately for her he viewed her devotion in a very different light from what she had expected he would, and took her at once to her parents, who removed her from Rome out of the way of temptation.

--- The new Spanish Republic rouses no spirit of enthusiasm among the votaries of republicism. Even France was not so much distrusted as is Spain. Scarce any have faith in her capacity for self-government. The influence most to be dreaded is that of Romish priests, who will spare no pains nor leave any stone unturned to reestablish the Bourbon monarchy, under which alone can the church of Rome hope for the restoration of its former power and privileges in Spain. But whatever else happens, this will never come about. The civil power of the Romish hierarchy is no doubt forever overthrown.

--- The English Government, which has recently sent a fleet to Zanzibar for the purpose of breaking up the Central African slave trade, has now another slave traffic on its hands which calls for suppression. The Secretary of the British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society has recently laid some facts before the Government touching the Polynesian groups, and, after inviting the natives on board ostensibly for the purposes of trade, they are kidnapped and taken to Tahiti, and sold to work on cotton plantations, where their treatment is cruel in the extreme, large numbers of them dying from exposure and punishments, while others are murdered in the most cold-blooded manner. The English Anti-Slavery Society is now calling for the immediate suppression of this inhuman traffic, and petitions the Government to no longer attempt to mitigate its horrors by regulating it, as it has done heretofore but do away with it at once.

--- If the leading measures of the papacy for the last few years had followed each other in rapid succession, they would have been sufficient to convict their authors of insanity. The allocution of 1869, or thereabout, against free institutions and civil government in general, was considered at the time as capping the climax of absurdity, in sense, and morals and policy. This was followed by an attempt to frighten the Italians out of national unity by showering upon them a storm of anathemas. Then came the unexampled folly of squeezing out of the general council a declaration that the testy old prelate is infallible. Next the preposterous attempt to dominate in the Protestant German empire, failure in which has set the pope nearly beside himself with fury. Now he is playing prisoner, making the walls of his palace woful with lamentations. The spectacle must be becoming intolerably disagreeable to sensible Catholics.

--- Latest accounts from Japan state that there has recently been a great deal of political disquiet in the country, and hence a general feeling of uneasiness and alarm prevails among all clases of the population. Disturbances have broken out in various parts of the empire. In some provinces an agitation against everything foreign is being fomented, while in others lawless mobs, many thousands strong, roam the land to plunder, rob, and slay. Last December nearly 40,000 men banded together to attack and destroy Funo, Yondzuki, and other places, sacking them, and killing the officials who attempted to interfere. This is perhaps no more than we might have anticipated. It would be an anomaly in human history if the work of reform were to progress in a country like Japan without any obstruction or opposition. The changes which have been effected in the empire within not quite twenty years are so sweeping and revolutionary that a reaction had to follow sooner or later. It will be fortunate if the recoil is not more formidable than thus far indicated by dispatches.

The Christian Life.

Growth in Grace.

Spurgeon in a recent sermon says; Presumest thou, O young beginner, that thy warfare is finished now thou hast enlisted? Ah! simple child, "let not him that putteth on his armor boast as though he put it off." You have come up to the starting-point, and you already think the prize your own. O man, thou hast but commenced running, and thy life is the length of the race! Thou wilt have to run and run till thou shalt lay down thy race with thy body; thou wilt never have finished till then. "What! But when I am saved, surely I shall have no more fightings." Harken; the moment thou art saved the fightings will begin. "But shall I feel an evil heart after I am born again?" Yes, and more than ever; for the new life that is in you will hate the old nature, and the old Adam will hate the new Adam. There will be a conflict in your soul, such as you never knew before, and it will be perpetual. Do not think that Christ has come to send peace into your soul of the sort you look for; he makes no peace with evil, but draws the sword. There will be fightings and wars within your spirit until you die. Now you must have deep work, or else these inward trials will offend you. You remember John Bunyan's wise picture in "Pilgrim's Progress," of Christian and Pliable? Christian read his book, and told Pliable of a beautiful city to which he was going, where there were streets of gold, and harps of the richest music; and, says Pliable, "I will go with you; I would gladly be there." When he told him all about how Evangelist had instructed him, and when he read to him the roll, "Oh," said Pliable, "this is very pleasant; and hearing of this is enough to ravish one's heart. Come on let us mend our pace." But, as they went on, the road became very muddy, by-and-by their feet began to slip, and after a while they were both up to their necks in a slough. "Oh," says Pliable, "is this the happiness you have told me of? If we have such ill speed at our first setting out, what may we expect between this and our journey's end? May I get out again with my life, you shall posses the brave country alone for me!" And with that he gave a desperate struggle or two, and got out of the mire on that side of the slough which was next to his own house, and Christian saw him no more. O! if it is not a work of grace when you get a little soul-trouble you will say, "Ah! I will have none of this. I thought it was going to be all 'hallelujahs,' and 'bless the Lord!' I did not look for depressions and bewilderments." Now, when I hold up my Master's colors and invite recruits, I am by no means eager to enlist cowards. I want those who for God's sake and by his spirit will go through the Slough of Despond, resolved to escape from the City of Destruction. You must "dwell deep," then, or inward trials will send you back to the world again.

How Shall I become a Christian.

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ," says the Bible. That is—give up your disobedience to God and your neglect of his gospel, and, asking forgiveness for the past, take Christ as your Savior, and consecrate yourself to him entirely and forever.

Hence, in order to become a Christian, it is not necessary that we have a given amount of emotion, or of excitement, whether in view of our sins, or of our eternal danger, or of the glorious hopes set before us in the gospel. "One thing is needful," says the Redeemer—only one; and that is, to abandon our past neglect of him, and make him, henceforth, our Savior, our Master, our Teacher,—our all. The Israelite, bitten by a fiery serpent, was to look at a serpent of brass lifted upon a pole; that alone was necessary. Till he did that, the greatest amount of fear or of pain availed him nothing. When he did that, his cure began. "And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life." He has been lifted up, and whosoever "looks" shall live.

And nothing but this will do. No amount of feeling will do. No good works will do. No effort to make oneself better will do. Any attempt to make conviction of sin, or anything of our own, take the place of the grace of God in Christ, is but a form of self-righteousness; that is, a form of that very selfishness which is to be given up. In becoming Christians, then we make Christ all our salvation.

And we give up our all for Christ; not only our property, our talents, and our time, but our desires, our feelings, our aims, our aspirations, our plans of life—yes, all. And because we give up all, we give up self-dependence for perseverance in the Christian course; and, with self-dependence, we resign self-confidence on the one hand, and unbelieving fears on the other. He has said, for our admonition, "Without me ye can do nothing;" and, again, for our encouragement. "My grace is sufficient for thee, for my strength is made perfect in weakness." We believe these declarations, and rely on the Holy Spirit, sent by him in answer to prayer, for strength to overcome the world, our great adversary, and ourselves.

Reader do you know yourself to be a sinner? Then you may come to Christ and may come NOW. You believe that you need a Savior, and that Christ is the Savior you need; act on your belief by making Him your Savior. The wayward little child, who has stood obstinately refusing his father's call to come to him finds it a very simple thing at last to give up his obstinacy and fall into his father's arms. So simple is it to cease refusing the Savior's invitation, and humbly, penitently, trustingly, to accept it. Will you not do so? And as we close this article will you not, with prayer for Divine forgiveness and praise for Divine mercies say—

> "A guilty, weak, and helpless worm,
> On thy kind arms I fall;
> Be Thou my strength and righteousness,
> My Savior, and my all."

The Kohinoor Recut.

The Kohinoor, as it originally came into the hands of the Queen of England, was far from being "the mountain of light" its name signifies. It was cut, as Indian diamonds usually are, upon the sides, the top being flat; and many inferior diamonds far exceeding it in brilliancy.

It was sent to Holland, and there recut in the style of a brilliant, a principal face surrounded by many facets, reflecting the prismatic colors from every side, and is now a marvel of beauty

An experienced workman often spends two years of continuous labor upon one stone; such delicate and patient work is necessary to preserve the stone and exhibit its beauty. Even the diamond-dust is preserved with care, to be used in its final polishing.

How like the Indian diamond are God's children untouched by adversity! Precious jewels; but reflecting little of heaven's light. Then the Great Workman takes them in hand, and patiently and carefully cuts upon the hard surface. Worldliness yields at his touch, hidden lights flash out, each cut reveals a new beauty. But the sorrowful heart cries out, Why this long continued pressure, why blow upon blow for me while others sit serene, untroubled?

Ah, sorrowful heart, take comfort; thou art one of thy Lord's chosen, precious stones! The more thou art cut and fashioned and polished, the more wilt thou shine in his crown when he maketh up his jewels. Thine is the rare and precious portion of his favored ones: chosen in the furnace of affliction, wrought upon by the Spirit, freed from the impurities of the flesh, polished by the diamond-dust of care and sorrow and disappointment, until the soul is lifted heavenward, and heaven's own light is reflected in its face. "And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels."

Correspondence.

From Our English Correspondent.

The English papers are completely Napoleonic. All are brimming with newsgraphs and paragraphs relating to the now deceased emperor. His character is left almost wholly untouched by the journalists of our land, while we learn, on the contrary, by telegrams from the United States, that the literati there are dealing with his life without superstition and in a spirit of strict justice and impartiality. The defunct monarch has been in his day little less than a demi-god. We remember when the natives of our own garden island trembled at every step of the illustrious but withal ignoble dead. His word was an awful terror, his polity a designing opposition, and his ever-increasing and perfecting military and naval armaments the creeping bugbear of a national and frightful nightmare. People said his silence was ominous of evil ahead, and his martial preparations foreboded trouble. So that, were he quiet or astir—did he look, speak, or move, there was a something behind all, and he would yet make England and the rest of the nations quail for their existence. But now, silent, cold, helpless, the "Destined Monarch of the World" lies in the cold ground at Chiselhurst, and none of these fears have been realized, and none of the dreams of false prophets have come to pass. Instead of this Napoleon III. has passed away from among the living, and, with grand attending cortege, has been borne to the house appointed for all the living. He is gone to the dead; and as I write I think of the words of the poet, learned in early childhood:

> "Hither, as to the grand retiring room,
> From earth's wide stage the mortal actors come,
> And here partake an undistinguished doom.
> Aside their honors with their robes they throw;
> The herald and his trade are lost below;
> The king, deposed, forgets the noise he made,
> And the rude peasant crowds the royal shade!"

No doubt you are aware that in England there is a man by the name of Baxter, who has a number of followers, who expected to see in the late emperor a wonderful prophetic character. He found a prophecy in the Revelation and tried to connect it with Napoleon III., using all sorts of ingenious sophisms and plausible arguments to make him out the destined "man" to rule the nations. He wrote a book on the subject entitled "Louis Napoleon the Destined Monarch of the World." I have it near me at the present time. It contains nearly four hundred pages. Napoleon in this work is said to be the personal anti-christ, and the most extreme and reckless statements are made concerning this "man of sin" without the least hesitancy or suggestiveness. Statements are as boldly absolute as the utterances of Deity. He does not say "I think," but "It will be." Turning over the pages of this book at random, I see, (p. 97), "Event XI. Acquirement by Napoleon of supreme power over Great Britain, and, in a less degree, over America. (Rev. 13-17.") Instead of this he died an exile in England, and, as for America, you will know that to say he had almost supreme power over the States is to assert a falsehood.

Again (p. 126), we read: "The appearance and ministry of the two supernatural witnesses will be necessitated by the severity of Napoleon's persecution, against the violence of which no mere mortal can contend." The book is full of just such silliness; that is, it would be silliness if it were not more—a tampering with God's Word, and an unwarrantably presumptuous adaptation with which God is not pleased. I saw also a monthly, imprimatured with one of the last months of the year 1872, in which the most particular plans of the deceased, depicting his future movements, were laid out with a certainty and positiveness that could only be the production of a monomaniac. No sane man could possibly have arranged anything so presumptive and yet complete. I wish I had it before me at this time that I might give you some extracts from it. As I read it I felt truly pained. But death has rudely disturbed the fancies of this dreamer. Napoleon, instead of being a mighty universal potentate, is tombed; and by this time over his head may be seen the Latin initials, "R. I. P."

I might here write my convictions on the course taken by the person I have referred to. It is a very serious matter to be wise above what is written. We ought to know what God has revealed—all of it. And we should understand it just in the same proportion that he intends us to. It seems to me, if the Spirit has spoken expressly and plainly on any truth or coming event, we should seek to understand it as clearly and emphatically; but where it has pleased God to leave subjects and events obscurely, only limiting them, and giving no explanation, we should be very slow in receiving human interpretation on these "dark sayings," and things "hard to be understood." It is great hardihood and extreme folly to anticipate persons signified, or to say of these intentionally secreted particulars, how, when, and where they will happen. It should be enough for us to know God is true, and what he has said will surely come to pass. Believing in this manner we should wait and watch, and ask God to teach us when prophecy is becoming history. And I am sure, from past history, that God our Father will give us wisdom to recognize the correspondence of events with his own pre-given Word, and thus confirm our faith in his immutable and unalterable veracity.

When a matter is plainly written in the Bible, and all is made clear by the Spirit beyond guess or probability, we should collect up the passages so written, and believe what is noted in the Scriptures of truth; but when a fact, event, impersonation, or being is left by the Spirit enveloped in cloud, and so obscure as not to be comprehensible by ordinary ken or comparison of spiritual with spiritual, wisdom, modesty, and humility teach us to wait for the lifting of the obscurity, not attempting to put a construction of our own on the truth, that we may see exhibited in the light of actual history, the prophecy enfolded in indistinctness. Then, presently, when the prophecy becomes "present truth," we shall know the truth of the age if we, like the children of Issachar, have understanding of the times.

The fault of Baxter and the Baxterites is this: They have found things noted in Scripture which they did not understand; and, evidently, God had kept it from them; perhaps, because it was not present truth, or because it would not be useful to them. But they, having a prurient and unhealthy curiosity, desired to be "before the times," so they "rushed in where angels fear to tread." They acted on the doctrine that the prophecies of Scripture are of "private interpretation;" and having fixed on Napoleon as the man of mystery, applied them to him in the most foolhardy and riskful manner; and the result has been what one could easily have imagined—and, by the way, what I anticipated, a mistake which has brought the subject of prophecy into disrepute and entailed odium on those who attempt to expound it.

Had Mr. Baxter obeyed the Lord and not leaned to his own understanding, he would never have so grievously erred. Had he followed the Good Shepherd instead of running before him, it would have been well for him. And as it is, it is to be hoped that his mistake and disgrace will teach men neither to assert themselves or dogmatize on a mere interpretation of their own as of paramount importance or infallibility with the Word of God.

A man's presumption is thrown violently down. A man's folly has appeared. But God is yet there, and his Word remains intact and unbroken. And though a thousand interpretations fail through, his Word is as certain of fulfillment in his own way and time, as his life is unending. Let us seek, then, to understand God, and not try to unravel, elucidate, and explain him, by our own thoughts and dreams.

From John R. McConnell, Louisiana.

Though a member of the Baptist church, yet I fully agree with you as to "the faith once delivered to the saints." I am an Adventist, and rejoice in the hope of the speedy coming of Christ to establish an everlasting kingdom on the earth. It gives me a great deal of pleasure to read the letters published in THE TIMES from week to week, giving accounts of the spread of gospel truth. It is working slowly, here in this wicked city. Br. Scott, who, a few months ago was turned out of the Baptist church for advocating the doctrine of "soul sleeping" and "the destruction of the wicked," has gone to Shreveport, and the seeds of gospel truth will be sown and well attended to in that place. He is a very active and earnest Christian, and will do all he can to spread the light. A few of us are left in this place who are doing all we can to advance the cause and bring men to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus. May we have your sympathy and prayers.

From A. Farrow, Melora, Ill.

I write to inform you that on last Sabbath eve. Feb. 9, we closed an eight days meeting in this place, in which Eld. O. D Gibson did most of the preaching. Br. J. M. Haycraft, of Missouri, giving us one discourse. Br. G.'s sermons were very plain, clear, and scriptural, and carried with them a great degree of the convincing power of God's never failing word. By reason of this, many hearts were made glad. This being particularly the case with Bible readers. There was no special revival of grace, or ingathering into the church. We regarded the meeting as a seed time, in which the precious word of truth was sown, from which a copious fruit may be gathered in the future.

The cause is still advancing with us. The opposition with which our faith is met seems to strengthen it, and although some of us are denounced as heretics, having the Bible as our defense, we can say to our opposers, as did some who were so denounced in the apostles' day, 'After the manner which they call heresy, so worship I the God of our fathers."

From J. L. Chadwick, Kasota, Minn.

The little band here is still alive. We have been deprived of preaching most of the time, except THE TIMES, which is an ever welcome visitor. But we have kept up our prayer meetings, and yesterday we met at Br. S. Hubble's and had a precious meeting. These meetings are where we feast from the table of our blessed Master, which is ever spread with the delicacies of spiritual food. His store house is ever full, and he willing to give to those that call upon him.

Br. S. C. Wellcome preaches to us occasionally now, and we hope he will hold a protracted meeting before long. Last month I accepted an invitation to accompany him to a portion of his field of labor. We went first to Eagle Lake, where he had held a protracted meeting, and God blessed his labors, and twenty-two started for the kingdom. It did my heart good to hear their testimonies. We then went to Medo where he preached Saturday eve. and Sunday. Several had made a start, but one rose for prayers, went home, erected a family altar. Thus the good Lord is blessing the labors of Br. Wellcome in all his fields. Some never had had a Bible in their families, but under his labor they procured one and searched to see if the things he preached were so: and the universal cry is, "Cannot you come oftener?" May the Lord send more laborers into the field.

From O. C. Marston, New Rutland.

Our meeting at this place is progressing finely. Several have renewed their covenants, and one has been converted. Last night three rose for prayers, and so the work goes on. The attendance is large, and a deeply solemn feeling pervades the audience. The church is greatly revived. Old difficulties and hard feelings are being killed by the parties being filled with the love of God. This is the best way to settle and get rid of trouble. Christians of all denominations come to our meetings and enjoy perfect liberty. I never saw a sweeter spirit among Christians of differing sentiments.

From Stevenson, Ala., Feb. 13.

Perhaps a few words from the South will be of interest to your readers. God is at work. I have just come from a four days debate between Br. Allison (Christian) and Br. Cargile (Baptist) on the kingdom and immortality. Perhaps I ought to say Br. Cargile has been preaching the coming of Christ and the mortality of man for over a year, and the last week of this month he is to be tried by his church for heresy. He needs the prayers of those who love the blessed hope. He stands almost alone; but God is with him. Truth did not suffer in his hands at the debate; I think good will grow out of it. We held meetings nights and over Sunday after the close of the debate. God was with us. Preachers from four different churches were present on Sunday, each one taking part, and all seemed to love God and each other. I could but thank God for it. Truth is spreading; the church is getting ready for the Master. God help us all to do our part well.

H. D.

Brief Extracts.

Helen M. Benson, Norwalk, O., says:—It is like having a good sermon to read many of the articles in THE TIMES, and to read the letters from the dear brothers and sisters scattered over the land is like a conference meeting. So, in imagination, I have my good times reading the paper. And it is about all the Advent preaching we have, unless we go to Norwalk. And we have been attending meetings there the past week, to hear Br. Fenn, and have indeed had a feast. The Lord sent him to Norwalk just when he was most needed. He has had a full house, several have come out and the interest is on the increase. They are in hopes to secure the labors of Sr. Elvira Jennings for the coming three or four weeks. God grant that they succeed in getting some one who will be instrumental in winning souls to Christ.——Br. Reese, at LaCross, Wis., says:—I am still trying to maintain and stand up for the truth as it is in Jesus. Although we have no preaching, yet we meet twice a week for prayers. The attendance is small, yet the Lord is with us. Praise his name for the promise, that where two or three meet in my name I will meet with them. I want the prayers of all, that I may be a light in this great city, and be ever ready to give a reason for the hope that is in me.——Sr. M. Tousley, Crooked Creek, says:—"Go work in my vineyard," is the command, and we are trying to obey. We lend our papers to our neighbors, and point them to Bible texts, and they become interested to know what the Bible does teach, and begin to think for themselves. I trust there has been some seed sown on good ground. We are trying to build a chapel. Brethren in the church are working very faithfully. May the Lord crown their labors with success.

The Nearing End; An Argument to Prove It.

"No Christian doubts that about six thousand year ago this world was prepared for the above of its present inhabitants, and that the time will eventually come will when it will be destroyed by fire. That this globe had a beginning, and will have an ending, is the undoubted faith of every believer in Christianity. When will this terrific conflagration take place? Is it to be expected within a few months, or within years: or are countless ages still to roll on before the archangel's trump shall utter its peals, and the earth and all that are therein shall be burned up?

"There are certain facts which seem to indicate that the end of all things is at hand. If the number of births to the world exceed the deaths, in the ratio, the time must of course eventually come when the world will be so crowded with inhabitants that it can hold no more—that there will not be room for another individual to stand up on the surface of the globe. Now it is an unquestionable fact, that the number of births do very decidedly exceed the number of deaths, and that in a ratio continually and rapidly increasing. And all things are tending to magnify that increase. Wars are becoming rare, and it is probable that soon that terrible desolation of the human family will disappear forever. Medical skill is making rapid advances in curing diseases, and in guarding the system against their approach. Comforts are multiplied, which shield the infant from exposure, give vigor to the frame, and prolong our days. And from these causes, and others, each succeeding year the excess of births over deaths must be increasing.

"But even at the present comparatively slow rate of progress when vice and crime are doing so much to retard the progress of the human species, the population of these United States doubles once in twenty-three years. And we can see no probable causes in the future to diminish this ratio of increase but on the contrary, very much to add to it. Humboldt estimates that the, continents of North America, when all r resources are fully developed, may tain a population of three thousand hundred millions; that is, about r times as many as the present pop- tion of the whole globe. But even he present proportionate increase of ulation, in the year two thousand twenty-four, but one hundred and hty-four years from now, the popu- on of this country will be forty ndred millions: and in twenty-three rs more, just two hundred and en years from the present time, the ulation will be eighty hundred mil- ns; more than twice as many as can, any probability, live in the land. To t, then, are we coming?

When we consider how full the Old rld already is, and the many causes ch are now combining, through the ances of piety, civilization, and the s, to ameliorate the condition of the nan family, and thus to promote the re rapid increase of population, we not imagine that an inch of ground l, in two hundred years, be left un- upied in that hemisphere. What, n, is to become of this vast and ac- ulating population of earth, when hall have filled every possible nook l corner of the globe, and shall ve exhausted all its conceivable re- rces? Is bloody war again to riot the extermination of the human e? Neither God's Word nor his vidence warrant this expectation. e time is evidently near when the ord shall be beaten into the plough- re, and the spear into the pruning- k, and the nations of the earth shall rn war no more. Is famine, with nt and skeleton limbs, to stalk in ror over the fields and cities, and families of the earth to waste and sh through the miseries of starva- ? This would be a millennium of thly wretchedness indeed, the idea which no sane mind could cherish a moment. What, then, is to be result? It seems capable of math- tical demonstration, that matters not progress, as they are now pro- sing, in this world, two hundred rs longer—perhaps not half that . Every thing seems converging crisis; and some tremendous re- must soon ensue. The population he world is rapidly outgrowing the ld's capacity to sustain it. One of e things is, therefore, inevitable. some supernatural interposition, rapid increase of population must prevented, or war and misery must off the starving myriads strug- g for a foothold upon the earth; or end of all things is at hand, and a dispensation is to be ushered in, he introduction of the new heavens new earth, wherein dwelleth right- ness. The probability of this lat- result is in process of rapid devel- ent, by all the teachings of proph- and Providence.

If a ship at sea, at a hopeless dis- e from land, has sprung a leak, and water is increasing in the hold, withstanding every endeavor to ent it, an inch an hour, you can ulate, with mathematical precision, long it will be, at that rate, before ship will be full. And you are ab- tely certain that unless there be e Providential interposition, the must sink in a given time. Now world is just in this condition. Its ulation is rapidly increasing, and ourse, the time is at hand when it t be full—when it can hold no e people, and when some stupend- change must ensue. The increase population is now such, that unless rded, this event must take place hin two hundred years. Are there prospective influences which may rd this progress? No, none at all. the contrary, every thing indicates ratio of increase must be continu- and rapidly augmenting. The s being admitted, we can no more st the conclusion than we can resist demonstrations of Euclid.

Does prophecy throw any light up- this question? It is certain that e is nothing in prophecy that mili- s against this view.—Sel. by D. T. ylor, from the "N. Y. Evangelist."

Compelled.

eremiah had been greatly persecu- for his faithfulness in delivering word of God. He tells us the rea- for his continuance in a work ich brought him so sorrowful a re- d. He gives us to understand that had been faithful in delivering God's rd, because that word had been rpoweringly precious to his own l. He could not do otherwise than ak the truth, because that truth had n his own daily food. He had met h nothing but ill-treatment from se whom he addressed; they had fied him in every way; he had been t in the most noisome dungeon; he l been denied even bread and water; everything short of actually putting him to death had been inflicted upon him by his ungrateful countrymen; but still he went on prophesying. He could not be silent. Though his prophesying brought him nothing but tears, yet he continued still to prophesy; for God's word came with such sweetness to his own soul, and filled his heart with such ravishing joy and delight, that he could not do otherwise than go and tell out among his fellow men what had been so delightful to himself. I believe this to be the secret of living ministry. The ministry that is fed upon flattery, and flatters those who flatter it, is a poor feeble counterfeit, and God will never bless it; but the ministry which under great difficulties and fierce opposition is still sustained because the preacher cannot help continuing in it, is that which God will bless. It was good advice of a venerable divine to a young man who aspired to be a preacher, when he said to him. "Dont become a minister if you can help it." The man who could very easily be a tradesman or a merchant had better not be a minister. A preacher of the gospel should always be a volunteer, and yet he should always be a pressed man, who serves his King because he is omnipotently constrained to do so. Only he is fit to preach who cannot avoid preaching, who feels that wo is upon him unless he preach the gospel, and that the very stones would cry out against him if he should hold his peace.—Spurgeon.

THE love of the world cannot be expugned by a mere demonstration of the world's worthlessness; but may it not be supplanted by the love of that which is more worthy than itself? The heart cannot be prevailed to part with the world by a simple act of resignation. But may not the heart be prevailed upon to part admit into its preference another, who shall subordinate the world, and bring it down from its wonted ascendancy? If the throne which is placed there must have an occupier, and the tyrant that now reigns has occupied it wrongfully, he may not leave a bosom which would rather detain him, than be left in desolation. But may he not give way to the lawful sovereign, appearing with every charm that can secure his willing admittance, and taking unto himself his great power to subdue the moral nature of man, and to reign over it? In a word, if the way to disengage the heart from the positive love of one great and ascendant object, is to fasten it in positive love to another, then it is not by exposing the worthlessness of the former, but by addressing to the mental eye the worth and excellence of the latter, that all old things are to be done away, and all things are to become new.—T. Chalmers.

OBITUARY verses are generally rather flat, except for home consumption. They are, no doubt, very dear to the immediate relatives of the deceased though of no interest to the thousands, for whom a paper is published. Do keep those verses at home, where they are very proper,—keep them at home for your sake, not ours.

When you see a man with a great deal of religion displayed on his shop window, you may depend upon it he keeps a very small stock of it within. Do not choose your friend by his looks; handsome shoes often pinch the feet.

A MINISTER who had preached somewhat languidly, yielding to his faint mood of mind, as he descended from the pulpit was met by a good brother who said, "You had no right to put such an evident dishonor upon your sermon."

A WRITER in the Traveler says that "if women were as particular in the choice of a virtuous husband as men are in the choice of a virtuous wife, a moral reformation would soon be begun."

TEACHERS, remember this text:—"Except ye utter by the tongue words easy to be understood, how shall it be known what is spoken? For ye speak into the air." (Cor. 14: 9).

"Ye Christian sects who all declare,
Lo, Christ's in this, and he is there,
Your brighter proofs from Scripture give,
Show which must die and which must live."

"Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."

POSTHUMOUS charities are the very essence of selfishness, when bequeathed by those who when alive would part with nothing.—Colton.

Our Young Folks.

The Terrible Chain.

It has been related by a French writer that the captain of a vessel was one day walking carelessly along by the side of a river, not far from its mouth, at low water. As he looked about him not minding his steps, he did not see extended before him a great chain, one end of which was fastened to a ring fixed to a stone on the bank, the other to an anchor sunk in the river. Not seeing it, he stumbled against it, and his foot passing through one of the links of the chain, he could not draw it back again. He struggled violently to extricate himself; he turned his foot first on one side, then on the other, but all in vain. He then called out for help, and some men who were passing heard him and hastened to his assistance.

They strained every nerve to drag the foot through the chain, but it was beginning to swell, and all their efforts were in vain. What was to be done? To unfasten or take away the chain was impossible. It was a mass of iron which could only be moved with the help of a capstan; and there was no time to be lost for the tide was coming in, and the water rose every moment. "Let us call a smith to saw the chain," said the men to each other, and one of them was dispatched to the nearest village, which was at a distance of two or three miles from the spot. The smith came, but it was found that the tools he had brought with him were not powerful enough, and he was obliged to go back to the village for others. At last he returned.

In the mean time the tide had risen, the mighty waves were rolling in, and the water, which at first had barely wet his feet, had now reached the unfortunate man's waist; the men who had come to his assistance had been forced to get into a boat, and the smith saw he could do nothing for him. What was to be done? O, the agony of that moment! There is one last resource, only one, but it is a terrible one. He must sacrifice his leg to save his life. Will he do it? Yes, he will sacrifice any thing, every thing, to escape death.

A surgeon is sought without a moment's delay; he comes in hot haste, bringing his case of instruments and every thing necessary for the operation. The unhappy man sees him approaching. "O do not lose a moment," he cries; "cut off my leg, doctor, and save my life." But when the doctor reached the spot he was obliged to get into a boat, and it was only by strong strokes of the oars that he could get near the man; the water had reached his neck, and with great trouble they kept his head above water. "It is too late," cried the doctor, and in a few moments the waves rolled over the unhappy man's head—he was lost.

Reader, this terrible story may be useful to us as a comparison. You, like this man, go forth in the morning of life light-hearted and happy. The chain, which through carelessness he does not see, is the snare which Satan spreads for you. The ring in which his foot is caught is sin. He believes that he will easily free himself from it, but he deceives himself. The rising tide is death, which is approaching. There is not a moment to be lost; every passing hour renders the chain of sin stronger, salvation more uncertain. What will become of you? No boat in the world can save you; no smith has power to sunder that chain: there is no surgeon skillful enough to sever that which binds you to your sin. What will become of you?

There is a Savior, one only—Jesus is his name. He can save you, deliver you, set you free. Turn unto him, call upon him for help; do not delay, for time is passing, and now is the day of salvation. Cast on him but one look of faith. He is worthy of all your trust and all your love. "He became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross," that you might live forever. Do not delay to come to him. Whosoever believeth in him shall not be confounded. Jesus will be with you in the hour of suffering, of danger, and of death, and he will deliver you from them all. Come to him at once, for now is the day of salvation.—Sel.

The Listeners.

Two city boys lost their way in the woods, and late at night took shelter in a solitary inn.

At midnight they awoke, and, sitting up in their bed, heard some one talking in the next room.

The boys put their ears to the wainscot, and distinctly heard a voice say: "Wife get the big kettle ready tomorrow, for I mean to kill our two young rogues out of the town."

The poor boys shuddered.

"Oh, dear, this innkeeper is a cannibal!" they whispered softly to each other. "What shall we do?"

After a moment's thought they got out of bed and sprang out of the window, hoping to escape that way. But one of them hurt his foot so badly in jumping that he could go no farther; and, besides, the great door of the yard was locked. So they crept into the pig-sty with the little pigs, and lay there trembling till morning.

In the morning came the innkeeper. He opened the sty-door, sharpened a knife, and called out:

"Now, you little rascals, out with you: your last hour is come."

Both boys set up a cry of horror: and begged on their knees to be spared.

The man was surprised to find them in the pig-sty, and asked them why they thought him a murderer.

"Because we heard you say in the night that you would kill us in the morning."

Then the innkeeper laughed, and said,

"Oh, you silly boys! I never meant you. I was talking of my little pigs, whom in joke I always call my little rogues out of town, because I bought them in the town. But so it always is with listeners; as the rhyme goes:

"Put your ear to the door or wall,
You will hear no good at all."

—From the German.

Too Common Phrases.

"Oh! it is perfectly lovely!" "It's the most perfectly beautiful thing I ever saw!" "It is the sweetest bonnet in the world!" "It's the handsomest dress I ever saw!" "It's a perfect fright!" "It's the most unbecoming thing I ever looked at!" "Perfectly absurd!" "The most disagreeable person in the world!" "I thought I should die!" "He was pleased to death!" "I am nearly dead!" "I am freezing to death!" "I was scared almost to death!" Isn't that nice!" "What splendid potatoes!" "She is horrid ugly!" "She is real hateful!" "Isn't it awful jolly!"

How unmeaning these phrases are! I feel sorry for the helpless adjectives which are so abused. If every little thing is "awful" or "splendid," girls, what will you say when these words can properly be used? If you are "ready to die" at the slightest alarm, I fear when really in danger no one will believe you. Do you remember the boy in the fable who cried "wolf" to frighten the shepherds? After a while they ceased to notice his cries: so when the wolf really came, no one believed the boy's alarm, and the sheep were all killed.

Conference Minutes

NOTHERN PENN. AND SOUTHERN NEW YORK.

The above Conference held its first Q. M. for the current year at North Bingham, Potter Co., Pa., but having little business the most of the time was devoted to worship. But we are happy to say that Eld. E. C. Cowles, of Marathon, Cortland Co., N. Y., joined the conference, and we cordially recommend him to the brethren. Also the Church of God, at East Brookfield, Tioga Co., Pa., became a member of the conference. Our session was pleasant, and, we trust, profitable. Although held at a place where we have no church, many of the people are in sympathy with us; and all that is needed to establish a church is a good revival. There is a large field open here, but the laborers are few. Who can help us by men or means? We are encouraged to pray and work on.

A. H. BRIGGS, Sec'y.

HOOSICK VALLEY CONFERENCE.

Pursuant to notice, the first quarterly conference convened with the church at Gloversville, N. Y., Jan. 17, Friday a. m., A. W. Sibley in the chair, who reported as follows: Preaching brethren present—A. W. Sibley, President; A. P. Bump, Secretary: R. Mosher, R. L. Harrison, and R. H. Bateman. Delegates: William C. Comstock, Caldwell, James H. Cox, Gloversville, and Nelson Robertson, Hoosick, N. Y. Brn. R. L. Harrison, R. Mosher, and J. H. Cox, were appointed Business Committee, and redorted the order of business as follows: Reports of ministers and delegates; promiscuous business; also this proposition:

Resolved, That this Conference recommend that the Constitution be changed at its next annual session, so as to read, that all churches in this conference report at each session of its quarterly conference by delegate or by letter; and also that all the ministers will be expected to report either in person or by letter.

Adopted.

Cheering reports were given by ministers and delegates, which gave evidence that the Bride is making herself ready. Br. Comstock reported a membership of seventeen: Br. Cox a membership of sixteen; and Br. Robertson said two had been added to the Hoosick church. Father Judson, of Gloversville, being eighty-four years old, was present and said he was feeble in body but strong in faith, serving the Lord.

Second session: Under the head of reports was read a letter from Br. David W. Lincoln, clerk of the Hebron church. Br. Jacob Wilbur reported by letter, also, that he was not able to be present, but expected to remove to Wisconsin, and requested a letter. Voted that his request be granted.

Third session: Voted that we extend our heartfelt thanks to the brethren and friends of Gloversville for their kind hospitality and Christian courtesy shown us during our stay with them. Voted, that the minutes be sent for publication to THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES and World's Crisis. Adjourned sine die.

Connected with the conference at Gloversville was a series of devotional exercises; preaching by Brn. Mosher, Sibley, Harrison, Bateman, and Bump; also prayer and conference meetings, in which the Holy Spirit seemed to be felt by all present; but more especially during the communion season Sunday p. m., when all hearts were deeply stirred and united in prayer for one object; a season long to be remembered, such as every true child loves to experience. There were several new requests for prayers during the meetings, and the church seemed to be strengthened and encouraged, and we trust some good was done by our conference so providentially c[illegible]ed with this little, faithful band. To [illegible] all the praise. Amen. It would seem to be a very propitious time to set forth the truth in Gloversville by a special effort. May the faithful Counselor so direct, if in his wisdom it is the proper time.

We were much pleased to meet a brother from Caldwell, who came on foot over forty miles specially to attend our conference. Would to God such interest were manifest by all who claim to be looking for the King in his beauty.

A. P. BUMP, Sec'y.

ILLINOIS.

NEPONSET DISTRICT Q. M.

Met at Oneida, Feb. 6. The officers of the preceding year were re elected.

On Sunday, Feb. 9, Br. H. Willett was duly set apart to the work of the gospel ministry, by the "laying on of hands by the presbytery," at the unanimous request of the church in Toulon. Prayer by Eld. J. V. Himes, charge by Eld. L. F. Cole, right hand of fellowship by Eld. W. McCullock.

This was the best meeting we have had since the reorganization. The Lord is with us, and this is a guarantee of success. The preaching was, without exception, clear, convincing, Scriptural, and keenly enjoyed by some of our neighbors. The church was much encouraged, and a deep feeling of interestedness rested upon our congregations generally.

The cause is reviving in this district, and we are looking for better times yet. Other calls for labor are numerous, and the field wide. May the Spirit of Israel's God hover over and establish the work of our hands until the war-worn host is marshaled on the plains of Eden restored.

L. F. COLE, Sec'y

DE KALB DISTRICT Q. M.

The last Q. M. of this district was a season of much interest throughout, though we sadly missed the presence and counsel of our dear brother Kingsly, who has lately fallen asleep. The preachers present were F. Burr, E. H. Burington, L. H. Davis, N. W. Spencer, C. W. Smith, and H. G. McCullock. Congregations not large but interested. The old officers were re-elected. Adjourned to meet in Genoa, at such time as the officers should appoint. Our quarterly conference has become a fixed institution, and the blessing of our heavenly Father rests upon it.

MINNESOTA.

The eleventh annual conference of the Advent Christians of Minnesota convened at the Advent chapel, in Monticello, Minn., Feb. 5.

Ministers present: G. W. Miller, A. G. Lombard, Ezra Bacon, Jedekiah Raymond, Wm. Parsons, L. C. Collins, S. C. Wellcome, and L. R. Wood.

Delegates from Monticello, Minneapolis, Cottage Grove, and Independence. The severe weather, the deep snows, and the danger of snow blockades on the railways, prevented a general attendance from different parts of the State.

Reports from churches: Minneapolis, Monticello, Independence, West St. Paul, Cottage Grove, Kasota, Medo, Lemonde, Eyota, and Utica. Query: Where are our other churches that they do not report?

Preachers reporting by letter: Brn. P. Ramer, G. Bursell, Wm. J. Bursell, M. Wellcome, and R. M. Rowell. Ten preachers failed to report. Why is this? Do not our brethren take interest enough in our conferences to report their labors and success as well as expenses and remuneration, as was voted at our conference in 1871?

The President's report was read and accepted. It was an able address, just what was needed by us all, to stir us up to new zeal and energy in the cause.

Br. G. W. Miller also made report as Evangelist; had attended all our quarterly meetings. They had been seasons of interest.

The following resolutions were passed:

Resolved, That we have two campmeetings the ensuing year, one at Cheatham's Grove, in Utica, and one farther north and west.

Resolved, That our next annual conference be held at the camp-meeting, in Utica, Winona Co., and alternately with the camp-meetings hereafter.

Resolved, That each district hold two meetings in every three months.

Resolved, That G. W. Miller be requested to travel as an Evangelist the coming season.

Officers elected for ensuing year: President, G. W. Miller; Treasurer, J. Raymond; Secretary, S. C. Wellcome; Mission Board (with Conference Officers,) Wm. J. Bursell, D. Cheatham.

Twenty dollars and seventy cents was raised by contribution for the brethren in attendance from a distance.

The congregations increased from the beginning. A deep interest was manifested to hear Bible truth. The social meetings were excellent. God was with us. At the love-feast Sunday morning twenty-five spoke of their hope, through Jesus Christ, of eternal life in the new earth of the saints, and about as many more testified of their hope in Christ.

At the close of the evening service, a large number gathered around the table of the Lord and celebrated the death and sufferings of our Saxior. It was a precious season to all present. Many of us will, perhaps, meet no more this side of the judgment, but we lift up out hearts and rejoice that the event draweth nigh.

A vote of thanks was given to the friends in Monticello for their kindness and hospitality. "God bless them all," was the feeling of all. May we meet them in those beautiful mansions Jesus has gone to prepare.

S. C. WELLCOME, Sec'y.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, February 25, 1873.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association,
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.
Sent Three Months on trial for Thirty-five cents.

The officers of the Association are as follows.
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON,
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD,
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK,
Treasurer—AMBROSE W. TUCKER.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS,
A. S. CALKINS.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH,
A. E. BABCOCK.

BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications to Wm. L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago, and

☞ Make all Postal Orders and Drafts payable to him, and always state the amount of money enclosed plainly at the head of the letter.

☞ Give your Post Office address in full in every letter.

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions.

Business Department.

THE WESTERN RURAL.—To any one paying us $1.60, we will send the Western Rural, the popular and excellent Rural and Family Weekly of the West for one year, and credit one year's subscription paid to our own paper. The Western Rural, alone, is worth $2.50 per year, and every family in the West ought to have it. [tf

Whitmore's Immortality.

We desire to correspond with any friends who have a supply of this work on hand, and will spare us a few copies. Will any such please write and let us know how many they can let us have.

FOR some reason we failed to receive the January number of the Rainbow. Will the editor kindly oblige us with a copy?

Notice.

My postoffice address for the present will be Lake Sibley, Kansas. Any one in Northern Kansas desiring my services, can address me there.

E. N. BLISS.

The "Times" to Ministers.

We send THE TIMES to ministers of any denomination for one dollar a year—half price. Those who wish to send the paper to preachers can take advantage of this fact.

Hades.

We learn that Mr. Constable is about to publish his work on Hades, of which several chapters have appeared in THE TIMES, by subscription. The work will be issued in England. We will receive subscriptions and forward them to Mr. Constable at the rate of one dollar a copy. The money need not be sent until the book is ready. tf.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

W Neville
J Langley
T C Baker
Z A Holton
J Gassett
H Macon
C D Lewis
G W Lawson
H Green
V Bissell
J Freed
M A Tibbetts
S A Keyes
M E Dibble
J C Lindsey
H M Benson
T N Sherman
O C Cotton
D Lasher
W Francis
J G Rogers
M E Green
A Farrow
J R McConnell
H Pratt
E Anderson
E N Orton
W H Peyton
M Towsley
H Wilkinson
J H Gallop
A Trabue
B F Wise
A Messenger
G Howard
A Raymond
A R Knight
H Willett
J Burgess
M E Hilton
J Lowry
P W Hough
E S Graves
D I Shamlon
L Remick
G W Gregory
R Crandell
M S Reed
T M Preble
C T Russell
W Royce
J H Burlington
E A Boynton
T J Giddings
J W Steuffer
W Brookins
W H Briggs
A Hooper
S Kelly
D F Sweetland
B Tuttle
H Kelley
S A Price
M D Peavy
R V Philip
A Brown
T B Weaver

Obituary.

HOOK—Died at Weister Creek, Vernon County, Wis., Feb. 4, Elsworth Warner, son of Henry U. and Angeline Hook, aged 10 years 1 month and 11 days.

After a short illness of about thirty hours, he closed his eyes in death. On the following day the funeral services were attended by a large number of relatives and friends. Words of comfort spoken by Anson Brown from Job 14:14.

BABCOCK—Died, at the residence of her eldest son, in Albion, Mich., Feb. 9, Sr. Olive Babcock; aged 88 years, 10 months, and 4 days.

Our aged sister was a firm believer in the second advent of Christ. She embraced the Advent faith in the year forty-three. Was formerly a member of the Christian church. Afterward united with the Advent Christian church, of Jonesville.

She maintained her faith to the end. She was a great sufferer for about three years, and longed to rest asleep in Jesus. She now rests in hope.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

R. T.

Crisis and Restitution please copy.

Book Notices, Etc.

WM. N. PILE has published a tract of eight pages upon the Year-Day Theory which we cordially recommend. Two copies for 5c. or $1.50 a hundred. Send your orders to Wm. N. Pile, Springfield, Mass.

WE have received from the author a copy The Joyful Message; a Biblical Exposition of the Gospel. By Joseph B. Rotherham. Reprinted from the Rainbow. Our readers have had a taste of the quality of this work, as we reprinted a large portion of it in THE TIMES. We are glad the series of articles have been put in shape for preservation and handy reference, for the essay is full of suggestive thought, and is a writing that one would desire to read more than once. Its critical suggestions are a valuable feature of the work. Mr. Rotherham is the author of a critical translation of the New Testament, which is very highly spoken of by excellent authorities.

SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY, for March, will be found to be one of the most interesting numbers yet issued. Life in the new diamond diggings is a story of personal experience—with numerous illustrations. There is a sketch of Prof. Moorse and the Telegraph, by Lossing, with portrait, fac similes of the first telegraphic message, and of the first daguerreotype of the human face ever made in America, and the true story of the sending of the first telegram. Folk life in German by ways is crowded with beautiful pictures of foreign artists. There is a very interesting sketch of Napoleon II., King of Rome, with portraits, and there is also a sketch of his pretended son.

This number is further enriched by many able pens in the educational departments. Home and society, edited by Frank B. Stockton, will be found especially noteworthy. There are also Etchings, an illustrated article, Among the Elgin watchmakers, by Dr. Eggleston. Letters from the people, about "The Great South," etc., in the publisher's department.

November and December free to all subscribers for 1873. $4 a year, 35 cents a number.

SCRIBNER & CO., Publishers,
654 Broadway, New York.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Preaching in Advent Mission Hall, 619 West Lake Street, every Sunday 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening
D. R. & M. S. MANSFIELD.

Genoa, Oct. 27, and every other Sabbath until further notice. E. H. BURINGTON.

Forreston, Feb. 25, 26.
Ackerman, 11 a. m., March 2.
White Rock, 2:30 p. m., same day.
Rochelle, eve., March 2.
Creston, Reed's Hall, March 3-7.
Byron, March 11-15.
Elida, March 16. C. C. MARSTON.

Squaw Grove, in the Methodist church, 11 a. m., Feb. 23.
Eagle S. H., Sugar Grove, 2:30 p. m., same day.
Beemerville, 11 a. m., and 7 p. m., March 2.
C. W. SMITH.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co, at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S H 2 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.
ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Nov. 10, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.

Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Nov. 17, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

Amboy, Lee Co., preaching the second and fourth Sundays of each month.
C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

MICHIGAN.

To the churches in Branch County, Michigan, I would say that my appointments for the year 1873 will be as follows:

East Gilead, Jan. 5, 10 a. m., and every two weeks after.

California, Jan. 12, 10:30 a m and every two weeks after.

Algansee, every Sunday 2:30 p m and evening. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening.
J. R. PRESTON, Pastor.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.

Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

Lexington Lake Shore Advent Chapel, 3 miles north of village, Sabbath, Jan. 26, at 3 p. m., and every two weeks after.

Lexington Ridge, White S. H., Feb. 2, at 3 p. m. and every two weeks after.

Marlette, Advent Chapel, Tuesday and Wednesday eve. Feb. 11 and 12, at 7 p. m., and every 4 weeks till further notice.
GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

The third Q. M. of the Eastern District of the A. C. Conference of Michigan will be held with the A. C. church of Marlette, Sanilac Co., commencing [illegible] m., Thursday, March 6, and continuing [illegible] Sunday.

Bret[illegible] come, as far as possible, and come to work. We earnestly hope this church will be prayerfully remembered, and the quarterly gathering will be a great blessing to them. They have a good and comfortable chapel, and we have reason to believe the brethren at Marlette will cordially greet all who may attend.
JOHN H. PATON, Sec'y

WISCONSIN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.
A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

Calaburgh, eve. Feb. 1, and once in four weeks.
Norris S. H., 11 a. m., Feb. 2, and once in four weeks.
Pine River, eve. Feb. 2, and once in four weeks.
ANSON BROWN.

MINNESOTA.

New S. H., Garden City, Tuesday eve., February 25.
Kasota S. H., eve. March 2.
Turitan S. H., March 3 and over Sunday.
S. C. WELLCOME.

Owatonna, Saturday eve., March 8, and Sunday, as Br. E. K. Smith may appoint.
MRS. H. M. DURBY.

The first Q. M. of the St. Paul District will be held with the Minneapolis church, commencing Friday eve., Feb. 21, and over Sunday. A general invitation to all living in the district to attend.

The second Q. M. of the same district to be held with the West St. Paul church, at the S. H., near Br. Libbey's, commencing Friday, Feb. 28, and over Sunday. A full attendance is expected.

The first Q. M. of the Ottawa District will be held with the church at the Agency, commencing Friday eve., March 7, and over Sunday. Shall expect a full attendance of all the friends in the vicinity.

Second Quarterly Meeting for the same district will be held at Garden City, commencing Friday eve., March 14, and over Sunday. A full attendance is expected. G. W. MILLER, Evangelist.

Ridgeway, Feb. 8 and 9, and once in four weeks.
P. MITSON.

The third Q. M. for the Southern District of Wisconsin will be held at Montfort, Grant Co., commencing Friday eve., March 14th, and holding over Lord's Day. We hope for a general attendance of the brethren throughout the district, and the preaching brethren in particular are requested to be there. Let all come praying that the blessing of our heavenly Father may rest upon the meeting, and that much good may be done in the name of Jesus.
GEORGE HOWARD.

I will commence a protracted meeting at Big Creek, Sauk Co., Wednesday, March 5. Will the friends of the cause of our coming Savior come and help us by their gifts and prayers?
P. W. HOUGH.

A protracted meeting in Baraboo, Sauk Co., beginning Friday eve., Feb. 28, and holding over Lord's Day. All are invited to attend. Come and help hold up the truth in this place.
E. P. GRAVES.

IOWA.

We, the undersigned, members of various churches of the Iowa Christian and the Iowa Advent Christian Conferences, realizing the obligations we are under to God and his truth and his people, and realizing, too, that in our present divided condition we cannot possibly accomplish as much good as we might if all the elements among us were heartily united in concerted action and with undivided front, do hereby propose and call a convention, to be composed of two delegates from each church, to convene in the city of Manchester, April 15, to take into consideration the matters which now divide us, with a view to an arrangement which shall once more unite us in a single, undivided conference organization.

Signed:—T. E. Cook, J. Ingalls, J. Gildersleve, Dr. Banton, and many others.

Preaching in Thompson's Hall, Delmar, Clinton Co., Jan. 5, and every two weeks until further notice. C. W. PITCHER.

Manchester, the first and third Sabbaths of each months, at 2 and 7 p. m.
J. RIDLEY, Pastor.

Q. M. of the First District of the N. W. Missouri and S. W. Iowa Conference will be held at Troublesome Creek, six miles east of Atlantic, Cass Co., Iowa, commencing Friday eve., March 14. Brn. Hubbell and Nokes will be expected to come and help at this meeting. We also expect Eld. Wm. McCulloch. This is a good field, and the truth has a firm hold. Come, brethren, praying and ready for work. WM. MORPHY, Sec'y.

Romig S. H., near Milford, Feb. 2, and every fourth Sunday.

Waveland, Pottawatamie Co., Feb. 9, and once in four weeks.

Troublesome Creek, Feb. 16, and every fourth Sunday.

Hebing's S. H., Feb. 23.

Let the brethren circulate these appointments fully. WM. MORPHY.

MISSOURI AND IOWA.

The second Q. M. in District No. 2 of the S. W. Iowa and N. W. Mo. Conference will be held at Quitman, Nodaway Co., Mo., commencing Friday eve., Feb. 28 and holding over Sunday. Eld. Wm. McCulloch will be with us. A general invitation is given to all who love our Savior and his appearing. Come, brethren, to help us and cheer us with your presence.
JAMES C. SMITH, Sec'y.

MISSOURI.

There will be a special meeting of the Southern Iowa and Northern Missouri Conference at McKinley S. H., eight miles east of Unionville, Putnam Co., Mo., March 14 and onward.
N. C. MILLER.

NEW YORK.

Saratoga Springs; meetings every Sunday in the Lower Town Hall, corner of Broadway and Lake Avenue, at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday School and Bible class directly after morning service.

Prayer meeting every Thursday eve., at the residence of the pastors, 212 Broadway, nearly opposite Town Hall.
WM. A. & M. L. DURAND.

The Western District New York Conference will hold its second quarterly session in the Old Congregational Church, in Le Roy, commencing Thursday eve., March 6, 1873, continuing over the following Sunday. A general attendance is desired. The church here is in its infancy, and we hope the meeting may do them good in the name of the Lord. We [illegible] come for the one object. C[illegible] there from the other districts [illegible] MOORE, Sec'y.

PENNSYLVANIA.

The next Q. M. of the Advent Christian Conference of Northern Penn. and Southern N. Y., will be held in the Wesleyan church, at Westfield, Tioga Co., Pa., commencing Friday eve., March 7, to continue over the following Sunday.
A. H. BRIGGS, Sec'y.

Warrensville, Lycoming Co., Feb. 22.
Quaker Hill, eve., Feb. 25.
Canton, Bradford Co., eve., 26.
Union, 3 miles from Canton, Feb. 27, March 1.
Segur S. H., Armenia Mountain, a. m., March 2.
Chase's Mills, Tioga Co., eve., and attend to baptism and Lord's Supper.
Sylvania, Bradford Co., March 3-5.
East Troy, March 6-7.
South Creek, Sunday, March 9, and attend to baptism. JOHN T. ORSLEY.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Bleury St.
JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y. 237, St. Joseph St.

Advertisements.

List of Books, Tracts, etc., kept on sale at the Advent Christian Times office.

THE COMING EARTHQUAKE, By D. T. Taylor. 25 Cents.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c. By D. T. Taylor.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—Unabridged, $5, by express. Condensed, sufficiently full for ordinary purposes, by mail. $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occuring in the Holy Scriptures. With maps and useful tables. 65c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: with engravings, maps, and tables. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

BIBLE DICTIONARY: by Smith & Barnum. The best abridgment of Smith's larger work. Leather $4. cloth $5. By express.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $12 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDance. With Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. $7 50. by express.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock, $2 50, Post-paid.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The Phenomena of Modern Spiritualism. By N. Field, M. D. 10c.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 30c.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions in the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 50c. post-paid.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 45c, post-paid.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3:1. By H. L. Hastings. Paper, 50c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY of God: and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 15c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy; the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC meetings. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 5c. a hundred.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; with a review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabath By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added History, Statistics and Tables. Cloth, $2; leather $2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By Wellcome and Good. 460 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATTHEW, 24 and 25, 30c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $3 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen. The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one adress, post-paid, for $4 00.

LAST DAY TOKENS: by S. S. Brewer. 25 cts.

FUTURITY; by Wm. Sheldon. 20 cts.

THE INDEX BOOK MARK; 25c a dozen.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. Nothing so good on this topic. Cloth $1. Paper, 50c. 3 copies for $1, post paid.

GOOD TIDINGS; a general view of Advent doctrine. By an Association of Authors. 436 pages. Cloth 65c, Paper 40c. Post paid.

THE NATURE AND DURATION OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT: By Henry Constable, Prebendary of Cork, 40c. Post paid.

THE FAITH OF ST. PAUL; showing it to have been neither Pharisaic nor Sadducean, but Hebrew. By L. C. Collins. 10c.

THE STATE OF THE DEAD; a Discussion between N. Field, M. D. and T. P. Connolly, Esq. pp. 300. 50c. Post Paid.

THE JUBILEE HARP. $1. $9 a dozen.

HADES AND SHEOL; By L. C. Collins. The best published exposition of the parable of Dives and Lazarus. 10c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL; a choice collection of spiritual songs. Flexible cloth, 20c. $2.15 a dozen. Paper, 15c. $1.50 a dozen.

HYMNS OF THE HARP; Cloth, 75c, Leather $1.

HYMNS OF THE MORNING; A new and rich collection. Cloth 80c. Leather, 90c.

SCIENCE AND THE RESURRECTION; By D. T. Taylor. 5c.

PAULS EARNEST EXPECTATION and hope; (Phil. 1:21:23.) By O. R. Fassett. 5c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT: containing the original Greek text of the New Testament with an interlineary word for word English translation and a new emphatic version, 884 pp. Cloth $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

Woman and Her Work. A monthly paper 16 large quarto pages. Established for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of woman's usefulness, especially in that department which becomes her so well—Christian charity.

Published by the Woman's Christian Association. $1 00 a year. Mrs. E. S. Jennings editor. Address: 74 Williams St., Rochester, N. Y.

The Helper's Friend, and Union Missionary Journal, is an Independent Religious monthly, devoted to the interests of all Christian women as a specialty; together with a variety of choice matter for the household. It should be in every family. Mrs. E. S. Jennings, Editor and Business Manager, 74 Williams st., Rochester, N. Y., to whom all letters should be addressed. Price $1 per year. Specimen copies Free.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Rich Man and Lazarus.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.

LOUIS REIMER,
1806 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

The Kansas Bee Hive.

Four of its sides are made removable to permit easy access to the interior.

THIS IS THE BEST HIVE FOR PRACtical bee culture in the country. All who keep bees, and make honey a specialty—either box or frame—will find it to their interest to send for a descriptive circular and price list. Also, terms and conditions to agents, &c. Address F. GRABBE,
23 West Lake Street, Chicago.

500,000 SUBSCRIBERS WANTED.

The new volume of SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY will present a more brilliant array of contributors, a wider and more thorough discussion of the topics treated in its editorial departments, finer illustrations, and more uniformly good printing than any which has preceded it. The list of contributors just published contains nearly one hundred of the brightest names known to our literature. Among the features of special interest will be Dr. Holland's new serial, "Arthur Bonnicastle," also a series of brilliantly illustrated papers by Edward King, under the title of "The Great South," which will be alone worth the price of the Monthly. There will be also entertaining papers "About Authors, their Friends, Whims, and Ways." Papers on "The Decoration of American Homes." "Sketches, with Portraits, of Living American Writers." There will be Descriptive Articles, Tales of Travel and Adventure, the choicest Poems, the most Brilliant Essays, Editorials, Reviews, and Art Critiques. Departments relating to Home and Society, Nature and Science, and Culture and Progress, &c., &c., presenting nearly 2000 pages of the choicest illustrated literature by the best writers in the English language.

"Scribner's Monthly" has obtained something more than national recognition.

An eminent English author, in a note to the Publishers, says: "It is incomparably better than any magazine I have come across."

It claims to be "the foremost magazine of its class in the world."

Subscription Price $4.00 a year, payable in advance. November and December numbers sent FREE to all subscribers for 1873.

SCRIBNER & CO., 654 Broadway, N. Y.

"National Agriculturist and Bee Journal"

In its new form—16 large quarto pages—adorned with beautiful engravings, is now offered to subscribers with the choice of four beautiful Chromos, for $1.50; or with a choice Lithograph or Book, for $1.25 or for only $1.10 without any Premium. Only $1 10 in clubs of ten without any premium. One copy free, one year to the agent sending a club of ten, besides the regular cash commission or premiums; or one copy free as a premium for three subscribers. Send for a sample copy (sent free) and see our list of valuable Premiums and cheap outfit of Chromos, Lithographs, &c., offered very low to those who will act as agents. Write now before you forget it, to

H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York.

For The National Agriculturist and Bee Journal, and one chromo and THE TIMES, both one year for $2.25. Address W. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Bible Banner.

THIS PAPER IS EDITED BY
ELDS. JOHN COUCH, WILLIAM SHELDON,
A. A. PHELPS.

Published monthly, at $1 a year, with a choice book, or fine lithograph engraving, given to each subscriber. Furnished to subscribers of THE TIMES three months free, or both one year for $2.75, with a book or engraving free. All orders for the Banner and TIMES should be addressed to W. L. HIMES, 21 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill. All orders for sample copies (sent free) or for the Bible Banner ALONE, should be addressed to H. A. KING, 14 Murray St., New York.

POCKET HYMN BOOK

With Music.

COMPILED BY CHAS. C. BARKER.

"Hymns of the Morning"
Is for sale at THE TIMES Office, at the following
REDUCED PRICES:

Cloth Binding.......................................50c
Morocco "...75c

Sent postage free on receipt of price.

TWELVE COPIES FOR $4.75.

A liberal discount to agents.

This book is suitable for all religious occasions, containing the sublimest of religious songs, and the cream of musical composition.

For special terms for quantities, address the publisher, C. W. SARGENT,
Box 436, Concord, N. H.

☞ For sale at THE TIMES office, in large or small quantities.

THE CHRISTIAN:

A LARGE, LIVE, MON[illegible]Y, RELIGIOUS, Family Paper, con[illegible]g anecdotes sketches, records of Providences and answers to prayer, true stories, poetry, music, etc. No sectarianism controversy, politics, puffs, pills, patent medicines novels or continued stories, allowed in its columns.

Each subscriber receives a large and splendid Bible reader's map, free. This map exhibits not only Palestine, but all Bible Lands. It is printed on a sheet, 28x 39 inches, is beautifully colored, and contains—

(1) View of the Land of Canaan, with its valleys, mountains, rivers and lakes, as seen at a glance from Pisgah, where Moses stood to behold it, before he died. (2) Jerusalem and its Environs, the holy places, valleys, streams, pools, "the mountains round about Jerusalem," etc. (3) St. Paul's journeys, and the world as known to the ancient Hebrews. (4) A view of Jerusalem, as seen from Olivet, where Jesus beheld the city and wept over it. (5) Map of Palestine, "from Dan to Beersheba," giving the inheritances of the different tribes of Israel, colored separately. (6) Peninsula of Mount Sinai, and the journeys of Israel from Egypt to the Promised Land. (7) A Chart of the Seasons, months, productions, weather, and temperature of Palestine.

Besides all these, the map contains the ancient and modern names of all known places; the heights of the mountains; and references to the texts of Scripture where the different places are mentioned.

This map is given to subscribers for The Christian.

Terms—in advance: with the map on paper, beautifully colored, One Dollar a year; with the map varnished and mounted on rollers, a Dollar and a Quarter.

Four copies of The Little Christian, a child's paper, to one address, sent at the same rate as one copy of The Christian.

Ten thousand agents wanted to get subscribers for this map and The Christian.

Honest, intelligent, energetic men, women and children, can have pleasant and profitable employment, without risk or capital. For specimens and instructions, address H. L. HASTINGS,
36 Hanover St., Boston, Mass.

☞ The Times and Christian one year for $2.25. With map on paper, $2.75. With map on rollers, $3.00. Address W. L. HIMES,
25 West Lake St., Chicago.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

6

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.---NO. 31. CHICAGO, MARCH 4, 1873. WHOLE NO. 462.

Advent Christian Times.

Contents of This Number.

First Page.
All Christians will not Die—Forever, C. L. I.; Spirits and the Hair Business; The Present Times Foretold.

Second Page.
The Ministry of the Angels (second article), Mrs. H. V. Reed; Exhortation, P. W. Matts; Sanctification, A. Armour; The Rejoicing Time, R. V. Philip.

Third Page.
Mortal Man, J. C. Overstreet; Fact or Fiction—which? Veritas; Union in Iowa, F. H. Kenny; "Only Raising a Little," C. W. Sargent; Pillow Prayer, T. B. Weaver; Is it True? M. E. Orr; In Memoriam, J. H. W.

Fourth Page.
Brief Editorials; The Ministering to the Saints; The Paradoxes of St. John; Time.

Fifth Page.
Editorial Gleanings; "Immaterial Immortal Entity," W. J. Mott; A Translation, C. W. Waterhouse; Personal, J. V. Himes; Personal, H. McCulloch; A Methodist Funeral Sermon; Cold Meeting Houses, H. Munger; News—At Home and Abroad.

Sixth Page.
The Old Pilot and the Infidel; Melted Over; Christian Sincerity; No Sharp Corners; From Our English Correspondent; Letters from A. and J. Lowry, J. McD. Mitchell, M. A. Tibbetts, F. M. Porter, H. Zader, C. W. Connolly, E. McNutt, D. K. and M. S. Mansfield, and J. T. Ongley; Holiness, Fanny Reynolds.

Seventh Page.
Varieties, C. W. Sargent; The Comforting Promise, E. J. Bentley; Holiness Perverted, C. C. Marston; Calvinism—New and Old; Our Father in Heaven, (poetry); I dare you.

Eighth Page.
Business Department; Notices; Appointments; Advertisements.

All Christians Will Not Die—Forever.

"And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." John 11: 26.

It has been said in commenting upon the above passage—"Some Christians shall never die." Ought we not rather to say, all Christians shall never die, using that last word as Christ did in his sacred speech?

Till quite a recent period, thanks to my orthodox training, I honestly thought that God delighted in enigmas and contradictions, as his chosen way of setting forth (?) the truth. But the scales have dropped from my eyes. I believe that the same rule of interpretation applies to the Bible as to all other books. Its language is invariably literal, except where from the nature of the case it must be figurative, or it is specially declared so to be, as in Rev.19: 8. And so understanding it, those perplexing contradictions and absurdities have vanished, like mist before the sunbeams. By this simple method of interpretation of the word of God, the revelation of his will to man, is so plain "that he may run who readeth it."

Yet we still meet an ambiguity in the passage above quoted as given in the English translation: "whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." Multitudes of believers in Christ then and since living have died; this is a fact of every day experience. What did Christ mean?

One writer has endeavored to meet the difficulty by ingeniously, but it seems to me unwarrantably, restricting "whosoever liveth" to those living at Christ's second coming. And moreover I can not accept that explanation, because it fails to reach a like apparent ambiguity of language in John 8: 51. "If a man keep my sayings he shall never see death." Is there not a simple way out of the difficulty?

In both these passages, if from our English version with the peculiar theological views thrust into it, we go back to the Greek, we find that in the original, as John wrote it, there is not the least ground for any misapprehension. The literal Greek is: "and all or [every one] living and believing in me shall not, not [two negatives in Greek more emphatic] die—eis ton aiona—to THE age," i. e. to eternity. He that liveth and believeth in me, he that keepeth my saying, shall not die—for ever! The Greek noun 'aion' is that whence is derived the adjective 'aionion,' which, in Mat. 25: 46, is translated everlasting and eternal.

Who those are who die forever, we well know: those whose life has been without God, and without hope in this world, those for whom their friends must sorrow as those without hope. (1 Thes. 4: 13.) From death which is the common lot of all men, they will have a resurrection; for all in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of man and shall come forth: but these come not forth, as do the good, unto a resurrection of life, but unto a resurrection of condemnation. They shall be judged by the Judge to the second death, and in the lake of unquenchable fire, the capital punishment of God's tribunal shall be executed upon them. That death is eternal—it is forever. From this, those found in Christ, who have kept his sayings, will be kept by him who once died in their stead. They shall not, die forever, for Jesus has redeemed them. "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life." C. L. I.

Spirits and the Hair Business.

Among the new fields for woman's labor, we have been the most amused with the enterprise of a female Chicagoan, who, finding that her finances were getting low, and having a chronic dislike for work, set herself up for a spirit medium. Having an eye strictly to "business," she did not spend her valuable time in tipping over chairs and making up ghostly faces at the windows of dark closets. Not a bit of it. This enterprising female was acquainted with hu-man nature, and advertised that, while under spirit influence, she could compound a Restorative that would raise hair on bald heads. She must have a lock of hair and five dollars enclosed, whereupon she will diag-nose the hair and the greenback, and send the wonderful remedy by express. She understands the power that lies in printers' ink and uses it freely. We saw four long advertisements of hers in a single issue of a Chicago paper.

As soon as they "saw the point" a multitude of parties, whose ages varied from fifty to seventy years, rushed into the net so carefully prepared by female fingers. One verdant youth, who gave his age as fifty-four, was encouraged to send another greenback for a second bottle, from the fact that the first had created quite a literal smarting upon his bald head. The presence of this last symptom might prompt a skeptical mind to inquire if they raise mustard in the spirit world. We give this case as one of the absurdities of Spiritism, and an illustration of the gullibility of human nature.

The Present Times Foretold.

Thirty-one or two years after the death of Christ the Apostle Peter uttered a remarkable prediction. It was, indeed, safe for the Apostle to predict opposition, at almost any time, to the principles of the Gospel. But it was no mere general opposition that Peter spoke of. He pointed out a distinct kind and quality of opposition.

His language is this: "There shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying: "Where is the promise of his coming? For since the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were from the beginning of the Creation."

That is to say, men in the "last days" of religious history would argue against the truth of Christianity from the permanence of the ordinary course of Nature. This would be the characteristic type of objection "in the last days."

The decisive plea for non-acceptance of the Gospel would be, not its uselessness, not its self-contradictoriness, but the steadfastness of the order of natural events. It would be said that the regularity of the occurrences which transpire in physical affairs and in the affairs of men disproves every allegation of intervention by supernatural power in the past and discredits every prediction of such intervention to come. Here, certainly, is a striking and interesting fact. A document of Scripture, nearly two thousand years old, foretells the taking up, at a far future period, of a certain precise and characteristic line of opposition and assault against the Gospel. And it declares that this peculiar type of antagonism to Christianity will mark one of the concluding epochs of religious history. It will come late in the order of events. It will be among the more immediate of the precursros of those great changes which will usher in the Kingdom of God.

Now, it is not the purpose of this article to offer any opinion as to the length of that period denominated by Peter the "last days." Whether long or short comes not within the present design.

But it cannot but be a solemnly impressive truth to at any one at all concerned in watching the progress of Christian history that the precise type of opposition to the Gospel, thus pointed out marking a late epoch of time is exactly the distinguishing and pre-eminent characteristic of our own days.

For now about two generations the antagonism to Christianity has been assuming precisely the form predicted so long ago. With increasing unanimity the assailants of Revelation have been marshalled on this ground. Driven from one position after another, they have for a considerable period, and especially during the ten years just passing, been gathering their forces on exactly that standing-place where it was foretold they would be found "in the last days."

The attitude of the opponents of evangelical religion on this question of miracles is one example in point.

Miracles are an essential element in Christianity. Either the miracles of the Bible are true or the religion of the Bible is false. The miracles are not to be separated from the religion. They are constitutive portions of it. The supernatural birth and character and resurrection of Christ are miraculous events, the disproof of which is fatal to the whole scheme of Christianity.

But the main strength of modern unbelief is directed precisely against this point—the discrediting of the supernatural element in Scripture, the doing away with all that is miraculous in the person and life of Christ.

And the argument by which this is attempted is exactly the argument Peter foretells. The order of Nature is so regular and unbroken that it raises an insuperable presumption against the truth of miracles, past or future. The fixed and orderly course of events have not been broken in memory of man. "Since the fathers fell asleep" no such interpositions in the march of physical law have occurred. It is, therefore, improbable such interpositions ever did occur. The argument lies against them.

And, if they did happen, it is equally unlikely they ever will happen. There never was a supernatural birth; there never will be one. There never was a resurrection from the grave; these never will be one. The order of Nature discredits the statements of Revelation.

It was David Hume who first put this argument into a cogent popular form. But since his day it has become the current and characteristic argument of unbelief. It is one which the whole tendency of popular feeling in reference to the physical predisposes to and enforces.

And never since Christianity had an opponent had it one so formidable. If the argument is valid at all, it sweeps the whole ground.

It disposes of the person and history of Christ; for that person and history are of no considerable account unless they be supernatural and divine. It disposes of the doctrine of new birth. For the very conception of regeneration, as presented in this gospel, is a transformation which Nature has no power to work; but which itself bears witness of a God who comes forth from his hiding-place and by the touch of his own hand regenerates the soul. It disposes of the predictions of Scripture concerning resurrection, the judgment, the visible kingdom of Christ. For these are not events in the order of Nature. Should they occur, they would be witnesses that all things did not continue as they were from the beginning.

Whether this argument is valid enough to do all this which it proposes to do is not, however, now our question. The point to which attention is directed is that, whether valid or not, its pretentions were definitely anticipated and foretold.

Words could not more acurately describe the traits of a moral epoch than those words which the Apostle puts by anticipation into the mouth of an objector of a far future day describe the habit of thought which marks the infidelity of this hour. The whole course of disbelief from Hume to Herbert Spencer is exactly portrayed in that homely saying, spoken so long ago: "All things continue as they were." That, in simple language, is the complete argument of modern skepticism. Strauss' discrediting of Scripture, Colenso's denial of the Hebrew records, Renan's reduction of Jesus to an impostor, Tyndall's ridicule of the efficacy of prayer, all are succinctly epitomized and depicted in that antique delineation of the nature of the scoff of the "last days." Just this it is which, for many among us, is emptying the Gospel narratives of historical truth, which is vacating devotion of its reality, life of any divine meanings and relationship, the future of its celestial hopes, and even the world of its God.

But all this, let it be remembered, was foretold. Simple but wonderful and encouraging fact. Fact which is in itself a prophecy of the discomfiture of the assault thus anticipated and described.

The mind of the unlettered fisherman of Galilee reached onward to a period not yet arrived at birth by near two thousand years. Who can believe that it was by force of natural insight he thus penetrated the future and thus discerned the features of religious thought in our distant day? What was there about the man Simon Peter, either in education or native endowment, to give him thus a power to describe the philosophic character of a time so foreign to every ancient habitude of mindas is our own?

Modern science and its bearing on religious truth! The characteristic speculative tendencies of the nineteenth century of time! How saw he them? Yet seen they were and described they were in language as exact as if written to-day. This shall be "in the last days."

This period, then, foretold, we may believe also this period is provided for. The light that illuminated with so far penetrating a ray the Apostle's eye shines not to this point only, but beyond. God is not taken by surprise. Things concerning his Gospel fall not out unaware. The courses of human thought in reference to the religion of Jesus are courses which are foreknown and lie within the scope of the divine plans. However, at any period of time, unbelief seems rampant and its weapons appear almost irresistible, neither it nor its armament have been overlooked or unconsidered by him who is leading his church to victory.

True, we do stand in the midst of a doubting period. True, many men's minds are disquieted in them. But it is a predicted time. All its perils and difficulties are anticipated. And the same voice which tells us the condition of things in these "last days" tells us also a condition to come after them. However men may now be saying, "All things continue as they were. Where is the promise of his coming?" "Nevertheless the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night." Behind the foretold confusion of the dawn comes slowly on the equally anticipated glorious of the day. That we are told of the one gives us confidence in the other. Wherefore we, "according to his promise, look for a new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."—G. L. Walker in Independent.

THE advanced woman who would rather be a concubine than a wife, who objects to maternity as a sign of functional degradation, and whose highest ambition is to assume the privileges of both sexes while accepting the obligations and burdens of neither, may be a pleasant person to talk to, able to discuss smartly, if not profoundly, the best remedies for pauperism and the social effects of the redundancy of women; but we fancy we should prefer one who could tell fairy tales to a group of little children, and add up a butcher's bill with a clear understanding of averages, whose heart was sounder than her political economy, and her religion stronger than her critical faculty.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

6

VOL. X.---NO. 31. CHICAGO, MARCH 4, 1873. WHOLE NO. 462.

Advent Christian Times.

Contents of This Number.

First Page.
All Christians will not Die—Forever, C. L. I.; Spirits and the Hair Business; The Present Times Foretold.

Second Page.
The Ministry of the Angels (second article), Mrs. H. V. Reed; Exhortation, P. W. Matts; Sanctification, A. Armour; The Rejoicing Time, R. V. Philip.

Third Page.
Mortal Man, J. C. Overstreet; Fact or Fiction—which? Veritas; Union in Iowa, F. H. Kenny; "Only Raining a Little," C. W. Sargent; Pillow Prayer, T. B. Weaver; Is it True? M. E. Orr; In Memoriam, J. H. W.

Fourth Page.
Brief Editorials; The Ministering to the Saints; The Paradoxes of St. John; Time.

Fifth Page.
Editorial Gleanings; "Immaterial Immortal Entity," W. J. Mott; A Translation, C. W. Waterhouse; Personal, J. V. Himes; Personal, H. McCulloch; A Methodist Funeral Sermon; Cold Meeting Houses, H. Munger; News—At Home and Abroad.

Sixth Page.
The Old Pilot and the Infidel; Melted Over; Christian Sincerity; No Sharp Corners; From Our English Correspondent; Letters from A. and J. Lowry, J. McD. Mitchell, M. A. Tibbetts, F. M. Porter, H. Zader, C. W. Connolly, E. McNutt, D K. and M. S Mansfield, and J. T. Ongley; Holiness, Fanny Reynolds.

Seventh Page.
Varieties, C. W. Sargent; The Comforting Promise, E. J. Bentley; Holiness Perverted, C. C. Marston; Calvinism—New and Old; Our Father in Heaven, (poetry); I dare you.

Eighth Page.
Business Department; Notices; Appointments; Advertisements.

All Christians Will Not Die—Forever.

"And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die" John 11: 26.

It has been said in commenting upon the above passage—"Some Christians shall never die," Ought we not rather to say, all Christians shall never die, using that last word as Christ did in his sacred speech?

Till quite a recent period, thanks to my orthodox training, I honestly thought that God delighted in enigmas and contradictions, as his chosen way of setting forth (?) the truth. But the scales have dropped from my eyes. I believe that the same rule of interpretation applies to the Bible as to all other books. Its language is invariably literal, except where from the nature of the case it must be figurative, or it is specially declared so to be, as in Rev.19: 8. And so understanding it, those perplexing contradictions and absurdities have vanished, like mist before the sunbeams. By this simple method of interpretation of the word of God, the revelation of his will to man, is so plain "that he may run who readeth it."

Yet we still meet an ambiguity in the passage above quoted as given in the English translation: "whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." Multitudes of believers in Christ then and since living have died; this is a fact of every day experience. What did Christ mean?

One writer has endeavored to meet the difficulty by ingeniously, but it seems to me unwarrantably, restricting "whosoever liveth" to those living at Christ's second coming. And moreover I can not accept that explanation, because it fails to reach a like apparent ambiguity of language in John 8: 51. "If a man keep my sayings he shall never see death." Is there not a simple way out of the difficulty?

In both these passages, if from our English version with the peculiar theological views thrust into it, we go back to the Greek, we find that in the original, as John wrote it, there is not the least ground for any misapprehension. The literal Greek is: "and all or [every one] living and believing in me shall not, not [two negatives in Greek more emphatic] die—eis ton aiona—to THE age," i. e. to eternity. He that liveth and believeth in me, he that keepeth my saying, shall not die—for ever! The Greek noun 'aion' is that whence is derived the adjective 'aionion,' which, in Mat. 25: 46, is translated everlasting and eternal.

Who those are who die forever, we well know: those whose life has been without God, and without hope in this world, those for whom their friends must sorrow as those without hope. (1 Thes. 4: 13.) From death which is the common lot of all men, they will have a resurrection; for all in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of man and shall come forth: but these come not forth, as do the good, unto a resurrection of life, but unto a resurrection of condemnation. They shall be judged by the Judge to the second death, and in the lake of unquenchable fire, the capital punishment of God's tribunal shall be executed upon them. That death is eternal—it is forever. From this, those found in Christ, who have kept his sayings, will be kept by him who once died in their stead. They shall not, die forever, for Jesus has redeemed them. "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life." C. L. I.

Spirits and the Hair Business.

Among the new fields for woman's labor, we have been the most amused with the enterprise of a female Chicagoan, who, finding that her finances were getting low, and having a chronic dislike for work, set herself up for a spirit medium. Having an eye strictly to "business," she did not spend her valuable time in tipping over chairs and making up ghostly faces at the windows of dark closets. Not a bit of it. This enterprising female was acquainted with hu-man nature, and advertised that, while under spirit influence, she could compound a Restorative that would raise hair on bald heads. She must have a lock of hair and five dollars enclosed, whereupon she will diag-nose the hair and the greenback, and send the wonderful remedy by express. She understands the power that lies in printers' ink and uses it freely. We saw four long advertisements of hers in a single issue of a Chicago paper.

As soon as they "saw the point" a multitude of parties, whose ages varied from fifty to seventy years, rushed into the net so carefully prepared by female fingers. One verdant youth, who gave his age as fifty-four, was encouraged to send another greenback for a second bottle, from the fact that the first had created quite a literal smarting upon his bald head. The presence of this last symptom might prompt a skeptical mind to inquire if they raise mustard in the spirit world. We give this case as one of the absurdities of Spiritism, and an illustration of the gullibility of human nature.

The Present Times Foretold.

Thirty-one or two years after the death of Christ the Apostle Peter uttered a remarkable prediction. It was, indeed, safe for the Apostle to predict opposition, at almost any time, to the principles of the Gospel. But it was no mere general opposition that Peter spoke of. He pointed out a distinct kind and quality of opposition.

His language is this: "There shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying: "Where is the promise of his coming? For since the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were from the beginning of the Creation."

That is to say, men in the "last days" of religious history would argue against the truth of Christianity from the permanence of the ordinary course of Nature. This would be the characteristic type of objection "in the last days."

The decisive plea for non-acceptance of the Gospel would be, not its uselessness, not its self-contradictoriness, but the steadfastness of the order of natural events. It would be said that the regularity of the occurrences which transpire in physical affairs and in the affairs of men disproves every allegation of intervention by supernatural power in the past and discredits every prediction of such intervention to come. Here, certainly, is a striking and interesting fact. A document of Scripture, nearly two thousand years old, foretells the taking up, at a far future period, of a certain precise and characteristic line of opposition and assault against the Gospel. And it declares that this peculiar type of antagonism to Christianity will mark one of the concluding epochs of religious history. It will come late in the order of events. It will be among the more immediate of the precursros of those great changes which will usher in the Kingdom of God.

Now, it is not the purpose of this article to offer any opinion as to the length of that period denominated by Peter the "last days." Whether long or short comes not within the present design.

But it cannot but be a solemnly impressive truth to at any one at all concerned in watching the progress of Christian history that the precise type of opposition to the Gospel, thus pointed out marking a late epoch of time is exactly the distinguishing and pre-eminent characteristic of our own days.

For now about two generations the antagonism to Christianity has been assuming precisely the form predicted so long ago. With increasing unanimity the assailants of Revelation have been marshalled on this ground. Driven from one position after another, they have for a considerable period, and especially during the ten years just passing, been gathering their forces on exactly that standing-place where it was foretold they would be found "in the last days."

The attitude of the opponents of evangelical religion on this question of miracles is one example in point.

Miracles are an essential element in Christianity. Either the miracles of the Bible are true or the religion of the Bible is false. The miracles are not to be separated from the religion. They are constitutive portions of it. The supernatural birth and character and resurrection of Christ are miraculous events, the disproof of which is fatal to the whole scheme of Christianity.

But the main strength of modern unbelief is directed precisely against this point—the discrediting of the supernatural element in Scripture, the doing away with all that is miraculous in the person and life of Christ.

And the argument by which this is attempted is exactly the argument Peter foretells. The order of Nature is so regular and unbroken that it raises an insuperable presumption against the truth of miracles, past or future. The fixed and orderly course of events have not been broken in memory of man. "Since the fathers fell asleep" no such interpositions in the march of physical law have occurred. It is, therefore, improbable such interpositions ever did occur. The argument lies against them.

And, if they did happen, it is equally unlikely they ever will happen. There never was a supernatural birth; there never will be one. There never was a resurrection from the grave; these never will be one. The order of Nature discredits the statements of Revelation.

It was David Hume who first put this argument into a cogent popular form. But since his day it has become the current and characteristic argument of unbelief. It is one which the whole tendency of popular feeling in reference to the physical predisposes to and enforces.

And never since Christianity had an opponent had it one so formidable. If the argument is valid at all, it sweeps the whole ground.

It disposes of the person and history of Christ; for that person and history are of no considerable account unless they be supernatural and divine. It disposes of the doctrine of new birth. For the very conception of regeneration, as presented in this gospel, is a transformation which Nature has no power to work; but which itself bears witness of a God who comes forth from his hiding-place and by the touch of his own hand regenerates the soul. It disposes of the predictions of Scripture concerning resurrection, the judgment, the visible kingdom of Christ. For these are not events in the order of Nature. Should they occur, they would be witnesses that all things did not continue as they were from the beginning.

Whether this argument is valid enough to do all this which it proposes to do is not, however, now our question. The point to which attention is directed is that, whether valid or not, its pretentions were definitely anticipated and foretold.

Words could not more acurately describe the traits of a moral epoch than those words which the Apostle puts by anticipation into the mouth of an objector of a far future day describe the habit of thought which marks the infidelity of this hour. The whole course of disbelief from Hume to Herbert Spencer is exactly portrayed in that homely saying, spoken so long ago: "All things continue as they were." That, in simple language, is the complete argument of modern skepticism. Strauss' discrediting of Scripture, Colenso's denial of the Hebrew records, Renan's reduction of Jesus to an impostor, Tyndall's ridicule of the efficacy of prayer, all are succinctly epitomized and depicted in that antique delineation of the nature of the scoff of the "last days." Just this it is which, for many among us, is emptying the Gospel narratives of historical truth, which is vacating devotion of its reality, life of any divine meanings and relationship, the future of its celestial hopes, and even the world of its God.

But all this, let it be remembered, was foretold. Simple but wonderful and encouraging fact. Fact which is in itself a prophecy of the discomfiture of the assault thus anticipated and described.

The mind of the unlettered fisherman of Galilee reached onward to a period not yet arrived at birth by near two thousand years. Who can believe that it was by force of natural insight he thus penetrated the future and thus discerned the features of religious thought in our distant day? What was there about the man Simon Peter, either in education or native endowment, to give him thus a power to describe the philosophic character of a time so foreign to every ancient habitude of mindas is our own?

Modern science and its bearing on religious truth! The characteristic speculative tendencies of the nineteenth century of time! How saw he them? Yet seen they were and described they were in language as exact as if written to-day. This shall be "in the last days."

This period, then, foretold, we may believe also this period is provided for. The light that illuminated with so far penetrating a ray the Apostle's eye shines not to this point only, but beyond. God is not taken by surprise. Things concerning his Gospel fall not out unaware. The courses of human thought in reference to the religion of Jesus are courses which are foreknown and lie within the scope of the divine plans. However, at any period of time, unbelief seems rampant and its weapons appear almost irresistible, neither it nor its armament have been overlooked or unconsidered by him who is leading his church to victory.

True, we do stand in the midst of a doubting period. True, many men's minds are disquieted in them. But it is a predicted time. All its perils and difficulties are anticipated. And the same voice which tells us the condition of things in these "last days" tells us also a condition to come after them. However men may now be saying, "All things continue as they were. Where is the promise of his coming?" "Nevertheless the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night." Behind the foretold confusion of the dawn comes slowly on the equally anticipated glorious of the day. That we are told of the one gives us confidence in the other. Wherefore we, "according to his promise, look for a new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."—G. L. Walker in Independent.

THE advanced woman who would rather be a concubine than a wife, who objects to maternity as a sign of functional degradation, and whose highest ambition is to assume the privileges of both sexes while accepting the obligations and burdens of neither, may be a pleasant person to talk to, able to discuss smartly, if not profoundly, the best remedies for pauperism and the social effects of the redundancy of women; but we fancy we should prefer one who could tell fairy tales to a group of little children, and add up a butcher's bill with a clear understanding of averages, whose heart was sounder than her political economy, and her religion stronger than her critical faculty.

LIBRARY COPY
AURORA COLLEGE

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.---NO. 31. CHICAGO, MARCH 4, 1873. WHOLE NO. 462.

Advent Christian Times.

Contents of This Number.

First Page.
All Christians will not Die—Forever, C. L. I.; Spirits and the Hair Business; The Present Times Foretold.

Second Page.
The Ministry of the Angels (second article), Mrs. H. V. Reed; Exhortation, P. W. Matts; Sanctification, A. Armour; The Rejoicing Time, R. V. Philip.

Third Page.
Mortal Man, J. C. Overstreet; Fact or Fiction—which? Veritas; Union in Iowa, F. H. Kenny; "Only Raising a Little," C. W. Sargent; Pillow Prayer, T. B. Weaver; Is it True? M. E. Orr; In Memoriam, J. H. W.

Fourth Page.
Brief Editorials; The Ministering to the Saints; The Paradoxes of St. John; Time.

Fifth Page.
Editorial Gleanings; "Immaterial Immortal Entity," W. J. Mott; A Translation, C. W. Waterhouse; Personal, J. V. Himes; Personal, H. McCulloch; A Methodist Funeral Sermon; Cold Meeting Houses, H. Munger; News—At Home and Abroad.

Sixth Page.
The Old Pilot and the Infidel; Melted Over; Christian Sincerity; No Sharp Corners; From Our English Correspondent; Letters from A. and J. Lowry, J. McD. Mitchell, M. A. Tibbetts, F. M. Porter, H. Zader, C. W. Connolly, E. McNutt, D. K. and M. S. Mansfield, and J. T. Ongley; Holiness, Fanny Reynolds.

Seventh Page.
Varieties, C. W. Sargent; The Comforting Promise, E. J. Bentley; Holiness Perverted, C. C. Marston; Calvinism—New and Old; Our Father in Heaven, (poetry); I dare you.

Eighth Page.
Business Department; Notices; Appointments; Advertisements.

All Christians Will Not Die—Forever.

"And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." John 11: 26.

It has been said in commenting upon the above passage—"Some Christians shall never die." Ought we not rather to say, all Christians shall never die, using that last word as Christ did in his sacred speech?

Till quite a recent period, thanks to my orthodox training, I honestly thought that God delighted in enigmas and contradictions, as his chosen way of setting forth (?) the truth. But the scales have dropped from my eyes. I believe that the same rule of interpretation applies to the Bible as to all other books. Its language is invariably literal, except where from the nature of the case it must be figurative, or it is specially declared so to be, as in Rev.19: 8. And so understanding it, those perplexing contradictions and absurdities have vanished, like mist before the sunbeams. By this simple method of interpretation of the word of God, the revelation of his will to man, is so plain "that he may run who readeth it."

Yet we still meet an ambiguity in the passage above quoted as given in the English translation: "whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." Multitudes of believers in Christ then and since living have died; this is a fact of every day experience. What did Christ mean?

One writer has endeavored to meet the difficulty by ingeniously, but it seems to me unwarrantably, restricting "whosoever liveth" to those living at Christ's second coming. And moreover I can not accept that explanation, because it fails to reach a like apparent ambiguity of language in John 8: 51. "If a man keep my sayings he shall never see death." Is there not a simple way out of the difficulty?

In both these passages, if from our English version with the peculiar theological views thrust into it, we go back to the Greek, we find that in the original, as John wrote it, there is not the least ground for any misapprehension. The literal Greek is: "and all or [every one] living and believing in me shall not, not [two negatives in Greek more emphatic] die—eis ton aiona—to THE age," i. e. to eternity. He that liveth and believeth in me, he that keepeth my saying, shall not die—for ever! The Greek noun 'aion' is that whence is derived the adjective 'aionion,' which, in Mat. 25: 46, is translated everlasting and eternal.

Who those are who die forever, we well know: those whose life has been without God, and without hope in this world, those for whom their friends must sorrow as those without hope. (1 Thes. 4: 13.) From death which is the common lot of all men, they will have a resurrection; for all in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of man and shall come forth: but these come not forth, as do the good, unto a resurrection of life, but unto a resurrection of condemnation. They shall be judged by the Judge to the second death, and in the lake of unquenchable fire, the capital punishment of God's tribunal shall be executed upon them. That death is eternal—it is forever. From this, those found in Christ, who have kept his sayings, will be kept by him who once died in their stead. They shall not, die forever, for Jesus has redeemed them. "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life." C. L. I.

Spirits and the Hair Business.

Among the new fields for woman's labor, we have been the most amused with the enterprise of a female Chicagoan, who, finding that her finances were getting low, and having a chronic dislike for work, set herself up for a spirit medium. Having an eye strictly to "business," she did not spend her valuable time in tipping over chairs and making up ghostly faces at the windows of dark closets. Not a bit of it. This enterprising female was acquainted with hu-man nature, and advertised that, while under spirit influence, she could compound a Restorative that would raise hair on bald heads. She must have a look of hair and five dollars enclosed, whereupon she will diag-nose the hair and the greenback, and send the wonderful remedy by express. She understands the power that lies in printers' ink and uses it freely. We saw four long advertisements of hers in a single issue of a Chicago paper.

As soon as they "saw the point" a multitude of parties, whose ages varied from fifty to seventy years, rushed into the net so carefully prepared by female fingers. One verdant youth, who gave his age as fifty-four, was encouraged to send another greenback for a second bottle, from the fact that the first had created quite a literal smarting upon his bald head. The presence of this last symptom might prompt a skeptical mind to inquire if they raise mustard in the spirit world. We give this case as one of the absurdities of Spiritism, and an illustration of the gullibility of human nature. †

The Present Times Foretold.

Thirty-one or two years after the death of Christ the Apostle Peter uttered a remarkable prediction. It was, indeed, safe for the Apostle to predict opposition, at almost any time, to the principles of the Gospel. But it was no mere general opposition that Peter spoke of. He pointed out a distinct kind and quality of opposition.

His language is this: "There shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying: "Where is the promise of his coming? For since the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were from the beginning of the Creation."

That is to say, men in the "last days" of religious history would argue against the truth of Christianity from the permanence of the ordinary course of Nature. This would be the characteristic type of objection "in the last days."

The decisive plea for non-acceptance of the Gospel would be, not its uselessness, not its self-contradictoriness, but the steadfastness of the order of natural events. It would be said that the regularity of the occurrences which transpire in physical affairs and in the affairs of men disproves every allegation of intervention by supernatural power in the past and discredits every prediction of such intervention to come. Here, certainly, is a striking and interesting fact. A document of Scripture, nearly two thousand years old, foretells the taking up, at a far future period, of a certain precise and characteristic line of opposition and assault against the Gospel. And it declares that this peculiar type of antagonism to Christianity will mark one of the concluding epochs of religious history. It will come late in the order of events. It will be among the more immediate of the precursors of those great changes which will usher in the Kingdom of God.

Now, it is not the purpose of this article to offer any opinion as to the length of that period denominated by Peter the "last days." Whether long or short comes not within the present design.

But it cannot but be a solemnly impressive truth to at any one at all concerned in watching the progress of Christian history that the precise type of opposition to the Gospel, thus pointed out marking a late epoch of time is exactly the distinguishing and pre-eminent characteristic of our own days.

For now about two generations the antagonism to Christianity has been assuming precisely the form predicted so long ago. With increasing unanimity the assailants of Revelation have been marshalled on this ground. Driven from one position after another, they have for a considerable period, and especially during the ten years just passing, been gathering their forces on exactly that standing-place where it was foretold they would be found "in the last days."

The attitude of the opponents of evangelical religion on this question of miracles is one example in point.

Miracles are an essential element in Christianity. Either the miracles of the Bible are true or the religion of the Bible is false. The miracles are not to be separated from the religion. They are constitutive portions of it. The supernatural birth and character and resurrection of Christ are miraculous events, the disproof of which is fatal to the whole scheme of Christianity.

But the main strength of modern unbelief is directed precisely against this point—the discrediting of the supernatural element in Scripture, the doing away with all that is miraculous in the person and life of Christ.

And the argument by which this is attempted is exactly the argument Peter foretells. The order of Nature is so regular and unbroken that it raises an insuperable presumption against the truth of miracles, past or future. The fixed and orderly course of events have not been broken in memory of man. "Since the fathers fell asleep" no such interpositions in the march of physical law have occurred. It is, therefore, improbable such interpositions ever did occur. The argument lies against them.

And, if they did happen, it is equally unlikely they ever will happen. There never was a supernatural birth; there never will be one. There never was a resurrection from the grave; these never will be one. The order of Nature discredits the statements of Revelation.

It was David Hume who first put this argument into a cogent popular form. But since his day it has become the current and characteristic argument of unbelief. It is one which the whole tendency of popular feeling in reference to the physical predisposes to and enforces.

And never since Christianity had an opponent had it one so formidable. If the argument is valid at all, it sweeps the whole ground.

It disposes of the person and history of Christ; for that person and history are of no considerable account unless they be supernatural and divine. It disposes of the doctrine of new birth. For the very conception of regeneration, as presented in this gospel, is a transformation which Nature has no power to work; but which itself bears witness of a God who comes forth from his hiding-place and by the touch of his own hand regenerates the soul. It disposes of the predictions of Scripture concerning resurrection, the judgment, the visible kingdom of Christ. For these are not events in the order of Nature. Should they occur, they would be witnesses that all things did not continue as they were from the beginning.

Whether this argument is valid enough to do all this which it proposes to do is not, however, now our question. The point to which attention is directed is that, whether valid or not, its pretentions were definitely anticipated and foretold.

Words could not more acurately describe the traits of a moral epoch than those words which the Apostle puts by anticipation into the mouth of an objector of a far future day describe the habit of thought which marks the infidelity of this hour. The whole course of disbelief from Hume to Herbert Spencer is exactly portrayed in that homely saying, spoken so long ago: "All things continue as they were." That, in simple language, is the complete argument of modern skepticism. Strauss' discrediting of Scripture, Colenso's denial of the Hebrew records, Renan's reduction of Jesus to an impostor, Tyndall's ridicule of the efficacy of prayer, all are succinctly epitomized and depicted in that antique delineation of the nature of the scoff of the "last days." Just this it is which, for many among us, is emptying the Gospel narratives of historical truth, which is vacating devotion of its reality, life of any divine meanings and relationship, the future of its celestial hopes, and even the world of its God.

But all this, let it be remembered, was foretold. Simple but wonderful and encouraging fact. Fact which is in itself a prophecy of the discomfiture of the assault thus anticipated and described.

The mind of the unlettered fisherman of Galilee reached onward to a period not yet arrived at birth by near two thousand years. Who can believe that it was by force of natural insight he thus penetrated the future and thus discerned the features of religious thought in our distant day? What was there about the man Simon Peter, either in education or native endowment, to give him thus a power to describe the philosophic character of a time so foreign to every ancient habitude of mindas is our own?

Modern science and its bearing on religious truth! The characteristic speculative tendencies of the nineteenth century of time! How saw he them? Yet seen they were and described they were in language as exact as if written to-day. This shall be "in the last days."

This period, then, foretold, we may believe also this period is provided for. The light that illuminated with so far penetrating a ray the Apostle's eye shines not to this point only, but beyond. God is not taken by surprise. Things concerning his Gospel fall not out unaware. The courses of human thought in reference to the religion of Jesus are courses which are foreknown and lie within the scope of the divine plans. However, at any period of time, unbelief seems rampant and its weapons appear almost irresistible, neither it nor its armament have been overlooked or unconsidered by him who is leading his church to victory.

True, we do stand in the midst of a doubting period. True, many men's minds are disquieted in them. But it is a predicted time. All its perils and difficulties are anticipated. And the same voice which tells us the condition of things in these "last days" tells us also a condition to come after them. However men may now be saying, "All things continue as they were. Where is the promise of his coming?" "Nevertheless the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night." Behind the foretold confusion of the dawn comes slowly on the equally anticipated glorious of the day. That we are told of the one gives us confidence in the other. Wherefore we, "according to his promise, look for a new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness."—G. L. Walker in Independent.

THE advanced woman who would rather be a concubine than a wife, who objects to maternity as a sign of functional degradation, and whose highest ambition is to assume the privileges of both sexes while accepting the obligations and burdens of neither, may be a pleasant person to talk to, able to discuss smartly, if not profoundly, the best remedies for pauperism and the social effects of the redundancy of women; but we fancy we should prefer one who could tell fairy tales to a group of little children, and add up a butcher's bill with a clear understanding of averages, whose heart was sounder than her political economy, and her religion stronger than her critical faculty.

The Ministry of Angels.

[Second Article.]

"Are they not all ministering spirits sent forth to minister for them who shall be the heirs of salvation?" (Heb. 1:14.)

Daniel confessed the sins of Israel, and prayed for the restoration of Jerusalem; and while yet the prophet plead for himself and for his people, the angel Gabriel, being caused to fly swiftly, touched him at about the time of the evening oblation, and he opened to Daniel the mysteries of the seventy weeks, the building of the street and wall in troublous times, the cutting off of Messiah, the destruction of the city and sanctuary, and the confirmation of the covenant. While the smoke of the evening sacrifice floated away and the incense ascended to heaven, the angel mapped out before the prophet the events of coming years. There was presented the picture of a city restored, and a city ruined, and a Savior crucified and slain. He was cut off, not for himself, but for the sins of the people. The angel drew the picture in prophetic colors, and the long roll of ages has stamped it with the seal of fidelity to truth.

The Roman eagle soared on exultant wing over the rivers of the Holy City, and offerings to Mars, the god of war, were made upon the sacred altar of Moses. The temple was profaned, and the "Holy of Holies" polluted. "For upon the battlements shall be the idols of the desolation." The glory had departed from the "daughter of Zion" and her beauty was marred by the foot of Gentile invasion; for "The Lord hath cut off his altars: he hath given up into the hand of the enemy the walls of her palaces."

The angel prince of Judea has long watched over the desolation of the promised land. Long has Israel awaited the standing up of Michael to deliver them from Gentile oppression—but the promise standeth sure.

Midnight rested upon the busy haunts of men, and slumber, the balm of the weary, sealed the eyes of thousands, but the prophet of the Lord (Zachariah) whose heart was burdened by the desolation of Zion and Jerusalem, was led away by the spirit of vision to the valley of myrtles which rested like an ocean of beauty between the mountains of Judea; and lo! amid the the rich foliage and star-like flowers of the myrtle grove there appeared the horsemen "whom the Lord hath sent to walk to and fro through the earth."

And the angel of the Lord poured the oil of gladness into the prophet's bleeding heart. He talked of Zion's future glory when her horizon should no more be darkened by the storms of war. "Therefore, thus saith the Lord: I am returned to Jerusalem with mercies; my house shall be built in it saith the Lord of Hosts, and a line shall be stretched forth upon Jerusalem. Cry out, saying: Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, My cities, through prosperity, shall yet be spread abroad; and the Lord shall yet comfort Zion, and shall yet choose Jerusalem."

This bright prophecy has ever shed a golden light upon the desolated altars of Judea; and we look back through the long line of ages and rejoice that the promise which fell from angel lips still gleams along the mountain tops of Palestine. This prophecy takes a more lofty range than the partial rebuilding of the Holy City under Persian kings. It embraces a full history of the Gentile powers that have scattered Israel and trodden down the metropolis of Palestine. It reaches out upon the thrones of future ages to the glorious era when the four carpenters shall enter the land of promise and commence the restitution of Zion. This is the era to which the prophet was borne by the spirit of vision, and he saw a young man to whom the angel said: "Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls for the multitude of men and cattle therein. For I, saith the Lord, will be unto her a wall of fire round about, and will be the glory in the midst of her....Sing and rejoice, O Daughter of Zion, for lo! I come, and I will dwell in the midst of thee, saith the Lord. And many nations shall be joined to the Lord in that day and shall be my people; and I will dwell in the midst of thee, and thou shalt know that the Lord of Hosts hath sent me unto thee, and the Lord shall inherit Judah, his portion in the Holy Land, and [illegible] choose Jerusalem again." (Zech. 2.)

The prophet shadows forth the glory of that age when God shall be exalted and the honors of men shall be abased. "Be silent O, all flesh before the Lord, for he is raised up out of his holy habitation." And the "Branch" of the Lord is seen reigning on his throne, for he shall build the temple of the Lord, and bear the glory thereof. He shall sway the scepter over the nations of the earth, for "they shall remember and turn to the Lord." Jerusalem shall become the throne of the Lord, and the sacred tabernacle a house of prayer for all people, and the incense of praise shall float out upon the breezes of Eden restored.

The city of the Great King shall shine in robes of beauty and power. Its battlements will gleam with sevenfold brightness for the glory of the Lord shall be there.

It requires but little attention to see that the ancient dispensation—the age of patriarchs and prophets—was gladdened by frequent angel visits. We find their footsteps amid the bowers of Eden, and when man rebelled and filled the cup of doom, they brought the message of coming wrath, and heralded the thunder-bolt of an insulted God.

They hallowed the crown of Mount Moriah by the sacred light of mercy. From Horeb's burning brow the angel of the Lord pointed out the path for Israel's wandering feet. The oak of Ophra, the high priest of the forest, witnessed the angel's commission to Gideon, and Israel was saved. Amid the flaming glories of Sinai's awful peak they gave God's law to man. (See Acts 7:38-53.) Angel hands held the bolt of vengeance above the Assyrian host. Angel fingers traced upon the Babylonish wall "Mene, mene, tekel, upharsin," and a monarch trembled on his throne.

The holy watchers brought to Nebuchadnezzar the premonition of his doom, and in the visions of the night were shadowed forth the events of years. With Elijah beneath juniper tree, within the fiery furnace, or the lions' den, we find the protectors of God's "little ones." The angel brought to Daniel the sad picture of Zion's desolation. It was dark but truthful; still it was not left without the rainbow of hope, for amid the shining leaves and pearly flowers of the myrtle trees, Zachariah listens to the promise of restitution as it fell from angel lips.

All through the rolls of antiquity and along the shores of time, we find the traces of these heavenly visitants to man. They shine through the waste of ages like stars above the ocean, and they are, indeed, stars—the bright premonitors of the rising "Sun of Righteousness."

From the close of the Mosaic dispensation until the opening of the New, we have no record of heavenly communications with man. For nearly four hundred years we know of no seraphic wing that spanned the distance between heaven and earth. The account of their ministrations during the legal dispensation is sealed up with the close of the Old Testament. The Old Testament—the sacred scroll of antiquity, is a volume written in prophecy, and its words are burning with the glow of eloquence. It comes to us in robes of beauty, grandeur, and sometimes mystery. But when we have drawn aside the veil and opened the casket with the key of investigation, we gaze in and upon the glories that stand revealed. For, lo! there are cities ruined and restored, kingly power and fallen sovereigns, kingdoms in glory and in ruins, and high above them all, the grand center-piece of the group, the keystone in the golden arch of prophecy, we find the "Kingdom of God." Around this hallowed theme the poets of antiquity have gathered their loftiest notes. The Hebrew bards have sung of its glories and dreamed of its splendors. They have portrayed its beauties in the richest words of the Hebrew tongue. Israel's prophets have painted the scene in their greatest flights of eloquence, and it stands before us upon the sacred page in colors so rich and real that we almost forget that its glories are still shrouded behind the veil of futurity.

MRS. H. V. REED.

Exhortation.

Independent of the vocation and business of every person else, I should like to be an editor of some newspaper—I mean some Christian messenger, carrying upon the face of it the print, letter, and spirit of Jesus and his kingdom. Oh, how I would, in meekness and humility, endeavor to pattern after my blessed Master, and make it a welcome visitor in every Christian family—laden with such fruit from the true Vine as, "I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth in me though he were dead, yet shall he live!" that it should send forth such a thrilling and invigorating supply of nourishment into every branch, that they could not help but grow and bring forth fruit. I know we must watch and pray lest we enter into temptation.

Again, I love THE TIMES and the Crisis in setting forth in love, in preaching, exhortation, and prayer, that the kingdom is very near, except—let me illustrate: The papers above mentioned I regard as representing a congregation of brothers and sisters, and each article as speaking through its respective representative, whether it be preaching, prayer, or exhortation.

If I am correct in the illustration, then we have preaching, prayer, or conference meetings every time we take up the papers in our hands; and how blessed and edifying it is to every lover of Jesus, to see and know who it is getting up or kneeling down in the congregation, breathing forth their warm expressions of love towards the One in whom is our life. Imagine ourselves all going (and I would not leave any out) into one of those gatherings, with our hearts fired up with thanks and praises to our Father in heaven, to be offered through the medium of our representative character, with that horrid mask on, that no one might know us. Did Jesus ever institute such an assembly? Did he say let your light shine but keep your face covered? I believe that mask belongs to the world; I never did like it, and I (if I were editor), would return every article without the author's name, instanter, with not many thanks for the use of it, and would never permit any brother or sister to speak in the congregation with their faces covered.

I have, in my eagerness to drink down some articles, commenced reading at the beginning, and read them through to the end, and then looked to see who was speaking, and find them with the mask on. I would then throw the paper down, almost taking offence, and say to myself, "Well, there! I suppose that person was ashamed to let it be known who he is."

Now, dear editor, you know you must abstain from eating meat when it is an offence to your brother. If we are all of one large family of children will not you, as the great regulator of this family, teach each of your children to write his name, and say to each and all "Sign your names to your articles."

PETER W. MATTS.

Sanctification.

I wish to note a few facts on this subject as it is thought "the main difference arises from a misunderstanding ....derived from some unguarded or unexplained expressions."

I presume it was not "holy men" of old who gave utterance to the "unguarded" expressions, and would judge that the authors of them, whoever they may be, are in duty bound to have them "guarded" and explained," as plainly and publicly as possible.

I have before stated, (and, I think, proved), that "sanctify" means "hallow," or make holy, and "sanctification" means "holiness;" "sanctify" and "hallow" being both renderings of the same Greek word hagiazo; as "sanctification" and "holiness" are both translations of hagiasmos, and 'saint' and 'holy one' are both from hagios. They are thus identically the same in meaning, and the one may be substituted for the other with perfect propriety.

This must be known to many of the writers on sanctification, but, so far as I know, it is simply ignored.

A prominent brother writes: "The mere act of sanctifying ourselves to Christ does not make us holy, if so, then salvation would come of works." Sanctifying, that is making holy, does not make holy! The English word 'sanctify' is derived from the Latin sanctus—holy, facio—I make. I will not inquire whether a 'mere act' (of faith) is 'works,' nor whether we are to 'work out our own salvation.' I only ask proof that sanctifying does not make holy.

I may be told sanctity means 'to set apart.' I would like to learn, at the same time, how it comes to mean that? With equal truth I may say it means 'to join to,' for what is sanctified is joined to the holy, as much as set apart from the unholy.

I repeat again, 'to sanctify,' in the New Testament, means neither more nor less than 'to make holy.'

But what of all this? Am I splitting hairs without a practical end in view? We will see shortly.

I quote again: 'After we have made a full consecration and sanctification of ourselves to Christ, we may then [notice then,] look with confidence for the gift of the Spirit....Sanctification is only a means to secure the gift of the Spirit." Remember, 'the mere act of sanctifying ourselves' is 'works,' in the writer's estimation—and let me ask an old question: 'Received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?' Can, or do, we consecrate and sanctify ourselves to Christ without the help of the Spirit? Is the help of the Spirit not a gift? Or is there some other gift of the Spirit besides his help? What is the fruit of the Spirit? Is it produced at conversion? Is not the believer 'filled with all joy and peace in believing.... through the power of the Holy Ghost?' 'Did ye receive the Holy Spirit when ye believed?' (Acts 19:2. Bible Union Version.)

According to the Word, the Spirit was given at Pentecost, and is received when his testimony is believed. But, according to the 'unguarded and unexplained expressions,' the Spirit testimony is not at all essential. I quote again: 'A person may have errors in doctrine and be filled [mark filled,] with the Spirit, or he may be right in doctrine and be without the Spirit.' The times are changed since Paul gave us to understand that no man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus accursed; and that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord but by the Holy Ghost. But this view of the little importance of doctrine follows legitimately from the mystic, mesmeric, so-called sanctification. Feeling is everything—truth, doctrine is not needed. 'The sword of the Spirit' is left out, and I fear the Spirit stays away with it. A spirit comes, but what kind is it? Whither is it leading? The very next step is that a person may have errors in practice and be filled with the Spirit. Doctrine is the root of practice, and I do not know but that final step is included in the last. If it is not it is a very short step to it. It has been taken before and may be again.

Take heed to thyself and to the doctrine, for whosoever shall break one of those least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called least in the kingdom.

I hope I have written enough. I am sorry to have to write so, but it seems to be necessary. We are in strange and perilous times, and the watchman's trumpet must give a certain sound.

The Bridegroom is coming soon, but this is not the bride getting ready. No, no; the members of the bride are mostly asleep in the dust of the earth.

Let us study, not the unguarded expressions of mortal men, but the words taught by the Spirit, and in receiving the witness, i.e., testimony, of the Spirit, we will be filled with love, joy, and peace.

Brethren who have received the Spirit by the hearing of faith, by the Word of God; let me exhort you to contend earnestly for the faith delivered once for all to the saints; and may we all be sanctified by the truth—the Word is truth. Amen.

A. ARMOUR.

The Rejoicing Time.

"Then look up and lift up your heads for your redemption draweth nigh." (Lu. 21:28.)

What a consoling thought these few words spoken by our Savier give to all those that are blessed with faith and are looking for the speedy return of Jesus to the marriage feast? How calm and how composed are the children of grace as they contemplate the grandeur of the coming scene! With what exultant joy we will hail that great day, and how eager will be the gaze of those that can say in spirit and in truth, as recorded in Is. 25:9, "Lo, this is our God! We have waited for him, and he will save us. This is the Lord! We have waited for him. We will be glad and rejoice in his salvation."

What heartfelt emotion throbs in the breast of every true Christian who is living in the "blessed hope" of soon being able to see his Lord face to face, who is waiting to hear the thrice-welcome call, "Come, ye blessed of my Father; inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."(Mat. 25:24.) Oh, rapturous moment! How I long to see the day that shall enable me to stand with fearless eye and view the wonders of my Savior and his glory.

Let us contemplate the thought. What will be the sight? "The Lord, himself, shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and the trump of God." (1 Thes. 4:16.) "And the heavens shall depart as a scroll when it is rolled together; and every mountain and island will be moved out of their places." (Rev. 6:14.) "The dead in Christ shall rise first, then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air." (1 Thes. 4:17.)

Oh, wonder of wonders! Both small and great shall stand before God to give an account of all the works done here on earth! And "he that has endured to the end, the same shall be saved." What a privilege—to be able to sit down with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob before the throne of God and "dwell in the land forever?"

The Christian's hope alone sustains him. He leans upon Jesus who only can bear his burden. Faith in Christ renders us fit to see the glorious time not far distant. How can we perfect ourselves — how become Christ-like that we may gain the entrance into the Celestial City—the city of light and love, which not only is prepared for us, but is to be the home of all the blessed and the inheritance of all God's people? Then, too, Jesus will be there—our King and our Redeemer. He that died for us will be there; he who gave his blood for us and from whom we obtain our hope of eternal life and forgiveness of sins! "Blessed Savior, we look for thee. We long for thy coming. Our prayer is, Come, O Lord, come quickly. We believe thou art near—even at the door!" Brethren, ours is a hope both sure and steadfast, an anchor of the soul. Then let us carry the tidings of the coming Messiah to all that will hear our cry.

The judgment is at hand—Arouse! Wake up, ye sleeping ones ere Jesus comes and finds you lacking the necessary "oil in your lamps."

ROB'T V. PHILIP.

Mortal Man.

God only hath immortality. (1 Tim. 6: 16.) The negative of this assertion made by the apostle settled the argument with me in favor of the doctrine of man's mortality.

It does not argue anything to assume that man is immortal when there cannot be brought a single verse in the Bible to prove it. The absolute necessity of man's eating food and breathing air and drinking water proves that he is of mortal nature, dependent upon the nutritious elements contained in these agencies for the support of life. When God placed Adam in the garden he put there every tree that was good for food for him to eat. The constant use of all the fruit except one tree (the forbidden tree) would have perpetuated Adam's existence forever. Why? Because God drove him from the tree of life lest he should eat continually of the tree of life and thus be an immortal sinner.

If Adam had not sinned there would have been no death for him and no redemption from death; but Christ having triumphed over death, dieth no more, and he became immortal. But he came up composed of flesh and bones, and he ate food with his disciples and journeyed with them. Yet he was immortal. Now it only requires a change of nature, not of material, for man to be immortal. But changed from a dying nature to one undying. The immortal saint may have to eat of the tree of life in the paradise of God in order to live forever. What is the tree there for? Adam lost the right to the tree, but Christ gained that right back.

Life is a principle which Deity alone can bestow, and that was just what God gave to Adam to make him live. Life is a phenomenon that no mind can comprehend save the divine; neither can man account for it in the animal nor the vegetable kingdom. We can only say that life is life; and at death it returns to God who gave it, but not as an individual personality.

This principle or element of life was imparted to that lump of earth called Adam, and it became living matter instead of remaining dead matter. And if this life had been so firmly fixed in his nature that no power could have eradicated it, then he would have been immortal. But God made his very nature mortal in order that immortality might be a reward for obedience. Hence Paul taught that by patient continuance in well doing we should seek for immortality. So was Adam to seek for it or enjoy it by patient continuance in well doing.

I assume the premise that there is not a being in the universe save God alone but is dependent upon some higher power for its existence, therefore the devil is not immortal, yet capable of living many thousands of years. But we are taught that God will destroy him who hath the power of death which is the devil. Man never has lived one thousand years except Enoch and Elijah; and they were changed from a mortal blood life to an immortal spirit life. But this mortal must put on immortality, and this corruptible must put on incorruption. Then death with all its plagues will be swallowed up of life.

J. C. OVERSTREET.

Fact or Fiction—Which?

In THE TIMES for January 28 is an extract from Sir Isaac Newton's writings on prophecy, entitled a "A Plain Fact."

1. The opening sentence declares that "A horn of a beast is never taken for a single person." Is this a fact or is it a fiction? Let us see. In the A. V. of Dan. 8: 21, speaking of "the rough goat," it is said, "the great horn that is between his eyes is the first king." The Septuagint and Vulgate are substantially the same. It is, I believe, allowed by all that Alexander the Great is represented by the "great horn" of Dan. 8: 21. As Alexander was a "single person" I do not very clearly see Sir Isaac's first "plain fact."

2. He next declares that a horn of a beast "always signifies a new kingdom." Is this true? The angel interpreter said to Daniel, "The ram which thou sawest having (two) horns (are) the kings of Media and Persia." A. V. of Dan. 8:20. The Vulgate thus, "The ram which thou sawest with horns is the king of the Medes and Persians." Similarly the Septuagint: "The ram which thou sawest that had the horns is the king of the Medes and Persians." According to the angel's interpretation the ram with the horns represents the consolidated powers of Media and Persia; granting which it would follow, from v. 3 and contemporary history, that the first and shorter horn represents Media, and the higher horn Persia. But Sir Isaac says that a horn of a beast always signifies a new kingdom. Now, what are the facts in the case? Was Media a new kingdom at the time of its consolidation with Pesia? It was not. It was an independent kingdom long before Persia was anything but a province. After Cyrus Persia became the leading kingdom, so that, in Grecian history, Media is never or rarely mentioned. If then, the shorter horn symbolizes the kingdom of Media, then, most assuredly, it is not "a plain fact" that "a horn of a beast always signifies a new kingdom."

3. The extract further represents Sir Isaac as saying that "Antiochus reigned over the four horns." Is this statement a true one? Antiochus Epiphanes was king of Syria from 175–163 B. C. But it is not true that he reigned over the four horns or four kingdoms which were formed out of the wide dominion once held by Alexander the Great. His kingdom was undoubtedly the most extensive and powerful of the four but it did not include them all. Besides all of which the little horn of ch. 8 is represented as coming out of one of the four horns. In such a case, where a horn is represented as coming out of a horn, would it not be fair to interpret the latter as symbolizing a kingdom and the former a king or "single person?" I think there are other statements in the extract referred to that savor more of fiction than of fact, but let the above strictures suffice.

VERITAS.

Union in Iowa.

"Much Interested" says, "I propose a plan." Now the plan he proposes is, I think, out of order. The convention, if I understand it, is for mutual consultation, after which it is hoped that a plan can be devised by which we can all unite without regard to the particulars that have separated us. If "Much Interested's" plan is thought to be the best one presented to the convention there will be time to act upon it after the convention.

I suggest that the place and hour of meeting be added to the call.

F. H. KENNY.

"Only Raining a Little."

When the purpose of God to destroy the world by a flood was made known to Noah, and when he found himself perfectly prepared for it by being shut into the ark, it was all fair weather, doubtless, to those without. The offensive customs and sins which were practised before the judgment was made known, continued to be practised while the ark was preparing, and even after Noah entered therein: "And they knew not till the flood came and took them away."

Suppose some of our latter-day scoffers had been there at the commencement of the rain and Noah could ask of them their opinion concerning it, would it not have been "Only raining a little?" or "This is only a freak of nature," or "This is merely atmospheric phenomena, which is to develop and demonstrate our theories concerning the influence of other planets over ours." And suppose, also, that they had, previous to the flood, undertaken to demonstrate to the people the nearness of some great change on account of the appearance of a comet or some remarkable manifestations in the heavens. Exactly after the manner of some of the wise men of our day, when the flood came on at its incipient stages, if they were interrogated by their disciples, would not their profound wisdom have produced for them this sufficient answer, "Only raining a little?"

Were we to reason from analogy, such would have been the case, for the picture plainly drawn for us by our Savior shows that they knew nothing beyond the wisdom of this world. "So shall the coming of the Son of Man be." The folly, as well as the so-called wisdom of this world, is now found strong enough to keep people from believing that the Lord will flood the world with fire until it becomes the "Lake of fire." When the great snow storm swept over Minnesota this winter, some who knew not of its destructiveness by the experiences of similar storms in by-gone years, were unprepared for it, and perished. But those who understood the matter carried themselves through it. Years ago, when Minnesota was merely a frontier, and the United States' troops were stationed there, I am told they never left their barracks during a blinding snow storm, even to go ten rods, so great was the danger. They had learned of it by severe experiences. But, in the days of Noah, the impending danger was known only to the Lord, and in his mercy he imparted the knowledge of it to that righteous man.

So, to-day, the impending danger is only really known and understood by the Lord; but he has revealed sufficient knowledge of it to us in his Word to insure the salvation of all who will "pray always" that they "may be accounted worthy to escape all these things" which are shortly to "come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man."

C. W. SARGENT.

Pillow Prayer.

In THE TIMES of January 21 I read a short but good article upon "Pillow Prayer" which truly awakened a responsive chord in my heart. Truly for years I have known the sweet comfort and consolation of pillow prayer. Shut out from almost all worldly scenes as I am and have been for the past twenty years or more by the hand of disease and pain, I have truly known what a blessed thing pillow prayer has been. And often, in the long, lonely night, when all others were locked in the sweet embrace of sleep, sweet have been the hours of midnight when passed in pillow prayer! Oh! how much joy, peace, and consolation has the Savior given me when calling upon him while resting my weary, aching head upon my pillow and pouring out my whole heart in prayer to him who never turns a deaf ear to the cries of his weary, suffering ones.

My heart is filled with praise to him even now as I lie here and pen these few lines, for the sweet and blessed, the consoling privilege of pillow prayer. It's one of the sweetest privileges of my sick and helpless lot to rest my aching head upon my pillow and there pour out my heart in humble, earnest prayer to my Lord and Master. Oh! what could I have done—how could I have borne up under the heavy and crushing burdens of this life had it not been for pillow prayer? Glory to heaven's King for this precious boon! When the heart has been pressed with bitter grief and trials, that it seemed for a while that I must sink beneath the weight, then how blessed to cast it all upon Jesus while resting in him; and how often has the pillow prayer brought peace, joy, and hope to my tried heart! And, with the sweet singer of Israel, I can say:

"I remember thee upon my bed;
And meditate upon thee in the night watches."

Let us not forget nor neglect this privilege, but improve it to the utmost.

THERIA B. WEAVER.

Is it True?

That God has no personality? And that when he said Let us make man in our own image and likeness, he only had reference to the mind of man. So said an eminent "D.D." a few Sabbaths since, and, as proof of his assertion, he quoted "God is a Spirit." Consequently, he said, as God is purely spirit, he could not have meant man's physical constitution in the passage referred to, but that higher and nobler part of man, his mind.

Now, if this theory be true, that man's mind is a counterpart of God's, how can anything impure or unholy obtain lodgment in the thoughts of man? How came our first parents to transgress the Divine command—"But of the tree of knowledge of good and evil thou shalt not eat of it?" And how has it been from that time until the present? God's Word declares that, "the hearts of the sons of men are set to do evil;" and do we not see this verified every day?

But "to the law and the testimony," perhaps that will give us some light in regard to the personality of God. In Gen. 3: 8 and onward, God is not only represented as "walking in the garden in the cool of the day," but also as holding a conversation with those very personages whom he had previously created in his own likeness. Again in Ex. 33: 21, 22, we read: "And the Lord said [to Moses] Behold there is a place by me, and thou shalt stand upon a rock, and it shall come to pass, while my glory passeth by, that I will put thee in a cleft of the rock, and I will cover thee with my hand while I pass by." Query: Does a spirit have hands and feet, and can it walk and talk?

Again, this same "D D." made the assertion that Christ was the eternal God. Proof: John 10:30. "I and my Father are one." Now, in what sense are we to understand that the Father and Son are one? One in spirit and pupose in the great work of saving a perishing world. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him might not perish but have everlasting life," and Jesus declares that he came "to do the will of the Father." (2) As the Son is said to be the express image of his Father's person, it can with truth be said they are one in similitude. Hence the expression, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." In the New Testament writings we have the following expressions: "God is a Spirit," "God is love," "God is a consuming fire." Now, if we were to found a theory of our own from each of these expressions, considered alone and singularly, one view would be in direct opposition to another. But when we read aright, we consider them as expressing the attributes of a divine power; that it was by the spirt and power of God that all things were created; that his love was not only manifested in all his works, but also in the gift of his Son; that to them that will not obey God, but reject his Son and the free gift of salvation, he will eventually become a consuming fire, for we read, "And fire came down from God out of heaven and devoured them."

May we be "sanctified through the truth."

M. E. ORR.

In Memoriam.

Fell asleep in Jesus at his residence, 33 South Union St., Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 15, 1873, Br. Reuben Bloss: aged 68 years.

Br. Bloss was a native of Vermont, but for nearly forty years had been a resident of Rochester. He had, and was worthy to have a good name in all the relations of life. His large conscientiousness was combined with great firmness, and nothing could swerve him from what he considered a right course. On all questions involving a principle and not a mere opinion, he was inflexible. He was an honest man, and it has been well said that 'an honest man is the noblest work of God.' In his manners he was plain and undemonstrative, opposed to all show and ostentation. He was not an enthusiast himself, and he did not possess those characteristics that awaken enthusiasm in others; but he had that which was far better: he possessed those sterling qualities of character that secured for him the deep and lasting regards of all who knew him well. He was a brave, courageous, outspoken soul. He dared to stand by what he considered the right, when to do so he knew would be to place himself in the company of a despised minority, and virtually to ostracise him from society. When once a course was open to him the great question with him ever was, Is it right? Does my conscience approve and urge it? These questions once answered in the affirmative, he stopped not to ask further whether it would be popular or unpopular, whether it would place him with the majority or with the minority. These qualities made him a true friend to all for whom he professed friendship. He never won friends by flattery, nor lost them by neglect. His word once given, was as good as his bond. The one thing that he thoroughly despised was meanness or bitterness of soul. He had little patience with mere pretenders, men who professed much but did little. He, himself, was large-hearted and benevolent, but his benefactions were rarely known to the public. His hospitality was bounded only by his means. It was at his own home, indeed that his virtues shone the brightest. With strangers he was usually reserved and shy; but with those whom he knew well, he was free, open, and always accessible.

Reuben Bloss was a Christian. He cared more for religion than for theology; more for consistent Christian conduct than for mere professions of theory; more for the spirit than for the letter. He was, however, far from being easy or careless about doctrines and theories. His views of Christian doctrine were clearly defined and firmly held; but never offensively paraded. He had no taste for controversy. He loved peace. Experimental religion had for him the greatest charms. He showed his faith by his works. Precious are the memories and sacred are the legacies that are left us by the sainted dead. In striking down our friend and brother, death has left no sting, for the sting of death is sin, but thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

Br. Bloss leaves a wife, with whom he had most happily lived for forty seven years, and one daughter—the wife of Mr. S C. Phillips, of Rochester.

Though their loss is great and irreparable, they do not feel to murmur. They are sustained by the Christian's hope. The church in Rochester with which Br. Bloss had been so long and so actively connected, deeply feel and mourn his loss. The Veteran Grays, a semi-military organization of this city, of which our brother had long been a most highly esteemed member, attended the funeral and manifested profound sorrow at the loss of their companion and brother.

The news of Br. Bloss' death will carry sorrow to many a household east and west. His house had long been a pilgrim home, and he was well and widely known. His death was caused by heart disease and was quite sudden, he having walked a mile the day before he died. The funeral services were held at the East Avenue Baptist church, and were very largely attended. It was on a bright sunny afternoon that we laid our brother away in Mount Hope, and we sang over his grave—

"He shall sleep, but not forever,
There will be a glorious dawn;
We shall meet to part, no, never,
On the resurrection morn."

J. H. W.

WE CANNOT expect too much from God, nor too little from man.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, March 4, , 1873.

ONCE when addressed on the question of eternal misery, Phœbe Cary replied—'Well if God ever sends me into such misery, I know he will give me a constitution to bear it.'

SOME long articles, we are happy to say, are this week [illegible] out by short ones We are ob[illegible] our correspondents for these favors, [illegible] more. New beginners should espe[illegible] be-ware of long articles, and too big

BR. MARSTON desires us to say that, in his late articles on sanctification, he made no personal allusions to any Adventist minister. The preacher alluded to in the case of the Weeks' Meeting was a minister of another denomination, a resident of Iowa.

THE Boston correspondent of the Standard, thus speaks of Br. Edwin Burnham, in a recent letter:

> Rev. Edwin Burnham, the Evangelist, has been for three weeks in the Temple. As a preacher he is without a superior, if he has a rival, in the American pulpit. If Brooklyn's famed preacher could have delivered some of the sermons that have been burnt into our memories, they would have added to his fame. His style is dogmatic and argumentative. Men aquainted with Finney's method of preaching, say Burnham is like him. I imagine him something like Boran, who used to rule in the Methodist church. His sermons on "The Anchor Hope;" on the "New Earth;" on "Christ Weeping over Jerusalem," were for argument, for condensed statement, for fearless denunciation of crude unbelief, for power in word-painting, far superior to anything I ever heard in Europe or America. The man as a lecturer could make an independent fortune, if he knew how to "bend the hinges of the knee that thrift might follow fawning." He is taking a deep hold upon the conscience of the people, and is sowing seed which will not be lost.

THE MINISTERING TO THE SAINTS.

There are various ways in which we may minister to the household of God. Among these none certainly are of greater importance than the dissemination of the glorious gospel of the kingdom of God, whose truths have made us free indeed. Yes, free! How many of us look back upon our former condition of bondage to a mistaken theology, as one looks back to a region of mists and darkness from a land of clear skies and bright sunshine. What freedom we have obtained from old fears that bound us; from doubts that distracted us; from misgivivings that we dare not indulge. But we no longer say with Albert Barnes, "It is all dark, DARK to our souls;" or with another, that the truth of God realized would blanche the hair, chain the tongue, and freeze our very souls with horror. No, no! Thank God we are free from all these emotions.

Now nothing can be clearer than our duty. As we have received, so we ought to give. If we have found an unestimable blessing, we should be prompt to share it. We are sowers in the world's great field. And as Paul said to the Corinthians, so he says to us: "He that soweth sparingly shall also reap sparingly; and he that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully."

And it has seemed to us that his further words in the same connection are especially applicable in connection with the appeal that has been made in behalf of this paper, and the publishing interest connected with it. Paul says:

> "Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver. And God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work: (as it is written, He hath dispersed abroad; he hath given to the poor: his righteousness remaineth forever. Now he that ministereth seed to the sower, both minister bread for your food, and multiply your seed sown, and increase the fruits of your righteousness,) being enriched in everything to all bountifulness, which causeth through us thanksgiving to God. For the administration of this service not only supplieth the want of the saints, but is abundant also by many thanksgivings unto God. While by the experiment of this ministration they glorify God for your professed subjection unto the gospel of Christ, and for your liberal distribution unto them, and unto all men."

We doubt if ever food and raiment were received with much greater avidity than have our papers and books in every direction. Almost every mail brings the blessings of some who have been made to rejoice in the light, and the petitions of those who wish papers and tracts by which to reach others. These are they who glorify God for the liberal distribution of those who have enabled us, under God, to do what has been done. Their prayers ascend for you, and also that means may be provided to carry on and extend the work. And "the Lord will provide."

PREVIOUSLY ACKNOWLEDGED.

L. C. Collins,	$50 00	I. Boddy,	$ 5.00
A Friend.	40.00	Sundry friends in s'ms fr 25c to $4	54.60
J. Cochrane, (Scotland)	21 00	'Worcester'	10.00
J. Templeton "	5.00	'Chicago'	5.00
S. Nye,	25.00	J. W. Johnson,	5.00
F. W Haskell,	5.00	D. Q. Kent,	8.00
A. V. Rice,	5.00	A. E. Rathbun,	5.00
J. W. Hodgson,	5.00	C. M. Shepard,	10.00
'New York,'	100.00	M. M. Maxwell,	1.00
R. H. Evans,	5.00	J. A. Churchill,	1.00
G. W. Place,	5.00	J. G. Junk,	2.25
J. Spanton,	5.00	E. Van Velzer,	1.00
S. Doolittle,	5 00	W. E. Hathaway,	2.00
'New Haven,'	25.00	C. M. Shepard,	10 00
A Friend,	.50	C. Crawshaw.	2.00
'Rhode Island,'	100.00	Mrs. S. A. Keyes,	5.00
P. W. Matts,	5 00	Mrs. R. H. Dibble,	5.00
A Sister,	2.00	A Friend,	20.00
F. J Giddings,	1.00	W. Neville,	1.00
M. A. Tibbetts,	3.00	J. H. Gallup,	2.75
R. Tuttle,	.50

LAST WEEK'S RECEIPTS.

'Cincinnati,'	$7.00	J. Mitchell,	5.00
T. V. Porter,	1.00	C. Stewart,	50
S. Tibbetts,	3.00	E. W. Bowe,	1 00
H. F. C.,	5.00	'Oregon,'	5.00
D. T. T.,	1.00	P. Lintner,	1.00
W. Nichols,	5.00	R. M. Lampard,	5.00
Mrs. H. Lansing,	1.00	A Minn. in Kansas,	1.00
W. H. McDonald,	2 00	J. S. Ames,	1.00
L. Sawyer,	10.00	H. H. Hurlbut,	2 00
N. & M. Runquist,	5.00	C. S. Shaw,	[illegible]

THE PARADOXES OF ST. JOHN.

The apparent contradictions in the gospel of John have been noted by more than one writer. The contradictions are verbal and not actual. They arise from the use of a single term in a variety of senses, or from statements of truth from different standpoints. Among these apparent inconsistencies we may first note this. In ch. 13:31 Jesus is made to say: "Now is the Son of man glorified;" while in ch. 7:39 it is said: "For the Holy Spirit was not yet given, because that Jesus was not yet glorified." Very slight attention to the context in ch. 13:31, with reference to ch. 17:1, 2 and some other parallel passages will suffice to show that this language is proleptic in character. The final acts of the tragedy of his life were immediately impending—a few hours only lingered between him and the cross, and the sepulcher whence he was come to forth in triumph to enter his resurrection glory, that in which he was revealed to Stephen, even the glory he had with the Father before the world was.

In ch. 3:22 John says that "Jesus baptised," while in ch. 4:2 it is said "Jesus himself baptised not." This contradictory statement is more difficult because in the same connection in which it is said "Jesus baptised," it is also said "John also was baptising," and there can be no dispute but that John did personally baptise his converts. Yet we have an explanation of the apparent contradiction by the author of the narrative, when he says: "The Pharisees had heard that Jesus made and baptised more disciples than John," and adds in a parenthesis or explanatory note, "Though Jesus himself baptised not, but his disciples." Hence we conclude that Jesus immersed, at most, no more than his first disciples, but delegated to them the authority or work of the symbolic burial of all further converts.

In ch. 5:31 Jesus is made to say "If I bear witness of myself my witness is not true;" but in ch. 8:14 he he says, "Though I bear record of myself, yet my record is true." In either case the supposed discrepancy is explained by the context. In ch. 5:31 he puts himself under the rule of their common law, and allows that if his claims to the Messiahship rested upon his bare assertions, they would be justified in rejecting them unqualifiedly. If I require faith of you on my bare word, "my testimony is not true." Having granted this for the argument's sake he shows them that he furnishes all the testimony that the law requires. In the second passage cited he meets the imputation the Pharisees would cast upon him by the claim that the character he had established was a sufficient testimony to his words; and then shows them that the imputation would not lie, because his testimony had been freely endorsed by his Father in the works done in his name.

In ch. 12:37-40 John declares that although Jesus had done so many miracles among the Jews, "yet they believed not on him." Yet immediately he adds (v. 42): "Nevertheless among the chief rulers many believed on him." And again the context reconciles the contrary statements. For those who "believed" were not confessors of the truth, but persons who "loved the praise of men more than the praise of God." Hence their faith was dead: and such "belief" as that does not contradict the affirmation which refers to believers with a vital saving faith.

In ch. 7:27 the people say, "We know this man, whence he is." (ch. 9:29.) Whether there was a tradition among the Jews that the earthly origin of the Messiah should be involved in an impenetrable mystery is not clear; probably there was some such foundation for the objection raised; that because they knew him as a Nazarene, the reputed son of Joseph and Mary, therefore he could not be the coming One of whose entrance into the world no one should know the time or place. But the Pharisees' objection related not to the place of Jesus' nativity or his parentage, but to the authenticity of his mission. They could not deny the great works he had done; they could only set up there was no evidence that Jesus had a divine commission—more than likely he was working by some demoniacal agency. This plea they founded upon the weak accusation that he was a sinner because he had violated the Sabbath; he could not be of God because he had broken God's law. But the logic of the healed man was too much for their sophistry; and when he demonstrated that Jesus must necessarily hold a divine commission equal if not superior that of Moses, they sustained their position by the bigot's last argument, excommunication.

In ch. 16:5 Jesus says: "None of you asketh me, Whither goest thou?" But Peter (ch. 13:36) had said, "Lord, whither goest thou?" It was true that Peter had asked this question; but the whole drift of the narrative goes to show that sorrow for their Lord's departure drove out every other emotion, and none of them had any heart to question him concerning the objects of his departure, or what could be his occupation while absent from them. "Because," said he, "I have said these things unto you, sorrow hath filled your hearts." You find it so difficult to believe it is expedient for you that I go away, that you have no interest to inquire concerning my mission. In ch. 7:33, 34 Jesus says to the Jews: "Yet a little while am I with you, and then I go to him who sent me. Ye shall seek me and shall not find me; and where I am [shall be] ye cannot come." Again (ch. 8:21) he says: "I go my way, and ye shall seek me, and shall die in your sins: whither I go ye cannot come." In ch. 13:33 he says to his disciples: "Yet a little while I am with you. Ye shall seek me: and as I said unto the Jews, Whither I go ye cannot come, so now I say to you."

The expressions here are absolute, and there is no modification in text or context of the literal sense. The departure referred to is not death; for Jesus himself declares that he did not ascend to his Father while dead. (ch. 20:17.) It can refer only to his departure to that position already referred to, in which Stephen, in vision just before his martyrdom saw him—even in the glory he had with the Father before the world was.

Did Jesus, then, when he said to Peter (ch. 13:36) "Whither I go thou canst not follow me now, but shall follow me afterward," mean to modify his previous statement, or did he refer to another event in which Peter could and should follow him. We adopt the latter view for a variety of reasons. Chiefest of these is the fact that he nowhere makes provision for or promise of their coming to heaven, but expressly affirms that he will "come again" for the purpose of enabling them to be with him. (ch. 14:3.) If they should join him in heaven, he could not possibly speak of coming to earth "that where he should be they might be, also." It also seems certain that although the Lord had said to the Jews, "I go to him that sent me," and "Where I am ye cannot come," and then said to the disciples, "As I said to the Jews, so now I say to you, Whither I go ye cannot come," not one of them understood him, nor apprehended that he spoke of ascension to heaven. Like the Jews, they were ready to interpret the language of some earthly journey—a mission to "the dispersed among the Gentiles," perhaps. Hence Peter's question, in answer to which the Lord, so to speak, comes down to his level. It will be observed that he evades a direct answer to the query, and draws out the self-confident apostle in a way to show him that he is scarcely ready to take even the preparatory steps of the journey. Afterward he should be converted, strengthen his brethren, and crown a faithful and fruitful apostleship with a martyr's death; and "when the Chief Shepherd should appear" (2 Pet. 5:4), or "come again" (Jno. 14:3), then he should be received into that presence to which Jesus should precede him. Nearly all commentators find an allusion to Peter's death in the passage, but tack to it the idea of a flight to heaven of Peter, his soul, immediately upon his martyrdom. But the harmony of Scripture forbids us to so understand it. We cannot find that Peter cherished a hope of reunion with Christ in death, but he desired to be "kept by the power of God through faith, unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time," "at the appearing of Jesus Christ" (1 Pet. 1:5, 7); then to receive "the grace to be brought unto us [not that we go after at death] at the resurrection of Jesus Christ" (v. 13:); "that when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy." (ch. 4:13.)

With any other view this apparent paradox becomes a destructive contradiction, which we know cannot exist in the "Scriptures of truth."

TIME.

There are a variety of opinions about the knowledge we may have of the time of the second advent of Jesus Christ. These opinions are not only various but are of all grades between great extremes; ranging from the belief that we may not know anything of the era of the important event, to the notion that the date may be previously calculated to the very hour, if not, indeed, the minute. The class who take the first-named extreme position is, unfortunately, a large one, while only a few fall into the opposite error of predicting the day and hour of Jesus' appearing. Besides these, some think we may know the year; others the generation; still others that we may know "when it is near," so that they would not dare say the end might not be this year, or, indeed, any day.

The study of definite time derives all its interest from certain measurements of time mentioned in the Scriptures which are familiarly known as the Prophetic Periods. It is not definitely asserted in Scripture that any of these reach to the second coming of Christ. The periods, very likely all synchronal, variously called the thousand two hundred and three score days, the forty and two months, the time, times, and dividing of time, as also, the period of twelve hundred and ninety days, undeniably terminate some ways this side of the second advent: but the presumption that the periods of thirteen hundred and thirty-five days of Dan. ch. 12; and the twenty-three hundred days of ch. 8, reach to the time of the reward of God's people, has been, and is to us, an unavoidable inference. Unless the explaining angel used words to hide or veil his ideas, we can not avoid the conclusion that the closing verses of Dan. ch. 12 contain a promise that, at the end of thirteen hundred and thirty-days, the prophet should enter upon his eternal reward.

The language used in ch. 8 concerning the twenty-three hundred days is not so clear; but the course of the context seems to us sufficient proof that the time indicated includes the period of all temporal governments, and, therefore, brings us to the beginning of that everlasting kingdom which the God of heaven shall establish at the time appointed. And, if these conclusions be true, then it inevitably follows that, if we can learn the true starting-point of either of these periods, we can also know the year, at least, of our Lord's return to earth.

There are those who allow no "if" in the case. They, to-day, firmly believe that one or both of these periods indicate that the resurrection will as certainly occur the current year as that 538 plus 1335 amount to 1873. But to us the "if" is there. If A. D. 538 is the true starting-point of the thirteen hundred and thirty-five days, then, to our mind, the exceedingly welcome conclusion that this is the last year of time, that some of its days will usher in eternity—tearless, sorrowless, sinless eternity, is inevitable. And who that loves Jesus and his appearing and kingdom can fail to feel a strong desire that the date mentioned may be right, and this year be the last in which "the curse" shall prevail?

The prophetic periods are certainly a portion of the Scriptures, and, as such, are legitimate subjects for investigation. Whether they are years or literal days; whether they ran out before the first advent, as some claim, or reach to the second, or lie wholly beyond that event; what were the events that marked or are to mark their commencement, and the chronology of those events, all these are proper subjects for the attention of Bible students; and it is certain, we think, that they are unwise who entirely neglect or refuse to consider them because of the degree of uncertainty attaching to their study, or, worse, the prejudices excited by the mistakes of various interpreters. There are in the Scriptures, they themselves so declare, some things "hard to be understood." These knotty questions are not to be ignored, neither are they to be exalted into undue prominence; far less be made tests of piety or orthodoxy. And of all difficult questions, that of the definite time of the second advent should be among the last to be used as a test.

We can never forget our own experience. We remember how the reasons for expecting the Savior's return at a certain date seemed to accumulate and link into one another like the links of a chain. And we went over the chain, testing link by link, only to have our conviction strengthened that the time designated could not go by without the event. And yet it did go by, and the Master is not here. What seemed to us almost a demonstration of the time of the advent, was proved by time to be a fallacy. The shock was rude, and was intensified by another experience.

It fell to our lot just then to read the proof-sheets of a revision of a work on prophecy; and when we saw entire arguments nominally based upon historic facts, retained with simply the substitution of one date for another, the sight was not calculated to establish our confidence in the new time proposed. It opened our eyes to the fact that there were a series of events clustering around the rise and the decline of the Papacy to which the prophetic periods might be adapted. From A. D. 519 to A. D. 610 we find a succession of remarkable events, fit commencements of the shorter prophetic periods, while from 1779 to 1870 we find corresponding events to mark their conclusion.

And right here the question naturally occurred: Are the twelve hundred and sixty years a sliding-scale to be moved up and down the centuries, one end resting in the sixth and seventh, and the other in the eighteenth and nineteenth, and a "definite time-movement" to be made from every point where the scale may be adjusted at both ends to events that seem to answer the requirements of the related prophecies? We know that some assert that all this was arranged beforehand by God, who designed and sanctions the false alarms as antitypes of certain equivocal types called the night-watches. But we confess that our faith will not bear that stretch. God never designed any thing false, or any mistake. The mistakes are the work of men in every instance; and the best thing to do with them is to confess and profit by them.

What then shall we say? Is the subject of time to be ignored? By no means. Let it be an open question, candidly discussed, and illumined by all the light students of history and prophecy can concentrate upon it. But let no especial definite time be made a distinct, dividing issue, to be pressed with unseemly zeal. Let not him who thinks the Lord will come this year denounce as a "dumb dog" his fellow-servant unimpressed by the argument, who says he may come this year, and he may come next year. Let not the believer in 1875 accuse the supporter of the 1880 argument of joining with evil servants who say, "My Lord delayeth his coming." We have been mistaken when we were so sure we were right that we readily staked our all for our faith. This can not be denied. Let us, then, admit that another seeming demonstration may possibly prove a fallacy, while at the same time we cherish a longing desire that the earliest date fixed for the consummation of the blessed hope of the gospel may prove the correct one.

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

Br. L. H. Davis and C. W. Smith held a protracted meeting at Shabbona, Ill., recently. An old field, but some fruit in it yet——Br. Jacob Wilbur is holding meetings in North Easton, N. Y. Two or three seeking the way of life every evening. Br. Wilbur has been persuaded to remain East a while longer, and will settle at West Hoosick. We are glad for the brethren there, but sorry we may not have him West.——Br. A. P. Moore is preaching every Sunday at Linden, N. Y. The church there is composed of lively stones.——We are requested to state that L. G. Hiscox, formerly of the Iowa Conference, is not now of good standing, nor is he fellowshiped by them or considered worthy of confidence as a Christian minister.——Br. John Hallsen has been visiting some of the Swede settlements in Iowa, where he explained the Word of God in public meetings and otherwise as he had opportunity. As a result, a number became interested, and some desire baptism. Will any brother passing near Hook's Point, Hamilton Co., call upon P. H. Peterson.——The labors of Br. Wm. McCullock, at Maryville, Mo, were greatly blessed. Twenty-seven were converted, of whom twenty four were added to the church there. The church are occupying their new hall.——Br. E. P. Graves has just closed a protracted meeting at Big Creek, Stark Co., Wis. Twenty-four professed conversion, and eleven joined the church in that neighborhood.——Brn. Burington and H. G. McCullock have stirred up some opposition in the meeting at Udina, Ill., or rather the preaching of the truth stirred up the lovers of creeds more than lovers of the Word. We have not heard the final results.——Br. D. Mathewson has removed to Buchanan, Mich., which will now be his P. O. address until further notice.

"Immaterial, Immortal Entity."

Does man possess an immaterial, immortal entity, and, if so, what is its office work? Orthodoxy answers in the affirmative and Adventism in the negative. The issue being formed, now what are the arguments? All admit that man is an organized being, and that he possesses only five material agents (senses) by which he communicates with the external world. Now, if orthodoxy be true, how does the immaterial entity communicate with nature or nature's God? If its communications are not carried on by means of one or more of the five senses or agencies before-mentioned, then man, (the organized being), is insensible to the correspondence, and, consequently, not responsible for the conduct of the immortal entity. Or, can an immaterial agent operate sensibly on a material agent? Will orthodoxy please tell how? Or is the agent, (the physical organization), responsible for the acts of the principal, (the immaterial entity?) And, if so, by what law? Will orthodoxy reply? Does man possess physical mental organs? If not, will orthodoxy inform us of the use and office of the brain and the utility of the five senses? Do idiots and lunatics possess an immaterial entity? If so, what is the reason they never embrace Christianity? A question for orthodoxy. And will orthodoxy explain why a well-constituted brain is essential to the existence of Christian dispositions?

Mary Jane Mott.

A Translation.

To the Editor of The Advent Christian Times:—Knowing the interest which you and the readers of The Times take in the translation of the Bible, I give you two paragraphs of Paul's conclusive reasoning and authoritative teaching on the resurrection, from 1 Cor. 15: 12–28, as revised from the corrected Greek text of Tregelles and Tischendorf, based on the most ancient manuscripts.

C. W. Waterhouse.

[12] Now if Christ is preached that he has risen from the dead, how say some among you there is no resurrection of the dead? [13] But if there is no resurrection of the dead, not even Christ has risen. [14] And if Christ has not risen, then are both our preaching vain, and your faith vain. [15] Yea, and we are found false witnesses concerning God; because we testified of God, that he raised up Christ; whom he raised not, if indeed the dead rise not. [16] For if the dead do not rise, not even Christ has risen; [17] and if Christ has not risen, your faith is vain; you are yet in your sins. [18] Then also they who have fallen asleep in Christ have perished. [19] If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most to be pitied.

[20] But now, Christ has risen from the dead, the first fruit of those who have fallen asleep. [21] For since through a man came death, through a man comes also the resurrection of the dead. [22] For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ will all be made alive. [23] But each in his own rank: the first-fruit, Christ; afterward, they who are Christ's, at his coming; [24] then, the end, when he shall deliver up the kingdom to the God and Father; when he shall have done away all rule, and all authority and power. [25] For he must reign, "till he has put all enemies under his feet." [26] As the last enemy, Death shall be done away. [27] For "he subjected all things under his feet." But when he says, "All things are subjected," it is manifest there is an exception of him who subjected all things to him. [28] And when all things shall be subjected to him, then will also the Son himself be subjected to him who subjected all things to him, that God may be the all in all.

Note.—V. 18. Or who fell asleep.... perished. V. 19. Or, we are hopers. V. 23. Or, own band. V. 25. See Ps. 110: 1. V. 26. See Ps. 8: 6.

Personal.

Kane City, Pa., Feb. 26, 1873.

Dear Son: I arrived here safely last evening, finding mother and Walter in comfortable health. I shall visit here, and, by request of Capt. Handy and his neighbors, preach to them the gospel of the kingdom. I am more than ever interested in this message, as it proclaims the coming of the Lord nigh at hand.

For some months I have been obliged to devote my attention to my family and other affairs; and, also, make provision for a home, and I have preached only occasionally. But I hope to get my temporal affairs in such shape soon as to allow of my laboring again constantly as the door may open to me.

It is now a quarter of a century since I commenced my public "Journal," in which I have given the facts and incidents of my travels and labors in this and other lands. It has been quite a labor to prepare it, and has cost me much thought. I have often resolved to discontinue it. When I am about home I have no materials in the way of incidents or facts to make it of much interest. And when I am out on the wing I have much more material than I could claim space for in The Times. And so I may speak in another form for the time being, taking my share of space in The Times in common with others.

As duties to my household demand my special attention, I shall not be able to visit the Pacific coast as I contemplated, or some other fields even nearer home. But I shall in connection with home duties labor as the way opens to me.

I can hold revivals, or protracted meetings, give lectures on the prophecies, or on the nature and destiny of man, and the restitution. Those who wish my labors in these directions will address me at 25 West Lake Street, Chicago, Ill., for the present.

Although I relieved myself of the official cares and responsibilities of the Association and office in December last, I still feel the same interest as before. We should all unite and give the Association and its officers our full support in this hour. A wide and effectual door is open to us. Let us meet the demands of the times in which we live. Give, with stout and liberal hearts. Let none be disheartened. "Redemption is nigh." "Work while the day lasts." "Occupy till I come," says Jesus. Soon the reward will be given.

Joshua V. Himes.

Personal.

My husband wishes me to inform the friends—as he is unable to see to either read or write—he is suffering from a severe relapse, probably caused by cold taken by exposure. He arrived home February 22d, feeling as well as usual since his first attack of inflammation of the eyes; but on the morning of the 23d they commenced to swell, and to pain him severely. We called our family physician, and have done all we can for him, and we are thankful to be able to say that, by the blessing of God, he is much more comfortable. But, the doctor says, if he does well, it will be some time before he is able to use them to read or write.

Hannah McCullock.

A Methodist Funeral Sermon.

At a recent funeral in Minneapolis, Minn., the sermon was preached by Rev. T. McClary, a Methodist clergyman, from the text, "Comfort one another with these words." (Thes. 4: 18.) No words of man, the speaker said, can comfort you now. I bring you the word of God. The people of Thessalonica mourned for their dead as it is right to do. We are not to stand over the graves of our friends and rejoice.

Death is a shadow under which the soul takes on a different mood than in sunshine. Yet in our sorrows we are to look up with hope. The words which comfort are these, "Jesus died." He might have been translated like Enoch; he might have been swept up to heaven in a fiery chariot like Elijah, but he tasted death that we might see his footsteps in the valley: and the shining of his face in the darkness. He rose again. This implies that he was buried. He needed not to go down to the grave, but he did go because we must go. He passed through the portals before, and now we not only see a way into it but a way out. He is the first fruits of them that slept. His coming again is a comfort because those who sleep in Jesus shall God bring with him. For this we are dependent on the wisdom and power of God, and though we cannot tell how it will be done we rest in faith that God is able to exceed abundantly above all that we ask or think. Since Jesus died, death is a sleep; in it we retain our faculties; we are not annihilated. The soul, resting on Jesus, falls asleep as sweetly as a babe on its mother's bosom. So died our sister calmly, sweetly resting on the arm of that Savior who is near every dying bed. This sleep ends care, trouble and sorrow. The soul is done with earth, and rests. This sleep shall have its waking time. Morning shall dawn on the night of its grave.

Cold Meeting-houses.

There is nothing so uselessly uncomfortable as a cold house for religious meetings. If the house is cold, the people and preacher will be cold, and the spiritual thermometer down low of course. A man ought to be a traveling preacher three years before he is fit for a sexton, said an old Christian preacher, on coming to preach, after riding three miles in January. The sexton said he had a fire started forty minutes ago. Said the preacher, such weather as this, the fire ought to have been started four hours before meeting time, and thus had the house warm. A good winter sexton is necessary. Almost any one will do for dog days.

Many preachers, and more people, lie in their graves to-day because they took cold at meeting, in a cold house. Nine times out of ten the meeting house is twenty degrees too cold for the morning meeting. The fuel will cost no more to have it burned two hours earlier. Get the house warmer than is necessary before meeting; it will soon get cool, when the people come in, or it can be cooled in one minute easier than warmed in one hour. How often a house is too cold at the first meeting, and too hot at the last or third meeting. This is in consequence of poor judgment in the sexton, or he is a drone in starting the fires in season.

Meeting-houses can and ought to be comfortable and warm at this season of the year. More would come in the forenoon if they expected a warm house. Keep warm, especially the feet. We cannot keep warm in a cold meeting-house. I hope the brethren will look to this, and take care of the flock.

Hiram Munger.

The Times.

AT HOME.

— — — The Postal Card system, an abortion and nuisance, except for advertisers, will be practically introduced about the first of May. Why not give us cheap letter postage?

— — — Miss Faithful says the superficial education of girls, "like dipping them into a weak solution of accomplishments, forms a coating that will not stand time or wear."

— — — There is a religious sect at Bristol, Vt., who wash each other's feet. There is also a sect at Washington who whitewash each other's reputations, but it isn't a very religious sect.—Ex.

— — — The months of November and December 1872 will ever be recorded as black months. In those two months 107 sailing ships, of the aggregate tonnage of 68,400 register tons, were either lost, abandoned, or stranded, or suffered loss of cargo, or damage to hull, crew, &c.

— — — The "liberals" are going too fast for their Universalist passengers, and there is a vigorous shouting of "down with the brakes." The Chicago organ of the latter says plumply he will ride in the Congregationalist or even in the Methodist wagon before he will stand the driving of the Free Religionists.—Interior.

— — — The loss of life by railroad travel is much less than commonly supposed. There were sixteen train accidents in Massachusetts last year, resulting in the death or injury of forty persons; but, as regards passengers, though twenty-nine were more or less injured, not one was killed by an accident beyond his control. 35,000,000 people were carried by rail during the year, which would make it appear that only one was injured out of 1,230,000 who traveled. The average journey of these passengers was estimated to be 14.7 miles, so that there was 18,090,000 miles of travel for every injury. These conclusions gather weight from the fact that the exhibit of the preceeding year showed a difference of only 4 per cent between the two years in relation to the injured to the number of miles traveled. The number of persons injured or killed under circumstances which were under their own control was much larger. There were 304 casualties of this nature, only thirty-four of whom were passengers, 184 being employes of the roads, and 186 being in no wise connected with the roads or travel.

ABROAD.

— — — The great powers of Europe appear not to have much faith in the stability of the spick-span new Spanish Republic. Italy, Austria, Prussia, and England extend only a semi-official recognition to the Provisional Government, while Russia absolutely refuses to recognize in any shape or manner. Even M. Thiers' conservative republic hesitates to welcome the new Latin sister until she shows herself more firmly wedded to freedom.

— — — The most notable feature of late news from Spain is the doings of the Carlists, who are always annihilated by the Government troops, but invariably turn up again in unexpected quarters, and as defiant as ever. According to last accounts they are marching on Navarre and threatening Pampeluna. As General Paira is hurrying to meet them, we suppose the Madrid papers will soon record a few more of those problematical victories which the world is getting rather hardened about.

— — — Dr. Decaisne, in the France, gives the following official list of the means employed by 71,207 individuals who committed suicide in France during the 22 years from 1836 to 1857: Strangulation, 25,536; fire-arms, 10,198; suffocation by charcoal fumes, 5,587; poison, 1,500; submersion, 23,221; knives, razors, etc., 2,841; by various other means, 454; total, 71,207. The presumed motives of these 71,207 suicides were exceedingly numerous. The more frequent causes were misery, financial difficulties, domestic troubles, the desire to put an end to physical sufferings and mental alienation.

— — — Alexandria in Egypt has grown more rapidly than any other city on the eastern continent. In 1842 its population was about 59,000 and now it is nearly 300.000. Some idea of the immense labor which has been expended in improving the harbor may be formed from the fact that a breakwater is in process of construction, to be when completed a mile in length. It is to be composed of 20,000 blocks, each one is not less than twenty tons weight, placed upon a bed of smaller stones. This breakwater will inclose a harbor with a superficial area of 1,500 acres nowhere of a less depth than thirty feet. In the midst of the grand canal a company of English engineers are at work blasting out rocks, and employs constantly about 2,000 men and forty steam engines. In 1871 the exports amounted to 300,000,000 and the imports to 175,000,000 francs.

— — — When, many decades ago the ambition of a Russian sovereign caused to be erected in the Crimea a finger-post bearing the inscription, "This is the way to Constantinople," the views of conquest of the Russian Government were not as far-reaching as they have since become. Turkey has ceased to be the only objective point of Russia's dream of aggrandizement, for England's rich possessions of India now attract the attention of her Government. A curious document has been published by the Augsburg Allgemeine Zeitung which shows how carefully, unknown to the world, Russian emissaries have mapped out rules for Russian armies to British India. The memorandum was prepared by General Duhamel, late Russian Envoy to the Court of Teheran, and was by him presented to the Emperor Nicholas at the time of the Crimean war. It says that "history records that nearly all the conquerors of India came from Central Asia and Persia." It instances the conquests of Alexander the Great, Genghis Khan, Timur Khan, Babar Sultan Nadir Shah, and says that the roads they followed are open to this day, and then gives a list of five roads by which India may be reached from Persia and the Oxus, and a further list of these roads from Afghanistan to the Indus. Its controlling spirit was a direct menace to England, for it says, "Not to conquer India, but only to destroy or shake the English rule must be our object in invading the country;" and if Russia has not already acted upon the information it contained it is because, doubtless the English "hearts of oak" are matters of more realism than the theories of Russian Generals.

— — — There comes a report that in the extreme north of Europe Republicanism has made its appearance, and that the example of Spain is likely to lead to some discussion in Sweden. The present King of Sweden succeeded his brother, some few months ago, and a proposition to get up a grand coronation spectacle has not only been opposed, but the question of Monarchy and Republicanism boldly discussed. The present royal family of Sweden is of modern origin. Its founder, Bernadotte, one of Napoleon's Marshals, was adopted by the last of the old family, but there is no connection whatever between his family and the history of Sweden.

— — — In a late number of the Fortnightly Review, M. Emile de Laveleye, the well-known Belgian economist, contributes an admirable article on the "Causes of War in the Existing European Situation," which is full of plain speaking, cogent reasoning, and farsighted intelligence. The greatest danger is to be apprehended from the unsettled condition of France. The peaceful commercial spirit which was paramount before 1870 is now no longer to be counted on. The country must learn to war, and the difficulty of its rulers will be to restrain its ardor. Prussia is anxious for peace to consolidate her recent acquisitions, and she turns now to Austria more as a friend than as a rival, for she stands in need of her as a trusty ally in the event—more or less remote—of an alliance between France and Russia. As Prussia is not prepared to swallow up all the Austrian possessions, her best policy consists in strengthening the hands of the House of Hapsburg. At the same time the position of Bohemia suggests many gloomy forebodings. Ethnographically it is a Slavic State, and should Russia ever erect the standard of Pan Slavism the Czechs of Bohemia would rally to it. On the other hand geographically Bohemia is German, and the German inhabitants, still less the Pan-Germanis, would never consent to its falling into the hands of a Slavic empire. Germany, again, is supposed to covet colonial possessions, and to have fixed longing eyes on those of Holland, but no immediate danger need be feared from such vague aspirations. The real danger to the peace of Europe, so far as Germany is concerned, arises from the annexation of Alsace-Lorraine. By this act of mistaken policy the aggressive power of Russia has been doubled, and Russia now holds the destinies of Europe in her hand, and will remain a danger to European peace.

The Christian Life.

The Old Pilot and the Infidel.

Recently, in travelling from Antwerp to London, by the steamship Trident, we experienced somewhat more than what the steward could call "half a capfull" of wind. The result was that very few of the passengers were to be found on deck. Two pilots from Falmouth, who had taken out English vessels, had taken passages with us, and we were glad to find them on the fore-deck, pipe in mouth, pacing up and down in the accustomed fashion. We soon entered into conversation, and got into a warm political discussion, which made us forget the way in which the good ship (for she is a capital sea boat) heaving and struggling. After a time the elder pilot told me that infidel lecturers had been at Falmouth and had perverted a friend of his from his Christian profession into a denial of his Maker. "[illegible] thought a good bit about [illegible] at one time," said our informant, "but after he began the Infidel business they quite cut him." Very creditable to the common sense of the Falmouth people this seemed to be. The pilot went on to say that for himself he was old-fashioned, and believed in his Bible, and assured us that he had a copy which belonged to his grandfather. "Now," said the old man, with an earnestness which could not be mistaken. "I ain't a going to believe nothing that I can't find in my old Bible. I know that I have got a soul, and that God made me, and I won't believe that I'm descended from a monkey. Look here, sir," he continued, "if there is no God, can they tell me who or what can stop this wind, and smooth these waves or how those stars came up there? I asked——that question, and he couldn't answer. He had got a book down from London, and he was sure he was right. Then says I, 'Look here, Jem! I've got a book down from heaven, and that's better, and I know you are wrong.' Jem was passionately fond of his wife. She was a nice woman, and fretted awful when he begun the infidel talking. She was lately taken ill and died. We all went to the funeral out of respect to her, and what do you think took place? When they lowered the coffin into the grave he fell on his knees, put up, his two hands, and cried out, 'Oh God! why did you take her from me?' We looked at one another, but we said nothing. If there was no God, I say, sir, what made Jem say that?" The weather-beaten countenance of the old tar lighted up when he said, "I call Infidelity nothing but foolishness, the same as David did of old. It is the same thing now, and that proves that the Bible is true."

Melted Over.

I stood in the foundry-yard. Great piles of iron, all ready for the melting, were gathered there. I noticed one heap of columns, broken, bent, split, shattered.

I went into the foundry. They were "tapping" the furnace, and the molten metal flowed out in one stream of fire, sending up a sputter of sparks whiter than the stars. A row of men, on whose swarthy faces fell the strange glare of the fire, stood a little way from the furnace to catch the iron in ladles and carry it off to be run in the moulds.

I knew those broken columns would some day be cast into the furnace, softened, melted, to run out in a stream of fire, and be moulded again in tall, shapely pillars. In no other way could they be of use. They must be melted over.

That very afternoon I saw a mother all bent and broken by affliction. She had parted with her only child. Just the Sabbath before had the earth been broken for that child's grave. I pitied that mother. How keenly her Savior felt for her! And yet, perhaps the only way to reach some elements in that mother's character, and change them, was through affliction. The character was not worthless; far from it. It only needed melting over. Oh, the pain of that furnace of suffering, its smart, its agony! But in just this way is character sometimes made over, its qualities shaped into the strong, stately pillars sustaining the interests of the Redeemer's kingdom.

May grace be given to all who stand in the furnace, and above the roar of its fires may they hear a voice saying, "I have chosen thee in the furnace of affliction."—Watchman and Reflector.

Christian Sincerity.

The spirit which is of God is a spirit of truth, sincerity, and openness. The citizens of heaven esteem truth as sacred, and hold sincerity to be the first of the virtues. He has no secret doctrines to communicate. He needs no chosen confidants to whom he may impart his favorite notions—no private conventicles where he may disseminate his opinions. What he avows to his God he avows to man. He expresseth with his tongue what he thinketh with his heart. He will not, indeed, improperly publish truths; he will not, as the scripture says, throw pearls before swine; but neither will he on any occasions partake with swine in their husks. Arrayed in the simple majesty of truth, he seeks no other covering. Supported by his consciousness of rectitude, he holds fast his integrity as he would guard his life. Such is the difference between these characters. The bad man turns aside to crooked paths and insidious mazes of dissimulation; the citizen of heaven moves along in the onward track of integrity and honor. The spirit of the world seeks concealment, and the darkness and the shade; the spirit which is of God loves the light, becomes the light, adorns the light.—Logan.

No Sharp Corners.

[illegible] uct of bees in the construction of their cells has always been an object of wonder to those who are capable of appreciating it. Every cell has many sides; each side has straight lines and sharp corners; but never does any cell present its sharp corner to its neighbor cell. A soft even side to every neighbor side. Each fit to each, firm to support, and yet soft in the contact. No interstices are left, where filth might accumulate to annoy and defile. Thus let man meet man as they tread the crowded path of life. As master, as servant, as seller, as buyer, as entertainer, as guest, as borrower, as lender, he should ever present to every brother a side that is at once soft and strong. Faithfulness to make it firm, and love to make it soft. Always a side to your neighbor that is at once soft and strong. No sharp corner of your own selfishness that will pierce your brother.—Arnot.

Correspondence.

From Our English Correspondent.

I see, by posters, stuck all over the city, that the Young Men's Christian Association of London, are to be regaled with a number of literary feasts in the shape of lectures, to be delivered by a great name in the English church. If I recall the bill correctly, it is a canon of the establishment. The subjects announced principally pertain to the animal kingdom — animals above ground, under ground, in the sea, etc. The subject of one of the lectures arrests the attention of Adventists as it is "Man at the Head of the Animal Kingdom." That reads sensibly and expresses a truth; because, though man is a noble image of Divinity, and a praise to his Maker in his construction and capacities, he is yet no more than his best clay formation—than the highest creature formed by him from the dust. "At the head of the animal kingdom" —how true! Not above it, and outside of it; not belonging to another and different one; but simply at the beginning of all dust organisms—the most intricate and wonderful creature among them all. But, probably, if the subject was up for critical consideration, the parties who allow the canon to speak thus would demur at our making a similar statement, and would not be satisfied with us unless we lifted man out of the kingdom of which he is the lord and head, and made him a kind of demi-god. However, we will abide God's time, and presently we may hear men speak boldly, fearless of the consequences of those things they admit when they talk to themselves in the secrets of their hearts.

The very day Napoleon died there was issued by the "Rev. M. Baxter," a pamphlet "Twelve Future Acts of Napoleon III." The Christian Standard notices the fact, and does not spare a severe and deserved reprimand of that class of prophets who should learn a little modesty of the apostle who professed to see as through a glass, darkly, instead of every item and event of the future, and just how and when they should happen, as these modern pretenders do. It is to be hoped, for the interests of truth, that the "Future Acts" of these men who have proved that the Lord has not spoken by them, will be sober and subdued, that they may never again speak a dream of their own hearts, saying, "The Lord hath said," when he has not said. We can be very lenient, gentle, and charitable toward those who err in sheer ignorance, but men who hazard the reputation of the truth by speculations of profoundest ignorance, are only entitled to sharp reproof.

By a law just passed in France, liquor dealers are at last restrained. It was found that the strong drink system was entering into the heart of the nation and doing it very serious damage. Consequently the legislature have taken the question in hand, and by the imposition of many fines hope to arrest the torrent in its thundering way. I believe some such restraints are common to parts of the United States. What a blessing it would be if England cared for her people so as to set up, at least some barriers to that dreadful sin of drunkard-making. Intemperance itself is not near as bad, for the intemperate man affects only himself and immediate family and friends to any large extent, whereas a publican who allows men to sit and sip and turn brain and life into wreck, is damaging all who, by [illegible], persuasion, or temptation, are led in to the way of insobriety.

The grave is the urn of the noble as well as the unknown, and lately the dust which composed Baptist Noel, Mr. Lushington, and Lord Lytton, has gone back to its mother earth, to remain there till the trump shall reform and change it. Well is it for us all to remember that, though we are hoping for the speedy return of him who shall doom death to perpetual banishment from his dominion, yet each moment there is but a step between us and—it came across me to say heaven or hell—happiness or misery, as orthodoxy (so-called) does; but my Bible prints it death! How frail is mortal man!

From A. and J. Lowry.

"Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." (John 8: 32.)

The more we read the precious word of God the more free do we become from those things that once bound us to earth and earthly creeds. Thy word is truth said our blessed Savior in his last prayer to the Father. There is the fountain of all knowledge and we are told to "search the Scriptures for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me. (John 5: 39.) "I am the way the truth and the life." Oh! these glorious truths. How we as a people love them. And let me say to you dear saints who are still in other churches, come out from among them. Let us not be identified with those who do not give Christ the glory of our eternal life. I have at last broken every tie that bound me to a church I once believed could trace their origin to the apostles, and who preached the faith once delivered to the saints. I now feel that the first falsehood of Satan has corrupted the churches, and we must found our faith on the Bible alone. All human creeds will fail, and nothing but a building of jewels or precious stones built upon Christ the rock will stand the test of fire. (1 Cor. 3; 10-15.) We as a people believe the whole Bible is the word of God. We do not reject any part. So let us try to build with precious material on the foundation which cannot be moved. But some will say, I am an Adventist, but there is no Advent church which I can attend. I will tell you what we have done. We have sent our names to swell the number of a dear little church in Indiana, known as the Advent church at Volga. We have never had the privilege of attending—hope we may some day, the Lord willing. But if we do not, we are with them in heart—in spirit as Paul was to those churches to whom he wrote. So we can lend our name to the nearest Advent church, and take one weapon out of the hands of our opponents who say they are "a little despised sect, ignorant and superstitious," while many of those who support the ministers who abuse us, believe with the same "little despised sect." For my part I want to come out on the side of the truth before it becomes popular. It shows more courage to battle for the blessed cause.

Another thing that every Adventist should consider is the famishing condition of the Western Advent cause. Shall we let it suffer and die out for the want of material aid, because, forsooth, we must help to pay our ministers and keep up the expenses of the churches where we live, when we believe they are teaching error to the children, to our brothers and sisters, even if we escape their missiles. Oh, no. Let each brother and sister of like precious faith feel that the Lord's money of which we are only stewards must go to support the cause of God's truth. The time is short in which to work. Read the articles in THE TIMES of Jan. 28, by our editor, and let us begin with new energies to help the blessed cause. Soon our work will be over. Soon we shall have to meet the eye of the Judge; and wo to him who hid his Lord's money in the earth.

Adventists desire to do what is right. They feel that the Bridegroom is soon coming. They desire to live peaceably with all men. But let us be more earnest. The nearness of the coming of the Just One calls for new action, more self sacrifice, more holiness of heart, and a greater exercise of all the Christian graces.

From John McD. Mitchell, Arkansas.

I have been a believer in the truths of God's word upwards of twelve months. I speak of the truth "that was once delivered to the saints," for I have been a lover of Jesus and his dear word for upwards of three years, but never came to the knowledge of the truth till I got hold of "Life Beyond Death," and the ADVENT TIMES which I perused, and then searched diligently to see if the things taught therein were so. I endorsed them, for which I was excluded from my church, and cast out as an unbeliever of God's precious word, and with many others I am looked upon as an evil doer. But we trust in God, "who only hath immortality." He will crown me with eternal life at the appearing and kingdom of Jesus Christ.

Yes, dear brethren, I am determined to shoulder my cross in defence of the gospel, and I ask your prayers. Pray God to bless me and my efforts in spreading the truth, for which I am willing to suffer as an evil doer, for my Savior's name's sake.

Last week I fell in company with a Baptist minister. (I was a Baptist formerly.) He asked me what the Adventists were doing at Pleasant Plains. I told him we were still prospering in the truth of God's word. He said he thought that we would quit such perverting of God's word if we would look at it rightly; upon which I told him that we hold the faith of Christ and the apostles, and that we were able to prove it by the sacred word. Said I—You hold that all men have immortality. "Yes," he replied, "we all have immortal souls." Then I told him if he would consult his Bible he would find that God only hath immortality. "Oh!" says he "I know that God only hath it, but we all belong to God, and we are the workmanship of his hands; and therefore we have immortality. I then asked him if the beasts did not belong to God, and were not the workmanship of his hands, and whether upon his view they had immortality also? I then told him "immortal soul," and "undying soul" and "deathless spirit" could not be found in the Bible, and if we had immortality it would be nonsense for God to command us to "seek for it." "Oh!" says he "I am mighty afraid that such doctrine will ruin this country; teaching that the wicked will 'burnt up.' It will lead men to be desperately wicked." Upon which, I told him if the goodness of God did not lead men to repentance that to preach to them a torturing hell would not. "Oh!" says he: "I am fearful you are going astray." I told him not so: we were looking for the Master's return to gather his wheat into his garner and to burn up the chaff, and to establish his kingdom under the whole heavens, sit upon his father David's throne and rule forever and ever. Then, I said to him, we will have a clean universe; the meek will inherit the earth free from sickness, sorrow, pain and death. Most merciful Father, "Thy kingdom come!"

From Mary A. Tibbetts.

Our much esteemed brother, Dr. Field, with three good workers arrived here last Thursday and the precious word has been preached by our faithful brother to an intelligent audience. Last evening it was thought best to close for the present. We expect Br. G. W. Green to hold meeting with us commencing the 6th of May, which is not very far off. We feel as a church that most of the members have been greatly refreshed and revived, and visiting brethren from other churches (men of candid minds) have received much light on the great truths that distinguish us from other denominations. But while we were so greatly blessed and comforted, we were often sad that perishing sinners evince the same indifference and unbelief that characterized the days of Noah, of which these days in which we live are an exact parallel. The preaching to which they listened was powerful, logical, and conclusive, and yet none were moved to repent of their sins and come to Christ for life and immortality which he alone can give. I never was more convinced that we are approaching the close of the present dispensation than now. If the faithful preaching of righteous Noah, the earnest entreaties of Lot, and the warning of an angel, that the judgments of God were about to be poured out upon the wicked were unheeded and they continued to mock on, then God's faithful ministers who all over this land are warning the world of coming judgments, need not be surprised or astonished that those who are "crying peace and safety" will not be admonished of their danger or listen to the message of mercy which perhaps may soon be exchanged for the merited wrath of a long offended God. But the glorious coming of our blessed Savior will take place notwithstanding the unbelief of those who reject him. Then "let us who are of the day be sober and watch unto prayer."

From John M. Porter, Minnesota.

I write with feelings of thankfulness that God has spared our lives through the great storm, in which so many lives, of both men and beasts were lost. I feel thankful that his love and his truth have been shown to me. I feel thankful for THE TIMES every week, and I wish it came oftener. And some of my neighbors rejoice with me, and I am glad that I have been the means of introducing the papers to them, glad that I can in any way help in spreading the truth. And I think great good can be accomplished in this way. Most of those I have sent THE TIMES to for three months now think they can hardly get along without it. And I think if all the readers of the paper would spend some time and a little money, great good would result; and if they should lay out a few dollars, most of it would be refunded and large numbers would receive the truth. When once they can be induced to read, prejudice is speedily removed, and they say—"Why; I never thought of that before!" I try to get them to read. When they will do this, I have no fears about the result. Thank God! the truth shines from the Bible when we read it aright.

Let every one work to introduce the paper and other reading matter. There are a number here, I am sure who feel grateful to me for the light they have received from THE TIMES and Crisis and Banner; and it has all come around from one copy of THE TIMES. As fast as I find persons who will read them, I send a copy for three month. Let all do so. It costs but a trifle. Great good can be done.

From Henry Zader, Janesville, Wis.

If it is hard times, I must pay for my papers. They are the only Advent preaching I have, and they give me "meat in due season," refresh my spirit, and help and encourage me in the pathway of duty and watchfulness. We need communion as Christians with one another, and I think such a medium as THE TIMES by which to hold fellowship with one another, especially when brethren "of like precious faith" are as scarce as they are here, is no small favor. I think I do love the appearing of Jesus and I long and pray for it. And I hope our prayers will soon be answered. We see signs which he told us of fast fulfilling. The world could not have been much worse in the days of Noah than it is now. Christianity is almost nominal. The saying that is written—"When the Son of man cometh shall he find faith on the earth?" seems answered now. And when we read as it were of all the elements combining together for destruction, and men's hearts failing them for fear and for looking after those things that are coming on the earth; the Pope dethroned, the nations preparing for war; it seems to me we need no greater evidence of the near approach of our King.

If any of our preaching brethren come to Janesville, and have time, call on me. I should be well pleased to see you, though I live three miles and a half out, on the Beloit road.

From C. W. Connelly.

The spirit of the Lord is manifesting itself with us here. Within a few Sabbaths we have had the privilege of baptising ten happy souls in the St. John river. Others are requesting to show forth their faith by obeying Christ in that ordinance. We have prayer and conference meetings every Wednesday eve. and Sabbath morning. They are meetings such as shed a halo of love around that is not to be mistaken. We have reasons to thank God for his great mercies. A little over four months ago we had not even a prayer meeting; now men and women that were then without hope are praising God and longing for Jesus' appearing. We have organized, twenty signing the covenant agreeing to walk together as a church of Christ. We are poor in this world rich in faith and heirs to the kingdom.

Sr. T. E. Wood of Portsmouth, N. H. paid us a visit, and interested a large congregation one Sabbath morning from Mat. 24, 26. God bless her in her work. We should be glad if some of the preaching brethren could come to labor with this church. We expect Br. Bowman in March.

Brethren visiting Florida are requested to call on C. W. Conelly, rooms in building back of Post Office, next to office of Charleston Steamers; or address Lock Box, 131. Jacksonville, Fla.

From E. McNutt, Capac, Mich. [illegible]

In the place where I live the people are about one half Spiritists. They have had a speaker here by the name of Jamieson lecturing on Spiritism, trampling the Bible in the dust, and saying there is no God. He thought it strange that not one of the three ministers who lived here, dared come out and take ground against him, and made his brags that he would break up their church. Now I hope and pray that God will send some good faithful Advent minister. There have never been but two or three Advent sermons preached here and the people think it a strange doctrine. I think if some good, able preacher would come and proclaim the word of God in its purity and beauty there might be much good done. There are perishing souls here that need the word of life and truth, and what is done must be done quickly, for the Lord is at hand. I would not have one think that everything will be smooth sailing, for he will meet with strong opposition and perhaps persecution. But the man of God expects this. Preachers inquiring for Walter McNutt, at Capac Station, will find a welcome and a home.

From D. R. and M. S. Mansfield.

To those who inquire about the prospects before us in our mission work, we would say that two months and a half of trial and labor satisfies us that we are in the right place. We have great peace in laboring for the Lord in our new field. Our congregations have steadily increased. The prospect before us is encouraging. We shall have enough to do, and that is what we want.

We are asked how we are sustained. Well, the Lord does and will provide. We have no fears, our all is on the altar. We have no debts to collect, no one owes us anything for preaching because we make no charges for the gospel. We expect to go through on this line.

"No strength of our own, or goodness we claim;
But since we have known the Savior's great name;
In this our strong tower for safety we hide—
The Lord is our power, the Lord will provide."

Should any of our brethren far away having friends in the city, desire us to call upon them, please make it known. Some have already done so.

From John T. Ongley, Lincolnville, Penn.

Shall we have a tent in N. W. Pennsylvania? I have received in pledges $280. But since I have arrived home the brethren here have concluded to build a meeting house, and therefore wish me to release them from their subscription, amounting to $50 (leaving $230) and I have consented to do so. The Lord is coming soon I believe, and what we do must be done quickly. To get a new tent and fixtures I ought to raise $350. Who will help? The faithful stewards will soon be known. Thy will, O God, be done, is my prayer.

Holiness.

Holiness is not merely separation from evil, but separation to God from evil—again our members are mortified, not by trying to mortify them, but by the superior engagement with "things above, where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God." (Col. 3.) It is "through the Spirit," that we mortify the deeds of the body (Rom. 8 : 13), and the consequence is that instead of the continual unhappy strife between the two natures, the flesh lusting against the spirit, and the spirit against the flesh, the Christian walks in the Spirit, and does not fulfil them in any wise. Instead of the sad "works of the flesh," the fruit of the Spirit is the easy and natural outflow of that life which the believer possesses in Christ—"love, peace, joy long-suffering, gentleness, temperance." "If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit," is the exhortation founded on the fact that the Spirit is our life, connecting us with Christ.

It is the normal office of the Spirit in the Christian to keep the soul engaged with Christ to give thoughts of him and keep them flowing through the soul. His interest and engagements, aims and ends become those of the Christian who has his life. And the result of engagement of heart with Christ is the easy and natural subjugation of the evil thing. It is treated with the non-recognition it deserves. Its desires, aims and lusts are checked. They are held in death and practical subjection; they are passed by without recognition, and the soul drops easily and happily into practical life in the Spirit.

And I can say from my own experience that it is our blessed privilege to get sufficient strength to entirely overcome that loathsome thing called sin. I felt completely delivered from any desire to sin for several years after my conversion to God and his truth. I can truly say that I walked and talked with God. An holy atmosphere pervaded my pathway in every direction. Many a time have I gone alone and prayed—"Be pleased to take a little of thy Spirit from me; for it is more than I can bear." My cup was more than brim full; it was joy pressed down and running over. I felt all the time armed and equipped, prepared to conquer the world, the flesh and the devil.

A few years passed away and some dear relative sent to England for me, thinking that I should be a comfort to them, not having any children of their own. Delighted with this new prospect, I once more began to cherish that desire, from the feeling which possessed my whole being before conversion. Yet on leaving home my determination was to serve the Lord. Peter-like, I cried—"Yes, though all men should deny thee, yet will not I!" But after a few months, finding that my relatives were opposed to my attending meetings so much, and feeling that I was no company to them on account of my religious notions, through pure sympathy for their feelings I very foolishly yielded to the tempter, although I did it against my heart's desire. But I soon found myself with Paul in the seventh of Romans. I did that which I hated, and being so overwhelmed with worldly influences, the next step I took was to unite in marriage with a man of very good moral character, but destitute of that religion which alone could render my life truly happy; by promises that he would not interfere with my religion, led me to accept him, and scenes of brighter days and a closer union with Christ would pass before my vision. I thought of so many hours each day that I should have to worship God under my own vine ang fig tree, with none to molest or make me afraid. But, alas! what poor weak mortals we are; and how easily we get ensnared into the pitfalls of earth, in spite of all the changes and disappointments which grieve us here.

My good resolutions were soon broken, secret prayer neglected, and I found myself in the dark valley where no flowers grew; no green pastures, no still waters. My state grew worse till I was like the troubled sea whose waters cast up mire and dirt. I felt

"'Twas worse than death my God to love,
And not my God alone."

Yet amid all my wanderings the Spirit of God did not leave me. Oh! how it plead with me till my agony was almost insupportable. And its reproofs were so tender; only such as could come from God alone, from a tender, loving father. Not harsh or threatening, but drawing, melting, subduing reproofs which drew me closely again to my Savior's bosom, and by dying love compelled me to follow in his footsteps. Ah! how many can tell this same old story. "I have loved thee with an everlasting love; therefore with my loving kindness have I drawn thee." This was a precious verse, which hundreds of times has been sent home with power to my soul.

For the past eight years I have been an entire overcomer for months together. Again I would give way a little to the tempter; perhaps get angry. And it was not until very lately that the thought struck me that if I could keep near enough to Jesus to overcome six months, why not for six years. One may say, "Great afflictions and trial will not permit me to be an overcomer all the time." But the word says we shall "not be tempted above that which we are able to bear." And as a writer once said, "He never wounds with both hands; but keeps one to bind up and heal." I have always found the greatest Christian joy and cheerfulness among the poor and afflicted, who belong to the Lord. Oh! how much could be said and proved upon this topic.

This high standard of Christian character has recently been raised in our church, and some are living up to their high calling and privilege; and if all would do the same we should have no Christ-dishonoring Christians, no theater-circus going, double-dealing Christians. Christ would not be wounded in the house of his friends.

Try this higher life, dear sisters and brethren. Let us have it at once; let us never more say "we ought," "we must," or "we can;" look not for it a thousand miles off, but look now to Christ, by faith, and receive it. We can get something higher than a dyspeptical Christianity. We can get that which will "lift up our heads, knowing that our redemption draweth nigh."

To-day I have that calm sweet trust in Jesus. He leadeth me and helps me to overcome sin, which I so much hate. I am not infallible, and never expect to until Christ comes to give me immortality. Pray for me dear brethren, and never scoff; but try to encourage those who are anxious to honor Christ the most. The judgment is too near to trifle with these things.

FANNY REYNOLDS.

Varieties.

A new kind of scoffing was lately indulged in by a professional revivalist who resides in Concord, N. H., when speaking of the name "Adventist" after this manner: "All the meaning there is to the word 'Advent' is twelve days after Christmas!" Verily, this is a cheap way of scoffing down a name which carries our minds forward to the most glorious event earth ever will witness in its history.

FALSE STATEMENTS.

We hear it frequently said that Adventists preach too much doctrine; that if they would labor more for the salvation of souls, and let their distinctive doctrinal points alone many would go with them who do not go now, and that it would be better for them as a people; and, also, that preaching, based upon doctrine drawn from the prophecies, or from the New Testament, relative to the coming of Christ, the time when he is to come, and portraying the events in immediate connection with his coming, hurts young converts, drives them away from meetings, etc. To all such remarks the statement made by William Miller about two years before his death is a complete refutation. He says that under his labors over six thousand were brought from nature's darkness to God's marvelous light. And what did he preach? Nineteen of his lectures, which are at hand before me, treat upon Christ's second coming. Let us continue to preach the doctrine.

What are we called upon to preach relative to sanctification?

1. That it is pleasing to God to save them that believe on his Son Jesus Christ, according to the commission "Go ye and preach....and he that believeth" [and then, a year afterwards, goes forward for prayers to gain the blessing of sanctification,] "shall be saved." What I have put in brackets is not found in the commission, nor in the Bible anywhere. That is all outside. It is added without any authority.

2. We are to present that Christ is "all and in all"—that is, Christ is a sufficient sacrifice for all who believe on him, and, as the ancient worthies sometimes gained especial favors through especial supplications and sacrifices, as found recorded in Heb. ch. 11, so Christ by offering up himself once for all gained us a sufficiency of wisdom, a righteousness without any unsoundness, a sanctification by which we are made free from every blemish, and finally, (and now, prospectively), a redemption that never can be injured or taken from us by a third party. On our part we are to keep ourselves in the love of God, to keep ourselves unspotted from the world, to keep the faith, to keep free from idols, to keep free from every unholy alliance or custom; and these things Paul defines as "your sanctification," i.e., your part in the great life work. This we all can do.

C. W. SARGENT.

The Comforting Promise.

"I will not fail thee nor forsake thee." What words of promise these from our Father in heaven to those who are striving to do his bidding! Although there are times when it seems as though we could scarcely stand, we feel so weak and helpless, we need never be discouraged, for we can always go to this same kind, merciful Father and obtain strength to keep on in the path of duty. We have his sure promise, "I will not fail thee."

Nor need we be afraid to ask Him for what we need; for he is better than earthly parents, more willing than they to give good gifts; and no one is afraid to go to their earthly parents for what they need. They feel almost certain beforehand that anything that is for their good they will receive. This is the way we should feel towards our heavenly Father. And my experience has ever been that, whenever I have laid the load of care on him, he has always relieved me of the burdens. Whenever I have asked of him, I have received, and that bountifully. My heart overflows with gratitude for what he has done for me.

How thankful ought we all to be that this never-failing source of strength is furnished us! Without it we should surely fail, with all our trying: for the evil influences that surround us are so many, and, more than that, the evil within us continually warring against the good is so strong that we of ourselves could do nothing. And when we fully learn this; learn that we are weak worms of the dust; learn to trust all in the hands of our heavenly Father, then we can grasp this promise, "I will not fail thee nor forsake thee," and feel that we are in the hand of One who will do all as he has said and who will lead us in safety by all the snares that beset our way, into that home prepared for those that love him.

E. J. BENTLEY.

Holiness Perverted.

A leading Methodist paper recently gave to the world the following paragraph on "Holiness meetings."

"Holiness meetings" held in Indiana, at which "more than a score of ministers, and twenty-three official members, with many scores of our best members and a large number of sinners crowded the altar: the three classes first named seeking full salvation, the last seeking conversion. More than half of the seekers have found what they sought. And as they at each meeting arise, Jesus' love and light having come in, their places are speedily filled by others, and so the work goes on. In the Church and out of it the Lord is moving in mighty power. Almost hourly we see and hear of seekers who have obtained full salvation, and sinners converted."

It appears to me this needs no comment. The absurdity and unscripturalness of such efforts must be apparent to all. The Central Baptist indulge in the folloing pertinent and suggestive criticism:

"This may be true theology, but we must confess that it sounds to us like other gospel," if, in reply to the question, what shall I do to be saved?—we must answer that there are two degrees of salvation—conversion and full salvation. We had rather tell him that the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from ALL sin, and that accepting him, he is as fully justified, as truly saved, as he can be—as fully justified as Abraham, or Paul, or an angel."

And I may add, it is a shame that so important a subject as holiness should be so abused and perverted in the house of its friends.

C. C. MARSTON.

Calvinism—The New and the Old.

Our readers know what kind of punishment old fashioned Calvinists believed was threatened here. They have all heard of the old material hell with its fiercely burning flames, its darkness and unchristain odors. Very different from this is the opinion of these commentators of the nineteenth century. See how mildly they do put it. Here it is: "The punishment of sin is sin. The reward of holiness is holiness. Eternal punishment is not so much an arbitrary law, as a result necessarily following in the very nature of things, as the fruit results from the bud. No worse punishment can God lay on ungodly men than to give them up to themselves."

Here is "eternal punishment" in name, it is true, but in how very mild a form compared with the old-time doctrines on the subject. No picturing of the intensity of fiery flames, no need of devils, and eternal chains, for the "punishment of sin is only sin," and "no worse punishment can God lay ungodly men than to give them up to themselves." Nor is this all, but "eternal punishment is not so much an arbitrary law as a result necessarily following in very nature of things, as the fruit results from the bud."

But why "necessarily following?" It seems to us that when we give up the doctrine of "eternal punishment as an arbitrary law, "we virtually yield all positive certainty of its being inflicted on any ground whatever. For if the punishment of sin is sin," inasmuch as there can be no sin without the power of choice or moral freedom, when Calvinists grant that this is still retained by spirits in the infernal pit, they admit that all such spirits have the power to choose good as well as evil, and to turn from sin as well as to continue in it. By this admission of the freedom of the will in the immortal world, they at once and forever destroy the certainty of "everlasting punishment."

Not so did Calvin and his compeers teach that doctrine. They rested it upon an "arbitrary law" from the grasp of which there was no possible way of escape. They knew better than to trust a sinner with the power of choice amidst the flames of hell; they had not faith enough in his stupidity or his perversity to think he would stay there eternally if he possibly could get away. And in changing the basis of eternal punishment from an arbitrary law or a divine decree to the chance that man will choose forever to continue sinning and being punished for it, its advocates give up all certainty of either sin or punishment continueing forever.

Our Young Folks.

Our Father in Heaven.

Our Father in Heaven;
We kneel as we say.
Thy name be all hallowed
By night or by day;
And to thy bright kingdom
That we may all come,
Let thy will, as in heaven,
On this earth be done.

Oh, give to us children
The bread which we need,
For which we ask daily,
As humbly we plead.
And as true forgiveness
To others we show,
O, Father, in heaven,
Thy pardon bestow.

From each day's temptation,
From evil and wrong,
Lord, keep us and guard us
Through all our life long;
For thine is the power,
The glory and might,
That can shield us and guide us,
By day or by night.

I Dare You.

"Pooh! I could do it easily, and be back here again, before you could count fifty."

"May be so; but you don't dare to try it!"

"Don't dare! now, Tom, you know better."

"Well, I dare you."

The boy's eyes flashed. In a moment he was over the boundary line, skating skillfully over the forbidden ice; while his schoolmates looked on, some with fear, and a few with shouts of applause. Clear to the other side he went, though the ice cracked and bent; then, with a graceful turn he was coming toward them again, swifter, with a look of pride on his glowing face; and the praises of the other boys already sounded on his ears:

"Good for you Win!"

"Hurrah for——"

Who? Where was he? Where the proud form and the smiling face, and the dark hair uncovered in the moment of exultation? Gone! hidden at once from their sight under the ice, and the waters rose up over the spot the spot, as if their time of triumph had come then.

"Oh, what shall we do?"

"Run quick! and get a rope!"

"Stand back, every one of you!" and the voice, generally so kind, frightened them now with its sternness; and they looked in silence at the teacher's white face, as he threw off his gown, and crept with it to the boundary line which he had marked for the boys that morning. Over that too, so carefully, yet so quickly; and the ice cracked! cracked! And the boys could none of them tell how it was done, only that soon the dark, dripping hair of their schoolmate above the broken ice; then his body slowly, slowly dragged towards them, his hand clutching tightly the teacher's dressing gown.

The teacher did not speak, and they dared not. In the teachers own strong arms, Winthrop was carried to the house and rubbed; and, no, he was not dead; for in a few minutes he opened his eyes, and looking at the group of anxious, boyish faces gathered round he said: "All right." How it brightened every heart there! The boys could speak now.

"Oh, Win, I haven't counted fifty yet!" burst out Tom, excitedly, and trying to laugh; but if he had not been a boy, he would certainly have cried instead.

"Now let me hear all about it," said the teacher, calmly as the color came back into Winthrop's cheeks.

"It is my fault," said Tom, humbly.

How came you to disobey my rule, Winthrop, and go beyond the boundary?"

"Why, I hardly thought about the rule, sir; I wanted to let them see I was not afraid of the ice! They dared me to do it; and when any one dares me to do a thing——"

Winthrop stopped suddenly, as the recollection came over him of the cold, gurgling waters, and of those few terrible moments of suspense.

"Then you always dare to do it; is that what you mean?"

"Yes, sir;" but the voice was not as full of confidence as it had been half an hour before.

"And the end of your daring, this time, might have been—death!"

A shudder crept over the boy's heart.

"Oh, sir, please don't; I dared him!" said poor Tom.

"And so you think a boy is a coward who is dared to do a thing, and doesn't do it?"

"It looks so," answered Winthrop.

"Ah, my boy, you must get rid of that idea; it is wrong. He who refuses to do a sinful or dangerous thing, even when people say, 'I dare you,' is a true hero; and he who runs all risk to do something, just because he is dared, is by far the most cowardly and foolish. Don't look so downhearted, Winthrop. I want you to be truly heroic, and I know you can do things very bravely sometimes. For instance, if I should say, 'you may not go skating another day during this season,' you would bear the punishment without complaint, I think."

"Yes, sir," answered the boy, with a touch of the old pride in his voice.

"Mayn't I bear the punishment? It was my fault," exclaimed Tom.

"I haven't given any punishment yet, Tom: I have only given this lesson about true bravery for you all to learn. And now, be off, every one of you, and let Winthrop rest, while I go to examine my dressing-gown; and if it is entirely ruined, I'll pass a subscription round among you to get a new one." And the kind man smiled as he left them, but his heart was full; and he went to thank God for the safety of his pupil, and to pray that he might become truly brave and noble.

Boys, never be dared into doing what is wrong. Do not take one step aside from the safe and strait path, no matter how many voices say 'I dare you,' to every temptation. And always:

"Dare to do right! dare to be true!
All the world's scorning can never harm you,
Stand by your conscience, your honor, your faith;
Stand like a hero, and battle till death."

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, March 4, 1873.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.
Sent Three Months on trial for Thirty-five cents.

The officers of the Association are as follows.
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON,
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD,
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK,
Treasurer—AMBROSE W. TUCKER.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS,
A. S. CALKINS.
EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
S. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH,
A. E. BABCOCK.
BUSINESS AGENT,
WILLIAM L. HIMES.

☞ Address all communications to Wm. L. Himes, 25 West Lake St., Chicago; and

☞ Make all Postal Orders and Drafts payable to him, and always state the amount of money enclosed plainly at the head of the letter.

☞ Give your Post Office address in full in every letter.

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestions.

Business Department.

THE WESTERN RURAL.—To any one paying us $2.60, we will send the Western Rural, the popular and excellent Rural and Family Weekly of the West for one year, and credit one year's subscription paid to our own paper. The Western Rural, alone, is worth $2.50 per year, and every family in the West ought to have it. tf

Whitmore's Immortality.

We desire to correspond with any friends who have a supply of this work on hand, and will spare us a few copies. Will any such please write and let us know how many they can let us have.

The "Times" to Ministers.

We send THE TIMES to ministers of any denomination for one dollar a year—half price. Those who wish to send the paper to preachers can take advantage of this fact.

Hades.

We learn that Mr. Constable is about to publish his work on Hades, of which several chapters have appeared in THE TIMES, by subscription. The work will be issued in England. We will receive subscriptions and forward them to Mr. Constable at the rate of one dollar a copy. The money need not be sent until the book is ready. tf

Job Work.

We are now prepared to do all kinds of job work with despatch, and in a satisfactory manner. Envelopes, Letter-Heads, Note-Heads, Bill-Heads, Cards of all kinds, Circulars, etc., etc. Friends at a distance from printing offices, and often close to them, will do well to get our figures before ordering work elsewhere.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

S Parker
H Hunter
W H Page
J P Jarter
J S Ames
W H Reese
J Bush
R A Groesbeck
D A Steele
J W Fry
J Walter
W Reynolds
J A Coe
D Coe
R M Lampard
H Peppel
J McLane
V J Low
A Bailey
C E Mitchell
V Beaton
M B Hubbell
C W Barnard
C C Marston
E I Bentley
J H Kenney
J McWilliams
H T Carpenter
W H McDonald
J W Finn
H Lansing
T J Williams
C McLeare
M A Seymour
C H Sweet
J R Shelton
G Stephenson
H Morse
R G Hobbs
M A Tibbets
M S Mills
G Garrison
A Miller
G W T Safford
R T Price
P Wilson
R M Haggett
M S Jones
R Wakeham
J H Mills
A Hinde
O M York
R Spotswood
N Ranquist
J W Graham
J Green
C Kelly
A Spencer
N Kenerley
J Tingley
F M Sandusky
L Rush
J Billings
A E Rathbun
R C McLane
H H Brown
J Hallsen
D Q Kent
A T Hinshaw
N H Young
E S Jennings
A W Brown
J M Bliss
J Rucker
H McAllister
J F Adair
L A Bowden
J H May
L Kerr
R Spotswood
H H Hurlburt
J G Rush
D B Closman
G A Weatherby
I L Russell
M Mathews
H W Sutton
E L Wadleigh
C Richards
D O Hink
C S Shaw
C C Marston
C I Baker
K W Lowe
C D W Scott
H J Palmer
W M Hall
C Stewart
C L Ives
J Fisher
D Dudley
S H Bentley
T Willson
V Hunt
J T Ongley
R Crandell
C M Pierce
E Stevens
P W Jones
J D Lewis
T Conrad
J Hayes
C E Ruble
J Sturtevant
L Wixom
P Limner
F M Johnson
M M Orr
E S Robbins
J M Syler
J Badenock Jr
C H Leverton
J Lowry
D L Palegrove
S Baldwin
J Gildersleve
O Fields
J F Wilcox
A Farrow
W H Sarvis
E D Clark
E C Bronaugh
B G Andrus
O Newcomb
M A Munson
J R Stevinson
C Gearhart
R Lewis
S Birt
C C Marston
J Blackhall
J Ireland
J Morris
M Patterson
Mis Comman
C Smith
D Evans
W Nichols
A C Pierce
W Thompson
O C Colton
W Reece
J M Barrington
J Brower
H Kelly
D P Sweetland
R Tuttle
H M Benson
D I Thompson
G W Gregory
J Frood
A Holton
J H Aikire
S Barney
S A Smith
A Raymond 2
T J Giddings
A Goodwin
J J Fonda
D Palmer
L Kerr
A Brighton 2
J Scarce
J Fancher
M J Siddell
H Davis 2
H C Croop
J Revoyce
W H Auger
W H Todd
J H McLain
J H Jack
J F Adair by ex
H McAllister
N H Beardly
J Wells
T Sheldon
M E Alford
H Peppel
J A Coe
J Hayes
N Harris
J F Wilcox
A Farrow
W H Sarvis
A E Rathbun
E D Clark
D Clow
T A Conard
R M Lampard
V Larson

Books and Tracts Sent by Mail.

E B Stile
S Marts
J G Rogers
M Anderson
H Pratt
H Lewis 6
A Farrow
J M McConnell
W Francis
F Francis
J H Gallup
O S Shaw
M E Lawd
D B Closman
G A Weatherby
R Spotswood
E Darby
B Thompson 7
Miss R Beardsley
J T Ongley
J M Alonn
J S Brandebury
P H Peterson
J M Bliss
D D Kent
A W Brown
R C McLane
A T Hinshaw
J S Ames
J Ellis
J Sloan
W A Rose
E A Groesbeck

To Correspondents.

F. B. KENNY. We never heard of 'Wilgear' before. He should be able to show a letter from some Conference. E. FIRT. We have no copies of that paper left. V. BUNT. Much obliged for the sermon. Immaterialists are continually perpetrating such absurdities. But let a preacher tell his people they will turn into angels when they die, and they will believe it, Bible or no Bible.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Preaching in Advent Mission Hall, 619 West Lake Street, every Sunday 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening
D. R. & M. S. MANSFIELD.

Genoa, Oct. 27, and every other Sabbath until further notice. E. H. BURINGTON.

Creston, Reed's Hall, March 3-7.
Byron, March 11-15.
Elida, March 16. C. C. MARSTON.

The first Q. M. of the New Rutland District will be held with the church at New Rutland, La Salle Co., commencing Thursday eve., March 20, and holding over the following Sabbath.

It is earnestly desired that there should be a general rally of the brethren and sisters from all parts of the district at this meeting. Come to labor for God and the salvation of the perishing.

Br. C. C. Marston will be with us to assist in preaching the Word.

Let all the preaching brethren be present so that the Conference may be fully and strongly organized. Time is short. Make a sacrifice, brethren, and come to the meeting.
A. LOTHROP.
W. T. BAKER.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co., at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S. H. 3 p. m., July 28, and every two weeks.
ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Nov. 10, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.

Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Nov. 17, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

Amboy, Lee Co., preaching the second and fourth Sundays of each month.
C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

MICHIGAN.

To the churches in Branch County, Michigan, I would say that my appointments for the year 1873 will be as follows:

East Gilead, Jan. 5, 10 a. m., and every two weeks after.

California, Jan. 12, 10:30 a m and every two weeks after.

Algansee, every Sunday 2:30 p m and evening. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening.
J. R. PRESTON, Pastor.

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.

Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

Lexington Lake Shore Advent Chapel, 3 miles north of village, Sabbath, Jan. 26, at 3 p. m., and every two weeks after.

Lexington Ridge, White S. H., Feb. 2, at 3 p. m. and every two weeks after.

Marlette, Advent Chapel, Tuesday and Wednesday eve. Feb. 11 and 12, at 7 p. m., and every 4 weeks till further notice.
GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

The third Q. M. of the Eastern District of the A. C. Conference of Michigan will be held with the A. C. church of Marlette, Sanilac Co., commencing at 2 p. m., Thursday, March 6, and continuing over Sunday.

Brethren come, as far as possible, and come to work. We earnestly hope this church will be prayerfully remembered, and the quarterly gathering will be a great blessing to them. They have a good and comfortable chapel, and we have reason to believe the brethren at Marlette will cordially greet all who may attend.
JOHN H. PATON, Sec'y.

WISCONSIN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.
A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

Colaburgh, eve. Feb. 1, and once in four weeks.

Norris S. H., 11 a. m., Feb. 2, and once in four weeks.

Pine River, eve. Feb. 2, and once in four weeks.
ANSON BROWN.

MINNESOTA.

Owatonna, Saturday eve., March 8, and Sunday, as Br. E. K. Smith may appoint.
MRS. H. M. DUNEY.

At our last annual conference a resolution was passed for the evangelist to hold two meetings in each district every quarter, so I have concluded to hold the first with the church at Winnona, Friday eve., March 21, and hold over Sunday; the Second at Utica, March 28, and over Sunday. Will the brethren at each place please make the necessary arrangements for the meetings? I hope to see a general rally.
GEO. W. MILLER, Evangelist.

held with the church at the Agency, commencing Friday eve., March 7, and over Sunday. Shall expect a full attendance of all the friends in the vicinity.

Second Quarterly Meeting for the same district will be held at Garden City, commencing Friday eve., March 14, and over Sunday. A full attendance is expected. G. W. MILLER, Evangelist.

Rageway, Feb. 8 and 9, and once in four weeks.
P. MITSON.

The third Q. M. for the Southern District of Wisconsin will be held at Montfort, Grant Co., commencing Friday eve., March 14th, and holding over Lord's Day. We hope for a general attendance of the brethren throughout the district, and the preaching brethren in particular are requested to be there. Let all come praying that the blessing of our heavenly Father may rest upon the meeting, and that much good may be done in the name of Jesus.
GEORGE HOWARD.

I will commence a protracted meeting at Big Creek, Sauk Co., Wednesday, March 5. Will the friends of the cause of our coming Savior come and help us by their gifts and prayers?
F. W. HOUGH.

IOWA

We, the undersigned, members of various churches of the Iowa Christian and the Iowa Advent Christian Conferences, realizing the obligations we are under to God and his truth and his people, and realizing, too, that in our present divided condition we cannot possibly accomplish as much good as we might if all the elements among us were heartily united in concerted action and with undivided front, do hereby propose and call a convention, to be composed of two delegates from each church, to convene in the city of Manchester, April 15, to take into consideration the matters which now divide us, with a view to an arrangement which shall once more unite us in a single, undivided conference organization.

Signed:—T. E. Cook, J. Ingalls, J. Gildersleve, Dr. Banton, and many others.

Preaching in Thompson's Hall, Delmar, Clinton Co., Jan. 5, and every two weeks until further notice. C. W. PITCHER.

Manchester, the first and third Sabbaths of each months, at 2 and 7 p. m.
J. RIDLEY, Pastor.

Q. M. of the First District of the N. W. Missouri and S. W. Iowa Conference will be held at Troublesome Creek, six miles east of Atlantic, Cass Co., Iowa, commencing Friday eve., March 14. Brn. Hubbell and Nokes will be expected to come and help at this meeting. We also expect Eld. Wm. McCulloch. This is a good field, and the truth has a firm hold. Come, brethren, praying and ready for work. WM. MORPHY, Sec'y.

Romig S. H., near Milford, Feb. 2, and every fourth Sunday.

Waveland, Pottawatamie Co., Feb. 9, and once in four weeks.

Troublesome Creek, Feb. 16, and every fourth Sunday.

Let the brethren circulate these appointments fully. WM. MORPHY.

The Third Q. M. of the Iowa Christian Conference will be held with the Little Cedar Church, Chickasaw Co., commencing Friday eve., March 14. All are invited to attend.
N. F. EGGLESTON, Sec'y.

Odel S. H., Thursday eve., March 7, and over the following Sunday. J. RIDLEY.

MISSOURI.

There will be a special meeting of the Southern Iowa and Northern Missouri Conference at McKinley S. H., eight miles east of Unionville, Putnam Co., Mo., March 14 and onward.
N. C. MILLER.

The next Q. M. of the Third District of the N. W. Mo. and S. W. Iowa Conference will be held with the Empire church, De Kalb Co., Mo., four miles south west of King City, commencing Friday eve., March 28. We wish all the churches in the district to be represented.
JOHN SCARCE, Sec'y.

Walt S. H., three miles north of Unionville, Putnam Co., Saturday eve., March 15, and onward. S. BALDWIN.

NEW YORK.

Saratoga Springs; meetings every Sunday in the Lower Town Hall, corner of Broadway and Lake Avenue, at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday School and Bible class directly after morning service.

Prayer meeting every Thursday eve., at the residence of the pastors, 212 Broadway, nearly opposite Town Hall.
WM. A. & M. L. DURAND.

The Western District New York Conference will hold its second quarterly session in the Old Congregational Church, in Le Roy, commencing Thursday eve., March 6, 1873, continuing over the following Sunday. A general attendance is desired. The church here is in its infancy, and we hope the meeting may do them good in the name of the Lord. We hope all will come for the one object. Can we not see some there from the other districts? A. P. MOORE, Sec'y.

PENNSYLVANIA.

The next Q. M. of the Advent Christian Conference of Northern Penn. and Southern N. Y., will be held in the Wesleyan church at Westfield, Tioga Co., Pa., commencing Friday eve., March 7, to continue over the following Sunday.
A. H. BRIGGS, Sec'y.

East Troy, March 6-7.
South Creek, Sunday, March 9, and attend to baptism. JOHN T. ONGLEY.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Bleury St.
JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y. 357, St. Joseph St.

NEW YORK.

The Eastern District will (D. V.) hold its next Q. M. with the church in Alton, Thursday eve., March 13, and over Sunday.

Alton may be reached by the Lake Shore or the Sodus-Point and Southern R. R. Those coming by the N. Y. Central R. R. will change cars at Newark. Let us have a full attendance. Pray for this meeting, and come praying.

N. B.—Those having a legal interest in the Wayne County Tent are requested to be present to signify their wishes as regards its disposition the coming season, (time continuing.)
WM. E. BROWN, Sec'y.

The Second Q. M. of the Southern District will be held with the church at Springwater, in connection with their church Q. M., March 29 and 30. We hope every believer will remember this meeting and make a special effort to attend. Each church should appoint delegates and take up the quarterly collection. And where there is no church let each feel the responsibility of the work and come up to this gathering. Let there be a general rally in this district.
H. A. BROWN, Sec'y.

Elmira, Chemung Co., March 10.
Painted Post, Steuben Co., March 11, and continue through the week and over Sunday.
JOHN T. ONGLEY.

Advertisements.

List of Books, Tracts, etc., kept on sale at the Advent Christian Times office.

THE COMING EARTHQUAKE, By D. T. Taylor. 25 Cents.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c. By D. T. Taylor.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—Unabridged, $5, by express. Condensed, sufficiently full for ordinary purposes, by mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occurring in the Holy Scriptures. With maps and useful tables. 40c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: with engravings, maps, and tables. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

BIBLE DICTIONARY: by Smith & Barnum. The best abridgment of Smith's larger work. Leather $6, cloth $5. By express.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $12 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDance. With Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. $7 50, by express.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The Phenomena of Modern Spiritualism. By M. Field, M. D. 10c.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock, $2 50, Post-paid.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions to the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 50c. post-paid.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 40c, post paid.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim 3:1. By H. L. Hastings. Paper, 30c. Postage, 8c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY of God: and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 15c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble, 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

*PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC meet*ings. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 50c. a hundred.

*THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; with a re*view of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabbath By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added History, Statistics and Tables. Cloth, $1; leather 2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By Wellcome and Good. 400 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATTHEW, 24 and 25, 25c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $3 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen. The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one adress, post-paid, for $4 00.

LAST DAY TOKENS: by S. S. Brewer. 35 cts.

FUTURITY; by Wm. Sheldon. 20 cts.

THE INDEX BOOK MARK; 25c a dozen.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. Nothing so good on this topic. Cloth $1. Paper, 50c. 3 copies for $1, post paid.

GOOD TIDINGS; a general view of Advent doctrine. By an Association of Authors. 420 pages. Cloth 65c, Paper 40c. Post paid.

*THE NATURE AND DURATION OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT: By Henry Con*stable, Prebendary of Cork, 40c. Post paid.

THE FAITH OF ST. PAUL; showing it to have been neither Pharisaic nor Sadducean, but Hebrew. By L. C. Collins. 10c.

*THE STATE OF THE DEAD; a Discus*sion between N. Field, M. D. and T. P. Connolly, Esq. pp. 300. 50c. Post Paid.

THE JUBILEE HARP. $1. $9 a dozen.

HADES AND SHEOL; By L. C. Collins. The best published exposition of the parable of Dives and Lazarus. 10c.

*THE ADVENT MINSTREL; a choice collec*tion of spiritual songs. Flexible cloth, 25c. $2.15 a dozen. Paper, 15c: $1.50 a dozen.

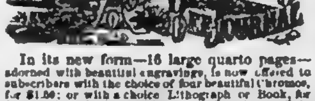
*HYMNS OF THE HARP; Cloth, 75c, Leath*er $1.

HYMNS OF THE MORNING; A new and rich collection. Cloth 50c. Leather, 60c.

SCIENCE AND THE RESURRECTION; By D. T. Taylor, 5c.

PAULS EARNEST EXPECTATION and hope; (Phil. 1: 21: 26.) By O. R. Fassett. 5c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT: containing the original Greek text of the New Testament with an interlineary word for word English translation and a new emphatic version, 434 pp. Cloth $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.



NATIONAL AGRICULTURIST AND BEE JOURNAL

In its new form—16 large quarto pages—adorned with beautiful engravings, is now offered to subscribers with the choice of four beautiful Chromos, for $1.50; or with a choice Lithograph or Book, for $1.25 or for only $1.10 without any Premium. Only $1 10 in clubs of ten without any premium. One copy free, one year to the agent sending a club of ten, besides the regular cash commission or premiums; or one copy free as a premium for three subscribers. Send for a sample copy (sent free) and see our list of valuable Premiums and cheap outfit of Chromos, Lithographs, &c., offered very low to those who will act as agents. Write now before you forget it, to
H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York.

For The National Agriculturist and Bee Journal, and one chromo and THE TIMES, both one year for $2.30. Address W. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Laws of Life.—This useful health journal has been greatly improved of late. The subscription price is now $1.50 a year. Subscribers to THE TIMES can have it at $1 a year. Address this office.

THE CHRISTIAN:

A LARGE, LIVE, MONTHLY, RELIGIOUS, Family Paper, containing anecdotes sketches, records of Providences and answers to prayer, true stories, poetry, music, etc. No sectarianism controversy, politics, puffs, pills, patent medicines novels or continued stories, allowed in its columns.

Each subscriber receives a large and splendid Bible reader's map, free. This map exhibits not only Palestine, but all Bible Lands. It is printed on a sheet, 22x30 inches, is beautifully colored, and contains—

(1) View of the Land of Canaan, with its valleys, mountains, rivers and lakes, as seen at a glance from Pisgah, where Moses stood to behold it, before he died. (2) Jerusalem and its Environs, the holy places, valleys, streams, pools, "the mountains round about Jerusalem," etc. (3) St. Paul's journeys, and the world as known to the ancient Hebrews. (4) A view of Jerusalem, as seen from Olivet, where Jesus beheld the city and wept over it. (5) Map of Palestine, "from Dan to Beersheba," giving the inheritances of the different tribes of Israel, colored separately. (6) Peninsula of Mount Sinai, and the journeys of Israel from Egypt to the Promised Land. (7) A Chart of the seasons, months, productions, weather, and temperature of Palestine.

Besides all these, the map contains the ancient and modern names of all known places; the heights of the mountains; and references to the texts of Scripture where the different places are mentioned.

This map is given to subscribers for The Christian.

Terms—in advance: with the map on paper, beautifully colored. One Dollar a year; with the map varnished and mounted on rollers, a Dollar and a Quarter.

Four copies of The Little Christian, a child's paper, to one address, sent at the same rate as one copy of The Christian.

Ten thousand agents wanted to get subscribers for this map and The Christian.

Honest, intelligent, energetic men, women and children, can have pleasant and profitable employment, without risk or capital. For specimens and instructions, address H. L. HASTINGS,
30 Hanover St., Boston, Mass.

☞ The Times and Christian one year for $2 60. With map on paper, $2.75. With map on rollers, $2.85. Address W. L. HIMES,
25 West Lake St., Chicago.

500,000 SUBSCRIBERS WANTED.

The new volume of SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY will present a more brilliant array of contributors, a wider and more thorough discussion of the topics treated in its editorial departments, finer illustrations, and more uniformly good printing than any which has preceded it. The list of contributors just published contains nearly one hundred of the brightest names known to our literature. Among the features of special interest will be Dr. Holland's splendid serial, "Arthur Bonnicastle," also a series of brilliantly illustrated papers by Edward King, under the title of "The Great South," which will be alone worth the price of the Monthly. There will be also entertaining papers "About Authors, their Friends, Whims, and Ways." Papers on "The Decoration of American Homes." "Sketches, with Portraits, of Living American Writers." There will be Descriptive Articles, Tales of Travel and Adventure, the choicest Poems, the most Brilliant Essays, Editorials, Reviews, and Art Critiques. Departments relating to Home and Society, Nature and Science, and Culture and Progress, &c., &c., presenting nearly 2000 pages of the choicest illustrated literature by the best writers in the English language.

"Scribner's Monthly" has obtained something more than national recognition.

An eminent English author, in a note to the Publishers, says: "It is incomparably better than any magazine I have come across."

It claims to be "the foremost magazine of its class in the world."

Subscription Price $4 00 a year, payable in advance. November and December numbers sent FREE to all subscribers for 1873.
SCRIBNER & CO., 654 Broadway, N. Y.

EVERGREENS-- SPRING! 1873.

	Per doz	100.	1000.
Arbor Vitæ, American, 3 to 4½ ft.	$3 00	$20
Balsam Fir, 1½ to 2 ft.	3 00	23
Balsam Fir, 1 to 1½ ft.	2 00	12	$100
Hemlock Spruce, 25c. each.
White Pine, 2 to 3 ft.	2 50	25	200
White Pine, 1½ to 2 ft.	2 50	15
Snowball, 4 to 6 ft.	3 00	12
Wigelia Rosea, 25 to 50c. each.
Peonies, (good assortment),	1 50	10
Cherry Trees, Early Richmond, 20 to 25c each, good size.
Asparagus, Conover's Colossal, 2 year roots,		2

Flowering Almond, Japan Quince, Lilacs, Phloxes, Grass Pinks, Iris, Spireas, Dialetria, Exemia, Lilies, Deutzia, Roses, &c., CHEAP.

EVERGREENS—CHEAP IN LARGE LOTS.

Also a Small Lot of Apple Trees,

Two Hundred Barrels Cider Vinegar—very fine.
A nice Lot of Boiled Cider and Apple Jelly.

For years there has been a want of screens, windbreaks or shelters, for the comfort of man and beast, and also for the security of gardens and orchards.

Of late this want is almost universally felt; and our Horticultural Societies are showing more interest in it than in any one other department.

A screen of Evergreens on the west side of a house, or cattle yard, or anywhere else, will more securely stop the force of that rough, sweeping wind, and give better protection than any board fence or row of buildings. I mean what I say.

I have raised these Evergreens to encourage screen setting, and will sell them for half the common price, so that you may not stop your purchase when you have filled your yards with ornament.
H. N. BLISS, Buda, Ill.

[n31tf]

The Bible Banner.

THIS PAPER IS EDITED BY
ELDS. JOHN COUCH, WILLIAM SHELDON, A. A. PHELPS.

Published monthly, at $1 a year, with a choice book, or fine lithograph engraving, given to each subscriber. Furnished to subscribers of THE TIMES three months free, or both one year for $2 75, with a book or engraving free. All orders for the Banner and TIMES should be addressed to W. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill. All orders for sample copies (sent free) or for the Bible Banner alone, should be addressed to H. A. KING, 14 Murray St., New York.

WRITING INK.

We take pleasure in commending THOMAS' INK to all our friends. It is manufactured by L. H. Thomas, M. D., of Reading, Mich. Our teacher at Norwood Park says it is the only ink he can use in the winter. It is undoubtedly the best ink in the market. For the benefit of those who do not live where they can order of Dr. Thomas, we add the following names of prominent stationers who keep said ink for sale:

New York city—M. F. C. Marsh, 66 John street.
Boston—H. T. Johnson & Co., 52 Washington street.
Cleveland, O.—Rawson, Evans & Co.
Detroit, Mich.—E. B. Smith & Co.
Jackson, Mich.—C. G. Parkhurst & Co.
Ann Arbor, Mich.—John Moore.
Kalamazoo, Mich.—Roberts & Hillhouse.
Watertown, N. Y.—S. Huntington.
Brattleboro, Vt.—Cheney & Clapp.
Winooski, Vt.—W. L. Greenleaf.
Hartford, Ct.—J. B. Stone.
Troy, N. Y.—P. J. Dooley.
Chicago—Wm. L. Himes.
And by many other dealers throughout the country.
519 L. H. THOMAS, Reading, Mich.

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Rich Man and Lazarus.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.
LOUIS REIMER,
1008 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Penn.

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

6

VOL. X.---NO. 32. CHICAGO, MARCH 11, 1873. WHOLE NO. 463.

Advent Christian Times.

Contents of This Number.

First Page.

From Our English Correspondent; Popular Capacity for Scandal.

Second Page.

If we Knew and A Remarkable Prophecy, (poetry); Resurrection, A. E. Rathbun; The Week, M. E. Orr; Is it Profitable to be Religious, Much Interested; The Scape-Goat, M. B. Hubbell; An Appeal, J. Ridley; The Seven Thunders, C. Cunningham.

Third Page.

"No," M. D. Peavy; The Days We Live In, V. Hunt; The Midnight Cry, S.; Valuation of the Gospel; Ministers' Cravats; The Bible Class.

Fourth Page.

Brief Editorials; Wanted—A Little Help; Orthodoxy on the Intermediate State, C. L. I.; The Early and Later Methodists; Dr. Graves on Spiritism, J. V. H.

Fifth Page.

Influence of Bad Women; Present Truth; Minor Selections; News—At Home, and Abroad.

Sixth Page.

The Evil Conscience Healed; Letters from W. Johnston, A. Brown, J. W. Farrar, W. Royce, L. Wintersholtt, L. Kerr.

Seventh Page.

Letters from J. H. May, D. L. Weaver, I. Adrian and R. Wakeham; A Kiss for a Blow, (poetry); Suspense About Suspenders; A Good Reputation to Have; Slang Talk by Young Ladies; Conference Minutes—Mich. Southern Dist. Q. M.; Mich. Northern Dist. Q. M.; Kansas; Wisconsin; S. Iowa and N. Mo.

Eighth Page.

Business Department; Notices, Appointments, Advertisements.

From Our English Correspondent.

RELIGION IN ENGLAND.

When newspapers were first started in this country, they read more like a good moral lecture than anything else I can think of. They adverted to the errors of the times, and belabored those errors and the parties concerned in first-rate fashion. I have read some of the old leading articles, and they appeared to me to be like giving one "a good talking to." This feature, however, has long been given up by the press, and for a considerable time it was a rare thing to read a column article on anything pertaining to religion. They studiously avoided reference to this subject as one of their time, and kept to secular and political themes almost exclusively. Now, however, the religious condition of the country is all astir, and they cannot ignore the great uppermost questions of the time, so many of the most respectable are taking up and handling the theological problems of the day. To show you the opinions of the press on the signs of the times in religion, I cut the following from a standard daily:

> The revived interest in matters theological and ecclesiastical is one of the most singular signs of the times. A few years ago who would have dreamed of seeing whole columns of secular newspapers frequenntly taken up by letters and articles concerning the Athanasian Creed? Who would then have expected to find questions, such as the nomination of preachers at Oxford, or the trials for heresy before the Privy Council, or even the recent marriage of a Christian gentlemen with a Jewish lady, debated in ordinary private society and in the public journals as among the most interesting topics of the day? Since the great Puritan age, it may safely be said that religion has never come so near the surface of English life as it does to-day; and, whether the fact does or does not carry with it sundry counterbalancing disadvantages, or indicate any important changes in store, it is quite clear that the element which has played so vast a part in history is by no means dying out of human nature with the advance of civilization. Man is a "Religious Animal" in London in Anno Domini 1873, as he was in Bactria or in India, when Zoroaster spoke the Gatha Ahunavaiti, or the Rishis sang the earliest Vedic hymn.
>
> And now, while the mind of the nation is not only willing to turn to the most serious topics, but is actually busy with them in the midst of all its hurry, and trade, and political pre-occupations, we ask, not unnaturally, What is doing in the Religious Parliament of the land, the Convocation of the Established Church? What has Convocation, in the sitting which closed yesterday, effected in the way of clearing up hazy points, and inspiring fresh life, and relieving the consciences of men from the yoke—so long unfelt, but at last recognized as insufferably galling—of being required to repeat, in the solemn service of God, words which are not true to their innermost convictions? A declaration has been adopted with reference to the obnoxious Creed, which is vague and mystic. These houses of Convocation are, or at least ought to be, important features of the time; agencies of no mean power in determining the popular thought and feeling. It was not to be mere clerical and episcopal debating societies that they were reopened in our time, after their disuse through the long age of indifferentism, which began at the restoration and closed with the dawn of the Victorian era.

We are rather glad to see all this stir, for something always comes of a stirring up. Anything is better than stagnation. Stagnation is death and corruption. There has been stagnation far too long; and now there is a movement in ecclesiastical and religious life, let us be ready to drop our seed into the water, that when it settles, good seed may settle into the earth to yield a blessed harvest of fruit to the Master's praise.

A ROOM FOR ENGLAND.

During this season of inquiry and seeking, we have established a depository in London for the publication and sale of works on the truths so true and dear to us. I feel sure, and a growing assurance, that God has enabled us rightly to gather up and connect the promises of grace caused to be written for our learning, comfort and salvation. Human mortality is no mere dream. A Savior, Christ, the Lord, is an everlasting reality. Eternal being, and the being with him in holiness and joy, is a certainty. Death as the wages of sin, cannot be gainsaid. And to know these rightly and feelingly, cannot but make a man truer and better, that is if I may judge by an actual experience. Thus we have no need to ask ourselves a question which comes out as the title of a book: "Am I real?" Our faith is real; our hope is real; our God is real; and all that we read have an air of reality about them, which makes us live in a constant sphere of reality. And what can the effect of all this reality have upon us, if we really hold them, but to produce profoundly real men and women, who serve God not only heartily but really. It is all this blessed reality that we wish to impart to others. To do this we have incurred large expenses; and have opened a depository to make a central office for the issue of works of grace and truth. It must be done; and though we have not large means, backers, or promises to guarantee our expenses, we have certainly done all by faith, through divine guidance, and for the glory of God. God has men in whose hands he has deposited money, and we pray him to take care of his own cause while we serve at his command. We know, beloved, you will be glad to hear of this step to give publicity to the truth. But we expect farther to take a room in London to preach the gospel. We are certainly called to the ministry of the gospel; we feel sure of having been put into the work, and the command is, not to "stand still," but "go forward." With respect to our own salvation, we are to "stand still." We can not add a cent to the ransom price paid for us on Calvary. "Jesus paid it all." What he paid was sufficient. We can not help the Spirit of the Lord renew us. We may excite and convulse ourselves but with all our straining we can not give ourselves a godly disposition. The ransom of heaven is sufficient, the grace is abundant, the Spirit is mighty and almighty; in respect to our salvation we can only "stand still," and see, and praise God for what he has done, and patiently wait for the cap-stone to be put on. But in service we are bidden to "go forward," and the Lord who commands can roll up the waters on either side of us as a wall, and make the miry bottom of the river-bed dry as dry land for us to pass over in obedience to his will. In other words, and to be plainer and to the point, he whom we serve can open purses and pocket-books because they are his, and we are servants of the Lord Christ as well as members and brethren. This, we know, is something to say, and say in print; but why should we fear doing and saying great things on the strength of his Word? We can not feel this to be self-confidence, but trust in the Lord. And yet, when we look at circumstances, there appears nothing to justify us in our statement. The brethren of England do not help because they have not yet got over being shy of us as Adventists. But we do not look to circumstances but to something more stable, even the living God our Savior. His word for it that his cause shall not fall through for want of means. Abraham, if he had looked at circumstances, had never died believing in God that he should inherit the land, when he was dying without possessing a foot of it. But God rules circumstances, and he will bring them around right. We will not say here the duty and privilege of believers to help in every good work. We cannot edify on this point. You know it so well; and your love for Jesus will be the measure and spring of your action. You will see the largeness of our purpose for which our Father is preparing us, and presently you may hear of our entering in at an open door which the Lord throws open before us. Thank God for a large handful of work, and for a purpose and strength to do it earnestly for his glory.

Brethren, do you be our helpers in prayer, and, if the Lord bid, in a more substantial way. Let us have your words of sympathy, for we have but few on this side to address loving thoughts to us. For Christ's sake we are infidel and outcast; but we know better and so does our God, and what real hurt can be done us? We have grief, we have loneliness, we have loss of friendship; but we have Christ and the fullness of the blessing of the gospel of peace: and we trust we can endure even greater coldness and contempt than we yet know. Grace be with you all. Amen.

NO MAN ever did a designed injury to another without doing a greater to himself.—Henry Home.

The Popular Capacity for Scandal.

One of the most saddening and humiliating exhibitions which human nature ever makes of itself, is in its greedy credulity touching all reports of the misdemeanors of good men. If a man stand high as a moral force in the community; if he stand as the rebuker and denouncer of social and political sin: if he be looked up to by any considerable number of people as an example of virtue; if the whole trend and power of his life be in a high and pure direction; if his personality and influence render any allegation against his character most improbable, then most readily does any such allegation find eager believers. It matters not from what source the slander may come. Multitudes will be influenced by a report against a good man's character from one who would not be believed under oath in any matter involving the pecuniary interest of fifty cents. The slanderer may be notoriously base—may be a panderer to the worst passions and the lowest vices—may be a shameful sinner against social virtue—may be a thief, a notorious liar, a drunkard, a libertine, or a harlot—all this matters nothing. The engine that throws the mud is not regarded. The white object at which the foul discharges are aimed is only seen; and the delight of the by-standers and lookers-on is measured by the success of the stain sought to be inflicted.

As between the worldling and the man who professes to be guided and controlled by Christian motives, this is all natural enough. The man bound up in his selfish and sensual delights, who sees a Christian fall, or hears the report that he has fallen, is naturally comforted in the belief that, after all, men are alike—that no one of them, however much he may profess, is better than another. It is quite essential to his comfort that he cherish and fortify himself in this conviction. So when any great scandal arises in quarters where he has found himself and his course of life condemned, he listens with ready ears, and is unmistakably glad. We say this is natural, however base and maliguant it may be; but when people reputed good—nay, people professing to be Christian—shrug their virtuous shoulders and shake their feeble heads, while a foul slander touches vitally the character of one of their own number, and menaces the extinguishment of an influence, higher or humbler, by which the world is made better, we hang our heads with shame or raise them with indignation. If such a thing as this is natural, it proves just one thing, viz., that these men are hypocrites. There is no man, Christian or Pagan, who can rejoice in the faintest degree over the the reputed fall of any other man from rectitude, without being at heart a scamp. All this readiness to believe evil of others, especially those who have been reputed to be eminently good, is an evidence of conscious weakness under temptation, or of conscious proclivity to vice that finds comfort in eminent companionship.

There is no better test of purity and true goodness than reluctance to think evil of one's neighbor, and absolute incapacity to believe an evil report about good men except upon the most trustworthy testimony. Alas, that this large and lovely charity is so rare! But it is only with those who possess this charity that men accused of sins against society have an equal chance with those accused, under the forms of law, of crime. Every man brought to trial for crime is presumed to be innocent until he is proved to be guilty; but, with the world at large, every man slandered is presumed to be guilty until he proves himself to be innocent, and even then it takes the liberty of doubting the testimony. Every man who rejoices in a scandal thereby advertises the fact of his own untrustworthiness; and every man who is pained by it, and refuses to be impressed by it, unconsciously reveals his own purity. He cannot believe a bad thing done by one whom he regards as a good man, simply because he knows he would not do it himself. He gives credit to others for the virtue that is consciously in his own possession, while the base men around him, whether Christian in name or not, withhold that credit because they cannot believe in the existence of a virtue of which they are consciously empty. When the Master uttered the words, "Let him that is without sin among you first cast a stone at her," he knew that none but conscious delinquents would have the disposition to do so; and when, under this rebuke, every fierce accuser retired overwhelmed, he, the sinless, wrote the woman's crime in the sand for the heavenly rains to efface. If he could do this in a case of guilt not disputed, it certainly becomes his followers to stand together around every one of their number whom malice or revenge assails with slanders to which his or her whole life gives the lie.

In a world full of influences and tendencies to evil, where every good force is needed, and needs to be jealously cherished and guarded, there is no choicer treasure and no more beneficent power than a sound character. This is not only the highest result of all the best forces of our civilization, but it is the builder of those forces in society and the state. Society cannot afford to have it wasted or destroyed; and its instinct of self-preservation demands that it shall not be suffered. There is nothing so sensitive and nothing so sacred as character; and every tender charity, and loyal friendship, and chivalrous affection, and manly sentiment and impulse, ought to intrench themselves around every true character in the community so thoroughly that a breath of calumny shall be as harmless as an idle wind. If they can not do this, then no man is safe who refuses to make terms with the devil, and he is at liberty to pick his victims where he will.—J. G. Holland in Scribner's.

RELIGION is universal; theology is is exclusive. Religion is humanitarain; theology is sectarian. Religion unites mankind; theology divides it. Religion is love, broad and all-comprising as God's love; theology preaches love and practices bigotry. Religion looks to the moral worth of man; theology his creed and denomination. Religion teaches us the common fatherhood of God and the common brotherhood of man; theology predestinates eternal damnation; and that we should rather fear the anger of God than trust to his paternal mercy. Religion is light and love, and virtue, and peace, unadulterated immaculate; but theology is the apple of discord, disunites and estranges one from another.

If We Knew.

If we knew when walking thoughtless
  Through the crowded, noisy way,
That some pearl of wondrous whiteness
  Close beside our pathway lay;
We would pause where now we hasten,
  We would often look around,
Lest our careless feet should trample
  Some rare jewel in the ground.

If we knew what forms were fainting
  For the shade that we should fling,
If we knew what lips were parching
  For the water we should bring,
We should haste with eager foot-steps,
  We would work with willing hands,
Bearing cups of cooling water,
  Planting rows of shading palms.

If we knew when friends around us
  Closely press to say good by,
Which among the lips that kiss us,
  First should 'neath the daisies lie,
We would clasp our arms around them,
  Looking on them through our tears,
Tender words of love eternal
  We would whisper in their ears.

If we knew what lives were darkened
  By some thoughtless word of ours,
Which had ever lain among them,
  Like the frost among the flowers;
Oh, with sincere repentings,
  With what anguish of regret,
While our eyes were overflowing,
  Would we cry—forgive—forget!

If we knew, alas! and do we
  Ever care or seek to know,
Whether bitter herbs or roses,
  In our neighbor's gardens grow?
God forgive us, lest hereafter,
  Our hearts break to hear him say,
Careless child, I never knew you,
  From my presence flee away.

—Friends' Tract.

A Remarkable Prophecy.

The following, which is known as "Mother Shipton's Prophecy," was first published in 1488, and republished in 1681. It will be noticed that all the events predicted in it, except the last two lines—which is still in the future—have already come to pass:

Carriages without horses shall go,
And accidents fill the world with wo,
Around the world thoughts shall fly
In the twinkling of an eye,
Water shall yet more wonders do;
Now strange, yet shall be true.
The world upside down shall be,
And gold be found at root of tree.
Through the hills men shall ride,
And no horse or ass be at his side;
Under water men shall walk,
Shall ride, shall sleep, shall talk.
In the air men shall be seen,
In white, in black, in green.
Iron in the water shall float,
As easy as in a wooden boat.
Gold shall be found, and found
In a land that's not now known;
Fire and water shall wonders do;
England shall at last admit a Jew.
The world unto an end shall come
In eighteen hundred and eighty-one.

—Sel. for The Times by S. I. E.

Resurrection.

Up and down through my heart and even to my finger tips, making them tingle, now swelling into triumphant joy, and anon sinking into sweet peaceful trust, has been the music of that word resurrection. Out in the old country grave-yard, with its deep sad shadows, weeping willows, low sobbing winds and gleaming monuments, there is one plain and pure, a shaft of chiseled marble, no inscription, save "Jessie ——: aged 18," and the one word "Resurgam." It wrung our hearts to see her fade out of our lives, the cheeks grow thin, the loving brown eyes grow unearthly bright, and then their light go out in the shadows and darkness of death. Oh, Jessie, darling friend! Must it be forever? Must the dark mold be always between us? Shall we never look into your eyes more? As if in answer to the heart's bitter cry, the sculptured word meets the eye, and Jessie's voice, full of triumphant faith, seems to say, I shall rise again. Joy, joy! waiting hearts; I shall wake and rise in the morning.

There are little moss grown graves there, and some a little larger; and we miss white clinging arms, and the little curly head which rested so lovingly above our hearts; miss sadly the bird like voices, and the pattering feet. Oh, the bitter pain of heart and the shadow of death.

The promise is, "They shall come again from the land of the enemy."

O mourning ones, be comforted. Every day it is said of some one, he or she is dead. Every day strong men drop off the rugged ramparts of time into measureless eternity, and leave a gap in the ranks and the blackness and shadow of death, want and loss. Every day the golden links of friendship are broken, cords which have been woven by years of love are rent, and in agony the heart cries out, "I cannot bear it!"

"'Tis a cry still ascending from life's somber wave,
'Tis a knell ringing out upon its shore."

Here it is the wail of children's voices. Mother dead. Oh! the desolation in the words! Again the strong man is bowed with anguish too deep for tears, and the dumb lips seem to say, "Wife, wife, come back to me." A wife gathers the cold dead hands to her heart, and kisses again and again the sealed eyes, icy brow and rigid lips of him who was her life, heart of her heart; but there is no answering caress. Friends leave her alone with her dead. Ye have not known the depths of such wo. But whisper ere you go, "I am the resurrection and the life. If a man believe in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

Murmuring ones, though dense the gloom and heavy the vail that hides the loved ones, God says, "I will destroy the face of the covering spread over all people, and the vail that is spread over all nations," and when the vail of earth is destroyed which covers the loved clay and creeps into the rayless eyes, then shall "death be swallowed up in victory!" Then shall these bitter scalding tears be dried, and no more forever will the heart be wrung till it drops tears of blood. Soon shall our dead live, together with the dead body of the prophet shall they arise. Soon will we have the mandate, "Awake and sing ye that dwell in dust." Long centuries have rolled over their dusty beds. They have dwelt in dust undisturbed by the tread of armies or the march of ages. Now the long sleep is over. The morning light of glory breaks into the dark chambers, and they are waking up! The song of triumph! Brothers, sisters, do you hear it? Will you join in it? Look! see them ascend to meet the Lord in the air.

Down in the dark catacombs of earth the silent sleepers have heard the music of the voice of Jesus. Life has flooded their being. God has called, and they have answered. The night may have been long; but the glory of the morning will scatter all its gloom. Shall we be called and wake in the morning?

We go down in dishonor, the rising shall be in glory, even the glary of God. Our frames are weak and frail; oftentimes we tremble and falter in the fierce conflict. We may go down in utter weakness, but by and by the great Life-giver will lay underneath his prevailing arm and raise us up in power. Think of it, weak and trembling one: "Raised in power." By and by the Lord himself shall descend with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God; the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air. This mortal will then have put on immortality; this corruptible incorruption. Then shall the glorified millions sing, "O death where is thy sting? O grave where is thy victory? Thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

"God, my Redeemer, lives,
  And often from the skies
Looks down and watches all my dust
  Till he shall bid it rise.
Arrayed in glorious grace
  Shall these vile bodies shine,
And every shape and every face
  Look heavenly and divine."

A. E. Rathbun.

The Meek.

"Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." (Mat. 5: 5.)

The word of God abounds in precious promises to the meek, humble child of God, and it is worthy of remark that these promises are always the reverse of what he has promised the proud, the haughty, and them that do wickedly. Mark the contrast: "For evil doers shall be cut off, but they that wait on the Lord, they shall inherit the land." "For yet a little while and the wicked shall not be; yea, thou shalt consider his place and it shall not be. But the meek shall inherit the earth, and delight themselves in the abundance of peace." "But the wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs, they shall consume, into smoke shall they consume away." "The Lord lifteth up the meek." "The lofty looks of man shall be humbled, and the haughtiness of men shall be made low." "The meek will he teach his way." "Every one that is proud in heart is an abomination to the Lord." "Mark the just man, and behold the upright; for the end of that man is peace." "But the transgressors shall be destroyed together." These and many other passages, too numerous to mention, clearly indicate the relative difference between the humble followers of God and them that believe not the truth, but have pleasure in unrighteousness.

There is no Christian grace, so little esteemed, or so poorly rewarded, by worldly wise, as that of meekness; and yet he who once rich, for our sakes became poor, never fails to recognize and approbate this Christian virtue, even in the least and lowliest of his children; and though in this present life, the rich and titled dignitaries of wealth and affluence may boast of their earthly possessions, while the meek humble follower of Christ, in his contentment can sing, "No foot of land do I possess," yet there is a higher title, a more sacred right, by which the child of God is heir of all things: "The world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come, all are yours, and ye are Christ's."

A lowly spirit is not to be attained in outward things, neither do we acquire it by our own strength, or without many a hard struggle. It is found often at the foot of the cross, and is only kept by looking to Jesus. The Savior knows those that are seeking to follow him, and who ask for heavenly grace and guidance, and however great may be the difficulty they experience in walking in this lowly path, they will assuredly find that he does not leave them to walk there alone. And we know the promise is sure—"The meek shall inherit the earth; for the Lord taketh pleasure in his people, he will beautify the meek with his salvation."

M. E. Orr.

Is it Profitable to be Religious?

In the exercise of religious duties there is a present reward, if we consider the peace in believing and joy in the Holy Spirit which belongs to pure religion. If we take into account the consolation we have in the consciousness of having done good to our fellow man, we receive a present profit; yet, in a worldly point of view, there is no profit in a religious life. The man who consecrates his life to God and the religion of Jesus Christ does not expect his reward in this life, he labors not for present profit. He counts his loss and gain very differently from the men of this world. It is not profitable to the man who leaves home and dear friends and wanders out into the cold, unloving world with a heart laden with the last call of mercy to a perishing world, which he knows will be treated with contempt by some and indifference and scorn by the multitude. It is not profitable to the man who sacrifices earthly comforts and faces the cold storms and tempests, exposes himself to every cruel danger, by land and sea. Often half clad and his flesh quivering with the chill of winter, still he must go, hoping for his reward in the eternal age.

It is not the minister only who suffers loss by being religious. Others often have unreasonable losses to suffer. They are often afflicted by a set of devouring wolves, who make life's trials more severe by their perambulations around the country seeking their own profit.

Religion is profitable to the man whose object is the choice of words, high-sounding and beautifully spoken, well rounded periods, with a theology shaped to please a worldly-minded congregation: in this way he secures a popular support, although indifferent in regard to the perishing around him. It may be profitable to the man who assumes to be a minister of the gospel, that in this capacity he may gratify his unholy ambition for that notoriety he could not reach in any other way. This love of notoriety has filled the world with tyrants, and the church with little popes. Devastation and ruin is their fixed purpose if they can not rule. These are not the only men who turn a religious profession to their own profit and to the injury of the cause of God—making merchandise of religion.

It is profitable to the man who perambulates the country on some speculative expedition, interested in every question of dispute—dispute especially—officious and amazingly pious, concerned for the welfare of every locality, very fluent to talk upon every theory in which he can find his peculiar hobby. He claims religious affinity in every community that is so unfortunate as to have a visit from him. You may know him. He is certain to complain of everything in the last place he left, and inquire for the faithful in the next town he may visit. Lord deliver the flock from this trial.

Much Interested.

The Scape-Goat.

Who or what does the scape-goat represent? In Lev. 16:3, we see how Aaron came into the holy place with a young bullock for a sin-offering and a ram for a burnt-offering. This was for the holy place. Then, in v. 5, he was to take of the congregation of the children of Israel two kids of the goats for a sin-offering, and one ram for a burnt-offering. The two goats were for a sin-offering. (Num. 29:11.) Then (v. 6) Aaron offers his bullock of the sin-offering, which is for himself and his house; so that makes an atonement for himself and his house. 'And he shall take the two goats and present them before the Lord at the door of the tabernacle, and Aaron is to cast lots upon the two goats, one lot for the Lord and the other lot for scape-goat. And Aaron is to offer the goat on which the Lord's lot fell for a sin-offering, as we see in v. 9. Now this is for a sin-offering; but the goat on which the lot fell to be a scape-goat, shall be presented alive before the Lord to make an atonement with him, and to let him go for a scape goat into the wilderness. Now it looks to me that the scape-goat has just as much to do in making the atonement as the sin-offering. 'And he is a propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world.' (1 John 2: 3.) Then the scape-goat is a type of Christ. The scape goat bare the sins into the wilderness. Peter says, 'Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree.' 'Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world.' (John 1: 29) So we see Christ bore our sins. The scape-goat bore the sins of the children of Israel. For it is said, 'Aaron shall lay both his hands upon the head of the live goat and confess over him all the iniquities of the children of Israel, and all their transgressions in all their sins, putting them upon the head of the goat, and shall send him away by the hand of a fit man into the wilderness.' And the goat bore all their iniquities into a land not inhabited, and was let go in the wilderness. (See Is. ch. 53.)

Some take the position that the scape goat is a type of the devil. I never read that he ever bore our sins.

M. B. Hubbell.

Old self is the common enemy of me, my neighbor and my God.

An Appeal

TO THE CHRISTIAN AND ADVENT CHRISTIAN CONFERENCES OF IOWA.

Dear Brethren:—We have noticed the call for a convention to meet here April 15, to take into consideration the matter which now divides us, with a view to an arrangement which shall once more unite us in a single, undivided conference organization, and we are anxious that a union may be effected; not only a union in name, but also a union in heart.

We are too near the end to be 'striving about words to no profit, to the subverting of the hearers.' We are among perils, and if we are not very careful we shall make shipwreck of faith, and perish amid the breakers, all in sight of the harbor of rest.

The Lord has called us out as a distinct people, to a special work, and he requires more of us than he has ever required of any people since Adam was driven from the garden. The eyes of all Christendom are upon us, and as Sanballat and his companions tried to persuade the children of Israel to leave their work when they were rebuilding Jerusalem. (Neh. 6: 1–8), so the devil is trying to keep us from the work the Lord has called us to do. Brethren, we are about a great work. Ought we to leave it and come down? Nay, verily. But with renewed zeal and strength, should put the trumpet to our lips and let the sound go out in thunder tones, Behold, the Bridegroom cometh! This, brethren, is the special work, unto which, we believe, the Lord has called us. And truly, in order to do the work faithfully, we need to be united in 'heart and hand.' And for this purpose we appeal to you, as individuals and as churches, to consider the matter and do it now. Do not put it off another week. We want to hear from every church within the limits of the two Conferences.

Let all that are situated so that they can, send delegates according to the notice in The Times, and also, take a vote of the church upon the points of difference, and make out a written report, and forward it either by the delegates or by mail, to the convention. And we want all that can not send delegates, to vote upon this question, and send a written report to the convention. Do not let the work rest on the ministers, if you do, we fear there will not be much accomplished. We need the voice of the churches in this work, and we pray you, dear brethren and sisters, wake up and act in this matter.

All communications or reports for the convention can be forwarded to the writer, who will see that they are presented.

The church here will endeavor to provide homes for all who come.

By request of the church,

J. Ridley, Pastor.

Manchester Iowa, March 3.

The Seven Thunders.

Some who apply the tenth chapter of Revelation to the great Reformation under Martin Luther make the "seven thunders" symbolize the errors of the Anabaptists. But if the prophecy may be extended to embrace the Adventist movement of the last forty years (as some think,) then I would like to inquire if we have not had as many thunders added to the original cry, "Behold, he cometh," as were added to the great rallying cry of the German reformers? So it seems to me. But few are found holding on to the old, tried flag of genuine Adventism. Many, moved by the first cry, have been led to look into the "open book," who, not being willing to take their stand with God's honored servant, Wm. Miller, have sought to develop—as did the Anabaptists—something better; and the result has been not something better than Adventism, but something worse than the error abandoned, viz., the temporal millennium.

The Anabaptists injured the Reformation more than the Papists, and I believe that some Millennarians hurt the truth respecting the Lord's soon coming more than those who hold the temporal millennium theory. The setting of people to look for Antichrist more than Christ—for the restoration of Judaism instead of the introduction of the endless and glorified state—and holding out the idea of probation after the coming of Jesus and the judgment day, is most deleterious in its influence. I believe all these theories came from the source from whence emanated the errors of the Anabaptists.

Multitudes when told that antichrist is yet to arise, and then, after seven years of operations at most, Christ will come, say, "Well, when I see the shaggy brow of the coming monster peering up in the distance, it will be time enough for me to make ready for the next event,"—and so they are lulled to sleep for the present. Nothing paralyzes the effect of the cry, "Behold the Judge standeth before the door," more than this theory (which is new among us), that antichrist must come first. That any one who has sounded the first cry should now be sounding the second is painful beyond language to express.

But I took my pen to copy a portion of a letter, bearing in this direction, sent me by a brother in connection with a copy of the Watchman and Reflector containing Miller's Essay,—a portion of which has appeared in the Herald. He says:

Just here another point projects in upon us, viz., our personal accountability to God as students and interpreters of his Word, especially prophecy. The Lord commands us by Jeremiah, 'He that hath a dream let him tell a dream, [that is as a dream] and he that hath my Word, let him speak my Word faithfully'—that is, just as I give it to him, and as from me. Further, no man can have God's Word as from him but by the Spirit of God. 'He shall lead you into all truth.' Again, the Spirit in its interpretative presence does not contradict his own revelation nor yet his leadings of faithful minds to the understanding of truth; hence, if men professing to be interpreters, come forth with an interpretation today, and a contradictory one a year hence, we may be sure that on both occasions they could not be led by the Spirit of God, and probably not on either. Bear with me, brother, still further: The Spirit by angelic ministration predicts, the inspired prophet faithfully records the prediction; now it is on record,—the Word of God on record. Ages pass, and the time for the first item to be unraveled arrives; events take their place, one by one, in fulfillment of the divine programme: for it is God's own work to fulfill his own Word; and the Spirit leads faithful souls into the import of prophecy, to identify its fulfillment, to testify thereto, and make record of the same. 'Ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord.' These witnesses depart; time rolls on, and other items of the predicted purpose are unveiled. Led by the same Spirit, other witnesses succeed to identify, testify, and record. Thus event succeeds event, each with its collateral record, till, by little and little, the monster of wickedness and deceit is developed, in the place, under the circumstances, with the characteristics, and doing the work eliminated for him in the prophecy. Witnesses crowd upon the stand—eye-witnesses and more, those who felt the fearful power of the monster. Unexceptionable witnesses crowd forward and point with unerring finger to the bloody idol and cry, 'That is he! THAT IS HE!' These witnesses are from every station in life, from the intelligent commoner up to judges, learned prelates, doctors, and even Catholic bishops. I have in my mind now a half a score of the most devoted and pious Catholic writers and bishops who clearly identified and testified against the 'hierarchy' as the predicted 'Man of Sin,' and whose testimony is on record. Moreover, these witnesses lived in different centuries, and were from every country of the Western world, and their testimony is recorded, and can be found and read in every European language. But time rolls on; the persecuting power wanes; the church comes up out of the wilderness; the Laodicean church is developed; the cry 'Behold the Bridegroom cometh' is heard, and now a NEW class of witnesses come forward. Who sent them—the Spirit of God? I trow not. Listen to their testimony: 'The Lord of glory can not come [illegible] Antichrist is revealed, the M[illegible] sin.' Well, but he has been here, [illegible] fulfilled his work and time. 'N[illegible] has not; God has not fulfilled his W[illegible]d; it is future.' How do you know—have you lived through all th[illegible]es to deny the testimony of t[illegible] did live? 'No.' What then do [illegible] no on the great subject? 'N[illegible] at I give my opinion based [illegible] gment.' If you know nothi[illegible] judgment, opinion, and te[illegible] alike worthless. You are an [illegible] tent witness and are not only l[illegible] men by your false testimony to lo[illegible] for that which will not come, to the neglect of that which will come; but you are denying the work of God in fulfilling (providentially) his own predictions, and by denying his work you are impairing the integrity alike of the divine word and the divine foreknowledge. This, brother C., is about what this kind of Adventism amounts to; and yet we stretch out our hands to these millenarian teachers as on our side, when the only effect of their influence is to get us all as sleepy as they are. I could add as much more, but I must stop. God help us to be faithful."

My whole soul says, Amen and amen, to this extract from my good ministerial brother's epistle, which I have taken the liberty to publish without his consent—for I think it is too good to keep to myself.

This Millennarianism (and I am aware that there are different phases of it) hinders many from seeing the truth of our Lord's speedy advent. Dr. Kirk said to me not long since that he did not believe in Christ's coming here to do the work of the Holy Spirit. I said, 'Doctor, you rank us with the Millennarians, don't you?' 'Yes,' he replied.' 'Well,' said I, 'we don't belong to that school.' 'Don't you? Do you believe that probation ends with Christ's coming, and that then the eternal state is introduced?' 'Certainly.' 'And that then the earth is renewed, and becomes the endless home of the redeemed?' 'Exactly so." 'And that we have nothing to look for but his immediate appearing?' 'That is it, precisely.' 'Well,' said he, 'I like that a good deal better.' And so do we, because that is the way the Bible presents it.

But this Millennarianism, in its various forms, is not the only 'thunder' since the great Adventist movement was inaugurated. A whole spawn of errors has been rolled in upon us, until now it is difficult to find many who stand upon our original base, and are filled with the grand and solemn thought that the 'Judge is now standing before the door.'

And so, 'while the Bridegroom tarries,' the virgins all 'slumber and sleep.' The admonition, 'Watch, lest coming suddenly, I find you sleeping,' is but little regarded amid the conflict of opinion now prevalent upon this great subject.

'Take heed that no man deceive you,' the first caution given when about to answer the question respecting the sign of his coming. We shall do well to heed it. I most firmly believe that we are standing between the 43d verse of Dan. 11th, and the 1st verse of Dan. 12th, and that in a few days, or months at most, we shall be amid judgment scenes. 'The second wo is past, and the third wo cometh quickly.'—C. Cunningham in Advent Herald.

No.

No is a small word, yet it is often forgotten when needed the most. If we see a man passing along and hear a friend invite him into the road of folly, and hear him emphatically answer "No," we at once set him down as an honest man, an example for others, an earnest of the stability of the world to come. Is he invited by the allurements of giddy fashion and foolish pride to the flowing bowl and wine-cup's glow? "No." He can not partake of them: they are twin-sisters, all smiles and beauty without, but a consuming fire within. They allure, entice, seduce, until the brain is turned, reason banished, and the victim lost, or transformed into a flirt, a fop, or a confirmed inebriate, lost to society, to friends to the hearthstone, to the companion, to the parent and the child. Found in the festal party, at the bar, in the midnight revel, at the gambler's table, perhaps, in the gutter.

Can not one partake of those seducing pleasures? No. Can he turn aside just one moment to see this fascinating enjoyment? No. Will he not pause just to see the circus feats? No; it is Satan's trap.

Well, has he not heard that story about Br. ———? No, nor does he wish to. Nor yet how Sr. ———? No, he takes no interest in bad or sad reports. Indeed, he must have heard that neighbor B———. No, he attends to his own business, and there finds all he can do. He is great of soul, and he knows how to use that little word "No."

M. D. PEAVY.

The Days We Live In.

What kind of days are we living in? I answer, "perilous" days. Days when the God of heaven is visiting earth with many and terrible judgments. The earth is, as it were, being rocked to and fro, "and men's hearts are failing them for fear," looking after things coming. But how few are preparing for that great storm which shall sweep over earth like a mountain wave over a wrecked vessel. The storms that usher in eternity are gathering around us. But men only curse the more. And when they are warned that God can use fire, wind, or cold as agents of destruction, still they curse God, and virtually dare him to do his worst. And again the storms come. Search history. Is there anything like it? Where is a newspaper, printed at home or abroad, but has in every issue some description of the loss of life in a most heartrending manner?

But what signifies all this? What does it mean? Sinner, out of Christ, the lesson is this, "Prepare to meet thy God!" The great day of God's wrath is upon us. The clouds are gathering. The thunders are heard. Earth begins to tremble. God's word is almost fulfilled. Very soon will he answer the cry of the souls under the altar (altar of papal persecution). The time is at hand when the dead are to be judged and reward to be given unto all. Will you be ready for the great and "glorious appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ?"

"He comes! the Conqueror comes;
Death falls beneath his sword:
The joyful prisoners burst the tombs,
And rise to meet their Lord."

V. HUNT.

The Midnight Cry.

The coming of the Lord has often been proclaimed as "nigh, even at the doors," until the ears of the people, accustomed to the sound, seem not to hear. And while the faithful watchman calls attention to "the signs of the times," the masses run heedlessly on to destruction. But God assures the watchman that, although the wicked perish in their iniquity, the watchman has delivered his own soul. Let us be faithful in giving meat in due season. And nothing can be more seasonable now than the cry "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh: go ye out to meet him!" There is a personal responsibility resting upon those who hear the word at God's mouth, and warn the people from him. (Ezek. 3:17–21.)

And those who are not called to preach "this gospel of the kingdom," are called to do something. God never called a servant into his vineyard so poor and weak that he could no nothing. He has employments suited to the abilities of each one. He does not ask us to do what we can not do: but he does require some kind of service, from the time he called us until the time for work is over.

Let us understand that we are the Lord's, all our time, talents, and means belong to the Lord. Then if we spend our time or money any way except in the service of God, we are dishonest, and are robbing God. God will attend to the necessities of his servants, if they will "seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness," doing that which the Master has given us to do now. Let no one neglect present duties in the hope of doing something great by and by.

"Let us have our loins girded, our lamps burning, and we ourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord."

S.

Valuation of the Gospel.

It is fair to infer ones estimation of any person, thing or system by the sacrifice they are willing to make for their sake, or the price they are willing to pay to obtain, or to maintain it. At how much do you value the gospel? is a fair question, to be answered by every professed disciple, in deeds, not in words. Here is an anecdote to set you a thinking:

"FIFTY DOLLARS, OR FIFTY CENTS?"

There is on the borders of Connecticut, a small town which, though week and feeble, still with the help of the "Home Missionary Society" supported a minister, and maintained regular divine worship.

About the time when it became necessary to pay the minister's salary, there moved into the place a man who gained his living by carting coal and other similar labor. It was noticed that this man was very regular in his attendance at church, and was never absent from the prayer meeting; but in a pecuniary point of view, he was not considered a valuable acquisition.

It was the custom, when the salary was due, for one of the deacons to collect all he could from the people, and to obtain the balance from the Home Missionary Society. In accordance with this custom, one fine morning Deacon A———, a man of considerable means and considerable penuriousness, started forth, subscription paper in hand, to see how much he could squeeze out of the parish for the support of their minister. The first person he met was the above mentioned coal-carter moving along the road with a load of that material. The deacon considered within himself that it might be worth while to ask him to contribute (seeing that he was a good sort of a person, and every little helps), and so accosted him with "Good morning, Mr. B———, are you willing to give anything towards the support of our pastor?" at the same time handing him the subscription paper.

The man stopped, stood thoughtfully a moment or two, drew a pencil out of his pocket, and with his dirt-begrimed hand headed the list with the sum of $50.

The deacon was so taken by surprise that he could hardly believe the evidence of his eyes; and thinking the man had made a mistake, and not wishing to take advantage of him, asked him, "Did you not mean that for fifty cents?" The coal-carrier turned and drew himself up to his full hight, and with great earnestness replied: "I do not value the gospel at fifty cents a year." This answer placed the case in a new light. The deacon went immediately to the pastor, related the incident, and said: "If that man can give $50, I can give $250."

The same spirit actuated the rest of the church on hearing the story, and in a few days the salary was raised by the people themselves, without the necessity of applying for outside aid.

Reader, it becomes you to consider the question suggested by this incident. "How much do YOU value the gospel at?" for upon the answer may depend your fate for eternity. If by a whole-souled Christianity you prove that you have consecrated time, influence, money, all that YOU have and are to the service of the Master, at that dread hour all will be well. But if not, then this question may well startle you. For according to your valuation of the claims of Christ here, will be his valuation of your services there. —Religious Herald.

We deceive ourselves when we fancy that our weakness needs support. Strength needs it far more. A straw or a feather sustains itself long in the air.

Ministers' Cravats.

Who but Satan could ever have invented a 'minister's choker?' The idea of tying a band, a cravat, or anything else closely about the throat, thus paralyzing all the organs of the voice, is absurd and cruel in the extreme. Let the neck be free; and let all the bands about it be from one to two inches larger than the neck itself. If a collar-band is close, unbutton it. The neck will expand nearly an inch when the veins are surcharged with blood during the active mental and bodily exercise of public speaking. Then a loose collar becomes close, and the swollen veins, pressing against the cravat, are unable to bring back to the heart the blood which the arteries have conveyed to the head. The arteries keep pouring their flood into the head; the veins swell, and can not return it; the blood dams up, a dark and livid flood; the face looks red and purple; thought ceases, ideas vanish, words fail, and the preacher is confused, stammers, and 'breaks down.'

'Result of extempore speaking,' says one; 'Embarrassment,' says another. 'Better stick to the manuscript.' Fudge! it is simply a close cravat—such a rigging would choke an apostle and no man can preach when he is choked.

The throat is a wonderful instrument of music. Place the fingers upon it, and every time you speak you can feel the vibration of the vocal organs, producing sound. Any thing that even touches the throat impairs the purity of these sounds. Fling a coth over over th e strings of a piano or violin, and get music out of it if you can. So every cloth which surrounds the throat impairs the sweetness of the voice. Women go with necks bare—men have theirs swathed and bandaged, and ten women have sweet voices where one man has one. A man's voice should be as pure as a woman's. Why is it not? He is shaved and choked.

God has provided a covering for man's throat—light and soft, it clothes the neck and preserves the health; but a man gets a sharp iron, scrapes his neck, ties a rag around it, takes cold, has sore throat, bronchitis, and consumption, and dies.

Preacher of the gospel, strike for freedom and for life. Fling away the razor. Tarry in Jericho till your beard has grown. Throw off, then, gradually, but entirely, the bandages about the neck; stand erect, breathe freely, think, speak, and act in blissful exemption from embarrassment, and exemplify what a man can be who fears God and cuts loose from the fashions of a fleeting world.—H. L. Hastings.

WISHING and willing are considered by the lazy as one and the same; but a thousand wishes have less force than one act of the will. What some call fortune, favors the man who wills, failure ever follows him who only wishes.

The Bible Class.

Lk. 12 : 39—'Would not have suffered his house to be broken through.' The walls of houses in the East are constructed of clay or sun-burnt bricks; and there was no external entrance, save by the door. Hence we read broken, i. e., by working a passage through the wall.

Lk. 9 : 25—What is a man profited, if he gain the whole world, but destroy himself, or be wholly lost?—Lant Carpenter.

Mk. 7 : 3, 4—(The Pharisees and) all the Jews, they carefully wash (niphontai) their hands, holding the tradition of the elders; and when they come from the market, they eat not unless they have wholly washed (baptisontai).—Dr. Lant Carpenter's version.

Jno. 5 : 37—Have ye never heard his voice, nor seen his appearance? (alluding to the scene at the baptism of Jesus by John.)—Ibid.

Hades—The unseen state, abode of the dead, the grave, death.—Ibid.

Prof. James Strong, in his 'Harmony and Exposition of the Gospel,' says of the parable of Dives and Lazarus: 'The whole imagery of this conversation is based upon the current notions of the Jews, and is therefore authoritative only so far as it is vouched for by the direct representations of Scripture elsewhere.' A sound conclusion, which consistently carried out, sets aside most of the orthodox glosses of this celebrated passage.

Mat. 2 : 1—Suetonius says 'An ancient and constant opinion had become prevalent all over the East, that it was contained in the fates that at that time certain ones arising from Judea should gain universal dominion.' Prof. Strong says other ancient authors speak to the same effect; but he neglects to name them.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, March 11, 1873.

The Evening Post (N. Y.) throws out this suggestion: "Principles, not men, used to be a popular political motto. But it has not been successful. Men without principles appear to be ahead."

In a recent students meeting at Portsmouth, Eng., Sir Arthur Helps took occasion to say he had once made the adventurous observation—to which he adhered—that no one had really grasped or mastered a thing unless he had had to depict and describe it. Then there was the advantage of accuracy. He believed that all the intentional lying in the world—of which there was a good quantity, perhaps—did not do one quarter of the mischief that inaccuracy did. If a superior being should come to him and ask whether he would rid the world of inaccuracy or lying, he would say, "Let us get rid of inaccuracy,"—the misrepresentations, misunderstandings, misquotations, and all those which lead to the most tremendous quarrels between man and man and nation and nation

---

'There can be no life without air,' and, hence, the moon is uninhabited, say certain immaterialist authorities. Isn't this a little hasty? Cannot immaterial entities exist without air? One writer thought the moon was 'hell,' and the spirits of the lost were congregated there. But if they cannot live without air, then it follows that not only is the moon not that department of hades called gehenna, but it also is certain that disembodied spirits are material. But aside from this question, we are of the opinion that the Almighty possesses resources of both invention and material besides those manifested in and on earth; and it savors somewhat of presumption to say this or that cannot be in other worlds or planets

---

'L. D. H.' says in the Watchman and Reflector

The everlasting purpose of God to give his only begotten Son to die for the world, is the reason why the race has been perpetuated from Adam to the present time. The continuation of the human race is the result of Christ's death. "The race is Christ's, and is his as being purchased with his blood. It exists to day only because of his love, his life, and his death." All live in or through him. Every breath we draw, from first to last, is blood bought. What is your life? It is the gift of God. It is the purchase of Calvary—the price of blood.

How much more, then, is eternal life, the gift of continuance to all eternity, by favor of the Almighty through his Son?

Men should watch against sin as they watch against sickness! How cautious we are in time of contagious disease. We are vigilant of diet, exposure, exercise and everything involving health. All known disturbers of bodily quiet are avoided. The welfare of the body is first in thought, first in every attention, and all things else are subordinate. And so with sin. Men should be cautious of it, for it is a disease, insinuating, prevalent and ruinous. Let men beware. Avoid all appearance of evil. Spiritual health is everything. Heaven and immortality are involved. Shun every temptation. Watch every tendency and habit. Sin is a disease which is contagious, and it keeps men out of heaven. —Meth. Recorder.

—Yes, 'immortality is involved;' for sin is a mortal disease. Like the leprosy, it can be cured only by supernatural means. Let none be deceived into a covenant with death, that they may sin and yet continue forever. Its taint, unless removed, is absolutely fatal.

Gov. Washburn, of Wisconsin, in his message to the legislature, advises that church gambling be taken in hand by the law:

The laws of the state, he says, as applicable to professional gamblers, are doubtless all sufficient, and only require to be enforced. But some law seems to be required to break up the schools where gamblers are made. These are everywhere. Even the church, (unwittingly, no doubt), is sometimes found doing the work of the devil. Gift concerts, gift enterprises, and raffles, sometimes in aid of religious or charitable objects, but often for less worthy objects, loteries, prize packages, etc., are all devices to obtain money without value received. Nothing is so demoralizing or intoxicating, particularly to the young, as the acquisition of money or property without labor. If you can devise some law to break up these practices and bring them into discredit, you will deserve the thanks of all good people.

An exchange remarks:

Froude says that the Protestants of to day are practically encouraging the growth of Romanism in our midst by a too feeble advocacy of their fundamental principles, or often a real ignoring of them. Doctrines in their plainness are seldom preached, and people will and must have something definite to believe. Romanism always gives this, never yields a point of belief. Protestants, on the other hand, are, to a great extent, either silent or apologetical, and those hungering for the bread of life too often find a diet of stones. Let us uphold our faith manfully, or surrender our claims to fight valiantly the battles of the Almighty.

The New York Observer speaks thus pointedly of poor preaching:

The time has gone by for dull preachers. The activities of the age, the diffusion of knowledge by schools, books, and periodicals, the spirit of inquiry, the spread of infidelity, the prevalence of doubt, the subtlety of false science, demand live, strong, earnest, capable men to preach the gospel. It will not answer to educate dullness or mediocrity. It was forbidden that a son of Aaron should be a priest if he had any blemish. Even a flat nose excluded him. And the age wants no half-baked ministers. The West will not hear them. The heathen know too much to take them. They are not wanted on this earth. To get money to educate dull boys because they are pious, is robbing God, and a fraud upon the church. It is a crime or a blunder, and sometimes both.

Our attention has been called by 'marked copies' to certain articles on the Kingdom of God in the Christian Record. If this is to be understood as a challenge for controversy, we respectfully decline the offered gage. Our views may be 'plausible dodges,' or even 'baseless hallucinations;' but if they are to be controverted, we would crave the privilege of stating them ourselves, or else meeting an opponent who could and would fairly and truly define them. However, a writer who styles an unfulfilled prophecy, one that confessedly relates to the resurrection, judgment, and second advent, 'historic fact,' can hardly be expected to be accurate. We think the Advent views will survive.

The Watchman and Reflector tells us that—

'Eschatology' is an attempt to settle the Scripture doctrine of the coming of the Lord, the judgment and the resurrection. It is written by Samuel Lee. The author claims that as far as facts are concerned, he is in harmony with the 'most straightest' orthodoxy. He believes in a spiritual body, in a resurrection, in the coming of the Lord, in a day of judgment. He differs from the view of the church upon these points only in the matter of time, as to when these great facts occur. The resurrection, according to the author, is a law of nature. It takes place at death, death itself being a natural process. The 'flesh and blood,' and 'corruption,' and 'weakness' which belong to the physical body is left behind at death and the spirit comes into its rightful state; this is the resurrection. The coming of the Lord is the appearing of a man himself before the Lord. This appearing following, as a matter of course, his withdrawal from the earth at death. The judgment is only the government of Christ, which was set up at the beginning of the Christian dispensation. This is attended with rewards and punishments which take place in the case of each individual at the moment of death. Published by J. E Tilton & Co., Boston.

—This what orthodoxy is coming to. The word of God is 'turned upside down,' as the prophet expresses it.

WANTED—A LITTLE HELP.

While waiting in Chicago for Providence to direct his future labors, Br. E. N. Bliss observed a call for help in The Times from a brother in Kansas, and felt moved to respond. We aided him what we could among ourselves, and furnished him a supply of books and tracts, and a loan from the Association funds, to enable him to reach the place.

He finds the people very poor. The family who gave him a home have lived on boiled corn for many months. Lately they have corn-meal and eggs, with milk, and "think they are living very nice, indeed." But this, by the way, Br. Bliss had to walk the last twenty miles of the way, as his money gave out, and he now needs a few dollars to return his trunk, with his clothing and books.

Br. Thorp was brought into the truth by reading the Crisis, loaned him by a friend. He is fiercely opposed, and Br. Bliss was even threatened with arrest for daring to talk of the blessed hope in the schoolhouse, near Lake Sibley. But he kept his temper, and has begun meetings with good prospects.

We do not feel able to meet all the expenses of this mission, but willing to do our share. Those who wish can respond, each as he purposeth in his heart. About sixty dollars are needed.

A. W. T. and W. L. H.

Orthodoxy on the Intermediate State.

A brief report of a sermon, recently delivered in New Haven, Conn., may interest the readers of The Times, as showing to what straits orthodoxy is sometimes reduced in its efforts to reconcile Bible statements and philosophical dogmas.

A crowded house had been drawn together by the advertisement that Rev. Dr. W——, pastor of the First Methodist church, would preach upon the Intermediate State. The speaker chose that stereotyped yet most appropriate text, Lk. 23: 43; which, correctly punctuated, simply ignores any reference to a conscious intermediate state. "Lord, remember me when thou comest in [so the Greek] thy kingdom," was the thief's request. Jesus replies, "Verily I say unto thee to-day, thou shalt be with me in Paradise," in that time yet distant when Jesus shall come in his kingdom.

After remarking the universal desire to know what becomes of our dead ones, and denouncing the pretensions of Spiritism, the speaker laid down two propositions: 1st. The Bible is our only authoritative guide; 2d. Though not so full and explicit as it might be on this question, it is still sufficiently so. Various views he told us were held by Christians in regard to the intermediate state. The speaker nobly declared that provided one trusts in the Lord Jesus as his Savior, and tries to please him, however wrong his belief on other points, he is one of the Lord's household. Some, he said, believe that the dead are in an unconscious sleep. But this belief, he told us, had no basis in Scripture. His text condemned it; "there was, to be sure, some verbal criticism on that, but you could'nt cut the promise in two." Paul's desire to depart and be with Christ condemns it, and so does the parable of Dives and Lazarus. We were informed that if the dead are not conscious, "all parables representing them as talking are nonsense." Had the speaker forgotten Is. 14: 8–11, where trees in Hades and the dead "covered with worms" are represented as speaking to each other? He dismissed this view of his subject by exclaiming, "Not know anything when dead! Why the day I die I shall be wiser than ever before!"

Again, others, he said, believe the period between death and the judgment to be another probation state, (not for the redeemed, I hope.) Here he contradicted his preceding exclamation by quoting Eccl. 9: 10: "For there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave whither thou goest."

He then gave his own belief: the dead at their death do not go to heaven. This Bible doctrine he well substantiated by many quotations from the Holy Word. Jesus, at his resurrection, told Mary Magdalene he had not been to heaven since his death. (John 20: 18.) Paul speaks of the crown laid up for him to be given him "at that day" of Christ's appearing. (2 Tim. 4:8.) Peter, of the crown of glory received when the Chief Shepherd shall appear. (1 Pet. 5:3.) And, were it otherwise, the speaker well showed the final judgment would be an idle farce.

But now the blunder: The dead, he declared, go immediately to paradise. With much extra Biblical erudition he divided hades into elysium for the righteous, tartarus for the wicked, an impassable gulf between the two,—on one side of which the dead are "comforted," on the other "tormented," while waiting for the judgment. But, on his own hypothesis, is not a careful and thorough judgment needed ere it can be decided to which of the two, to elysium or tartarus, the departing one shall be carried? And, after that, unless God has erred, why again a judgment?

But the most surprising part was yet to come. Where is hades, the place of the dead? "It is not some far off region, where all is undefined and ghost-like." He would prove this by the death of Stephen who, he told us, with mortal eyes looked into paradise. The Bible says he "looked into heaven and saw Jesus standing on the right hand of God." (2.) 'The glory out of paradise smote Saul of Tarsus on the road to Damascus, and Jesus was so near he heard him say "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" What, Jesus in hades, the place of the dead! We thought he had risen! The Bible declares him ascended to heaven. (Acts 1: 9–11; Heb. 9: 24.) (3.) The transfiguration scene, (or vision, as Jesus called it.) (4.) His last proof was: "Dying saints hear singing and see angel forms. This is no delirium of disease. The departed ones are all about us. Unperceived they join in our holy songs. If we had spiritual insight and touch we might see and touch them now."

Alas, alas! has it come to this? Is hades simply being in the air of the First Methodist church? How about that "gulf fixed' to divide its two parts? Does the line run through that church edifice, or is it so tortuous as now to include a church, and now to exclude a grogshop? And if simply an imaginary line, what is to hinder its being crossed over? To such absurdities we find thinking beings reduced who would hold on to the Bible of truth with one hand and with the other still cling to that lie of the evil one, who declared, Ye shall not die, ye are immortal!

Nay, more than absurd. Does not such preaching lead direct to Spiritism? If the departed are thus ever about us, with natural affection and with their superior intelligence, will they not find some way to communicate with those they have left? What better field for the Spiritist than those trained to such belief, especially if the yet unrecognized facts of mesmerism and clairvoyance can be used to help out the delusion. But the Bible shows a more excellent way. Jesus said, "Lazarus has fallen asleep." Paul says to the Thessalonians, "them that are asleep." Better for them than this dim, shadowy existence, disturbed by the full knowledge of sin and its consequences in those they love, is that quiet sleep "where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest," till the problem of evil has been worked out, and the trump of God call them to their reward. And better for the living, that each should feel he is so near the judgment day. One moment closing our eyes to earth and any moment, may be that one, and next conscious moment though it be years after, and we awake in the presence of our Lord at his coming. Verily the Judge standeth before the door. Watch, therefore, for ye know not at what hour your Lord doth come!

C. L. I.

The Early and Later Methodism.

The founder of the Methodist church maintained in preaching and practice great self-denial. He taught his people to make all they could honorably in their business, and to use great liberality, giving all they could for religious and charitable purposes; and, finally, to spend no money for foolish finery or gew-gaws. Mr. Wesley says:

"I exhort all those who desire me to watch over your souls, wear no gold, no pearls or precious stones, use no curling of hair or costly apparel how grave soever. I advise those who are able to receive these sayings, buy no velvets, no silks, no fine linen, no superfluities, no mere ornaments though ever so much in fashion. Wear nothing though you have it already which is of a glaring color, or which is in any way gay, glittering and showy, nothing made in the hight of fashion, nothing apt to attract the attention of bystanders. I do not advise women to wear rings, ear rings, neck laces, laces (of whatever kind or color), or ruffles which little by little may easily shoot from one to twelve inches deep, neither do I advise men to wear colored waist coats, shining stockings, glittering or shining buckles or buttons, either on their coats or on their sleeves, any more than gay, fashionable and expensive perukes. And whoever says that there is no harm in these, might as well say there is no harm in stealing and adultery. This is a melancholy truth. I am ashamed of it, but I know not how to help it. I call heaven and earth this day to witness that it is not my fault. The trumpet has not given an uncertain sound. For nearly fifty years last past, I have borne a clear and faithful testimony. In print, in preaching, in meeting the society, I have not shunned to declare the whole counsel of God. I am therefore clear of the blood of those that will not hear. It lies upon their own heads: Let your dress be cheap as well as plain. Otherwise you do but trifle with God and me and your own souls."

In spite of Mr. Wesley's teachings, the Methodists are now leaders in the fashions of the day, and spend ten times as much for show, luxury and vanity than for religion. Is this progress in the right direction? ⁂

Dr. Graves on Spiritism.

On the receipt of The Times to-day, Capt. Handy and myself examined the article by Dr. Graves on the subject of spirit communication, mesmerism and clairvoyance, as giving his tests of Foster, the spirit test medium, at Memphis, Tenn.

The Captain called to mind his experience on shipboard, in one of his whaling voyages during the years of 1845–50. At one time his chronometer run down, which deprived them of Greenwich time, so that he was compelled to fall back on dead reckoning, the old method of navigation. He had on board a young man by the name of George Thomas, of Duxbury, Mass. He was a cataleptic, and also a natural clairvoyant. He was put to sleep, or entranced, and directed to visit Greenwich Observatory, near London, to see what time it was by the great clock there. He went, in mind, and on arrival described what he saw and heard. He heard the ticking of time instruments, saw the pendulum of the great clock, and described its slow and heavy motion. He watched the hour-hands till all united in giving the time as just 12 m. The Captain set his chronometer and sailed by it, afterwards, during the voyage, finding it correct.

This was a wonderful case of clairvoyance. The young man knew nothing of the spirits, and could give no such information, except in the mesmerized state.

The Captain gave me other instances in which this young man had given important information; once relating to certain "reefs" not laid down on any chart, lying contiguous to an island in the Indian Ocean, which they were nearing. This information was of great use to them.

This subject is enveloped in mystery. How a man on shipboard in mid ocean, in sound sleep can visit Greenwich and get the exact time, or go down under the ocean and hunt up dangerous "reefs," is beyond the power of those who are wide awake to tell. So here let it rest till we have more light on this mysterious subject.

Our only safe guide now is the word of God. This has been proved to be true and reliable. And it is "a lamp to our feet and a light to our path."

There are only two or three Adventists in this place, but the people heard with intense interest, and there will be more. A good number subscribed for The Times, of the thinking part of the community. Capt. Handy is especially gratified to see his neighbors so interested to hear the truth, of which he had often spoken to them.

J. V. H.

An old farmer said of his clergyman whose sermons lacked point, "Ah, yes, he's a good man but he will rake with the teeth upward."

Influence of Bad Women.

Mrs. Jane G. Swisshelm wields a vig- ous pen, guided usually by a good gree of common sense. We are d she has had opportunity to speak r mind in the Independent concern- a department of politics not often tilated. We quote:

No country has been so much and badly ruled by women as France, t has always maintained a Salic law. is country has copied her in this re- ect; and, instead of the ennobling nence which English women have rted on the politics of their coun- , we have the Pompadour power e, with its baleful breath. In every pital, state and national, in every rt of justice, our Josie Mansfields ld a power little suspected by that se of good and pure women who ve been trained to think politics and es quite out of their sphere.

At the time Mrs. Surratt sat before r judges, chained like a wild beast d subjected to gross insults from the n and women who gained access to show, there lived in Washington rteen women who did the nation the nor to sit for their pictures at an ex- nse to the people of forty thousand llars. These pictures are all on the ide of the dome of the Capitol. irteen of them exhibit the originals a plentiful lack of drapery, throwing eir limbs about with the freedom of ung colts in a clover field, playing ring around a rosy" with General ashington. They are supposed to the most fitting representatives of e thirteen original States, while the rteenth is doing Venus taking a th with Neptune, and has come up take a look at the weather and left r clothes in deep-sea soundings. Had e of these charming creatures sat in s. Surratt's place, the first time that avy chain clanked with the motion those superbly rounded limbs the lges would, no doubt, have be- ught them that the prisoner might securely kept by something less n a log chain. Had she been gor- ously attired in purple velvet, with a e of a bonnet "made to imitate a pansy," instead of sitting heavily led in deep mourning; and had the e, instead of being a model of moth- y sweetness, been that of the glar- Venus, the hand might have been ed with the blood of twenty men Presidents), and no American man ld have been found to place a hemp- noose around the voluptuous throat.

' Present Truth."

OR "MEAT IN DUE SEASON."

This is a little work on prophecy d chronology by Br. Jonas Wendell Edenboro, Pa, setting forth the end this age, this present year—1873.

A Br. in New Jersey has put in our nd seven hundred and fifty of this mphlet for distribution, and requests to say, that if any have not the ans to pay postage or expressage on at they can prudently use, he will y it for them, i. e. they will be sent e.

If the demand for these warrant it, will gladly provide for a thousand pies more.

Send your orders to this office.

"Movers" is the name which the le girl of a Sunday School mission- y on the frontier gives to the emi- nts who are constantly pushing stward. The missionary thus writes the Sunday School World about em:—But these 'movers,'—and our ate is full of them—make me think what 'Uncle George' said to one o had found it too dry in Kansas, too kly in Missouri, too cold in Minne- a, and to sandy in Dakota, and so s still beating up and down in vain arch. 'Ah' said the old man, 'you nt a country where no drought, nor kness nor freezing cold will find you. know of but one such land. Better let ur heart travel on to the better untry, that is the heavenly.

South, in his inimitably beautiful ser- n on the "Ways of Wisdom," has keen thrust at folly as Papicaly prac- ced: "Paul indeed was scourged and aten by the Jews, but we never read at he beat or scourged himself; and ey think that his 'keeping under his dy' imports so much, they must first ove that the body cannot be made tuous but by a scourge, and conse- ently the thongs and whipcord are eans of grace, and things necessary salvation. The truth is, if men's ligion lies no deeper than their skin, is possible that they may scourge emselves into very great improve- ents. But they find that 'bodily ex- cise' touches not the soul; and that ither pride, nor lust, nor covetousness, nor any other vice, was ever mortified by corporal discipline: it is not the back, but the heart that must bleed for sin."

Said Geothe, we should do our utmost to encourage the beautiful, for the useful encourages itself.

The Times.

AT HOME.

„ „ „ A boy has won the reward and medal offered by the Nebraska State Board of Horticulture for tree-planting He set out 980 trees on the day appointed.

„ „ „ New Orleans has several hundred homeless families—one of the results of a late great fire. Aid is solicited in their behalf.

„ „ „ The last Congress just before adjournment voted itself about $5,000 per member in the way of increased salaries for past services. The country would have done well to have paid them that sum never to have met at all, but given place to better men, if they could be found.

„ „ „ The ceremony provided in the Mosaic law in case the brother of a man deceased without issue refuses to marry the widow was recently performed in a San Francisco synagogue. (See Deut. 25: 6–10.) The ceremony is known among the Jews as the Chalitza.

„ „ „ On the 25th of December a fire occurred in Goodyear's india rubber works, at Naugatuck, Conn., which originated in a curious manner. The claimants have just put in their proofs of loss, and in connection make make the following singular statement: "In the room where the fire originated, while one of the workmen was handling rubber goods, the air seemed to be charged with electricity, it being in the midst of a violent snow-storm, the mercury, meanwhile, being at or near zero; then there seemed to come from his hands a flame, which instantly communicated with the goods and dry pine of the building, the fire not being under their control for a moment." Others in the neighborhood received severe shocks of electricity on that day in their houses.

„ „ „ We suppose that in the line of editorial duty we should refer to the congressional scandals. But what more can be said? Every new revelation only adds to the disgraceful, dishonorable tale, and our confidence,—or what is left of it,—in human nature hourly diminishes. There was the first blunder, not to use a harder word, in taking the proffered stock; it needed but a thimble full of brains to know why that stock was so "placed;" then came, last fall, the crime of denial of ownership or any complicity in the matter; and then the ordered investigation, and then a scene of prevarication, of falsehood, of deception, of forced confession, &c., &c., by which fair reputations were forever tarnished, the country astonished and disgusted, and public morals damaged to a fearful extent. And there is another dark side; in this the only instance of congressional corruption? What would be the history of many an enactment of our Senators and Representatives? Is this Credit Mobilier affair only a sample of what is continually going on at Washington?—Watchman and Reflector.

„ „ „ The steamship Saragossa was lately put upon the ways at Baltimore, supposed to need only new caulking and copper. The caulkers got to work, and the seams between the plank were dressed out with the irons preparatory to driving in the new oakum. Imagine the astonishment of the caulkers when one day the iron, subjected only to a feeble blow, went clear into the vessel. A closer inspection resulted, and it was discovered that for a distance of eighty feet on one side of the keel, and beneath that portion of the ship where the boilers rest, planks which eight years ago were three and one-half inches thick were now mere boards of one half inch in thickness. They were not worm-eaten, and to all appearances were sound as when first spiked and bolted to the huge skeleton of a ship. And here a lesson in the power of friction may be aptly illustrated. Beneath the boilers of the Saragossa it was discovered that particles of coal had dropped from time to time, and the mere motion of the vessel, as she rocked at sea, had shaken the loose pieces of mineral from side to side on the planks, and worn them to the thickness of boards used in the ordinary skiffs, such as are used on our creeks.

„ „ „ A principle has been recognized in the governing of the Boston police which, though not unknown in the European cities, is entirely new in this country. It comprehends the necessity for preventing crime in order to diminish it. The idea of police duty in most cities is that of making arrests after crime has been committed. At all events, this has been the case in Chicago. Bodies of thieves have been known to infest the city, to have their regular places of rendezvous, and to come and go without hinderance, as long as they were not actually caught in a criminal act. Gambling-houses have been permitted to be furnished and opened under the very eyes and nose of the police without interference until an order for "pulling" them has been issued. The Boston idea goes back of the commission of crime, and endeavors to forestall it. One of the very first steps of this new departure was to dismiss the regular detective force. It was assumed, and probably not without justice, that commerce between the thieves and detectives is a natural consequence of this system. Its abolition also gives an opportunity for the employment of citizens, upon occassons, who are not known to the dangerous classes as are the familiar faces of the detective force. The new plan is said to work admirably in Boston, and is applied to the numerous preventive measures that constantly develop themselves when such a treatment is in vogue.

„ „ „ The Christian Union says: The great battle of our day is to be the battle of money. The combinations of capitalists, the consolidation of railroads, and enormous concentrations of money in comparatively few hands, it raising up a Plutarchy which threatens to overmatch Legislatures, counts, and all private interests that may stand in the way of these gigantic corporations. If the very ablest men in Congress are so easily beguiled and perverted by this first onset, what will the future be, when millions of dollars can be brought to bear upon Congress to secure millionnair's legislation, as against the interests of the common people? Is the Congress of the United States to become an exchange on which money princes shall meet and exchange commodities? There must be formed a home sentiment of honesty, which shall make it impossible for a man to enjoy such gains as he gets by a sacrifice of honor, truth and public trust. As long as men, by scores and hundreds, can go to the Legislature poor, and in five years return rich, maintain their popularity, and enjoy their ill-gotten possessions, of what use will it be, once in ten years, to sacrifice a luckless criminal amidst universal execrations? The honesty must dwell among the common people. There must be honesty at the source of power. If the people are debauched, their representatives will not be virtuous. The moral education of the whole community must, after all, be the grand remedy.

„ „ „ Bishop Gilman, of Cleveland, O., promulgated a Lenten pastoral address which is likely to create a sensation. In his letter he says that nationalities must be made subordinate to religion; that Catholics must learn that they are Catholics first and citizens next; that Catholicity teaches that the Church is above the State; that Catholics must not cease to insist upon their rights, and if need be, demand them at the polls. LATER.—Much excitement has been created here concerning the recent Lenten pastoral of the Right Rev. Dr. Gilmour, the Roman Catholic Bishop of this Diocese. The document is very bold and determined in its character, asserting the supremacy of the church over the State censuring the present system of public school education, which he claims is imperfect; insisting that Catholic families should send their children to Catholic schools, unless absolutely impracticable; directing that marriage shall not be contracted with persons outside of the church, and says, if necessary, Catholics must insist upon and demand their rights as citizens at the polls. Societies not to be permitted to enter the church wearing their regalia, unless the church is formally recognized by such society having a priest at its head; church property will not hereafter be controlled by Trustees, but be transferred to the Bishop. The pastoral has elicited much comment from the press of this city, both editorially and through communications. Last evening the Rev. Mr. Forbush, Unitarian minister, before a large audience, made the pastoral the subject of his discourse, and took strong grounds against it. This morning Bishop Gilmour published a letter defending and explaining the pastoral at length, and concludes with this proposition to the School Board: Catholics shall build their own school-houses and place them during school hours under the entire control of the Public School Board, during which time no religious instructions shall be given; but before or after school hours religious instruction shall be permitted; teachers of said schools shall be Catholics, and be paid by the School Board.

ABROAD.

„ „ „ Germany will expend $67,000,000 in reviewing and completing her system of fortresses.

„ „ „ Mr. Bessemer says he can produce a gun capable of throwing a ten-ton ball.

„ „ „ An election riot in Quebec last week assumed such proportions as to make the proclamation of martial law a necessity.

„ „ „ The Yellow Fever has been raging at Rio Janeiro and other Brazilian ports, to such an extent as to drive foreigners away.

„ „ „ Father Hyacinthe is expected to resume the pulpit at Geneva at the invitation of the liberal Catholics. By the way, 'Old' Catholics, 'Liberal' Catholics, etc., sounds as if Rome's boast, that she has no sects, can no longer be uttered.

„ „ „ The ship Chacabuco, from San Francisco to Liverpool, ran into the ship Torch, in the Irish Channel. The Chacabuco sank in a few minutes after the collision, and twenty-four of the ship's company were drowned. The Torch also went down, but all on board were saved. Other disasters are reported.

„ „ „ The great advantages of Don Carlos in his struggles and intrigues for possession of the Spanish throne are that he is comparatively unknown to the present generation, and possesses all the prestige of an intelligible principle, a clear title, and the prayers and peace of the church. It would be difficult to exaggerate the zeal of the clergy for the cause of Charles VII., in whom the ancient alliance of the altar and the throne, and the unity of the faith, are embodied. But this very friendliness of the Roman clergy is after all his curse.

„ „ „ It is said that the emperor of Germany is of the opinion that he and other monarchs of Europe are reaping a larger harvest from his overwhelming victory over Napoleon III. than is enjoyable. From that followed a republic in France, and from that republic, he thinks, comes the new one in Spain. This is more than he fought for. However, unless there are fewer changes in their ministries, and a manifestation of more stability in their government, it is probable that the conquering William's peace of mind, so far as the establishment of republican governments in Europe is concerned, will be fully restored.

„ „ „ The trial of Marshal Bazine, which has so long been in preparation, is soon to commence. There will be 480 witnesses for the prosecution, while the defense brings but eighteen or twenty officers who were with him at Metz. His imprisonment has been rendered needlessly irksome and mortifying by the close surveillance under which he has been kept. Although he voluntarily gave himself up as a prisoner he has had a daily guard of five and a nightly one of twelve sentries. There is little doubt that his chances for acquittal are very poor, and that he will meet the same fate as all the other French Marshals who have been tried on similar charges.

„ „ „ Woman as a voter is an accomplished fact in England. Every woman who occupies a dwelling in any city or town of England, Ireland, Wales or Scotland, has a vote for aldermen and town officers in general. Under Foster's new act in England, widows and spinsters who pay rates have votes in the election of school boards. In Ireland every woman who pays any sum as poor rate has a vote in the election of poor-guardians. It is said that the women exercise their rights heartily, and in many places where saloon keepers represented the wards of cities in municipal positions, they were finally defeated by the votes of the women. In London, as is well known, Mrs. Garrett Anderson, M. D., is one of the most useful members of of the School Board, and the same is true of Miss Becker in Manchester. The right of suffrage seems to have been conferred on the principle that where women pay a tax for any object they shall have the right to a voice in disposition of the funds.

„ „ „ Frauds on the Bank of England to the amount of $2,000,000 have been discovered. 'The Old Lady of Threadneedle Street,' as the institution is familiarly called, is fairly put to the blush, for she has hitherto esteemed herself quite infallible in all matters of finance. The frauds were in counterfeit United States bonds, but the exact amount and manner of the forgeries are kept from the public as much as possible. A large reward is offered for the arrest of the forgers, whose supposed agent is in custody.

„ „ „ One of those mysterious agitations in Russia, which require the force of arms to subdue, appears to have culminated in a formidable insurrection in the provinces of Volhyria and Podolia. Socialism, says the telegram, is the basis of the present rising, and the insurgents are said to be committing fearful atrocities—murdering their opponents, and plundering and burning property in all directions. The troops which had been sent against them were repulsed. Of course Russia will have no difficulty in quelling this disturbance, but such insurrections foreshow the enormous difficulties Russia will have to contend with in maintaining the integrity of the empire when the dissimilar people embraced within it shall begin to exercise independent thought regarding government and individual rights. The strange and outrageous manifestations in Russia of the quickening power, which now seems to be spreading all over the globe, can only be accounted for by the enormous pressure employed to secure passive obedience.—N. Y. Witness.

„ „ „ There is said to be serious apprehensions of a coal famine in England. The prices have been so high already that the poorer classes have had to do without it. The sum of $12.50 does not seem to be an exorbitant price for cannel coal, according to the American tariff, but it is so in view of the fact that the average price in England heretofore has been from $5 to $6. The rise is explained by the existence of a ring of proprietors and a ring of dealers, who fix the prices to suit themselves. They claim that the recent strikes, the diminution of the number of hours which the miners work, and the increase of the pay which they receive, force them to fix prices at high figures stated. Political economists go further, however, and assert that henceforth the demand will be in excess of the supply, and that prices will increase proportionately. It is said that the combined coal fields of England do not contain more than 90,000,000,000 tons. The annual consumption is estimated at about 115,000,000 tons. The cost of mining is increasing, not only on account of the higher prices paid for labor, but on account of the greater depth at which the coal must be worked. The latter difficulty will naturally grow with every year. Under these conditions, it is safe to assume that coal will never again be so cheap in England as heretofore,—a circumstance that will materially affect the industrial and financial interests of the country.

„ „ „ The Cologne Gazette gives an account of the Russian forces in Central Asia. On the Caspian Sea Russia has seventeen steamers, of together 980 horse power and 4,400 tons, and seventeen sailing vessels, of together 1,250 tons. This fleet is considered sufficient to transport in a very short time half, if not the whole, of a division across the Caspian Sea. On the Sea of Aral are stated to be six Russian steamers, of 186 hose power and 500 tons. The regular forces which have been advanced to the Russian frontier districts consist of eighteen battalions and four batteries, to which, however, are to be added considerable contingents, as the Tshernomonic and Caucasian line Cossacks. In reality this force is to be considered only as the vanguard of the Russo-Asiatic army. After the complete subjection of the Caucasus, the main body of that army is now the so-called Army of the Caucasus, of which the front is continuously and exclusively directed toward Asia, and which may be transported at any given moment to Central Asia, by the fleet of the Caspian Sea. This explains why that army has not been dissolved after the subjection of the population of the Caucasus. It is composed now of six divisions of infantry, one division of cavalry, thirty-one batteries, with 107 cannon, two battalions of sappers and miners, and thirty-six garrison battalions — altogether, when on the war footing, 163,759 men, of whom 90,000 to 100,000 may be put into the field immediately. One of the newly-formed railway battalions has already been joined to that army.

The Christian Life.

The Evil Conscience Healed.

The apostle speaks in one place of "an evil conscience;" and in other places in the Bible we read of "a good conscience." An "evil conscience" is one that has been injured or diseased. There are two ways in which conscience may be injured. One is by not giving it good light.

We have compared conscience to the eye of the soul. We may also compare it to the window of the soul. A window is of use for letting light into a room; and also for looking through that you may see what is outside of the window. But if you want a good, correct view of the things that you are looking at through a window, what sort of glass is it necessary to have in the window? Clear glass. Suppose that the glass in the window instead of being clear glass, is stained glass; one pane red, another blue, another yellow, and another green. When you look through the red glass, what color will the things be that you are looking at? Red. And so when you look through the blue glass, all things will be blue. They will be yellow when you look through yellow glass, and green when you look through the pane of that color.

But suppose you have thick heavy shutters to the window, and keep them closed, can you see anything thaough the window then? No. And can you see anything in the room when the shutters are closed? No. It will be all dark. And conscience is just like a window in this respect. You must keep the shutters open, and the windows clean, so that plenty of pure light can get in, if you want to see things properly. God's blessed word, the Bible, gives just the kind of light we need to have a good conscience.

The apostle Paul is a good illustration of this part of our subject. Before he became a Christian he used to persecute the friends and followers of Jesus, and put them to death. And his conscience did not reprove him for it. He thought he was pleasing God and doing right when he did this. But he had an evil conscience. It was injured by the want of light. The window of his soul was colored by the mistakes which the Jews made about Jesus. Paul looked at him and his followers, just as we look at anything through a red or green glass. He thought he was a wicked deceiver, when he was just, and true, and holy, and good. He thought it was the very best thing he could do to persecute his followers, when it was the very worst thing in the world to do. But Paul had an evil conscience. His conscience wanted light. When he was converted he got light. Then he saw what a grand mistake he had made, and from that time he loved Jesus with all his heart, and served him with all his might.

And a great many people injure their consciences, just as Paul did, by not letting them have clear light.

A woman forgot to send some work home on Saturday. When Sunday morning came she told a little girl, who lived with her, to put on her things and take the bundle home. The little girl said it would be wrong to do it to day, as this was Sunday. "Put the bundle under the shawl," said the woman, "and nobody will see it." "But isn't it Sunday under the shawl?" asked the child.

The difference between this woman and the child was, that the woman was injuring her conscience by not letting the clear light of the Bible shine on it, while the child had that light.

If we have to go at night along a dangerous road, full of holes and pits, we shall be sure to fall and hurt ourselves, unless we take a good lantern with us to show us the way. But in going through this world our path is a dangerous one. There are pits and snares all along the way. And the path is very dark, too. There is only one safe light to take with us, and this is the Bible. It is of this that David is speaking when he says, "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light to my path." We are sure to go wrong unless we take this light with us, and make a good use of it.

Let us be careful that we don't injure our consciences, and that is—by not minding them.

The apostle speaks in one place of men's consciences, which he says, are just as if they had been "seared with a hot iron." (1 Tim. 4: 2.) He means by this to show how such men have injured their consciences by not minding them.

You know how thin and tender the skin is on your hand and face. It is so very delicate that it can feel the least touch. Even a feather cannot light on it, but you feel it in a moment. But suppose you should have a red hot iron applied to your hand. It would burn the skin off and make a great sore which would hurt you very much. But after a while it would heal over, and the skin would grow again. But the skin that came after the burning would be very different from that which is on your hand now. Instead of being smooth and tender, as it is now, it would be rough and hard, and have very little feeling in it. And the apostle means to say that if we do not mind what our consciences tell us, we shall injure them, just as the skin of our hand is injured by being burnt with a hot iron. The greatest injury we can do to our consciences is—not to mind them.

You know what an alarm clock is. It is a kind of clock made on purpose, not to keep time all day like other clocks, but to wake people up at a particular hour, by making a great noise. Suppose I have one of these clocks, and I want it to wake me so that I can get up every morning at four o'clock. I wind it up at night, and set the finger in the dial plate pointing to four. Then I set it on the table near the bed, or on the mantle-piece, and go to sleep. The clock goes on all through the night, ticking away, and when it comes round to four o'clock in the morning it sets up a great whizzing, and ringing, and banging, that is sure to wake up any ordinary sleeper. This is a very convenient way of being waked up. Yes, it is a very nice way if you only mind the clock and get up when it calls you. But if you turn round and go to sleep again, for two or three mornings, the alarm clock will lose its power, or rather you will lose your power of hearing it, or of being wakened by it. No change will come over the clock, but a great change will come over you. The clock will continue to go off at the hour for which you wind it up; and it will make as much noise as it did before, but that noise will lose its effect upon you. You will sleep quietly on through it, just as if it had never been made.

Now conscience is God's alarm clock. God has wound it up so that it may go off whenever we are going to do anything that is wrong. Then it gives us an alarm by making us feel uneasy. It seems to say to us: "Take care. That is not right. God sees you. Don't do that." How important it is to have that which will always tell us when we are going to do that which is wrong! But if we want to have such a conscience we must be sure to hear it when it speaks to us. If we always stop when it says "stop;" if we always do what it tells us to do, then we shall always hear it. But if we get into the habit of not minding it, when it speaks to us, and not doing what it tells us to do; then, by and by, we shall not hear it at all. Our conscience will get hardened, and we shall be like a vessel at sea that has no compass to point out the right way for it to go, and no rudder to help it to keep in that way.

In going up and down Chestnut street I often stop at the window of the American Sunday School Union to look at one of the prints there. It represents a grandmother, who has fallen asleep in her chair, with her work-table before her. Her little grandson has crept softly up to the table, and is putting his hand in the drawer to steal a penny. And when I look at the picture, I think of a story I read once of a man who was hung for murder. He made a speech just before he was hung. In this speech he said that "the first step he ever took towards the gallows was stealing a penny from his grandmother's drawer one day while she was asleep." And when I look at that picture, I think to myself: "Ah! how little that boy thinks he may now be taking his first step towards the gallows! Conscience is giving him the alarm. It is telling him that he is doing wrong. But if he does not mind what it says, he will soon get so that he can steal not only pennies, but dollars, without trouble. Then in time he may become a robber, and a murderer, and end his days on the gallows."—R. Newton, in Sunday School Work.

From W. Johnston.

Mr Editor:—Permit me to speak a few words through your columns to many of my brethren of the "Church of God" in Mechanicsburg, and other parts of Cumberland county, who read THE TIMES, and the many tracts I have circulated among them.

Dear Brethren: Let us be thankful, rejoice and take courage: light and liberality of sentiment are increasing, and spreading rapidly among us, notwithstanding some of the great and indefatigable writers in the Church Advocate appear to think they can exterminate by a single sweep of the pen, all the hateful soul-sleepers in creation, with all the rest of mankind who refuse to believe and receive their anti-scriptural dogmas. Yet brethren we have some liberal minded preachers among us, who think and let think, and who are almost persuaded, that "the poor ignorant soul-sleepers," as one writer calls us, are nearly if not altogether on the right track. There are others of our preachers who are fully persuaded of this fact: but they have not courage enough to come out and tell the people publicly. Thank God, this was not the case with our young brother, C. C. Marston, whose mind I directed to those glorious truths he is now so successfully preaching. Oh I am sorry truly sorry, that our beloved Br. M. Beck, has suffered his mouth to be gagged by the East Ohio Eldership; and that he agreed to hold many of the God-revealed truths of the precious gospel as private property.

Brethren let us who know the truth, never be ashamed of it. Dont put your light under a bushel; but let it shine forth, and leave the result with the Lord. Remember our blessed Jesus is coming soon. Fulfilled and Fulfilling signs proclaim him near. Yes as Br. Kennedy told us last Sabbath, "The Son of Man will soon appear in the clouds of heaven with all his holy angels, whom he will send forth to gather all his jewels from sea and from land: and change, yea immortalize our vile bodies, making them like unto his own most glorious body. Yes! Jesus says "I will come again, and receive you unto myself, that where I am, ye may be also"

You who were present on this occasion, will not soon forget, what a precious, refreshing time we had from the presence of the Lord even before the preaching commenced, when thirteen happy converts came forward and dedicated themselves to the service of the blessed Jesus. You'll remember too how our good old pastor broke down, and could not command his feeling when he commenced to talk and give the right hand of fellowship to those happy converts. Indeed the church was melted into tears and most of those for whom we prayed, and with whom we labored for about three weeks, in our protracted meeting. And while tears of joy flowed from the eyes of the brethren and sisters; many also flowed from the eyes of penitents, seeking an interest in Jesus. May God bless them and bring them to enjoy that "lively hope," that looks beyond the resurrection for glory, honor, immortality and eternal life.

After the candidates were received into church fellowship, brother Jesse Kennedy took this text: "For we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord, and ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake." (2 Cor. 4: 5.)

In his discourse he pointed out the difference between the apostles manner of preaching, and much of the present day. Their preaching was "Christ and him crucified," "Jesus and the resurrection," the glorious changes that would be effected, when he should appear "the second time without sin unto salvation;" the day of the Lord near at hand, when "the heavens being on fire would pass away with a great noise; and the elements melt with fervent heat, and the earth also; and the works that are therein shall be burned up." But Oh! glory! though the atmospheric heavens, and this earth, on which both saints and sinner now dwell shall be dissolved, yet blessed be God, the Christian can look for the fullfillment of their heavenly Father's promise of a new heaven and a new earth wherein the righteous shall dwell. And the New Jerusalem will come down from God out of heaven, and be there with its golden streets, its pearly gates, and beautiful walls and foundations adorned with all manner of precious stones. And the tree of life will be there. And the river of the water of life will be there. Yes, yes, and Jesus will be there: and God himself will be there and dwell with men; and wipe away all tears from the faces of his once afflicted and persecuted children. And there will be no death there. No more sorrow, pain or crying there; for the former things are passed away, and "Behold I create all things new," saith the Almighty.

In one part of our brother's discourse he referred to the sectarian prejudices which exist between the different denominations; and sometimes between members of the same church on account of differences of opinion on some point of doctrine which is not essential to salvation. This he said ought not to be the case, especially among us, who acknowledge no discipline, no creed, platform, or articles of faith, but the Holy Bible. For instance some of our brethren may believe in the unconscious sleep of the dead from death until the morn of the resurrection! Well they have a right to believe so if they feel convinced of that fact; but for my part I hope to go to heaven when I die—We should love one another and do each other all the good we can: for we cannot all see alike even when we occupy the same standpoint. Hence some believe that the wicked will exist forever in misery—others, that all mankind will be saved; others that the wicked will be destroyed both soul and body! This brings to my mind what I read in some paper the other day, of three surveyors who were employed to find a disputed corner, from a well known standpoint. The first started off, but kept entirely too far to the right, and missed the required corner. The second kept away as much too far to the left and thus missed the true corner. The third man pursued a middle course, and came out right plump at the corner required.

Here our brother forgot to make what we thought was a proper application of the story. So in our own mind we made it for him. The first surveyor represents that class of Christians who think that the wicked will exist forever in misery. The second represents that class who believe all will ultimately be saved whether men or devils. This class are Universalists. The third man represents that class, who believe that "the soul that sinneth it shall die;" that "the wages of sin is not an eternal life in misery." This class of Christians are sometimes denominated by the two other classes—"Poor ignorant soul-sleepers;" "Silly annihilationists," &c, &c. Just as well might the first class be called "Poor ignorant soul-tormentors;" and the second class, "Poor silly devil-savers:" for they don't believe there are any devils, but bad and wicked men.

Dear brethren let us take care to obey the new commandment—"Love one another;" and never use those unkind epithets so common in the mouths of Christians.

From Anson Brown, Richland Co. Wis.

I have been wonderfully blessed this winter. It has been the happiest winter of my life. I made a full surrender to the Lord. I have placed all on the altar. I am determined to keep it there until Jesus comes. Then I look for the reward. At my first meeting, of eight evenings, at Weister Creek, ten came forward and acknowledged Jesus and took a firm stand on the side of the Lord. Much prejudice was removed among the United Brethren. Some owned the truth. I returned in three weeks, twelve more came out on the Lord's side. I have promised to meet them again, if the Lord permits.

From J. W. Farrar, Christian Co., Ill.

We had the labors of Eld. O. D. Gibson at our school house in this place. On the 28th the building took fire about the chimney and rendered the house unfit for use, which closed our meeting abruptly. Yet precious seed was sown, and present truth forcibly presented, and by the masses of people who heard, was well received. Yet some were ready to question, and murmur, saying, "We never heard things on this wise before." "Others like the blind man restored to sight, could look up and see men as trees walking, rejecting truth and casting it from them, saying, "My father never believed man was mortal, or that the dead are unconscious." At intervals I have labored here for the past three years. Have had many sore conflicts, and have met many of the present day errors, in regard to the punishment of the wicked and the rewarding of the righteous at the return of Christ to raise the dead and judge the world. "Then shall he reward every man according as his works shall be."

From Wesley Royce.

I am very sorry that the Advent cause is not fully supported. Oh! that I was only able to pour into your treasury all you need to spread the precious news—the good tidings of the kingdom. May this cause not falter nor lag for want of friends and means.

But we must remember the angel proclaiming the everlasting gospel did not even set a foot on the land. He flew, no foothold or resting place for this one. The mission is short, a very short time is allotted the Adventists to prepare their work, and we must not expect to settle down here or there, but cry aloud "give glory to God for the hour of his judgment is come." It is just before us. Soon our labors will close, soon we shall see Jesus. No sorrow shall dim that blessed hour. Our trials will soon end. Let us leave all, even consigning our publishing depot to God's providence. If he wants it carried on, there will be means provided and that right early. But let us with faith and fervent prayer ask Jesus to lead the way, resolving to follow him down into the valley, over mountains, anywhere, so we fulfill our mission, crying repent, give glory to God, for his judgment is here! Oh! what power, what grace will fall from our life if Jesus leads the way! Perhaps God wants you all out in the highways and hedges, and calls you to "gather out the stones, and cast up a highway for the people," and prepare a way for the Lord, by a personal work. The time is so short he may have to scatter, disperse us over the land, that this blessed news may be heard by all.

From Lambert Wintershoitt, Hennepin, Ill.

My beloved Brethren and Sisters. My heart is full of love for the Redeemer's cause and I want to lend a helping hand, and where there is an opportunity throw in my mite for the ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES. I was much pleased in reading the "Editor's Correction," published some time ago, he having no desire to place his judgment as infallible. His remarks were good salt and some saltpeter. We are having hard times; many are close; but when we are in need God is ready to care for us and help us; and I think a little aid now and then from us will help some one in need. I must say I never felt so well satisfied when reading the Bible, searching after truth as I am at present. The truth is on our side. Br. Marston preached for us last summer. The first time I listened to him there was some little uneasiness about me for fear of being unpopular with certain ones that stood high in my church. But on hearing him night after night, I became fully persuaded that he preached the truth, such as I never heard before: and I hope the time is not far distant when the truth may be preached in every town of our Union. And may the people be willing to hear the truth. I am glad to learn that Br. Reimer of Philadelphia is at work on German tracts to scatter among our German friends. It pains me much when I think how light and knowledge are kept hid by the hand of priestcraft. I was when a boy trained in the Catholic church, and often have been compelled to ring the little bell for the priest, and help sing in Latin, not knowing what I said. But thanks be to the Lord for his goodness to me in turning me into the right way: for whereas, "I was once blind, I now see." And pray for me brothers and sisters that I may be kept waiting and watching for the return of our Savior and King.

From Luther Kerr, Highland Creek, Ont.

I remit the money for the continuance of my paper the quarter having now run out in which I took them on trial. And I must say I never have taken a paper to equal it for truth and felicity of expression; and I would not be deprived of it for many times its price. It serves as an interpreter of the Bible, in that it has solved many difficult questions satisfactorily to my mind which before were in doubt. And in addition to that I am much interested to see inserted in its columns letters from the brothers and sisters scattered abroad throughout the world, how they are holding on to "the faith once delivered to the Saints," this gives me new courage to contend more boldly with the adversaries of Christ in the maintainance of his blessed truth.

I am completely surrounded by scoffers and bigots—whose nature it seems to be to deride and persecute as many as call on the name of the Lord in truth, believing what the Scriptures explicitly teach. But I know that if they hate Christ they will so much the more hate his followers; therefore I fear not the storm and can only laugh at Satan's rage, while I cherish a resolution to stand up for Jesus, against wind and tide, and not do as many others who like to drift along with the current. If the truth is not worth standing for and defending, what is it worth? The professing masses of the day have not this truth, for they are contending for nothing of the sort. They bear no reproach suffer no shame or persecution, hence are destitute of godliness For Paul says, "They that will live godily in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." And well might our Savior say, "They are of the world, therefore speak they of the world." And as we are to know them by their fruits, I know that if they were Christians they would not persecute other Christians.

I thought a short time since when occasion called me to witness one of their socials, when the leading members of that society would get up and speak trying to excite the audience to laughter by comical speeches—the more folly they could produce the better they liked it. If this is Christianity, who is not religious?

From J. H. May, Benton Co. Ark.

I seize the present time to let you and as many others as may read this know that we have been and are still gathering a few faithful ones into the fold of our common Shepherd. They seem to be in good earnest and are always manifesting the fruits of the Spirit. We met last Lord's day, and twenty-two enrolled their names, and promised the Lord and one another to meet and worship until death or until our Lord comes.

South of here, where myself and Br. Covey have labored there are several baptised believers who will come and unite with us soon; and others that are in the condition of King Agrippa, almost persuaded to be Christians. We contemplate sending a delegate to the Kansas conference, with view of attaching our church to it.

Our cause meets with great opposition, when first presented, but as soon as the intelligent examine it they either fall in with it, or keep silence or withdraw their open attacks. The great lack is in public speakers. The calls are greater than myself and Br. Covey can fill, besides we are poor and have to support those dependent on us.

From D. L. Weaver.

Carelessness and Honesty:—While on a visit Eastward lately, through gross carelessness I left my pocketbook with all my money save a few cents lying on the counter in the Grand Trunk Ticket office at Detroit, and did not even miss it until evening, when to my surprise I found myself quite 200 miles from home without money, a very necessary commodity for a traveler. But having friends who are ever ready to help the needy I was provided for. On going back to the city two days later I thought it no hurt, though I had little hope, to inquire of the Ticket Agent. I told him my story, at the same time describing the money. He then threw down a wallet asking if it was mine. No. Then he handed me two more, asking the same question and and receiving the same answer. He then handed me another which looked very natural and upon opening it, I convinced him that it was mine. I therefore found my money through the honesty of an entire stranger. (Something that seldom happens to a traveler.) when you lose your money be sure and have an honest man find it.

From Isaac Adrian.

When I gave my last report of my labors in Iowa, I was sick at Boylan's Grove with the prevailing epidemic. My sickness and the severity of the weather prevented my meeting the appointment at Little Cedar. Will the brethren there excuse me on this account? I visited the church at New Hartford. They have over one hundred members and own a house of worship. I landed at New Hartford in the evening, found Judge Converse' residence and met a kind welcome. The Judge is away this winter attending the legislature. In this place I met a number of families to whom I preached the news of the coming kingdom thirty years ago in Beekmantown and Mooers New York. It was a pleasure to meet them after so many years, and find them still loving the appearing of Christ. I begun meeting as soon as possible, and had a good interest for eight days. I trust my labor there was not in vain.

I returned home the 16th and found I must remain at home a while, at least. I can say I love the Advent cause with all my heart, and am sorry I have done so little for it. Oh! how I wish I had never done anything to harm it. But God is good, and he will take care of his cause. I see the events rapidly transpiring which herald the coming One. I do not mean Napoleon. He has had no place in prophesy only as head of one of the ruling powers in the last of Rome. I am sorry so much has been said and printed by Advent ministers to make out Napoleon "the man of sin." And I see some of the brethren are getting as wild in their applications of historical prophecy as those who followed Napoleon to his grave. Dear brethren ROME is the geographical locality on which to fix your attention. 'Watch and be patient, God is directing this matter. It is not safe to anticipate his movements. Wait and you will see his salvation. This Advent proclamation is the Lord's, and all will see its importance shortly.

I desire to say to the brethren in Iowa, I thank you for your kindness. You have treated me as kindly as I could ask, in every field I have visited. I should like to continue my labors with you, but circumstances seem to call me home for a time. All letters for me should now be directed to Monticello, Wis.

Robert Wakcham, a new subscriber in Ohio says:

I believe in the second personal coming of Christ to raise dead men and to judge the world, and to set up his eternal kingdom. The reason why?—because we can compare this fact with God's word, and they agree. We have often thought we have great reasons for believing as we do that it is through Christ we must obtain life eternal. If he never comes, I never expect to see life.

IT HELPS a man to preach well, if he is punctually and generously paid, by the people to whom he ministers. It be may that no small amount of poor preaching, in these days, may be accounted for by poor pay. Ralph Waldo Emerson says: "When I asked an ironmaster about the slag and cinder in rail road iron, 'Oh,' he said, 'there is always good iron to be had; if there's cinders in the iron, it is because there are cinders in the pay!'"

Our Young Folks.

A Kiss for a Blow."

"I'll knock you down," cried Jemmie Jones,
Speaking to his sister:
He raised his fist and struck at her,
But happily he missed her.

"And I'll kiss you," said little Pet,
Running to her brother.
She threw her arms around his neck,
And so they kissed each other.

Dear children, would you know the way
Of true and happy living?
You must, like darling little Pet,
Be loving and forgiving.

—The Child's Paper.

Suspense about Suspenders.

When I was a well grown boy, being away from home for a vacation, I very naturally broke one of my suspenders. I immediately took possession of an extra pair that my father was using for another purpose, without so much as saying "by your leave." When he discovered it, he bade me return them to their former use. He then added, "I do not like to have you take possession of my things in this arbitrary way. It has already bred a habit in you. But I know that you need suspenders, and you can have them, when you are willing to ask for them."

But I had long cultivated a false independence and refused to ask properly for things I needed. I had fixed on a way of my own for getting helped at table, and instead of asking for things with an expression of thanks, I had resolved that a statement of my wants, as "I would like some butter," was as far as I could bring myself to go.

I could not, therefore, ask for the suspenders, and contented myself with the remaining one. It was, I assure you, a great annoyance to me to have my pants hung on me in that lop-sided manner, and a great grief to my father that I should be so obstinate.

About five weeks after this, my father had a plain talk with me about my folly, his anxiety to give me what I needed, and the wretched habit I was strengthening. Told me it would prevent my getting things I needed from God; for they could only be had by asking for them.

I frankly told him I hated to give in after I had held out so long. He only said, it was easier, than after I had held out longer. Still I was not ready. And as my one suspender was tearing off the top of my trousers, I changed it over to the other button. Father said I could not be allowed to tear my clothes in that manner, and sent me to get a tow string for another suspender. It cut my shoulder so bad for a week that I brought myself to say, when he had given me some money for another purpose, "I am sick of wearing these old strings, and I think it high time I had some decent suspenders. Can't I take this money and get some?" He simply said, "you know you can have them, when you frankly and squarely ask for them. But you know this hinting in a round about way is not what is required."

Then I got mad, and declared it was a mean shame, that I was an abused boy, with other sputterings of wrath that were in accordance with my state of temper.

About this time it became necessary to buy me a new suit of clothes. And I gave myself and my father the immense chagrin of trying them on before the dealer, with those old strings over my back. I tried my best to conceal them, but it was with very doubtful success. I felt like the boy with the fox under his cloak. I tried to keep my face straight, but it gnawed my very vitals.

Finally, I went to my father when he was asleep, and said, "Father?"

He opened his eyes and said, "well?"

"I would like some suspenders," said I. He paused a moment, and then said, "I think you might have phrased that request better, but you will find a pair in that upper drawer."

I went to it, and took out a nice new pair, that had been lying there, nearly all the time that I had been sawing my shoulders with those old strings. I felt heartily ashamed of myself. He had the thing I wanted already provided, was anxious I should enjoy it; grieved over my loss of comfort and temper, while I was keeping him and myself out of a pleasure.

I have since learned that God has blessings already provided, all sorts of suspenders. He yearns to give them to us, is sorry for our toiling and hurts; but we go on sawing our shoulders, tearing our tempers, losing infinite blessings, bearing infinite burdens, and grieving our Father, all because we will not ask for suspenders.

A Good Reputation to Have.

The little story I am going to tell you happened just before the war, when every one was very, very busy. Soldiers were enlisting and going away from almost every home in the land.

One young man had volunteered, and was expecting daily to be ordered to the seat of war. One day his mother gave him an unpaid bill with money and asked him to pay it. When he returned home at night, she said, "Did you pay that bill?"

"Yes," he answered.

In a few days the bill was sent in a second time.

"I thought," she said to her son, "that you paid this."

"I really do n't remember, mother, you know I've had so many things on my mind."

"But you said you did."

"Well," he answered, "if I said I did, I did."

He went away, and his mother took the bill herself to the store. The young man had been known in the town all his life, and what opinion was held of him this will show.

"I am quite sure," she said, "that my son paid this some days ago; he has been quite busy since, and has forgotten about it; but he told me that day he had, and says if he said then that he had, he is quite sure he did."

"Well," said the man, "I forget about it; but if he ever said he did, he did."

Was not that a grand character to have? Having once said a thing, that was enough to make others believe it, whether they remembered it or not."

I wish all boys in our land were as sure of a good reputation.—Christian Weekly.

Slang Talk by Young Ladies.

Young ladies have but little idea of the impoliteness and bad effect of the slang phrases often used in so-called polite society. An exchange says, in a word of advice to any who are partially or wholly addicted to it:

"You can have no idea how it sounds to ears unused or averse to it to hear a young lady say, when she is asked to go with you to some place, 'Not much!' or, if requested to do something which she does not wish, to hear her say 'Can't see it.'

"Not long ago I heard a young miss, who is educated and accomplished, in speaking of a young man, say that she intended to 'go for him!' And, when her sister asked her assistance at some work, she answered: 'Not for Jo!'

"Now, young ladies of unexceptional character and really good education fall into this habit, thinking it shows smartness to answer back in slang phrases; and they soon slip flippantly from their tongues, with a saucy pertness that is neither lady like nor becoming. 'I bet' or 'you bet' is well enough among men who are trading horses or land; but the contrast is startling and positively shocking to hear those words issue from the lips of a young lady. They seem at once to surround her with the rougher associations of men's daily life, and bring her down from the pedestal of purity to their own coarse level."

"BEAR ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ"—Some seem never to have looked into this direction of the Holy Spirit it is supposed they may have glanced in without seeing any special meaning. They love themselves sufficiently and are too busy to think much "about the law of Christ," or how they may fulfill it. The old motto, "every man for himself" pleases them more. See Gal. 0:0.

Conference Minutes

MICHIGAN.

SOUTHERN DISTRICT, Q. M.

The third Q. M. of the Southern District met at No. 6, Rives Preachers present—Elds. Preston, Babcock, Snook, Fox, and Branch, and Sr. R. Tuttle. Eld. J. V. Himes, on his way East, stopped and strengthened our hearts with words of good cheer.

Reports of preachers were encouraging. Br. P. Holler reported by letter: Had just closed a meeting of days; five were converted. The church at Assyria is prospering; two have been added to their numbers, others are expected. Churches reported by delegates were, Bath, Woodbridge and Rives. Reports good.

The following resolution was unanimously voted:

WHEREAS, We learn that Eld. J. V. Himes thinks to return and locate in our State again, therefore,

Resolved, That we welcome him as a minister and brother in Christ; and that we cordially invite him to labor among our churches as ever; and in the State as the way may open.

We had a good meeting. Peace, harmony, and love prevailed. C. FOX, Sec'y.

NORTHERN DISTRICT, Q. M.

The third Q. M. for the present year was held with the church in Hesperia, Feb. 14-16.

Business Committee—E. B. Scott, L. W. King, R. Burtenshaw. Devotional Committee—D. Weaver, S. Dudley, A. W. Lamson.

J. Bower, R. Burtenshaw, W. Wheeler, T. C Grundy, D. Weaver and Sr. M. E. King were present, and gave encouraging reports.

Hinton, Millbrook, Ashland and Hesperia churches reported prospering.

The church at Hinton is building a chapel. Hesperia will build a chapel the coming summer.

D. Weaver, of Hesperia, was received by a unanimous vote.

Voted, To have a three days meeting with the church in Ashland, commencing on Friday before the full moon in May.

This meeting was pronounced by all to be a good one. The congregations were very large, and the interest intense. The Lord blessed the word spoken. The church in Hesperia is much revived, and a deep impression for good is left on the community. Praise God. Br. and Sr. Seymour were with us An opportunity was given for all that felt so disposed to pay in something toward defraying the expenses of the meeting. Fifty dollars were laid on the stand.

About fifty persons sat down to the Lord's table and partook of the emblems of the broken body and spilled blood of our blessed Lord, whom we expect soon to meet when he comes to make up his jewels.

E. B. SCOTT, Sec'y.

KANSAS.

The Kansas A. C. M. Association held its first annual session at Bero, Cherokee Co., Feb. 18, and elected the following officers:

President, A. M. Sidwell; Vice President, Jesse Forkner; Secretary, Tenie Bozley; Treasurer, Warder Dunbar.

Business Committee—D. D. Hunter, chairman, Ernest Hohnsbeen and R. Forkner.

The Association will hold a special session at Bero the second Monday in May (12th), at which time a motion to amend its constitution as follows will be acted upon:

Proposed amendment. Art. IV. The Business Committee shall have power to dispose of the property, held by the Association at any time, as they think proper, for the benefit of the Advent cause in the State of Kansas.

TENIE BOZLEY, Sec'y.

WISCONSIN—Q. M.

Held at Gilmanton, Feb. 8. Meeting organized by appointing Eld. G. W. Turner, Chairman; R. E. Fuller, Clerk, and the following brethren for Business Committee: David Lewis, D. C. Loomis and W. C. Peck.

Voted, To hold four tent meetings in this part of this district sometime next summer, the exact place to be designated by the Business Committee Voted, That this Q. M. recommends the Annual State Conference to divide the State into four districts, and appoint a State Evangelist to hold three Quarterlies in each District each year.

On motion of the church at Williamsburgh, Br. David Lewis was recommended to use his gift among them, and the recommendation was sanctioned by the Conference.

R. E. FULLER, Sec'y.

The Q. M. at Gilmanton, Buffalo Co., began Feb. 7. Congregation full from the commencement. Four sleigh loads came in from Williamsburg, twenty-seven miles; two from Brunswick and one from Durand, about the same distance, and others from less distant points. One brother came over fifty miles on foot, from near Menomonee, and was so blessed that he said he was more than paid for his trouble. He said the people where he lived were in great darkness concerning the coming and kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. He felt anxious to have them enlightened, and would pay all the expenses of a tent meeting there. This was about the feeling of all those who waited for God's Son from heaven. There was a deep conviction resting on the minds of the believers present that we are doing up our last work; that soon, yes, very soon, what we now believe will be a present fact. He that is to come "will come and will not tarry."

None present (that I know of) believed in the '73 time; yet those I conversed with seemed to be strong on the following four points: (1) That the year is revealed in Daniel when the saints will be delivered; (2) that '75 seems to be the most probable time; (3) that the wise (or saints) will know it just before Jesus comes; and (4) there will be a time of trouble before we are delivered, and in that time of trouble the saints will not only pray night and day to be avenged of their adversaries, but will see eye to eye on the time, whether it is '73 or '75.

In our communion service a rich blessing seemed to rest upon all. Some eight or ten rose to ask the prayers of the people of God. We protracted the meeting two evenings, and then organized a church of eleven members, with good prospects.

There was a young Methodist preacher present who used to preach on that circuit, who did much good in removing prejudice by visiting among his own people. He has been employed this winter as a clerk in a dry goods store in Durand by Br. J. Borden, where he had access to books and tracts, and the reading of the Crisis which had thoroughly changed his views. I shall expect to hear good from him soon. I learned, also, that Br. Turner's labors have been much blessed. He is much beloved. P. W. HOUGH.

S. IOWA AND N. MISSOURI.

QUARTERLY MEETING.

Met Feb. 22, according to appointment, S. K. Gibson in the chair.

Eld N. C. Miller reported churches where he had been preaching, in a prosperous condition. Br. Adair reported a church organized in Decatur county of forty-three members. The following churches were received into the conference:

McKenly S. H., eight miles east of Unionville, Putnam Co. Mo., eight members Decatur Co. Iowa, known as the Harmal church, forty-three members.

Elds. N. C. Miller and J. F. Adair were received into the conference. Br. Adair made application for ordination, which was accepted. An application made for a letter for Br. D. O. Amos. The clerk was instructed to give the same.

Voted, To hold a campmeeting sometime during the coming summer.

Sabbath morning Br. Adair was ordained. Charge by N. C. Miller; right hand of fellowship by S. K. Gibson.

Br. Adair is a young man, and promises to be useful in the ministry. We need more such to preach the gospel, and point out the way of life and salvation. He intends to spend his time in the ministry in this part of the conference.

We had a pleasant and profitable meeting.

L. Z. LOVERIDGE, Sec'y.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, March 11, 1873.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
IS PUBLISHED BY THE
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.
Sent Three Months on trial for Thirty five cents.

The officers of the Association are as follows.
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON,
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD,
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK,
Treasurer—AMBROSE W. TUCKER.
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS,
A. S CALKINS.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE
N. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH,
A. E BABCOCK.

☞ Address all communications to ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES, Chicago.

☞ Give your Post Office address in full in every letter.

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for THE TIMES, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestion.

Business Department.

Special Notice.

Friends will please address all personal communications to me thus. William L. Himes, Chicago, Ill., marking them PERSONAL.

All communications for the paper should hereafter be addressed simply thus: "Advent Christian Times," Chicago, Ill

THE WESTERN RURAL.—To any one paying us $2.50, we will send the Western Rural, the popular and excellent Rural and Family Weekly of the West for one year, and credit one year's subscription paid to our own paper. The Western Rural, alone, is worth $2.50 per year, and every family in the West ought to have it. 11f

Whitmore's Immortality.

We desire to correspond with any friends who have a supply of this work on hand, and will spare us a few copies. Will any such please write and let us know how many they can let us have.

Notice.

There is an excellent point and location at Paoli, Wis. for a good physician. One that believes in saving life would be preferred. Correspond with P. W. Matts, Paoli, Wis. (323

The "Times" to Ministers.

We send THE TIMES to ministers of any denomination for one dollar a year—half price. Those who wish to send the paper to preachers can take advantage of this fact.

Hades.

We learn that Mr. Constable is about to publish his work on Hades, of which several chapters have appeared in THE TIMES, by subscription. The work will be issued in England. We will receive subscriptions and forward them to Mr. Constable at the rate of one dollar a copy. The money need not be sent until the book is ready. tf.

Job Work.

We are now prepared to do all kinds of job work with despatch, and in a satisfactory manner. Envelopes, Letter-Heads, Note-Heads, Bill-Heads, Cards of all kinds, Circulars, etc., etc. Friends at a distance from printing offices, and often close to them, will do well to get our figures before ordering work elsewhere.

Letters Received.

☞ ALL letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

L Kerr
A H Moulton
P W Matts
J Knights
A C Aldrich
A A Johnson
R Overturf
G W Lawrence
W W Wade
R L Scott
M Beck
S Marsh
C Fox
C F Howe
J Halcrow
R B Miller
J Earle
C Faulkner
G Holler
J North
B H Hall
I Rubie
M Mackie
A Goodwin
A Boult
H Randall
A Judd
J Rickard
W S Covey
Mrs Dr Ezbert
A A Catlin
A J Cottrell
G Dawson
J A Libbey
A G Dunning
D Conklin
I Adrian
S B Owen
P Montgomery
J Crawford
H A Stoddard
G Knell
W S Puthill
J W Reed
J Merrill
S J Beal
J W Bridge
U S Whitney
A P Moore
H Stoddard
P L Smith
E Feinogle
D Young
P F Willoughby
A Cairns
S R Kenny
J McClellan
C Stone
C Ridley
J J Healburn
M B Carey
J Higgins
C Richards
N P Hathaway
D M Schenck
M J Eggleston
F L Vandergor
I C Thomas
J S Hea
J A Young
W H Nichols
L F Hovey
J W Burritt
R V Philip
J M Baker
M B Ferrill
W H Cook
R Christopher
G Caldwell
B F Wise
C H Stouffer
G Wright

Publishing Fund.

Baltimore,	$11 00	S R Henry,	$2 00
J Halcrow,	1 00	J Crawford,	1 00
S Marsh,	1 00	P Montgomery,	1 00
I C Thomas,	5 00	Mrs A Boult,	1 00
J Higgins,	5 00	J North,	1 00

Book Notices, Etc.

OUR DIGESTION; or my Jolly Friend's Secret.

This is a new work on health, by Dr. Dio Lewis, Boston, Mass., which we have examined with interest. We have received a copy from B. Hannaford & Co., Publishers, 122 West Madison St., Chicago. It is sold by subscription. Agents wanted everywhere. We should judge it would obtain a ready sale.

Obituary.

DEAN.—Fell asleep in Jesus, at Mineral, Bureau Co., Ill., Feb. 24, Br. S. A. Dean: aged 48 years.

Br. Dean died of slow consumption, contracted in the army during the years '63 and '64. He was able to attend to his business most of the time until a few weeks before his death. He enjoyed the blessed hope of eternal life to be obtained at the coming of Jesus and the resurrection. The day but one before his death was one never to be forgotten by the friends present. Solemn yet glorious was the scene while by a triumphant faith he saw the glories of the New Jerusalem and Paradise of God, of which he spoke, and joined in prayer with such earnestness and power as the Spirit of God only can give. To one he remarked, When will these glories be enjoyed? himself answering, "When Jesus comes and the trumpet sounds." His closing moments were peaceful. The expression on his face in death was sweet, as was observed by many

Thus passed away the loving father of seven children, after giving them counsel and commending them and his dear companion to God, and the prayers of Christian friends, leaving one of the brightest and strongest evidences of the sustaining powers of the grace of God and the Christian's hope.

Is. 25: 7, 8 was used by the writer as a text for the occasion, to comfort the mourning ones and benefit the large number of sympathizing neighbors.

S. E. MABEY.

RIMA.—In Cresco, Iowa, Feb. 21, 1873, Sr. Esther Rima, wife of Eld. C. Rima.

Esther Storms was born in New York, Oneida Co., in the town of Lee, July 26, 1817. She became the dear partner of Br. Rima's life in 1830. Was a member of the M. E. church in 1837. Emigrated with her husband to Ohio, when with her husband she joined the "United Brethren in Christ." In 1857 they removed to their present home, Cresco. Last fall Br. Rima and the deceased went to Michigan to spend the winter with their friends; but she was taken down with the black measles, which compelled their immediate return home. With good care the most sanguine hopes were entertained; but contracting a cold, terminating in pleurisy and heart disease, the enemy proved too powerful for the physician's skill.

About eleven years ago she embraced the Advent faith, and was one of the members of the "Vernon Springs Advent church" at its organization. She is the first of the little flock that has been taken from us. In life she was a faithful, zealous Christian; a loving wife and tender mother. She knew that she was dying, and bade them all a long farewell, saying, I am now ready to go, and willing. Her last words were, "O! Father, Father!" and thus she fell on sleep.

WM. CHAPMAN.

Appointments.

ILLINOIS.

Oneida, services every Lord's day, at 10½ a. m. 7½ p. m. Sabbath school immediately after morning service. L. F. COLE, Pastor.

Preaching in Advent Mission Hall, 619 West Lake Street, every Sunday 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening D. R. & M. S. MANSFIELD.

Genoa, Oct. 27, and every other Sabbath until further notice. E. H. BURINGTON.

Byron, March 11-15.
Elida, March 16. C. C. MARSTON.

The first Q. M. of the New Rutland District will be held with the church at New Rutland, La Salle Co., commencing Thursday eve., March 20, and holding over the following Sabbath.

It is earnestly desired that there should be a general rally of the brethren and sisters from all parts of the district at this meeting. Come to labor for God and the salvation of the perishing.

Br. C. C. Marston will be with us to assist in preaching the Word.

Let all the preaching brethren be present so that the Conference may be fully and strongly organized. Time is short. Make a sacrifice, brethren, and come to the meeting.

A. LOTHROP.
W. T. BAKER.

Meetings at the Advent Christian chapel on Green St., near Madison, every Sunday, forenoon and evening. Preaching by Eld. F. Burr.

Prayer-meetings at the chapel on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Traveling brethren are invited to attend.

I will preach at West Point, Hancock Co., Saturday eve. previous and on Sunday eve. following the second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Antioch Chapel, near Denver, Hancock Co, at 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every second and fourth Sundays in each month, until further notice.

Howel S. H. Brown Co., 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. every third Sunday in each month, until further notice. GEO. W. HURD.

Hope S. H., Broughton, 11 a. m., and Center S H 3 p. m., July 26, and every two weeks.
ALICE E. RATHBUN.

Shabbona, Union church, 10½ a. m. Nov. 10, and once in two weeks, at same hour, until otherwise notified.

Johnson's Grove, 3 p. m. Nov. 17, and once in four weeks. L. H. DAVIS.

Amboy, Lee Co, preaching the second and fourth Sundays of each month.
C. C. MARSTON, Pastor.

MICHIGAN.

To the churches in Branch County, Michigan, I would say that my appointments for the year 1873 will be as follows:

East Gilead, Jan. 5, 10 a. m, and every two weeks after.

California, Jan. 19, 10:30 a m and every two weeks after.

Algansee, every Sunday 2:30 p m and evening. Prayer meeting every Wednesday evening.
J. R. PRESTON, Pastor.

Grand Lodge, in German language, every Sunday at 10 a. m. In English 2½ p. m.

Delta, every other Sunday at 7 p. m.

Avery S. H., 3 miles north of Grand Lodge, every other Sunday at 7 p. m.
A. H. P. WILSON

Pt. Sanilac, Advent chapel, every Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.

Lexington, Everett's Hall, every Sunday evening 7½ o'clock. GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

Lexington Lake Shore Advent Chapel, 3 miles north of village, Sabbath, Jan. 26, at 3 p. m., and every two weeks after.

Lexington Ridge, White S. H., Feb. 2, at 3 p. m. and every two weeks after.

Marlette, Advent Chapel, Tuesday and Wednesday eve. Feb. 11 and 12, at 7 p. m., and every 4 weeks till further notice.
GEO. WRIGHT, Pastor.

WISCONSIN.

The brethren at LaCrosse, Wis. have procured a Hall, fitted for preaching services; and preaching brethren traveling this way are cordially invited to visit with, and discourse to us.

Call upon Brn. Bracket or Reese, opposite corners of Twelfth and Market Streets.
A. J. MARSH, Sec'y.

Celaburgh, eve. Feb. 1, and once in four weeks.

Norris S. H., 11 a. m., Feb. 2, and once in four weeks.

Pine River, eve. Feb. 2, and once in four weeks.
ANSON BROWN.

MINNESOTA.

At our last annual conference a resolution was passed for the evangelist to hold two meetings in each district every quarter, so I have concluded to hold the first with the church at Winnona, Friday eve., March 21, and hold over Sunday; the Second at Utica, March 28, and over Sunday. Will the brethren at each place please make the necessary arrangements for the meetings? I hope to see a general rally.
GEO. W. MILLER, Evangelist.

First Q. M. for the Hutchinson District will be held with the Silver Lake church, Friday eve., April 4, and over Sunday.

Second Q. M. will be held at Cokato Station, Friday eve., April 11, and over Sunday. Let all the friends rally. GEO. W. MILLER.

Shelbyville, at J. Cummings' Saturday eve., March 15.

Birch S. H., Allen neighborhood, 10:30 a. m. and 2:30 p. m., Sunday, March 16.

Monticello, Wright Co., 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday, March 23. S. C. WELLCOME.

Ridgeway, Feb. 8 and 9, and once in four weeks.
P. MITSON.

The third Q. M. for the Southern District of Wisconsin will be held at Montfort, Grant Co., commencing Friday eve., March 14th, and holding over Lord's Day. We hope for a general attendance of the brethren throughout the district, and the preaching brethren in particular are requested to be there. Let all come praying that the blessing of our heavenly Fathey may rest upon the meeting, and that much good may be done in the name of Jesus.
GEORGE HOWARD.

IOWA.

We, the undersigned, members of various churches of the Iowa Christian and the Iowa Advent Christian Conferences, realizing the obligations we are under to God and his truth and his people, and realizing, too, that in our present divided condition we cannot possibly accomplish as much good as we might if all the elements among us were heartily united in concerted action and with undivided front, do hereby propose and call a convention, to be composed of two delegates from each church, to convene in the city of Manchester, April 15, to take into consideration the matters which now divide us, with a view to an arrangement which shall once more unite us in a single, undivided conference organization.

Signed:—T. E. Cook, J. Ingalls, J. Gildersleve, Dr. Banton, and many others.

Preaching in Thompson's Hall, Delmar, Clinton Co., Jan. 5, and every two weeks until further notice. C. W. PITCHER.

Manchester, the first and third Sabbaths of each months, at 3 and 7 p. m
J. RIDLEY, Pastor.

Q. M. of the First District of the N. W. Missouri and S. W. Iowa Conference will be held at Troublesome Creek, six miles east of Atlantic, Cass Co., Iowa, commencing Friday eve., March 14. Brn. Hubbell and Nokes will be expected to come and help at this meeting. We also expect Eld. Wm. McCulloch. This is a good field, and the truth has a firm hold. Come, brethren, praying and ready for work. WM. MORPHY, Sec'y.

Romig S. H., near Milford, Feb. 2, and every fourth Sunday.

Waveland, Pottawatamie Co., Feb. 9, and once in four weeks.

Troublesome Creek, Feb. 16, and every fourth Sunday.

Let the brethren circulate these appointments fully. WM. MORPHY.

The Third Q. M. of the Iowa Christian Conference will be held with the Little Cedar Church, Chickasaw Co., commencing Friday eve., March 14. All are invited to attend.
N. F. EGGLESTON, Sec'y.

MISSOURI.

There will be a special meeting of the Southern Iowa and Northern Missouri Conference at McKinley S. H., eight miles east of Unionville, Putnam Co., Mo., March 14 and onward.
N. C. MILLER.

The next Q. M. of the Third District of the N. W. Mo. and S. W. Iowa Conference will be held with the Empire church, De Kalb Co., Mo., four miles south-west of King City, commencing Friday eve., March 28. We wish all the churches in the district to be represented.
JOHN SCARCE, Sec'y.

Walt S. H., three miles north of Unionville, Putnam Co., Saturday eve., March 15, and onward. S. BALDWIN.

NEW YORK.

Saratoga Springs; meetings every Sunday in the Lower Town Hall, corner of Broadway and Lake Avenue, at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday School and Bible-class directly after morning service.

Prayer meeting every Thursday eve., at the residence of the pastors, 213 Broadway, nearly opposite Town Hall.

WM. A. & M. L. DURAND.

CANADA.

The Advent church at Montreal, holds regular meetings every Sabbath, at Temperance hall, 6 Blenny St.

JOSEPH LUTRELL, Sec'y. 237, St. Joseph St.

NEW YORK.

The Eastern District will (D. V.) hold its next Q. M. with the church in Alton, Thursday eve., March 13, and over Sunday.

Alton may be reached by the Lake Shore or the Sodus-Point and Southern R. R. Those coming by the N. Y. Central R. R. will change cars at Newark. Let us have a full attendance. Pray for this meeting, and come praying.

N. B.—Those having a legal interest in the Wayne County Tent are requested to be present to signify their wishes as regards its disposition the coming season, (time continuing.)

WM. E. BROWN, Sec'y.

The Second Q. M. of the Southern District will be held with the church at Springwater, in connection with their church Q M., March 29 and 30. We hope every believer will remember this meeting and make a special effort to attend. Each church should appoint delegates and take up the quarterly collection. And where there is no church let each feel the responsibility of the work and come up to this gathering. Let there be a general rally in this district.

H. A. BROWN, Sec'y.

Advertisements.

List of Books, Tracts, etc., kept on sale at the Advent Christian Times office.

THE COMING EARTHQUAKE, By D. T. Taylor. 25 Cents.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c. By D. T. Taylor.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—Unabridged, $5. by express. Condensed, sufficiently full for ordinary purposes, by mail, $1 75.

THE BIBLE TEXT-BOOK; or, The Principal Texts relating to the Persons, Places, and Subjects occuring in the Holy Scriptures. With maps and useful tables. 45c.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: with engravings, maps, and tables. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

BIBLE DICTIONARY: by Smith & Barnum. The best abridgment of Smith's larger work. Leather $6. cloth $5. By express.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $12 by express.

ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORDance. With Greek and English index. $5 by express.

ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Liddell & Scott. A standard work. $7 50. by express.

THE BIBLE SOLUTION of The Phenomena of Modern Spiritualism. By N. Field, M. D. 10c.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock, $2 50, Post-paid.

THE BIBLE TRIUMPHANT; being a reply to a work entitled 144 self-contradictions to the Bible, published by Andrew Jackson Davis. By Mrs. H. V. Reed. 30c. post-paid.

ADVENT KEEPSAKE; or, a Bible text for each day of the year. 45c, post-paid.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Paper, 20c. Postage, 3c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY of God; and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 12c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC meetings. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 8c. a hundred.

THE FIRST-DAY SABBATH; with a review of Andrews' pretended History of the Sabath By T. M. Preble. 471 pp. $1.

THE BEREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of Scriptures in various versions, on the most important subjects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added History, Statistics and Tables. Cloth, $2; leather 2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By Wellcome and Good. 460 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATTHEW, 24 and 25, 20c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen. The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one adress, post-paid, for $4 00.

LAST DAY TOKENS: by S. S. Brewer. 35 cts.

FUTURITY; by Wm. Sheldon. 20 cts.

THE INDEX BOOK MARK; 25c a dozen.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. Nothing so good on this topic. Cloth $1. Paper, 50c. 3 copies for $1, post paid.

GOOD TIDINGS; a general view of Advent doctrine. By an Association of Authors. 426 pages. Cloth 65c, Paper 40c. Post paid.

THE NATURE AND DURATION OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT: By Henry Constable, Prebendary of Cork, 40c. Post paid.

THE FAITH OF ST. PAUL; showing it to have been neither Pharisaic nor Sadduceean, but Hebrew. By L. C. Collins. 10c.

THE STATE OF THE DEAD; a Discussion between N. Field, M. D. and T. P. Connolly, Esq. pp. 300. 50c. Post Paid.

THE JUBILEE HARP. $1. $9 a dozen.

HADES AND SHEOL; By L. C. Collins. The best published exposition of the parable of Dives and Lazarus. 10c.

THE ADVENT MINSTREL; a choice collection of spiritual songs. Flexible cloth, 25c. $2.15 a dozen. Paper, 15c. $1.50 a dozen.

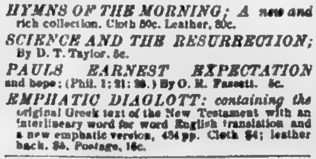
HYMNS OF THE HARP; Cloth, 75c, Leather $1.

HYMNS OF THE MORNING; A new and rich collection. Cloth 50c. Leather, 80c.

SCIENCE AND THE RESURRECTION; By D. T. Taylor. 5c.

PAULS EARNEST EXPECTATION and hope; (Phil. 1: 21: 26.) By O. R. Fassett. 5c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT: containing the original Greek text of the New Testament with an interlineary word for word English translation and a new emphatic version, 484 pp. Cloth $4; leather back. $5. Postage, 16c.



In its new form—16 large quarto pages—adorned with beautiful engravings, is now offered to subscribers with the choice of four beautiful Chromos, for $1.50; or with a choice Lithograph or Book, for $1.25 or for only $1.10 without any Premium. Only $1 10 in clubs of ten without any premium. One copy free, one year to the agent sending a club of ten, besides the regular cash commission or premiums; or one copy free as a premium for three subscribers. Send for a sample copy (sent free) and see our list of valuable Premiums and cheap outfit of Chromos, Lithographs, &c, offered very low to those who will act as agents. Write now before you forget it, to

H. A. KING & CO., 14 Murray St., New York.

For The National Agriculturist and Bee Journal, and one chromo and THE TIMES, both one year for $2 20. Address W. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE CHRISTIAN:

A LARGE, LIVE, MONTHLY, RELIGIOUS, Family Paper, containing anecdotes sketches, records of Providences and answers to prayer, true stories, poetry, music, etc. No sectarianism controversy, politics, puffs, pills, patent medicines novels or continued stories, allowed in its columns.

Each subscriber receives a large and splendid Bible reader's map, free. This map exhibits not only Palestine, but all Bible Lands. It is printed on a sheet, 20x30 inches, is beautifully colored, and contains—

(1) View of the Land of Canaan, with its valleys, mountains, rivers and lakes, as seen at a glance from Pisgah, where Moses stood to behold it, before he died. (2) Jerusalem and its Environs, the holy places, valleys, streams, pools; "the mountains round about Jerusalem," etc. (3) St. Paul's journeys, and the world as known to the ancient Hebrews. (4) A view of Jerusalem, as seen from Olivet where Jesus beheld the city and wept over it. (5) Map of Palestine, "from Dan to Beersheba," giving the inheritances of the different tribes of Israel, colored separately. (6) Peninsula of Mount Sinai, and the journeys of Israel from Egypt to the Promised Land. (7) A Chart of the seasons, months, productions, weather, and temperature of Palestine.

Besides all these, the map contains the ancient and modern names of all known places; the heights of the mountains; and references to the texts of Scripture where the different places are mentioned

This map is given to subscribers for The Christian.

Terms—in advance: with the map on paper, beautifully colored. One Dollar a year; with the map varnished and mounted on rollers, a Dollar and a Quarter.

Four copies of The Little Christian, a child's paper, to one address, sent at the same rate as one copy of The Christian.

Ten thousand agents wanted to get subscribers for this map and The Christian.

Honest, intelligent, energetic men, women and children, can have pleasant and profitable employment, without risk or capital. For specimens and instructions, address H. L. HASTINGS,
30 Hanover St., Boston, Mass.

☞ The Times and Christian one year for $3.40. With map on paper, $3.70. With map on rollers, $3.95. Address W. L. HIMES,
25 West Lake St., Chicago.

500,000 SUBSCRIBERS WANTED.

The new volume of SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY will present a more brilliant array of contributors, a wider and more thorough discussion of the topics treated in its editorial departments, finer illustrations, and more uniformly good printing, than any which has preceded it. The list of contributors just published contains nearly one hundred of the brightest names known to our literature. Among the features of special interest will be Dr. Holland's splendid serial, "Arthur Bonnicastle," also a series of brilliantly illustrated papers by Edward King, under the title of "The Great South," which will be alone worth the price of the Monthly. There will be also entertaining papers "About Authors, their Friends, Whims, and Ways." Papers on "The Decoration of American Homes." "Sketches, with Portraits, of Living American Writers." There will be Descriptive Articles, Tales of Travel and Adventure, the choicest Poems, the most Brilliant Essays, Editorials, Reviews, and Art Critiques. Departments relating to Home and Society, Nature and Science, and Culture and Progress, &c., &c., presenting nearly 2000 pages of the choicest illustrated literature by the best writers in the English language.

"Scribner's Monthly" has obtained something more than national recognition.

An eminont English author, in a note to the Publishers, says: "It is incomparably better than any magazine I have come across."

It claims to be "the foremost magazine of its class in the world."

Subscription Price $4.00 a year, payable in advance. November and December numbers sent FREE to all subscribers for 1873.

SCRIBNER & CO., 654 Broadway, N. Y.

EVERGREENS— SPRING! 1873.

	Per doz.	100.	1000.
Arbor Vitæ, American, 3 to 4½ ft.	$3 00	$20
Balsam Fir, 1½ to 2 ft.	3 60	25
Balsam Fir, 1 to 1½ ft.	2 00	15	$150
Hemlock Spruce, 25c. each.
White Pine, 2 to 3 ft.	3 50	25	200
White Pine, 1½ to 2 ft.	2 50	15
Snowball, 4 to 6 ft.	3 00	18
Wigelia Roses, 25 to 50c. each.
Peonies, (good assortment),	1 50	10
Cherry Trees, Early Richmond, 20 to 35c. each, good size.
Asparagus, Conover's Colossal, 2 year roots,		2

Flowering Almond, Japan Quiné, Lilacs, Phloxes, Grass Pinks, Iris, Spireas, Dialetria, Exemia, Lilies, Deutzia, Roses, &c, CHEAP.

EVERGREENS—CHEAP IN LARGE LOTS.

Also a Small Lot of Apple Trees,

Two Hundred Barrels Cider Vinegar—very fine.
A nice Lot of Boiled Cider and Apple Jelly.

For years there has been a want of screens, windbreaks or shelters, for the comfort of man and beast, and also for the security of gardens and orchards.

Of late this want is almost universally felt; and our Horticultural Societies are showing more interest in it than in any one other department.

A screen of Evergreens on the west side of a house, or cattle yard, or anywhere else, will more securely stop the force of that rough, sweeping wind, and give better protection than any board fence or row of buildings. I mean what I say.

I have raised these Evergreens to encourage screen setting, and will sell them for half the common price, so that you may not stop your purchase when you have filled your yards with ornament.

H. N. BLISS, Buda, Ill.

[n31tf]

The Bible Banner.

THIS PAPER IS EDITED BY
ELDS. JOHN COUCH, WILLIAM SHELDON,
A. A. PHELPS.

Published monthly, at $1 a year, with a choice book, or fine lithograph engraving, given to each subscriber. Furnished to subscribers of THE TIMES three months free, or both one year for $2.75, with a book or engraving free. All orders for the Banner and TIMES should be addressed to W. L. HIMES, 25 West Lake St., Chicago, Ill. All orders for sample copies (sent free) or for the Bible Banner ALONE, should be addressed to H. A. KING, 14 Murray St., New York.

WRITING INK.

We take pleasure in commending THOMAS' INK to all our friends. It is manufactured by L. H. Thomas, M. D., of Reading, Mich. Our teacher at Norwood Park says it is the only ink he can use in the winter. It is undoubtedly the best ink in the market. For the use of those who do not live where they can order of Dr. Thomas, we add the following names of prominent stationers who keep said ink for sale:

New York city—M. F. C. Marsh, 80 John street.
Boston—H. T. Johnson & Co., 13 Washington street.
Cleveland, O.—Rawson, Evans & Co.
Detroit, Mich.—E. B. Smith & Co.
Jackson, Mich.—C. G. Parkhurst & Co.
Ann Arbor, Mich.—John Moore.
Kalamazoo, Mich.—Roberts & Hillhouse.
Watertown, N. Y.—S. Huntington.
Brattleboro, Vt.—Cheney & Clapp.
Winooski, Vt.—W. L. Greenleaf.
Hartford, Ct.—J. B. Stone.
Troy, N. Y.—P. J. Dooley.
Chicago—Wm. L. Himes.
And by many other dealers throughout the country.
518 L. H. THOMAS, Reading, Mich.

GERMAN TRACTS

On the Speedy Coming of Christ.
Resurrection of the Dead in Christ.
Nature and Destiny of Man.
Rich Man and Lazarus.
Destruction of the Wicked.
Soul of Man, Etc.

LOUIS REIMER,
1005 Chestnut St. (up stairs) Philadelphia, Pa

Advent Christian Times.

"Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

VOL. X.---NO. 38. CHICAGO, APRIL 22, 1873. WHOLE NO. 469.

Advent Christian Times.

Contents of This Number.

First Page.

"Three Days and Three Nights"; Book Religion, H. V. Reed; Dying of Propriety, H. W. Beecher.

Second Page.

Behold the Man, (poetry); The Abomination Set Up, N. H. Barbour; The Gift of Power, M. D. W.

Third Page.

Wearing Mourning, Mrs. H. V. Reed; "A Good Man," A. H. T. Wilson; I Shall be Satisfied, H. V. Reed.

Fourth Page.

Let the Light Shine; "Behold the Bridegroom Cometh"; Crowning Disembodied Spirits; Napoleon; Ministers Needed; "Soul Death."

Fifth Page.

A Proposed Union; News of the Week.

Sixth Page.

Plain Talk on Usury; Letters from F. Burr, S. C. Wellcome, N. N. Thompson, J. C. Smith, J. T. Russell, B. J. Goodwin, J. Powell, and E. H. Burington.

Seventh Page.

Letters from P. W. Hough, E. S. Burril, M. E. Ford, W. Weaver, and G. G. Godfrey; Prophetic Promises; The Lady-Bug and the Ant, (poetry); "It is Too Late Now, Pa"; Robbie "Washes Muslins"; Book and Tract List; New Works Just Published.

Eighth Page.

Business Department; Notices; Appointments; Advertisements.

"Three Days And Three Nights."

"An Inquirer" thus states his perplexity in reference to the statement that Christ should be "three days} and three nights in the heart of the earth:" Josephus tells us that Christ was crucified on the 24 of April, and arose on the 5th. We keep good friday as that day, and the first day of the week (Sunday) as the day on which he rose. How does this correspond with what Christ says, "For as Jonah was three days and three nights in the whale's belly so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth? Is Josephus correct, and do we keep the right days? If we keep the right days, how could he have been 'three days and three nights in the earth?"'

We can reduce this to two questions, viz:

1. Was Christ crucified on Friday, and did he rise on the Sabbath-day (our Sunday)?

2. If so, how could he have been three days and three nights in the grave?

We proceed, therefore, to answer these questions.

1. As to the day of Christ's crucifixion. We use Friday and the Sabbath for the sake of covenience, meaning thereby the day before and the day after the old Jewish Sabbath, or the sixth and the first day of the week. The only difficulty with which "An Inquirer" has to contend on this point, is the conflict, as he says, between the testimony of Josephus and the commonly received view. The common opinion is that Jesus was crucified on Friday and rose on Sabbath (Sunday). "An Inquirer" says that Josephus stated that he was crucified on Thursday. This difficulty disappears when we assure "An Inquirer" that to be the best of our knowledge Josephus does not say that Jesus was crucified "on the 2d of April." So far as we know there is only one paragraph, of fifteen or twenty lines, about Jesus in the whole of Josephus' works. In this paragraph he says: "And when Pilate the suggestion of the principal men among us, had condemned him* to the cross, those that loved him at the first did not forsake him; for he appeared unto them alive again, the third † day The dates as thus given in our edition are at the bottom of the page, April 3d and 5th, and not 2d and 5th, and were placed there by the editor and not by Josephus. Josephus simply says on the third day, which accords with the opinion, and is in harmony with Jewish modes of reckoning, if Jesus was crucified on Friday and rose on our Sabbath. We shall, therefore accept the commonly received opinion without endeavoring further to establish it, and hense proceed to solve the second question.

2. If Jesus was crucified on Friday and arose on our Sabbath, how could it be said that he was "three days and three nights in the heart of the earth?" 1) Let us examine the various passages in which reference is made to the time that Christ was to remain in the grave. In Matthew 15: 21, the Savior says that he is to be "killed, and raised again the third day." Parallel to this is Mark 6: 13, "And be killed, and after three days rise again." Also Luke 6: 22, "And be slain, and be raised the third day." In Mat[illegible]: 23, the Savior again foretells [illegible]eath and resurrection thus: "A[illegible] they shall kill him, and the third [illegible] he shall be raised again." This Mark records 9: 31, as follows: "And after that he is killed, he shall rise again the third day."

These texts are all from the lips of Christ, and relate to the period of time that he was to remain in the grave, or remain in a state of death. They must therefore agree with the statement, also from his lips, that he was to remain "three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." In Christ's mind, therefore, "three days and three night" were no longer than from the time of his death until the "third day." If, therefore, until the "third day" be from Friday until the morning of our Sabbath, so must that period have been known as "three days and three nights."

Again, Jesus said on a certain occasion, as reported by Matthew, that he should be "raised again the third day." But Mark reports this same saying in these words: "And after three days rise again." Luke agrees in his terms with Mathew. From this it is evident that whatever form of expression the Savior used, that of Mark or that of Matthew and Luke, they are equivalent in the duration of time that they designate. Hence "the third day," "after three days," and "three days and three nights," cover the same period of time. 2). We shall now further inquire whether in the time of Christ, and before his time such as from Friday at 12 o'clock or 3 o'clock until Sabbath morning was called "three days and three nights." That it was so we may infer from the fact that when Christ referred to the period of time from his death to his resurrection he said first it would be "three days and three nights," and afterwards twice said that it should be on the third day." Now "the third day" from Friday is our Sabbath, just as eighth day from any one is the next day of that name. So that in couhting days in this way we always count in the day from which and the day to which.

We have further proof of this mode of reckohing, making from Friday to our Sabbath "three days and three nights," in other parts of Scriptures. In Gen. 40: 13, Joseph, in interpreting the dream of Pharaoh's chief butler, said, "The three branches are three days, yet within three days shall Pharaoh lift up thine head." And yet this occured on the third day, so that the three days were only on, whole day, part of two days, and two nights. In the light of this passage let us also read 1 Sam. 30: 12, 13: "For he had eaten no bread, nor drank any water, three days and three nights. * * * My master left me, because three days ago I fell sick.', In Joseph's interpretation we learn that three days and the third day are the same. Again, we read 2 Chron. 10: 5, 12: "Come again after three days. All the people came * * * on the third day." Here "after three days" is the same as "on the third day:" In Esther 3: 16. Esther directed Mordecai and the Jews to fast three days, night and day, or three days and three nights, and declared that she would do the same; and then after three days and three nights fasting she would go before the king. But she went into the king's presence "on the third day." (Esther v. 1.) These various passages clearly prove that "three days and three nights" included any part of the first day, the whole of the following night, the next day and its night, and any part of the succeeding or third day.

To the same effect is the testimony of Jewish authorities. Thus, in the Jerusalem Talmud, cited by Lighfoot, it is said: "A day and night together make a gohnah, and any part of such a period is counted as a whole." R. Eliazar ben Azariah says: A day and a night make an onah and any part of an onah is as the whole." Others claimed that an onah was either a day or a night, that is, any part of the twenty-four hours: but the view of Azariah generally prevailed, and especially, as R. Ismael says, that a part of an onah is computed for the whole.

Another important fact will cast some light on this question. The Hebrews frequently called a day an evening-morning, as Daniel does (8: 14,) though we have it simply day; and the Greeks termed a day nuchthemeron (night-day). A night-day, then is twenty-four hours, but as a part is often put for the whole three night-days might be only the period that Christ was dead. Moreover, the death of Christ took place the latter half of the first day, as the Jews reckoned their day from evening to evening; and he was dead the most important part of the first night-day, the whole of the second night-day and fully one-half of the third night-day. Three night-days, a part being put for the whole, can easily be added up to make three night-days, or three nights and days, or three nights and three days. To say Then that Christ was dead "three days and three nights," was according to Jewish modes of expression the same as to say he was dead until the third day.—Church Advocate.

---

* April 3, A. D. 33.

† April 5.

Book Religion.

BY H. V. REED.

We have often heard of book farmers, and of book doctors, but it seldom occurs to us that there is more or less book religion. That men should square their lives by the teachings of the word of God, and believe and practice only those principles enunciated in the scripture of truth, is freely conceded; but that we may have nothing beyond a mere legal faith, or an outward form of obedience, is also possible. Men are quite apt to take on a form of religion that best suits their organization, and to appropriate that class of truths, which agrees with their feelings and education. This will in a measure account for the different tests imposed upon men by the creed makers, and Babel builders. Each man has some one truth more precious to him than all things else beside, and that particular truth must be pushed into the front and made the all important point of salvation. We know of a minister who is a man of talent, and a good Bible student, and yet he has been baptised six times already and perhaps is not through yet. "Divers washings," are all right when viewed in the light of hygienic principles, but so many washings to fulfill the command to "arise and be baptised," hardly comports with the law of the ordinance. Perhaps Naaman's seven dippings may be quoted as a precedent, but that will hardly justify the conduct of our brother, whose washings are too far apart to claim the type.

This case is a good illustration of that whole class who expect to be saved by virtue of their legal obedience. If there were no other side to the gospel than that of an outward conformity then indeed the attempt to be technically right on the statute book would be excusable; but there is an inner life, and a moral culture which must have the precedence. If we were to be judged by the statute alone, our case would be hopeless; but mercy comes in and shields us in the hour of need. A mere book religion is not enough. The gospel must be planted deeply in the moral nature; its light must shine out in noble deeds and pure devotion. The old rough nature must be reformed, and the whole being must be permeated with those truths which shall enlighten the intellect, expand the affections, and build up a better manhood. When a man takes hold of a system of religion which dwarfs the moral nature, kills out the devotional sentiments, and drys up the fountains of charity, you may rest assured that it is not from heaven. It may be found in the creeds and tortured out of the books, but it comes not from the gospel of the "ever blessed God." The world has too much religion such as it is. Reduce the quantity and increase the quality, would be a good maxim. Men who can prove they are right, by the book, doctrinally, may be far below the moral standard. Mint, anise and cummin, are well enough in their places, but judgment, mercy and truth, must hold the sway and rule the whole dominion of the new creation in Christ Jesus.

There are those who are so far given to the legal character of religion, that they live and move, hope and pray under the Mosaic economy. With them the Seventh d[illegible] is the Sabbath; the ten comma[illegible]hundered from Sinai are all sufficient, and yet they neither enforce love to God or man. Others seem to rest on the commission "Believe and be baptised." When this is done the ends of faith are attained, the law is fulfilled, and Christian maturity is reached; whereas it is only the planting; the growth and ripening are beyond; and the harvest is the end, beyond which gleams the crown. Then all the fruits are gathered into the garner. The Christian system embraces sowing, growing and reaping; a beginning, process, and an end. It develops an inner and outer life, both of which must be inwrought with the whole being. Then we shall stand forth in the purposes of the Divine Father, as the heirs of promise, and worthy of the "WELL DONE."—Restituton.

Dying of Propriety.

BY H. W. BEECHER.

The prayer-meetings of the church should be the most nourishing of all our meetings. They are spoilt because men think they must introduce so much propriety, they leave every drop of juice behind them.

They must not smile, they must not see anybody. The minister must be as solemn as a statue of marble, and everybody little marbles around him. It must be still. Then the minister reads a chapter and doles out a hymn. They have a sad prayer, a few exhortations, another hymn and a prayer. The children don't like to go to prayer-meeting, and that is total depravity.

Suppose I have a spark. I cut down an oak-tree, take the wood dripping with sap, and bring my spark to this green wood and try to kindle a fire. I am lucky if I get a smoke. Can you develop feeling upon any subject, when you put people into conditions that preclude the possibility of feeling? after the meeting, people gather together and chat. One man says something, then another, and another, and that is the only true meeting. These very men had been perfectly silent before. How is it men neglect the genial, familiar element in the prayer-meeting? Woe to the man who affects wit; and woe to the man who has wit and humor in him and does not serve the Lord with it. You must serve the Lord with all that is in you. Say to wit and humor, "You may put on your benevolent hat, and do people good. There are tears enough and sorrow enough, without your withholding the cheer God gave you to bring." All that was in me was converted to the Lord, when I gave myself to him. Men believe so much in the necessity of propriety in religious service, that they never do anything. They don't think; they merely endure. They go into meeting, and they are not the same creatures. Outside, they are full of aptitudes of every kind, but in meeting they all sit still; they exercise the grace of patience, and not any other grace. We need the help of these social and auxiliary feelings. We must have more versatility of feeling, from all the arts of a man's nature. Some men say, this deep sense of sin, responsibility and duty tend to make great Christians and grand natures. I don't know about it. I never saw a great many such natures anywhere. Take care of the bottom first. The lost sheep, the poor, the feeble, the scattered, must be thought of first. A meeting full of social feeling and love will develop more moral and religious feeling than any other. Religious feeling in the household is not distinct from daily life [illegible] but each hour the tru[illegible] will try to carry out the spirit of Christian life. Persons who live in this way, while taking care of their hosehold, can fill all the sphere full of golden light, and they will get a more precious glimpse of glory, will look out from the moutain of transfiguration oftener, than if they go afar and apart to meet the Lord.

Behold the Man.

"Behold the Man!" so Pilate drew
To Jesus, crowned with thorns, the view:
O Christian, be the words thy spur,
Thoughts of the Man Divine to stir.

Behold the Man in whom there lay
Hid, not extinct, the Godhead's ray;
Yet who forebore the throne on high,
For thee to toil, and groan, and die.

Behold the Man whose sufferings here
Stretched from the cradle to the bier,
And stamped so deep earth's woe and shame
As gives the Man of Sorrows name.

Behold the Man, by men unprized,
Scorned and rejected and despised;
And thence when men condemn or shun,
See in thy fate companion won.

Behold the Man who deigned to feel
Insults and death for human weal;
Who wept with women at the grave,
Then entered that he thence might save.

Behold the Man who, in thy form,
Bore of the wrath divine the storm;
And on the cross, in frame and soul,
Endured, to bring thee grace, the whole.

Behold the Man, once child of earth,
Owning in heaven his mortal birth;
And think, when Jesus intercedes,
That then thine Elder Brother pleads.
—Sunday at Home.

The Abomination "Set Up."

BY N. H. BARBOUR.

The idea which has obtained among certain writers, that the Vandals in Africa was one of the 'three horns' plucked up by the Papacy, in order that the Papacy might get a footing in Rome, is so far-fetched as to cause a smile with one who can think outside of a particular groove.

If the Vandals, in Africa, and the Goths who overcame Italy for about sixty years, were the two of the 'three horns referred to in the prophecy, then must we give up the position that the little horn of Dan. 7 refers to the Papacy: although that power, and that alone, has filled the picture.

If we call Justinian the 'little horn, we run into difficulty. Because, first: the 'little horn' 'wears out the saints'; 'speaks great words'; 'thinks to change times and laws'; which 'times and laws' are given into his hands for a time, times, and the dividing of time. And beyond all that, 'I beheld, and the same horn made war with the saints and prevailed against them until the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom.' Now Justinian did not do that, but the Papacy has, and is accomplishing that work.

Again: 'If Justinian was the little horn, then are we driven to another absurd conclusion: that the little horn is 'the dragon' of Rev. 12. For it is the dragon who gives his seat to the 'forty and two months' beast. And Justinian did conquer Rome and give it into the hands of Catholocism.

Some have gone so far as to claim that Justinian was 'the man child caught up to God and to his throne.' (Rev. 12:5.) But I believe no one has yet claimed that he was both, the child born of the woman, and also the dragon that stood before the woman, to destroy himself as soon as he was born; though perhaps even this would be no difficult matter to digest, if it were a part of some cherished theory.

Let us look at facts for a little, and let theory alone:

'The dragon' gives his seat to the Papal beast. Justinian does that work, therefore Justinian represents the dragon power.

The dragon is imperial not pagan Rome. Pagan Rome has ceased to exist long before the forty and two months beast took its place in prophecy. See Gibbon by Guizott, Ch. 28, p. 887. The chapter is headed 'Final Destruction of Paganism.'

'The ruin of paganism in the age of Theodosius is perhaps the only example of the total extirpation on any ancient and popular superstition; and may therefore deserve to be considered as a singular event in the history of the human mind....The Christians, more especially the clergy, had impatiently submitted to the prudent delays of Constantine....The zeal of the emperors was exerted to vindicate their own honor, and that of the Deity; and the temples of the Roman world were subverted about sixty years after the conversion of Constantine.'

Headings on pp. 391 and 392:

'The pagan religion is prohibited A. D. 390, and finally exterminated A.D. 420.'

Here then, soon after Constantine's conversion, the empire ceased to be pagan and became Christian. And now 'there must first come a falling away and then shall that wicked be revealed.' Not a falling away from paganism, but in the church.

If the dragon ceased to have power when paganism passed away, and the empire became Christian, how could he 'give his power to the beast' which does not come up for some centuries after? Pagan Rome must first become Christian Rome before it would give its power to the Papacy. 'These [ten kings] have one mind, and shall give their power and strength unto the beast.' (Rev. 17:13.)

As the Goths were expelled from Italy by imperial Rome, it follows first, that imperial Rome is the dragon, and second, that the Goths were not one of the horns plucked up by the Papacy.

'He,' the same he who speaks great words, is the one who 'subdues three kings.' And the Papacy never subdued three kings, nor did he wear his three crowns [tiara] until after the eleventh century. Since which the states of the church have covered the territory of three of the original ten divisions of the Roman empire, as all who will take the trouble to examine the map of those states can see for themselves.

Bishop Newton, in his Dissertations of the Papacy, page 617, claims that Romania, Revenna, and Lombardy were the 'three horns' plucked up by the Papacy, and so do other leading writers on prophecy.

It was about A. D. 1278 that the Pope obtained the third one of these crowns, 'at about which time he came into full and undisputed possession of the territory of the last of the three horns he was to subdue.' (Article on Papal States, in Cyclopædia, by the London Society, for the diffusion of useful knowledge.)

'There is no uncertainty as to the fact, while there is much uncertainty as to the time when the Papal Government triumphed over these three horns or governments,' says John Dawling, in his History of Romanism, page 177. Here then, we have the three horns which 'he,' Papacy subdued, since which the states of the church have covered their territory, and the popes have worn the three crowns. These things are facts. You find them in history, and you find them on maps. What force is there then, in all this talk about 'the Vandals,' and 'the Goths,' and 'the Herule,' as being the three horns plucked up by the Papacy, in order that the Papacy might be 'set up'? In the first place the Papacy does not set itself up. 'They,' the Roman arms, take away the daily, and they were to 'place the abomination that maketh desolate'—and they did do it.

The Goths were not one of the horns plucked up. They belong outside of the old Roman empire. It is true had they overrun Italy for nearly a century, but God had said when 'the fourth kingdom shall be divided they should mingle with the seed of men, but they should not cleave one to another even as iron is not mingled with clay.' This clearly teaches that there would be war and confusion mixing and mingling and conquering each other, but they should not again consolidate and be one universal empire. This union has been nearly accomplished a number of times under Napoleon, Charlemagne, and others; but, as iron and clay would not mix, so they could not cleave one to another. This mingling and mixing has so confused these divisions that it is difficult, and perhaps impossible, to trace with certainty the exact time and place of these ten to which God refers. They have conquered each other over and over, and over again, but they have never yet made a fifth universal monarchy: And if we should call it 'plucking up a horn,' every time one of these have been conquered, we might find fifty horns plucked up.

'There came up another little horn before whom three of the first horns were plucked up by the roots.' Before, in this connection, means in presence of, not previous to, as is evident from the fact that 'he,' the little horn, subdues them, and hence must have a prior existence.

The dragon was to give the beast his seat and great authority. Great authority does not imply ALL authority. What then, becomes of the objection to the date A.D. 538, based on the fact that the Goths were not entirely expelled from Italy at that time? Indeed they were not entirely expelled until the death of Tatilla, the last king, in 553. When the Gothic power in Italy was broken so that the provinces of Italy changed their allegiance from the Arian to the Catholic party, the 'woman' [church] took her seat on the 'beast,' [civil power] and 'the abomination' was 'set up' in the seat of the dragon.

That this 'seat,' given to the Papacy in 538 was disputed, not only by the Goths, for the next fifteen years, but by one and another of the kings and emperors of the Roman world, during the whole career of the Papacy, no one familiar with history can question. God did not say she would have an easy seat, or that it should be undisputed, but he did say that it should 'have power to continue forty and two months.' And although Papacy was almost unseated time and time again during that turbulent period of the world's history, still by hook or by crook, she managed to retain more or less power in Rome 'until the words of God were fulfilled,' then, in 1798 they threw her off. Not simply by taking the Pope prisoner, which thing had occurred many times during that 1260 years, but they abolished the Papacy, and for two years and one month there was no papal head, or government in existence.

Some have supposed the Papacy could not begin to hold 'times and laws,' in any sense or degree, until he was declared universal bishop, and hence have fixed upon 606, because at that time the emperor Phocas conferred upon Boniface III. that title. But I fail to find where God has said he was to be universal bishop before or when he was 'set up.'

Again others claim that he was not 'set up' until he became an independent sovereign, and hence have fixed upon the date 756, because, at that time Pepin, of France, conferred a little extra power upon that abomination. But I do not find that he became an independent sovereign until he had conquered the first one of the 'three horns,' and got his first crown in the eleventh century. And here again I fail to find where God says he must be an independent sovereign before or at the time that abomination is 'set up.'

If the papal power is mentioned at all in prophecy, it is found in the little horn of Dan. 7, which holds times and laws for 1260 years, and then changes its character by having 'its dominion' taken away but still exists in some other form, until the saints take the kingdom. And, as the Papacy fills this picture absolutely, and without one drawback: every fact in its history agreeing with the prophecy, I think we shall have to admit that the old 1843 platform is the true one, and also that the stakes 538 and 1798 are hard to move.

We know that in 538 'the dragon,' imperial Rome, did send his army and expel the Goths and leave the Papacy in possession of Rome. Whether somebody else tried to take that seat from him, and nearly succeeded, is another matter.

Papacy has had a turbulent reign since 538, it is true. It is also true that prior to that date, for more than sixty years, the civil power of Rome was in the hands of those who were not Catholics. But that the power of the Roman church was ever entirely crushed out between 538 and 1798, so that in no sense it could be said to exist, is yet to be shown by those who oppose this application of the prophecy. And if the time, times, and a half of Papacy is not located between these two dates, then Papacy, or at least the power which is to wear out the saints of God, has not yet existed; and the hundred millions of martyrs are not the ones spoken of as falling under 'the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet.' For if any one can show a date in the history of the Papacy after 538, when its power was at so low an ebb as to be said not to exist, I can certainly show one in 1798 and 99 where it did not exist; hence, its whole history must be brought down to this side of the last date.

If the abomination was set up in 538 then we have the whole data, and can measure to the resurrection of 'many who sleep in the dust of the earth.'

From the time 'the abomination that maketh desolate is set up, there shall be a thousand two hundred and ninety days; blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days.' From 538 a 1000 200 and 90 days bring us to 1828, where the waiting time began, viz.: where this present movement began. This looking and waiting for the Lord. 'Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand, viz.: the thousand spoken of before.

From 538 the 1000 300 and 5 and 30 bring us to A.D. 1873.

This application of these 'days' looks reasonable and seems to fit the facts in the case. Unless we have very positive evidence that it is not the true application, we had better not fight against it lest we be found fighting against God.

The Gift of Power.

BY M. D. W.

(Concluded.)

"Tarry ye at Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high." (Luke 24:49.)

There has been a great deal of obscurity connected with this subject on account of wrong conceptions and false teaching. A great controversy is in the churches, and many pens are devoted to the discussion. Some claim for the young convert, the babe in Christ, all those exalted attainments brought to view in such passages as the following:

'I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me.'

'Filled with the fruits of righteousness.'

'Full assurance of faith.'

'Perfect love.'

Others teach that entire consecration, freedom from condemnation, and assurance of acceptance are connected only with the 'higher life.' Multitudes of testimonies and narratives of experience express a state of bondage, of condemnation, of rebellion against certain requirements, of love of the world, of pride, of selfish ambition, seeking vain-glory, loving the honors of men, etc., yet claiming to be Christians all the while; active perhaps in church relations—some preaching the gospel. By and by they are so convicted of their lack of grace, their failure to attain unto the exalted standard of Christian attainment, they can no longer rest where they are. Teachers of the 'higher life' are saying, 'Come up hither on this plane.' So they begin to seek to consecrate this thing, that thing, formerly consciously withheld, or they are taught that entire consecration is essential to the reception of this grace, and preparatory to the appropriating saving act of faith. Some relate what struggles they had to submit their wills entirely to the will of God; how hard it was to give up that scheme and that idol; this indulgence and that object. But when it was at length yielded, and the entire being, with all its objects of affection and possession, laid on the altar, and faith claimed the promise of the Savior, 'I will receive you,' and appropriated the blood that cleanseth, then came a lifting of the burden, a severing of the bond, an illumination of the Spirit, scattering its light through every avenue of the soul, and assuring it of acceptance through the Beloved. Peace flowed, joy sprang up, and now the individual says 'I am sanctified, I have attained the great blessing, and from henceforth I will strive to live worthy of my profession.'

Now just here is a sad mistake, injurious not only to the individual, but also to the community. Thousands pass from a state of condemnation to one of justification and call it sanctification. And it is from the ranks of these 'losers of the blessing' are most frequently found, and those whose imperfect inconsistent lives bring reproach on the doctrine.

There are those who advocate the view that backsliders may pass from their state to one of entire sanctification. This we shall not controvert, but merely say this: the disciples were justified persons, who apparently had no previous preparation to make, but simply waited before the Lord in concentrated believing prayer, until the endowment of power came upon them.

Were it not for the multitude of narrations of a character such as we have previously described, our opponents would not have so much reason for the assertion that what is denominated the state of 'entire sanctification,' or 'blessing of holiness,' or 'higher life,' is nothing more than the reinstatement of the individual in a state of justification, with enlarged communications of grace proportioned to the degree of knowledge and strength of faith gained by instruction.

It ought ever to be impressed on the mind of every Christian; indeed we may, with more propriety, say every Christian, that a state of condemnation is not compatible with a state of justification. 'There is no condemnation to those which are in Christ Jesus who walk not after the flesh but after the spirit'; and 'if any be in Christ he is a new creature; old things are done away, and all things are become new.' Not sanctified ones only, but the 'babes' 'in Christ,' and partakes of his nature, and is to go on growing in grace and in the knowledge of Jesus Christ until he attains the perfect stature of the fullness—when, at sanctification? No; but when he awakes with the likeness of Christ—body and soul perfectly fashioned unto his divine Lord's.

This growth is progressive from one degree of grace to another, but the gift of power is something wholly different. It is like the diploma bestowed upon the scholar to prepare him to serve in the activities and responsibilities of his profession. Not to put a stop to his further progress in knowledge, but to enable him to put to effective use the information gained under his tutor, and by practical observation and experience, gain far greater knowledge than could possibly be attained when in the academy of arts or science.

This baptism of the spirit which came on Christ after his baptism in Jordan, was that holy anointing, that essential confirmation which qualified him for his great work. That same gift of the Holy Ghost which came to the church, both men and women, apostles and lay members, on the day of Pentecost, anointed, sealed, and empowered them for their important mission. That same anointing is the essential qualification for the work of God to-day, and in proportion to its reception by the church of Christ will the great work of evangelization go on.

The command 'be ye endued with power from on high,' is as authoritative now as it was 1800 years ago, and the great failure in the ineffectiveness of the ministry and membership, is indifference to the obligation, so rife among Christians.

Wearing Mourning.

BY MRS. H. V. REED.

Sincere grief always shrinks from advertising itself to the world. The stricken heart feels that its sorrow is sacred to itself, and public sympathy is so cold that it seems like mockery to the bereaved one. Still there are many who feel that they must overcome this tenderness and wear crape—not because it benefits the dead—not because it heals any wounds that death has caused—not because it is comfortable, but because it is the custom.

It is not enough that the wife has lost everything that made life seem bright. It is not enough that all a mother's hopes lie in a little grave, but she must be draped and shrouded in black, until the very air of heaven is shut out from her face. But it is a hopeful sign for our civilization that there are many now who dare to consult their own feelings in this matter. Perhaps the extreme to which display has been carried has helped to open the eyes and foster the independence of the earnest and sincere.

We have known a lady who had the window-sash of her (rented) house painted black after the death of her babe. We are all familiar with the different shades of grief symbolized in the various departments of the 'mourning stores.' If you tell the clerk how near a relative you have lost, he will show you just how badly you must feel. Whether you must wear a close black veil or one that you can breathe through; whether you shall carry a white handkerchief, or one with a deep black border. Indeed he can tell you whether it will be necessary to wear black at all or not, if you are supposed to have partially forgotten your friend, or if you only mourn for some of your husband's connection, you can indulge in dainty costumes of lilac and white. White with lilac or lavender is very becoming to a young widow in the second or third year of her bereavement, and has the advantage of being also suggestive of orange flowers and another ring.

There was a young millionaire at one of our principle resorts last summer who did the place very quietly on account of the recent death of his mother. Therefore his rooms were bordered with black around the ceiling. His furniture was ordered from Egypt, and was mysterious and grotesque in style. He drove a four-in-hand while his groom and coachman wore crape. Mourning lap-robes, like funeral palls, covered the seats of his carriages—the carriages also being painted to correspond with the 'habiliments of wo.' For these emblems of sackcloth and ashes' he paid five hundred dollars per week. Some of the young ladies there called this 'filial devotion' and thought he was such a good son.' There were others, however, who naturally 'guessed' that his property came from his mother, and that he was very glad to get possession of it.

A prominent undertaker in New York city says that he can always tell by the 'funeral figures' the state of domestic bliss in 'upper-ten-dom.' He says where husband and wife cordially hate each other, they will often live together to save public opinion or a division of the property, but if one of them dies the survivor immediately orders a funeral as gorgeous and elaborate as money can make it. Often hundreds of dollars are spent for flowers alone upon these occasions, and probably the bills are paid much more cheerfully than those of the doctor and nurse.

But if Love was not invited to the wedding Sorrow will not come to the funeral, and the costly mourning robes are the most pitiful shams that even New York society is acquainted with. We might just as well run such funerals upon the London plan, where 'professional mourners' are sometimes hired at about a guinea apiece to display their crape, look sorry, and shed a few tears over the grave.

When such things do exist—when a lady in Christian New England could not attend her sister's funeral because her new lace handkerchief did not arrive from the city in time, it is no wonder that the wearing of weeds has come to be almost a burlesque upon the the sacredness of grief. When we see a man with a piece of crape on his hat talking nonsense with school girls —when we see that his 'mourning' extends even to his hair and whiskers which have been carefully dyed—we are disgusted with an hypocrisy which is so apparent.

When we see a young widow flirting in her weeds, and contrasting a jeweled hand with her black robes—when we see her crape veil drawn aside to reveal her powdered face and hair that is crimped and curled, we feel like saying, Give us a heart that is loyal and honest to its dead, in preference to the crape and costly mourning jewelry.

"A GOOD MAN."

BY A. H. P. WILSON.

"For he was a good man." (Acts 11:24.)

No expression is employed with more meanings than that of the text, "a good man." Sometimes you hear the title applied to a man who, without having the least religion, is benevolent; sometimes to him who, without being even benevolent, is good tempered; sometimes to him who, without possessing any other good quality, is just. Often, when persons have been stating some such fault in the conduct of another, as plainly condemns him in the sight of God, you hear them conclude the statement by saying, "I believe him, however, to be a good man."

Now, if such language had merely the effect of rendering us more charitable to others, the abuse of language might be less condemned for the sake of practical benefits arising from it. But the fact is, that such low estimates of goodness have the effect of confounding good and evil; of destroying the scriptural standard of right and wrong, of leading us to view in ourselves and others, without any feelings of indignation or regret, vices which it is essential to one's safety to subdue. If we deem ourselves or others sufficiently "good," it is obvious that we shall attempt nothing for their improvement or for our own. But, amidst this variety of opinion, how are we to decide who is really the good man? There is only one means; an appeal to some common standard, to some judge, in whose decision all parties will be disposed to acquiesce. And such a standard I venture to say is the Bible, and such a judge is God Almighty.

Now turn to the text. Here is a person who is said, by God Himself, to have been "a good man." Let us then examine the conduct and character of Barnabas, who is the person thus described, and we shall at once discover to what class of men the description really applies.

There are five distinct circumstances in the history of Barnabas which are worthy of notice, and these I shall proceed to point out. In the first place he is described in the words immediately following the text, as a m "full of the Holy Ghost." This pression cannot, of course, apply mer to his power of working miracles, cause many bad men possessed t power in common with himself. "Man it is said, "shall say, In thy name h we cast out Devils;" to whom Chr will reply, "I never knew you."

The expression, therefore, exte to the ordinary gifts of the spirit, the change and sanctification of heart by the influences of the H Ghost. And with this sentiment general doctrine of the Bible accor It teaches, that no man is esteem good in the sight of God, who is thus influenced by his Spirit. "Exc a man is born again of the Spirit, cannot enter into the kingdom of Go And again said Paul, "if any m have not the Spirit of Christ he is no of His;" and again, "As many as led by the Spirit of God, they are t sons of God."

You see, then, that the first culiarity of the "good man" of t Holy Bible is, that he is influenced the Spirit of God; that his und standing is enlightened; that his ture is renewed; that his heart is sa tified; that his conduct is governed a power without and beyond himself a power not human, but divine.

Now, then, dear readers, allow to ask, can that man be really "goo who, though possessed of many amia qualities, is plainly not under the fluence of the Holy Spirit, perh denies all such influence; or und values it; or neglects all the means grace, to the use of which the gift the Holy Spirit is promised?

He may possibly be amiable, may gentle, may be benevolent; but he not good—he has not that "holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." How emphatic is the description of Barnabas! "He was full of the Holy Ghost;" an expression which, had it been employed by man, had at least bordered upon blasphemy—an expression conveying the idea that every motive, with principle, taste, desire of the heart, was so occupied by a heavenly influence as to exclude any other. Mysterious indeed, such language, but full of comfort to the devout mind.

A second feature pointed out in the character of Barnabas is, that he "was full of faith"—"a good man full of the Holy Ghost and of faith." The Holy Spirit does not act upon man as though they were machines. God has given us reason, and memory, and many affections and passions of the mind; and it is upon these the Holy Ghost acts. God has especially given us a power, under the blessed influence of His Spirit, to believe or reject certain truths. And the belief of the truths, he reaches, is, in the Scriptures, called "faith." Barnabas, then, was full of faith; full, that is, of a new belief, communicated by God, which, as a master principle, guided and controlled every action of his life. If you look in the history of mankind, you will find that a man can scarcely believe in any new truth or it without its producing some change in his conduct. Much less, then, can his faith be unproductive when he either believes in general the doctrines of the gospel, or the single fact, that the Son of God died for the sins of the world. Such a faith must produce a powerful effect upon his character. Now, of this living, practical "faith" Barnabas was "full." He believed in the whole revelation of God. He believed there was a God, the Maker, the Father, the Righteous Governor of the universe, to whom all beings should answer for the deeds done in the body. He believed that the wages of sin is death, and the gift of God eternal life." He believed the world on the which he then stood would be taken to its very foundation, but he looked beyond this world, to the "new heavens and a new be taken as an evidence. It is s there when he came to Antioch saw the grace of God he was gl Such then was his business, such pleasures; employments and pleasu so different from the mass of manki that they richly deserve notice. A such, allow me to say, must be the ple ure and business of every really "go man." It is not, indeed to be affirm that every man like Barnabas is to an apostle or evangelist.

Nevertheless religion must be t grand business of every and any "go man." Whatever else is done, tim thought, attention must be found this, he must give diligence to ma his calling and election sure. must work out his own soul's salvati with fear and trembling. Such are t pleasures, such is the business of "good man" of the Bible, and he w is wholly unacquainted with them, may venture to affirm, is not "good.

A fourth feature in the character Barnabas was his zeal to impart others the piety and the happin which he himself possessed. It is sa in the verse before the text, that wh he saw the people of Antioch, "he horted them, that, with true purpose heart, they would cleave unto Lord." He warned the guilty, taug the ignorant, roused the indifferc proclaimed the glad tidings of salvat to a ruined world. His voice "heard in all the regions round abou He could not see them hanging on edge of a precipice, or treading on mouth of a furnace, and not stre out his hands to save them. H again, let us not be understood to calling upon every man to becom preacher or an apostle. But at same time every "good man" m have the spirit of Barnabas, and m according to his means devote him to the foundation of the same gr ends. There are heathens yet to taught, there are persons bearing names of Christians, yet to be c verted, and God demands their so at your hands. You are under div grace, to reclaim the profligate to bri the wanderers back to the great "Sh herd and Bishop of their souls;" are to insure yourself witnesses who at the bar of God shall rise up and call you blessed—to acknowledge that your time, your money, your labors, your prayers were the main instruments in the hands of God of their safety and joy. Such at the awful hour of judgment, shall be the witnesses, to the fai and practice of every "good man; od does not call him "good" who does not at least endeavor to secure them.

Advent Christian Times.

L. C. COLLINS, EDITOR.
Wm Sheldon, - - Associate Editor.

⁂Give your Name, Postoffice, County and State every time you write.

CHICAGO, TUESDAY, April 22, 1873.

NAPOLEON.

Eld. Grant, editor of the Crisis, gives the following as his explanation of the anti-christ he so faithfully preached and prophecied a short time ago:

"We presume it would be pleasant to some of our readers to have us say we were disappointed in the death of Napoleon. Although he did that which caused the world to "wonder," and fulfilled, as we believe, some important prophecies connected with the closing events in the history of the Roman woman, and the beast that carried her, and was the man whose name gave the number "666," thus pointing out the country from which has arisen the associations, principles and systems that are to complete the prophetic programme to be accomplished before the coming of Christ, yet he did not live to help execute all this as we expected. He set the ball rolling, and we may soon expect to see startling results. It is time for special watchfulness, on the part of those looking for the coming of the Son of Man, lest they be found unprepared. Every thought, word and deed should be in harmony with the principles of holiness. Time's last sands are dropping from its closing hour-glass, and soon we may expect to behold the "King of glory." It is truly sublime to be living in these last days, so near the resurrection morning."

MINISTERS NEEDED.

We hear many calls for ministers from quarters where churches remain a long time unsupplied; and it often appears that they have repeated opportunities for securing the services of good ministers, but let the chance go by, not deeming them "big preachers." Does God send no preachers but big preachers? Shall we let the flock starve to death unless we can have them fed by "big preachers;" Jesus chose fishermen, mainly; and only now and then a Paul and an Apollos. Suppose the churches in the apostles days had decided, we will go without preaching unless we can secure the services of Paul or Apollos: would not the most of them have gone without preaching? Upon the whole, we think there is too much reliance upon big preachers. Let the first question be, is he, like Barnabas, a good man, and full of faith and the Holy Ghost. If you can not get Paul, get Timothy. He may be young, but only unitedly stay up his hands, and he may prove a power for good in your midst. We would not claim that every minister that comes along should be regarded a fit man for the place, but still our views of fitness are often overdrawn. So far as possible, let us help the ministers already sent into the vineyard to to keep at work by sagying up their hands, instead of disheartening them; and then pray the lord of the harvest to "send forth more laborers;" and if he sends more fishermen than Pauls and Apollos, let us aail them a fel low laborers.

W. S.

Correction.

In my article on "Religion," (April 8,) second paragraph, reading "theological religion, which is void of its possessor to care for theology," should read "theological religion void of any other ingredient, which leads its possessor to care only for theology," &c. A whole line was left out, thus entirely destroying the sense. Next paragraph, reading, "a religion possessed by mere formalists and moralists, who have experienced the vitalzing and stimulating gift of the Holy Spirt," should read, "who have never exeperinced" &c. Similar mistakes have occured in other articles. Neither editor having yet been at the office to read proof, and our office hands being aready overworked, it is not surprising that some mistakes pass uncorrected. But this will soon be measurably avoided.

W. S.

Camp Preparation.

The season for camp-meetings is upon us. Let the good work be commenced in earnest in every part of the field Let "this gospel of the kingdom" be faithfully preached, and also the preparation to enter the kingdom.

The Wisconsin state camp-meeting is to be held early n June. Notice in time. Let plans b made with reference to it.

W. S.

ELECTROPATHIC TREATMENT.—Dr. A. Spaulding of Aurora, Ill., wishes to inform disabled Adventist preachers that he will treat em free of charge, and furnish them home during the treatment.

"SOUL DEATH."

An article in a rcent number of the Central Christian Advocate, headed "Original Penalty' contains some misdirected truth migled with error—misdirected becaus aimed at a theory which we do not bld, while intended as a refutation of ur faith. The author thus introduc the subject:

"The object of is article is to show that physical deal is in no sense even a part of the penty against sin. The term penalty sigues 'punishment for crime.' The Juge of all the earth never applies it vere there is no guilt. He is just in all s ways; and it would be impossible fohim so to do."

Here we take sue with our friend, claiming that ysical death, and no other death, is t penalty; but we are far from believi that temporal death is the penalty, t rather a calamity that has been eiled on the saint and sinner. It is te that God never inflicts punishm where there is no guilt, so some er death than temporal death must the penalty for sin; and that other ath must come after the judgment nes, too; for punishment cannot cede the judgment without suppting it; and furthermore, the de due as a punishment for sin is callhe "second death."

Our friend tinues: "We produce the following support of our position:"

"1. The body is material in its nature, and having no power of thought or responsible action, penalty can no more be applied to it than to a clod of earth. The body is the instrument employed by the soul in the work of sin. Illustrative of this Paul says, 'Neither lend ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin; but yield your members as instruments of righteousness unto God.' The dagger and hand of the assassin are instruments employed in the work of death; but the responsible power is within the houses of clay. Is the poniard guilty? Is the hand responsible? The free, self-acting power within puts in motion the agencies without. Responsibility is connected with rationality, and there, there only can penalty apply. All know that a marble statue cannot sin. Why should any think the body capable of sinning? No such language as, the body that sinneth, it shall die, can be found in the Bible. All matter is incapable of self-action, and moves only when acted upon by superior power."

Where does our friend learn that the body has "no power of thought"? Who told him that "the body is the instrument employed by the soul in the work of sin"? Will his assertions settle the question? We agree with our friend that "responsibility is connected with rationality, and there, there only, can penalty apply"; and in the light of this fact we hear the revelator saying: "And the sea gave up the dead that were in it....and they were judged every man according to their works ....And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire." (Rev. 20: 13–15.) Will departed souls be called out of the sea at the judgment day to be judged, and then be cast into the lake of fire? Who will claim that disembodied souls live in the sea? But those who are thus to be called out of the "sea," whether material or immaterial men, are to be "judged"—and surely God will not judge those who are void of responsibility and rationality; besides they are also (a part of them) to be cast into the lake of fire; and that certainly must be punishment. Now are these occupants of the "sea" material or immaterial men? If material, then materiality will be both judged and punished.

If the body is not "capable of sinning," as our friend claims, Jehovah must have made a singular blunder in arranging temporal punishment for crimes committed under the Mosaic law, when he commanded that a man should be stoned to death for certain crimes, and receive corporal punishment of another nature for other crimes. The real sinner, and not the "instrument," should be held responsible for the crime, and be punished for it; but God did not command them to stone an immortal soul to death, but the man: hence, God counted the material man responsible and punishable for crime. Certainly he would not have commanded them to stone the innocent "instrument," and let the guilty soul escape the punishment. And if, when meeting our temporal punishments, God dealt with the material man, will he act on a different principle when he metes out final punishment? Will he then deal with the immaterial man, and let the material man escape? Will God thus act on a principle at one time which he repudiates at another time? If "all matter is incapable of self-action, and moves only when acted upon by superior power," (soul-power) then what superior power moves the beasts, and fowls of earth? Can our friend tell?

He continues: "2. The penalty of sin is spiritual in its nature, and can no more be applied to that which is material, than could a supposed material penalty be applied to the soul. Such is the difference in nature between body and soul that no one penalty can be applied to both. If the advocates of the opposite view must have a penalty for the body, they must devise one having a nature corresponding with that of the supposed criminal." But here our friend gets into difficulty with the Savior, who taught that God would "destroy both soul and body in hell." Is not that applying the same penalty to both? And is it not destruction for both? Our friend is out of harmony with Jesus. Who is right? If the penalty cannot be appled "to that which is material," how happens it that the "body" as well as the soul is to be cast into hell—"rather than thy whole body should be cast into hell"? Is it no penalty to be cast into hell?

Our friend tries to strike us again, and hits something else: 3. "If bodily death is a penalty, then perfect innocence is punished. (1.) Infants are innocent as was the holy child Jesus. Guilt is never transmitted to children. Moral defilement is one thing and guilt is another. Yes, all infants are innocent; but they suffer the agony of physical death. Now, it bodily death is a penalty, then punishment is inflicted on innocence. To avoid this difficulty, let no one say that said penalty applies to inherited moral defilement in the souls of infants; for they are no more to blame for that than they are for their birth. Innocence and blessing are connected; guilt and cursing have affinity. Which shall we choose? That infants endure punitive suffering, or that physical death is not a penalty? 'How long halt we between two opinions?' (2.) Holy men having innocence through the 'blood of the Lamb,' suffer physical death. Can it be that God applies penalty for sins already pardoned? A son commits an offence for which he is sorry, and the father forgives. One week after the father prepares to inflict the penalty. The child, in just astonishment, says, Father you forgave the offence and why punish me now? The father, as to justice, is speechless; but applies the penalty. He is unjust, or else his pardon was a farce. Are we to accept an idea which sets forth our Heavenly Father in such a light? A penalty inflicted on a man when 'blood-washed and forgiven'? O, inconsistency, hast thou become a bright jewel"?

The trouble with this argument is, it is aimed at the theory which recognizes temporal death as the penalty, which theory we do not believe. It is a valid argument against that theory, but is misdirected when aimed at us. We often present the same argument ourselves. The penalty-death is due after the arrival of the judgment, while temporal death precedes it. Yet the "second death" is as really a physical death as the first.

Our friend proceeds thus: "4. God said, 'In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die.' These words proclaim soul-death only; for Adam did not die bodily for several hundred years after. The expression could mean only spiritual, eternal death, and the penalty was executed in as full measure as God designed. In that very day Adam was dead to God—dead in trespasses and in sins. If he suffered no measure of the penalty, soul-death, then he did not fall; but was simply prevented from falling. How then, could he experience the joy, of salvation? His being 'afraid' and trying to hide, declared the agony of soul-death. But his faith in 'the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world,' arrested that penalty while yet in its first degree, and before it culminated into the fullness and perfection of eternal death. Death eternal is the development of spiritual death begun in life. The difference between the two is not so much in nature as in degree."

Ah! "soul-death" — what is that? He tells us it is being "dead in trespasses and in sins," and calls this a "penalty." Let our friend pause and consider: is it not rather the guilt that renders him deserving of the penalty? The guilt is not the penalty. As well might I say to a man, If you murder, the penalty will be, you shall be a murderer. It is true that, as a result of the act, he would be a murderer, but that would not be the penalty. When Adam sinned, he was a sinner, (was dead in trespasses and in sins) but that was only a result of his crime, and not punishment for it. As being a sinner is not the punishment for sin, Adam's death in trespasses and sins must be distinct from the punishment due him for being involved in trespasses and sins. Spiritual death is the loss of spiritual life. Spiritual life is innocence before God, while spiritual death is guilt before God; but the sin that incurred that guilt calls for a punishment. As, for instance: The innocent servant was commanded not to open the lion's cage; but he finally gratifies his curiosity by making the experiment, and the lion rushes out; that moment the servant is guilty, but that guilt is no part of his punishment. No matter if, like Adam, he feels like hiding from his Master, and feels agony of heart on reflecting on what he had done—his punishment is entirely distinct from this. So when Adam, in disobedience to God's commandment, uncaged the lion of death, though that act made him a guilty man, transformed him from an innocent man into a guilty man, that guilt was no part of his punishment; the punishment must come afterward.

If our friend is right in saying that Adam's "faith in 'the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world' arrested that penalty,"—that is, if Jesus Christ then volunteered to meet the penalty in his own person—our friend furnishes an explanation why Adam did not die literally that day, and also proves that physical death was intended in the threat, since Christ experienced a literal death for man; and furthermore, all who do not make Christ's death availing in their case by accepting him as their sacrifice, will have the penalty visited upon them at the judgment day.

Another view is that Adam incurred death that day as a result, and not as a punishment, which gave to his posterity the same corruptible nature; and that the remedial economy then presented the Lamb of God in type, who should subsequently receive punishment in man's stead—thus making temporal death a result of sin, and locating punishment for sin at a subsequent epoch of time.

Our author continues thus: "5. Within the realm of revealed truth, we find the following significant language: 'The soul that sinneth, it shall die.' This is a striking comment on that important passage, 'In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die.' Moses and Ezekiel cannot be in conflict. The death referred to by Ezekiel is spiritual and eternal death, for the reason that it is conditional, and may be avoided. 'The soul that sinneth, it shall die.' The opposite is, The soul that sinneth not it shall not die. Sin can be avoided, and hence the penalty, which is eternal death, may be avoided." That Ezekiel is here speaking of a penalty-death is evident; and it is equally evident that he is not speaking of a death in trespasses and sins, for, as we have already seen, death is not the punishment for sin, but simply the result of sin; and furthermore, if Ezekiel had meant a death in trespasses and sins, he would have said, The soul that sinneth is dead—not "shall die." The sinning is a present act, and the death a future event. It is true this death can be avoided by repentance—repentance will exempt us from the "second death,' which will be a physical death, due after the judgment comes.

Again the writer of the article says: "Need we remind any Bible student that physical death is unconditional and unavoidable? All must die without respect to faith or good works. Saving faith removes the penalty; and for the reason that said faith does not avert bodily death, it cannot be any part of the penalty. The salvation that does not avert all the penalty in this life, is not the salvation of the Bible." Here, again, our friend strikes in the dark. The blow might be justly dealt against those who claim that temporal death is the penalty; but this is not our faith. The physical death due after the judgment arrives, called the "second death," is both conditional and avoidable. It is true that "saving faith removes the penalty," or, more properly, it exempts us from the penalty, which is true of the second death. But this statement needs a little qualification—"For the reason that said faith does not avert bodily death, it cannot be any part of the penalty." This remark is true when applied to temporal death, but not true when applied to the "second death," for that death is warded off by faith. Our friend errs in supposing there is no "bodily death" except temporal death, forgetting that God will cast "both soul and body into hell," and that the sinner's "whole body shall be cast into hell." Temporal death is no part of the penalty; but men who have long been dead in earth and sea are to come up and be "cast into the lake of fire which is the second death"; and that connects literal men with the second death. A second is not a continuation of the first, but this second death begins after the sea shall give up its dead.

In conclusion our friend remarks: "Physical death, instead of being a penalty for sin, is a result of sin. There is a distinction between penalty and result. Penalty is always a result, but result is not always a penalty. All bodily distress, including bodily death, is only sequential suffering; but all pain of penalty is punitive suffering. The innocent can suffer sequential pain only; but the guilty suffer both sequential and punitive misery." If our friend had said temporal death instead of physical death, his statement would have been correct, but he constantly overlooks the fact that there is to be a second physical death, and labors under the incorrect impression that we hold temporal death to be the penalty. The first death is a result of sin, but the second death is punitive, and will be inflicted upon resurrected sinners, and not upon disembodied men, at "the resurrection of damnation." W. S.

A Proposed Union.

I take the Restitution, TIMES, Crisis, Watchman's Cry, and have read the Marturion, Bible Banner, and Bible Examiner. I like all of them but none better than the Restitution. Yet doubtless, errors have been and are promulgated in each, which does not at all surprise me, for having heretofore occupied the editorial chair, I know by experience that editors are not "infallible" any more than is the Pope of Rome. But if the supporters of all these papers are Christains, why are they separated? Why is it that each is trying to build up a little "sect" of its own? Much has been said in your paper about "Church Organization" and sometimes I have thought I would write my views upon that question but then I feared that I would not be recognized as belonging to the "Church of God" because I belonged to the Advent Christian Church (so called, whether properly so or not I am not now discussing) and am not numbered with your people. Permit me here briefly to say that a church is formed by the voluntary association of believers, and when they are "set in order" as such, to be governed by the Bible alone,—"Christ the head of the church,"—the organization is complete. No "Conference," "Association," "Convention," "Assembly," or anything of the kind should ever be permitted to exercise any authority over it. Now when I find Bible Christians doing this, shall I refuse to recognize them as belonging to 'the Church of God" because they have not selected such a name as I would choose from the Bible, or for the reason that they do not believe as I do? Does calling organizations "the Church of God" make them such in fact? Do the 'children of God" become disinherited because in their church organization they have adopted the name of 'Christian,' 'Advent-Christian,' 'Christadelphian," etc.? I think not, and if not, why should not all who "love his appearing" be recognized as brethren? God grant that we may all have a little more charity and obey the command "love one another" without any hindrance from party or sectarian lines. Now there are a few Adventists, Christadelphians, and "the Church of God" in Kansas, and for my part I cannot see any differences of opinion between them sufficient to warrant their present coldness towards, and utter disregard for each other. When Conferences are held (and I see no valid objection to meeting together, to confer with each other) all should be invited to come and sit down together. It seems to me that if we would meet often with one another and "reason together," that we would find, out of every twenty points discussed, we would agree upon nineteen, and then would it not be supremely ridiculous to quarrel over the one? Now for the purpose of bringing about something in this regard, I suggest that the members, ministers, or delegates, of the "Church of God" in Kansas meet with the Advent Christians in Conference, Bero, Cherokee County, Kansas, on Tuesday, May 13, 1873, at two o'clock, and as Secretary of the Advent-Christian Conference of Kansas, I extend them a cordial invitation and will be responsible for their kind treatment while in attendance.

Yours in "that blessed hope."

AMOS SANFORD.

The above letter to the Restitution called forth the following retort from the editor of that paper:

Our correspondent rightly says that "a church is formed by the voluntary association of believers." But the question still remains—believers in what?

Again, he says, "When I find Bible Christians doing this, shall I refuse to recognize them as belonging to the "Church of God" because they have not selected such a name as I would choose from the Bible, or for the reason that they do not believe as I do?" In reply to this we say, when you find "Bible Christians" associated together in church capacity, recognize them by all means, as such, even though the name selected be not such as you would wish. But your next question may be answered both affirmatively and negatively. 1. We believe that the basis of union laid down in God's Word is a belief and obedience of the gospel. If men and women associate together on this basis, then they are "believers," or "Bible Christians." And although they are a unit on the gospel, yet they may differ on many points of belief. Therefore, we say, if they do not believe the gospel, then you have no right to recognize them as believers, or Bible Christians. But if they do not believe as you do on other points, then you have no right for this cause to isolate your brethren.

But you ask further "why should not all who love his appearing be recognized as brethren?" For the simple reason that this alone does not indicate a belief or obedience of the gospel.

With reference to the proposed union of brethren of the Church of God, and Advent Christians, at Bero, Iowa, we can only say, that when you can show us from the Word of God that the Advent Christians you speak of are obedient believers of the Gospel, we do not think the mere question of [illegible] name will prevent such a union.

D. TYNDALL treats us to a long account of religious men who have opposed science and been defeated. I may say justly defeated, as setting themselves against one way in which God makes known his will. But I would give a far longer list of men who have set themselves to oppose Providence and prayer, only to find that, as Beza said, "God's Word is an anvil which has worn out many a hammer."—Dr. McCosh.

OUR TITLE of things in the world is poor, at best. And yet how many of us act as though a warranted deed covered all our possessions—as though what we hold we have beyond any power to dispossess.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

AT HOME.

—The much talked of Postal Cards will be introduced into our mails on the first of May. The cards with the necessary stamp will be sold in any quantity for one cent each. The Postal department already have orders for thirty million, and believe they will use four times that amount the first year.

—Serious floods have inundated different parts of New York, Canada, Michigan, and Indiana. In many places where they escape the floods, the heavy rains cause land slides that delay travel by rail. Taken altogether it has been a severe spring not only to the farmers but to the country generally.

—A serious affray occurred at Knightsville, Clay Co., Ind. on the 15th, between striking coal miners and colored miners lately imported from Virginia. The strikers were furious, and their female leaders were more so. The Governor sent troops from Indianapolis, quelled the disturbance and arrested the leaders. More trouble is apprehended, as the strikers seem determined not to let the colored laborers work either in the mines or iron mills. Several were seriously wounded, but none fatally.

—The administration is severely berated by the press both east and west for its vacillating and timid measures with the murderous bands running loose on the frontiers. There is no denying that Grant's Indian policy proved in the main very good, but whether he should have permitted nearly two years to find this small body yet in defiance to the governmental authorities is entirely another question. It appears very much as if there was a want of national dignity in the matter, if nothing more.

— Adispatch from Omaha dated the 16th inst gives an account of a severe snow storm that was continuing at that time with no prospect of a cessation. Trains were in drifts from ten to twenty-five feet high on either side of Grand Island, Neb. It is supposed that settlers would suffer severely, as no one could endure the severity of the storm. Snow plows had been sent to assist the trains but the men could do nothing. Every available effort was being made to relieve the sufferers as soon as possible. The mild atmosphere that would be likely to prevail immediately after the storm would be very favorable to the workmen and plows.

—The lawless condition of affairs in Louisiana has been the cause of serious difficulties heretofore, but none such as occurred at Colfax court house last week. The bloody contest was between races, but had white politicians for leaders. The story is a long one and brings in view many scenes of the recent rival legislatures of that state. Two men were declared elected delegates from Grant Parish (or County,) and both served in the rival legislatures. One (Ward) returned to Colfax, called the Negroes to his aid and took possession of the court house: his opponent rallied the Whites and laid seige. A flag of truce from the latter party was fired upon and the leader shot. The building was then fired and the inmates shot down as they tried to escape. The government may be to blame for ordering the military to enforce the decisions of a partisan board of election when said board had no election returns to decide upon—merely designated the persons who were to hold office. Had the President enforced a new and fair election all would have been well. It is feared the end of it is not yet.

—The Boston Sunday Herald is informed by a prominent member of the United Order of American Carpenters and Joiners and Amalgamated Union that the commotion in the organization in New York is but the premonitory symptoms of a general upheaval at an early date in all the large cities of the North, South, East and West. The local branches of the Order in all sections have been holding large and enthusiastic secret meetings, and a general plan of action for the government of the national organization is about completed. The funds now in the treasury are large, and sufficient to enable the members to hold out on a strike for at least six months. The association is more anxious to secure the eight-hour system than an increase of wages, but if a strike is caused by the non-compliance of employers to recognize the eight-hour plan, then an increase of pay will be demanded. It is stated that in Boston and the principal New England cities the Order has a large and influential membership. The fraternity in all sections, when everything is ready, will rise simultaneously. The machinists, blacksmiths, boiler-makers, and metal-workers, it is also understood will commence to move soon, in conjunction with the iron Moulders' Eight-hour League of New York to carry into effect the great object in view—eight-hour work. The shoemakers are holding meetings and devising plans for another struggle. Their labor organization, Knights of St. Crispin, is not very strong, but as a convention of the Order is to be held in Cleveland, Ohio, next month, and the principal subject then to be discussed and acted upon is the eight-hour law, the New England journeymen shoemakers will take an active part.

—The long and patient peace negotiations between the agents of the government and Captain Jack the commander of the fifty three rebellious Modoc Indians, who had fortified themselves in the lava beds in Southern Oregon, culminated in a fearful and treacherous massacre on the 11th inst. The following from the commander of the cavalry camp in brief gives the details: "Gen. Canby with the Peace Commissioners went to meet the Indians about one mile in front of the camp, at 11:03 this morning. At 11:30 p. m. the signal officer who had been watching the conference reported firing. Upon reaching the place of meeting I found that General Canby and the Rev. Dr. Thomas had been killed and and Mr. Meacham wounded. The other Commissioner, Mr. Dyer, escaped unhurt. I shall at once commence active operations against the Indians." The president and Gen. Sherman seemed overwhelmed at the announcement, and have set on foot measures that will result in the entire extermination of the band. The rest of the tribe are peacefully settled on a reservation a little to the north of the scene of murder, but this little band, headed by a notorious half-breed, would not go to the reservation, and the government has spent over twelve months in the negotiations which have resulted as above. The band is so securely situated among rocks and caves that nothing is practicable but to starve them out. They are now entirely surrounded by troops who will be reinforced—or have been ere this. It is thought this handfull of refractory Indians will cost the government about seventy-five thousand dollars each before the difficulty is ended.

ABROAD.

—This week the Carlist forces are meeting with various reverses in the interior, many of their bands being captured.

—Prince Napoleon has addressed a letter to his constituents in Corsica protesting against his expulsion from France. He says: "The Napoleons have twice been the saviors of France. The name can never be banished from the hearts of the people. It is proscribed because it is feared."

—The severe illness of Pope Pius the Ninth created a quiver of the public nerve. The old man is now 81, and his death at any time should cause no special surprise. With the present condition of church and state in the East, it is generally thought that his death would bring about great changes of some sort in the affairs of many of the great powers, perhaps involving the world in such a struggle as may only end in the great battle of God Almighty. Some men's hearts even now almost "fail them for fear."

—Father Hyacinthe, in his second discourse at Geneva, attacked the modern practice of confession, which admitted the priest into the family, where the husband should be supreme. He instanced Belgium as an example of its abuse, where, through the influence of the confessional, the elections were determined by the priests. These sentiments were loudly applauded by his crowded audience.

—News of importance was received at St. Petersburg on the 15th, bearing on the future of the Khivan expedition. Internal dissensions had broken out in Khiva. The reigning Khan had executed his Chief Counselor and imprisoned his uncle and other influential Khivans, who were enemies of Russia. He had also released the Russians long held as prisoners in Khiva, and sent them to meet a detachment of the expedition which was advancing from Orenburg. An American correspondent and the Secretary of the United States Legation have left St. Petersburg for Khiva.

The Christian Life.

Plain Talk on Usury.

Dr. William Anderson, for more than fifty years pastor of a church in Glascow, had a somewhat pointed way of "putting things," as the following incident related in the Weekly Review will show:—

He was once expounding the fifteenth psalm, and came to the word usury,—"He that putteth not out his money to usury." "Does that mean," he asked, "taking ten per cent. or more! Not entirely. It means also the spirit in which the ten per cent. is taken. There was once in this church a poor widow, and she wanted twenty pounds to begin a small shop. Having no friends, she came to me, her minister. And I happened to know a man —not of this church—who could advance the money to the poor widow. So we went to see this man—the widow and I—and he said he would be happy to help the widow. And he drew out a bill for £20, and the widow signed it, too. Then he put the signed paper in his desk and took out the money and gave it to the widow. But the widow counting it said: "Sir, there are only £15 here." "It it all right," said the man: "that is the interest I charge." And as we had no redress, I came away. But the widow prospered. And she brought the 20 pounds back to me, and I took it myself to the man who lent it, and I said to him, "Sir, there is the money £20 from the widow." And he said, "here is the paper you signed, and if you know any other poor widow, I will be happy to help her in the same way." I said to him: you help the poor widow! Sir, you have robbed this widow, and you will be damned! And, my friends, I kept my eye upon that man. and before six months were over God smote him and he died." We can still recall, after many years, the creep of soul with which we listened to the closing sentences, and the vivid glimpse we got of a divine retribution falling suddenly on a bad man.

THE SLEEPING BOY.—Mother, the boy of your love will soon outgrow these tender embraces. The rough world will take him from you. Its tasks and burdens await those growing bones and muscles. The eyes you now guard so carefully must look upon scenes that would appall you were you now to see them. These tender fingers, these sweet lips, that broad brow and silken hair,—O, mother, the tug and tussle and tribulations of life will play havoc with the loveliness now before you. Prepare the boy for the struggle. Strengthen him by the true training and holy faith for the temptations, sorrows, services, and perils of the years to come. Then in the eternal home you shall meet him again young and innocent—a saint of God.

THE thought must often recur to us that the redemption of man by the sufferings and death of Christ is a fact which even limited knowledge of God's attributes would logically lead us to believe he is infinite condescension. Nothing less could have prompted it—nothing less accomplish it.

Not more constantly is the sun pouring forth its beams, or a flower exhaling its fragrance, than the Christian is radiating or exhaling influence from his character upon those around him. —Rev. Hugh MacMillan.

OUR religion is to be estimated, not by a few intensities, but by a vital and generous glow and activity throughout our whole life. We are not to mourn because we do not feel; but if, having feeling, we find no expression for that feeling in life, we may well mourn.

CHRISTIAN workers would do well to ponder the observation of a murderer recently hanged. It was this: "If I had as much attention before being put in prison as I have since, I should never have been here."

Correspondence.

Extract of a letter from F. Burr.

The following is an extract from a letter written by Br. Frank Burr to a private correspondent, but as he feels impressed that it may benefit others, he wishes to give it to the readers of THE TIMES. It is as follows:

MY DEAR BROTHER IN CHRIST:

I am so glad that, amid all your trials and temptations, your heart is still set on salvation. Well, there is full and complete salvation from sin in this present life, bless God!

But what is it? Is it to be so that we cannot possibly sin? No. But it is to be 'kept' so that we do not sin. But what is sin? Is every mistake sin? Is every weakness sin? Is every temptation sin to us? No. But if one seeks to live free from sin, Satan will very likely try to discourage him by causing him to look at every weakness and imperfection of judgment as sin. In all this we should look to Jesus, 'resist the devil,' and 'draw nigh unto God.'

But the 'law of sin' in our members, that responds to temptation can be eradicated if we will only seek for it. But how is it to be done? I know of but one way. It is by consecrating all to Jesus, and believing that he alone can take away our sinful nature; to ask him in full faith, and rest right there. 'To consecrate all: let it be done in a careful and considerate way, one thing at a time, as a boy might empty his pocket, one toy after another, and say, 'can I give that up?' thinks it over so as to know his mind, and then gives up till all are out—never to be put in again; so take everything dear to you, everything clinging to you, and determinately give up all, one by one, your friends, reputation, time, talents, property, temper, hopes; give up until you know there is not a thing left. Then, as a last work, ask Jesus to take you just as you are, and make you clean from all sin, so that your very body may be the 'temple of the Holy Spirit.' (See 1 Cor. 6: 19, etc.)

If there are any doubts in your minds whether Jesus will do his work now, read Romans 6th and 1st John 3d chapter, and other similar passages until your faith is strong. Also read Romans 7: 5, 6, and the 8th chapter of the same book. Then, with fervent prayer, come to God and ask him for full deliverance, and the gift of the Holy Spirit. (Lk. 11:13.)

Now, if at this time tumultuous feelings arise in your breast, never fear. Here is the foot of the cross. Stay there. Let your mind and heart rest there. Let Satan struggle, but do not leave that consecrated spot. Never mind your feelings. You have done all you can, and acted in harmony with the scriptures. If you feel bad that is the place to get relief. Stay there. If you feel blessed that is the place whereat you received the blessing, and ever will receive it. Stay there. And in all your work of life, amid temptations and trials, keep humble in mind at the foot of the cross.

Storms will come; but they will not disturb your peace, while at the cross you look to Jesus as your only Savior. Do not fight your own battles, but let Jesus fight for you and give you the victory. You are to overcome by faith. If you learn the lesson of trust but slowly, do not give up. It is the only way! You are like a picket soldier. If you see the enemy coming, fire an alarm, and run for camp. A host will marshal to meet him, the host of heaven, and you will be safe.

Follow the Spirit; grieve not the Spirit; quench not the Spirit; resist not the Spirit. 'When the enemy comes in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him.' Read Isaiah 26:3, 4. Believe it. Act it. Never mind the foes. Trust. Oh, bless God for a full and free salvation! Soon we shall see Jesus. We need salvation from sin now, to be saved from death then.

Jesus can take out of us all that Satan ever put in. And while the work of making pure may be done in a moment, to be 'kept' pure is a life long work, and requires continual watchfulness and prayer.

From S. C. Wellcome, Monticello, Minn.

I am always interested in reading the reports of our brethren who are laboring in the field, as well as letters from brethren and sisters scattered abroad who are looking for the blessed hope, and I presume others would like to hear from me, and of some of my past labors: and as I keep a daily journal of all my travels and labors, I would like to copy from it a few statistics: During 1872 my field extended east and west about 150 miles. I preached in ten counties, twenty-six towns, and thirty-nine houses in Minnesota. Spoke two hundred and twenty-two times, attended many prayer-meetings, and visited a great many families.

Traveled on railroads two thousand five hundred and thirty miles; with team, two thousand five hundred and seventy-five miles; on boat, one hundred and forty-six miles, and on foot one hundred miles, making five thousand three hundred and fifty-one miles. Baptized twenty two, and organized three Advent Christian churches; and since January first to the first of April, preached forty-nine times and organized two churches.

God has blessed me in my labors, and a number have been brought to Christ for salvation, and to look for his soon coming. Now I give these facts for the encouragement of others, for I have always believed that where there is a will to preach God's truth, there is a way opened. My health is not good, and I am a poor man, but God has given me health and strength to travel and labor, and put it into the hearts of friends to supply my wants, and has given me favor with the people where I have labored, although I have not failed to declare the whole counsel of God as far as I was able, and preached plain truth both doctrinal and practical; it has been done in weakness, but we are told that it is not by might or power, but by God's spirit that the work is accomplished. I find a deep interest all over the country to hear our views and the cry is constantly 'come over and help us.' Truly the harvest is great and the laborers few. Oh, the responsibilities that rest upon those whom God has called out to proclaim this last message to a dying world. He requires an entire consecration of all we have and are to him, and a willingness to go forth, taking our lives in our hands, enjoying the fullness of a Savior's love in our hearts, having a living and confiding faith in Christ as our Savior and guide. God's Word is sure, and his promises never fail. These are days of peril, but thank God, Israel's Deliverer is with us, and will be to the end.

Since Conference I have had a call to take charge of the church at Monticello, and feeling somewhat worn down with travel of the past year, I consented to come and labor with them for one year, if agreeable to myself and the church. I left Kasota for Monticello March 18. Arrived at Minneapolis at night, and stopped with Br. Samuel Thurber, who is doing a noble work for that people. God bless him and his family.

March 19, arrived at Monticello, which is about three miles south-west of Big Lake Station. It is a pleasant little town on the west bank of the Mississippi, fifty miles above St. Paul. It contains about six hundred inhabitants, all eastern people. They have three frame churches and a good school house. The Advent church was built four years ago, and is a fine commodious building. Br. Collins has been laboring faithfully with this people a portion of the time. Brn. E. Himes, Reed, Fassett, Raymond, and Miller have preached occasionally to them. Br. Collins is now moving to Norwood Park, near Chicago, where he intends to reside and enter upon his duties as Editor of THE TIMES. God bless and sustain him is the prayer of all who know him. Br. Miller, who resides here, is now away on a tour as evangelist through the State, holding quarterly meetings. May God bless his arduous labors, and may the brethren stay up his hands, not only by prayer, but with the 'ready cash,' that he may have wherewith to sustain his family, who so patiently bear all the trials and troubles that none but a traveling preacher's family can know. I am now the guest of Br. Chandler, and am visiting among the people, and attending meetings. Shall move my family here in a few days. Brethren everywhere, pray for us.

From N. N. Thompson, Rose Creek, Minn.

We receive THE TIMES, and it is truly a welcome visitor. Its pages are read with much interest. In looking over the list of letters from the dear waiting ones scattered abroad, we sometimes feel impressed that we too should contribute to the list by a word of cheer to those from whom we receive so much encouragement from week to week. I see in THE TIMES of April 1, I am made to say that we had never heard more than one or two sermons from preachers of our own precious faith. This I wish to correct as we have had many sermons by preaching brethren of our own faith and hope, whom the Lord has called to proclaim the gospel of the kingdom and the soon coming of Christ to gather his waiting ones home, when the living shall be changed from mortality to immortality, when shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory.

What I should have said was, that since we left St. Paul over a year ago, we had heard only one or two sermons by an Adventist preacher. Yet we have great reason to be thankful that we have THE TIMES and the Crisis every week, and the Bible Banner and the Christian once a month to preach to us and to those who will read in the neighborhood where we live.

Dear Brethren in Christ, in Minneapolis, West St. Paul, and Newport, with whom we have met oft around the table of the Lord, and to the waiting ones scattered abroad: Let us cling to Jesus, and clothe ourselves with the righteousness which is of Christ, that when he who is our Life shall appear, we may be found of him with a garment on that will admit us to the marriage feast of the Lamb. Dear brethren, by the grace of God we are striving to be found among those servants whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching. Pray for us that our faith fail not.

From J. C. Smith, Kansas.

Eld. J. C. Smith writes from Airzona, Kansas, March 23, pleading for help in that new field. A man of the right stamp could do much good there. He says:

I am satisfied a great work can be done. And you know, dear brother, just what we need. Within the last five weeks I have traveled upon horseback over five hundred miles in ten different counties and the Indian Territory; and the Lord has blessed abundantly. Doors are open and opening on every hand, and the calls come from near and far for help. The people are poor yet they are generous and hospitable, and there is a great inquiry after truth. Oh, that this vast field may be canvassed. I do pray the Lord may send some able man to this place. I am willing to do what I can; but the work is too great for one, or even two men, yet two can do more than one.

Now, brother, could you not come? and if you cannot, do you not know of some faithful brother that is able to divide the word of truth that would come and help?

From J. P. Russell, Waveland, Ind.

A long interval has elapsed since I addressed the brethren through THE TIMES. While I love the teachings as set forth in THE TIMES, and feel encouraged by the letters from the brethren scattered abroad; yet I have to deplore that the good state of Indiana, so highly favored in respect to civilization, arts, commerce, and culture should be found so far in the rear in regard to an understanding of the Bible and willingness to accept its plain and palpable teachings.

In your announcements from time to time of meetings, and appointments of our preaching brethren, it may be noticed that the states of Michigan, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, and the Pacific bound California, are all ahead of us here, and the inquiry of my mind is, why is this so; why such a small list of appointments in Indiana? Is it because less effort has been expended here, or is it owing to some peculiarity in us as a people?

As yet I have only had one opportunity of attending an Advent Christian Meeting, and that was the state conference meeting held at Colfax, Indiana, in August last. To me it was quite a feast and I long to see it repeated. I think I never saw a better site for a meeting of the kind, and an effort was made to secure a portion of land there for annual meetings until the Lord may come.

I do not know whether or not, this arrangement was effected; neither have I since heard how the little organized band of eighteen or twenty brethren is getting on. If some of the brethren there would give us through THE TIMES a sketch of their condition; how often they have preaching, and when, etc., I doubt not but it would interest and gratify others beside myself.

While in the neighborhood I enjoyed the hospitalities of a Br. Davis, who was strong in the faith and a reader of THE TIMES. I formed the acquaintance of Dr. Field, I only knew him before through the medium of his pen; he is strong in argument and in the Scriptures, and it was good to hear him answer the interrogations of opposers. His frank and genial manner, with a face expressive of good will to mankind still lingers in my memory. There too was Dr. Cass, earnest and impressive in his manner. He addressed a large audience on Lord's-day, the closing day of the meeting, the riveted attention of his listeners was proof of his ability, as well as the importance of the grand truths enunciated.

If I had space I would like to say something of Br. Andruss, and the tabernacle; of Br. Osburn and others.

I trust that the good seed sown there on that occasion may yet be manifest, and that the Indiana tent or tabernacle may be a success the present year, in the hands of the dear brethren who are proclaiming the last gospel message to a sinful world.

May the Lord strengthen us, and enable us to stand in the day of his coming, is my prayer.

From B. J. Goodwin, Nashua, Iowa.

I have not heard an Adventist preach since the Q. M. at Six Miles Grove, in Bremer Co., last fall. At that meeting Br. and Sr. Janes gave three discourses each which did us much good. One man who attended the meeting with us said on his way home if he had known that we had been having such meetings he would have been there before. But being destitute of preaching, THE TIMES gives us a nice repast every week. The letters from brn. and srs. scattered over the country give us a happy meeting as one after another speaks of the things pertaining to the kingdom which is about to be set up on the earth. And then there are the other departments, each giving food in due season, tending to strengthen and build us up in the faith once delivered to the saints, which faith we were told at the Q. M. was faith in what God said, and not in what tradition says he meant.

I am rejoiced to see so much interest in the "time" question, and that such a brotherly feeling is manifested by the brethren who are critically examining the dates and prophecies bearing on the subject. I hope the "uncertainties" will grow less in number and size, that soon all may see eye to eye, and be correctly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment on this subject. One Br. thinks the majority of Adventists do not favor the idea of publishing "definite time" arguments in the paper. I for one am in favor of publishing such arguments as can be backed up by testimony and not man's speculations. We may be reproached as false prophets, but if not we will be as "soul sleepers," "fanatics," "materialists," etc. We will undertake a hard task when we try to stop the mouths of scoffers.

From J. Powell, (the Welch Br.,) West Blue Mounds, Wis.

While I was musing concerning the time when earth's foundations were laid, when the morning stars in sweet concert sang, and all the sons of God shouted for joy, I learned there was then a kingdom prepared for man. "Let us make man....and let him have dominion over all the earth." (Gen. 1: 26.) Hence the original purpose of God concerning man and earth, was that Adam and all the obedient should inherit his kingdom upon the earth on condition of obedience; that Adam failed to comply with the condition and lost the glorious privilege of ruling the world in righteousness; that the second Adam had the same offer and upon the same conditions; that he proved loyal in every respect. "All my father's commandments have I kept." We will praise him forever, he invites the blessed of his father to come and share with him the kingdom prepared for them from the foundation of the world. It was proven by the apostle Paul that the seed allied with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob in the glorious promises, are Christ and all that are Christ's, (Gal. 3; 16–29,) for the promise that he (Abraham) should be heir of the world "was not to Abraham and his seed though the law but through the righteousness of faith." (Rom. 10: 12.) We must trace our relation to Abraham through Christ, when he shall come to gather all nations together, and establish the kingdom on the earth which shall be an everlasting kingdom.

We were troubled in mind a few months ago for fear our best visitor, THE TIMES, should suffer a downfall before the downfall of theological Babylon, but should that prove to be the case, many thousands all over the land would cry "Ichabod." Eli thought much of the ark of God, and when the messenger informed him that Israel had fled before their enemies and there had been a great slaughter and his two sons had fallen, he bore up under all these bad tidings, but when the messenger made mention of the ark of God he fell from his seat and died. THE TIMES is very dear to us, and you will find a mite enclosed to help support it.

If the Savior (the second Adam) had yielded to Satan as did the first, our case would have been a helpless one. Blessed be his name, he has overcome and is set down with his Father on his throne, and if we overcome we shall sit with him on his throne. The resurrection, the personal coming and reign of Christ in his glorious and eternal kingdom, the splendors of a regenerate earth, and the final and eternal judgment are almost obsolete doctrines in the theological teachings about here. They spiritualize everything, and then tell us the spirit is a simple, uncompounded, invisible, indivisible, immaterial, immortal nothing. If this does not try to annihilate the Holy Father and all his intelligent creatures I cannot see the use of the words.

From E. H. Barington, Genoa, Ill.

Five years ago Eld. H. G. McCullock and myself came to Genoa to hold meetings, by invitation from Eld. A. Crocker, who had just come into the Advent faith. He applied for the Methodist house the only chapel in the place, but was met with a frank refusal by the pastor who said to his flock "If you let this man in you let me out." The school house was opened to us and the people came out to hear. God blessed his word and several were convinced of the truth, among them Br. and Sr. Stephens who were confident at the first that we were in a great error, and they could convince us of it if we would listen, but God's word convinced them.

Others were awakened and set out anew for the kingdom. Arrangements were soon made to build a house of worship which was dedicated to God the following winter. The doors were thrown open and all of God's people of whatever name were invited to come in and worship the Lord of hosts. Much has been done by opposing minds to hinder the work, yet the Lord has blessed the feeble efforts of his people, and through the labors of Brn. McCullock, Adrian and others the church has enjoyed special seasons of refreshing. But while enjoying these rich feasts they have also realized the truthfulness of the Savior's words, "In the world ye shall have tribulation." Many things have come up to try our faith and some have fallen, but others say to-day that the trials of their faith is more ious than gold, and we have great reason joice in God. We sustain weekly prayer ings and our meetings at the chapel are attended, not only by the people but by pirit of God. We hope our next quar meeting to be held in May will prove a ing to this people, and we have been stly praying that God would revive his here, that a few more may be gathered will be ready for the coming of the Lord. e he tarries wait for him, but let us be al to maintain good works. Pray for us.

P. W. Hough, Mindora, Wis

thren and Sisters, I send you my Chris alution and greeting. I am still wait or the Son of God from heaven. My ls often ask me why we do not give up lea; I tell them because Jesus has not yet. If they expect us to give it up till they are surely mistaken, for God's peo ill proclaim the "gospel of the kingdom" r and louder till Gabriel's trumpet sounds we see Jesus coming in the clouds of n. Those who talk thus know but little value of our hope. It is firmer than illars of the earth. (1 Tim. 1: 1. Eph.) It purifies us. (John 3; 3.) It takes on eternal life. (Tit. 1 : 2.) It saves us. 8: 24.) It is therefore called the bless pe. (Tit. 2 : 13.) If we give it up pray will you give us in its place. A heav peyond the bounds of time and space?" we cannot accept for two reasons. 1st. ise we are begotten unto a lively hope by surrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, hat fadeth not away, reserved in heaven u who are kept by the power of God gh faith, ready to be revealed in the last (1 Pet. 1: 3, 5.) This is real but yours place, to speak plain. It is the very where Daniel says God will put all the l of our earth. (Dan. 2 : 35) We can't t this, we love terra firma.

You offer us an immaterial existence. me give your own author's definition soul is simple, uncompounded, imma not composed of matter or form (Buck). can we wish to become a mere nothing? s Jesus was a man, a real man and as he "first fruits" we have the promise of made like him. (1 John 3: 2. Phil. 3: Our hope is founded on the apostles rophets, Jesus Christ himself being iet corner stone We are willing to the cross, despising the shame for y that is set before us. We invite you perishing ones to go with us. Come ke a homestead in the kingdom; there l free from the curses; there is joy but row; life but no death; there is fruit ich month is fresh, water clear as crys erything you can desire. Come.

E. S. Burril, Ashland, Mich.

ke this opportunity to tell the brethren sters how the blessed truth is spreading se parts. A few weeks ago I attended ussion between Eld. Seymour and Eld by held at Newaygo, Mich Eld. Sey has thrown the light of God's Word this people which can never go out is opponent a minister of the United ren faith found that slander could not before the truth of God. The decis as in favor of the Adventists. It is a short time since I embraced these l truths. I now take THE TIMES and uly food for me. I thank God that by t continuance in well doing we may r glory, honor, immortality, and have ward, eternal life. Dear friends, let us the Word, prove all things, hold fast hich is good.

M. E. Ford, Carrollton Ill.

n still trying to live a Christian life. I hear any preaching except my paper, IMES. I don't know how I could get without it. I loan it to all who will nd get all the subscribers I can. Wish l do more to help the cause of my Sa ut we are poor in this world's goods, art is large enough to do a great deal. been an invalid for a number of years, m strong in the Lord, looking for and g that he will soon appear and take aried pilgrims to himself. I desire the s of all the brethren and sisters.

Milton Weaver, Oconto, Wis.

waiting for the second coming of the Jesus Christ, and I want to have my trimmed from every false doctrine of nd the oil of the law of God in my I was chosen class leader here about ars ago after a revival, and everything well till this winter, our minister was ed, and the present one being a strict r in the Methodist Discipline, felt it his see that all the officers were strict lists, therefore he rallied his forces and me out. I thank the Lord for it, now ree. I was afraid while with them to my mind, now I fear none of them. I old the class my views of gospel truth id that many of them are with me. If uld have a minister here who would ch the gospel of the kingdom, I believe d church might be established in this place. I pray God to send us the right man soon.

From G. G. Godfrey.

We organized our first church in this state the first of March. Though we commenced with but six members, yet we expect to add many more. It is located at Spring Creek, Johnson Co. We contemplate organizing in other localities soon. We are preaching to crowded houses and many are embracing the truth. We ask the forbearance of brethren that have been patiently waiting for help. Let us take courage, and praise the Lord for the prospect.

Prophetic Promises.

No intelligent person can carefully examine the Bible without being convinced that it bears the impress of the Mind that controls the destiny of mankind.

The history of the world is but a repetition of scenes that passed before the prophet's vision.

Babylon with her strong walls, her majestic columns, her hanging gardens, her unparalleled wealth, extent, and grandeur, has fulfilled the dreariest predictions of Isaiah. Nineveh, with her towers and collossal structures, has her history in the sad pictures of Nahum. The story of the Arabian nation is briefly told in the wonderfuly prophecy concerning Ishmael. The succession of the Persian, Grecian and Roman monarchies, the establishment of the Papal kingdom, the dispersion of the Jews and their wonderful unhappy destiny, exhibit the scope and accuracy of the prophet's vision. The ships of Tarshish have howled for Tyre, and the ocean sings above her a perpetual dirge. Capernaum, once exalted to heaven, is brought down to hell. The foxes have walked upon Zion. The prophecies of Jesus the world is fulfilling.—Independent.

A PERSON in high life once went to Sir Earldy Wilmot, at the time Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, under a feeling of great wrath and indignation at a real injury he had received from a person high in the political world, which he was determined to resent in the most effectual manner. After relating the particulars he asked Sir Earldy if he did not think it would be manly to resent it. "Yes" said that eminent man, "it will be manly to resent it; but it will be God-like to forgive it."

THERE is only too much 'sneaking idolatry of wealth. There are numbers of persons who are proud of the notice or the acquaintance of a rich man, who pay a kind of instinctive homage to him, and that quite apart from any consideration of how his riches were acquired; yet no one would gravely maintain that wealth in itself constitutes any title to respect.

GENEROSITY. during life is a very different thing from generosity in the hour of death; one proceeds from genuine liberality and benevolence, the other from pride or fear.—Horace Mann.

Our Young Folks.

The Lady-Bug and the Ant.

The lady-bug sat in the rose's heart
And smiled with pride and scorn,
As she saw a plain-dressed ant go by
With a heavy grain of corn.
So she drew the curtains of damask round,
And adjusted her silken vest,
Making her glass of a drop of dew
That lay in the rose's breast.

Then she laughed so loud that the ant looked up,
And seeing her haughty face,
Took no more notice, but traveled on
At the same industrious pace;
But a sudden blast of Autumn came
And rudely swept the ground.
And down the rose with the lady-bug bent,
And scattered its leaves around.

Then the houseless lady was much amazed,
For she knew not where to go,
And hoarse November's early blast
Had brought with it rain and snow,
Her wings were chilled, her feet were cold,
And she wished for the ant's warm cell;
And what she did in the wintry storms,
I'm sure I can not tell.

But the careful ant was in her nest,
With the little ones by her side;
She taught them all like herself to toil.
Nor mind the sneer of pride;
And I thought as I sat at the close of day
Eating my bread and milk,
It was wiser to work and improve the time,
Than to be idle and dress in silk.

"It Is Too Late Now, Pa."

During a series of religious meetings held in a school house of a small village, a very little girl became much interested for the salvation of her soul. Her father, a hater of holiness, who lived next door to the place of meeting and who had, at one time, solicited the prayers of Christians for himself, strictly forbade her again entering "the house of prayer."

The poor little girl was much oppressed, and knew not what to do, but obeyed father until the next meeting was nearly half through; then, slipping out without his knowledge, and getting through a hole in the back-yard fence, she hastily ran to the meeting. It was some time before her father missed her; but when he found her gone, he went immediately to the meeting, where she was on her knees with others for whom the people of God were praying. So enraged was he, that he went directly forward and took her in his arms to carry her from the place. As he raised her from her knees, she looked up with a heavenly smile, and said,

"It is too late now, pa; I have given my heart to the Savior."

This was too much for the hardened sinner. He, too, sank on his knees while God's children united in prayer; and very soon he found that Savior whom he had in vain attempted to shut out from his own and his daughter's heart.

Robbie "Washes Muslins.

BY OLIVE THORNE.

One warm morning Robbie heard mamma say, "I must wash muslins today." He remembered it, because when she did that, he always stayed in the kitchen and helped her, and he liked the kitchen because there were so many nice things in it to play with.

After breakfast, mamma put on his hat, and told him he might play in the yard. So he took his little cart and the kitchen shovel, and hauled dirt and played he was a rag man, for a long time.

All this time mamma was working in the kitchen, washing a great pile of embroidered muslin and lace collars, and undersleeves. It was long ago, before ladies wore linen cuffs and collars that can go into the wash like the other things.

Well, after washing, and starching, and "clapping," and drying in towels, mamma stood over the ironing table and ironed, and crimped, and frizzled, and "did up" the whole lot. It took all the morning, and after lunch she went to her room tired and warm, and laid down on the bed to rest.

Pretty soon Robbie came in, and went straight up to mamma's room. Mamma heard him, but she was almost asleep, and didn't want to open her eyes. Robbie played around quietly for some time. First he harnessed his horse. His "Kitty horse"—as he called her—was a gray rocking horse with the rockers broken off. She had seen a great deal of service, and there she stood—all ready harnessed—under the table in the corner. Robbie dragged her out, put her in the middle of the floor, and went on to fix his wagon. He put two chairs face to face—a little apart, with mamma's cutting board between—resting on the rounds of each.

"I dess I'll have some boxes to my 'spress waggon," he said to himself. So he went to the corner of the room where he kept his treasures, and got half a dozen strawberry boxes, which he had saved from the kitchen fire. These he piled up in his wagon, and started off as a pedler, crying:

"Etra-a-[illegible] [illegible]reez! Stra-a-a-w breez! only two [illegible]"

After a [illegible] [illegible]ed to think it was muddy in [illegible] [illegible]ts, so he went to the closet, brought out his little rubbers, and put them on to Kitty's forefeet. But that didn't look quite right, for kitty had two more feet. Back he went to the closet, and after hunting awhile found his winter overshoes, which he brought and put on Kitty's hind feet and droll enough she looked, I can tell you.

When he got tired of this, he looked around for something to do next. His eyes fell on the pile of muslins that mamma had laid on the table when she came up from the kitchen, and unfortunately he remembered what she had said in the morning. Now he had seen her wash muslins, and as he looked at them, an idea struck him.

"Poor mamma's tired!" he said, softly, glancing at her where she lay, half asleep. "I dess I'll wash 'em all clean."

The slop jar stood by the wash stand half full of water, all handy. The innocent little mischief climbed on a chair, grasped the whole lot in his two dirty little hands, got down, and plunged them into the slop jar! Then taking the soap from the wash-stand, he prepared to give them a good rubbing. But the splash of water aroused mamma.

"Robbie, what are you doing?" she asked, sleepily. "Noffin' much," said Robbie, "just washing. Ain't I a pretty good washer?"

"I guess so, but don't get wet," said mamma, lazily opening her eyes.

"Why, Robbie!" she said hastily, "you mustn't wash in the slop jar! What are you washing?"

"Washing muslins, all nice, but they wont come clean without a wringer."

Mamma sprang up, glanced at the table, and then at the dirty muss in the slop jar.

"Why, Robbie Rievor!" she exclaimed, hastily, "have you got my muslins in that dirty water?"

"Course I have," said Robbie, innocently drawing up a handful of draggled lace and muslin.

"I'm helpin' you, 'cause you're tired."

Well, what could she say, with the little face turned up so innocently to hers?

"Oh, Robbie! Robbie! You don't know how much trouble you've made mamma!" she said, hastily fishing the things out of the jar, and dropping them into the bowl of clean water. "Three more hours of work in the hot kitchen!"

Robbie did not understand yet, but he saw that mamma felt bad, and he was a tender-hearted little fellow. When she had left the unfortunate muslins in the bowl to soak, and sank into her rocking chair, discouraged, he came up to her with quivering lip:

"Mamma, you said you was going to wash 'em."

"Yes, dear," said mamma, putting her arm around him, and drawing him up to her, "but I did wash them while you were playing in the yard, and ironed them, and they were all ready to put away, and now I'll have to do it all over again. Arn't you sorry?"

"Yes, I'm sorry," said Robbie, penitently, adding, a moment after—as he remembered what cured all his troubles—"mamma, I've got a kiss for you. Don't you want some sorry kisses?"

Mamma took the sorry kisses, and the next time she did up muslins, she took care to put them away.—Christian Union.

List of Books, Tracts, etc., kept on sale at the Advent Christian Times office.

THE DESTINY OF MAN, by William Erwin. An excellent treatise by a member of the M. E. denomination that gives the Bible view in a radical style. 318 pp. nicely bound in cloth and gilt, $1,50 post paid.

MODERN SPIRITISM, its origin, character and tendencies, by C. C. Marston 56 pp. in paper $6,00 per hundred; $1.00 per dozen; 12 cts per do[illegible]

*COMPLETE WOKKS OF FLA-*vius Josephus; translated by William Whiston. 979 pp. in cloth, post paid $3.00

*THE MIDNIGHT CRY, and Her-*ald of the Morning, by N. H. Barbour. A complete Bible Chronology. 15 cts; $1.50 per dozen.

THE COMING EARTHQUAKE, By D. T. Taylor. 20 Cents.

*CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.—Unabridg-*ed. $5. by express. Condensed, sufficiently full for ordinary purposes, by mail, $1 75.

FEW SAVED; or, The Awful Condition of the World. 15c. By D. T. Taylor.

DICTIONARY OF THE HOLY BIBLE: with engravings, maps, and tables. $1 50. By mail, $1 75.

*BIBLE DICTIONARY: by Smith & Bar-*num. The best abridgment of Smith's larger work. Leather $6. cloth $5. By express.

ENGLISHMAN'S HEBREW Concordance, with English and Hebrew index. $12 by express.

*ENGLISHMAN'S GREEK CONCORD-*ance. With Greek and English index. $5 by express.

*ENGLISH-GREEK LEXICON. By Lid-*dell & Scott. A standard work. $7 50. by express.

THE NEW TESTAMENT. American Bible Union translation. 32mo. 25c.

THE SYRIAC-PESHITO version of the New Testament, by Murdock, $2 50, Post-paid.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES; or, A Glance at Christendom as it is. A valuable commentary upon 2 Tim. 3: 1. By H. L. Hastings. Paper, 50c. Postage, 5c.

THE THREE KINGDOMS; or, the Plan of Salvation. By T. M. Preble. 15c.

BIBLE VIEW OF THE PERSONALITY of God: and the Devil—his origin, personality, power and doom. By P. A. Smith. 15c.

THE TEN VIRGINS; or, Wisdom and Folly Contrasted. By T. M. Preble. 5c.

THE TWO ADAMS. "The first man of the earth earthy: the second man the Lord from heaven." By T. M. Preble. 7c.

*PRINTED NOTICES FOR PUBLIC meet-*ings. Blanks for writing date and place, and subject of discourse. 50c. a hundred.

T[illegible] [illegible]ST-DAY SABBATH; with a re-[illegible]rews' pretended History of the Sabbath [illegible]reble. 471 pp. $1.

[illegible]EREAN'S CASKET. A Collection of [illegible]es in various versions, on the most impo[illegible] [illegible]jects in the Bible, in sections; to which is added History, Statistics and Tables. Cloth, $2; leather 2 50

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION. By Wellcome and Good. 460 pp. $1 25 by mail.

A TREATISE ON MATTHEW, 24 and 25, 50c.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. 20c.

ISRAEL AND THE MILLENNIUM. 25c.

THE INQUIRER. Protestant or Catholic? Which? 10c. $5 a hundred.

CHURCH SPECTACLES. 5c. 40c. a dozen. The above seven works, by Eld. I. C. Wellcome, sent to one adress, post-paid, for $4 00.

LAST DAY TOKENS: by S. S. Brewer. 25 cts.

FUTURITY; by Wm. Sheldon. 20 cts.

THE INDEX BOOK MARK; 25c a dozen.

THE DOCTRINE OF IMMORTALITY; by James H. Whitmore. Nothing so good on this topic. Cloth $1, Paper, 50c. 3 copies for $1, post paid.

GOOD TIDINGS; a general view of Advent doctrine. By an Association of Authors. 426 pages. Cloth 65c, Paper 40s. Post paid.

*THE NATURE AND DURATION OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT: By Henry Con-*stable, Prebendary of Cork, 40c. Post paid.

THE FAITH OF ST. PAUL; showing it to have been neither Pharisaic nor Sadduceean, but Hebrew. By L. C. Collins. 15c.

*THE STATE OF THE DEAD; a Discus-*sion between N. Field, M. D. and T. P. Connolly, Esq. pp. 300. 50c. Post Paid.

THE JUBILEE HARP. $1. $9 a d zen.

HADES AND SHEOL; By L. C. Collins. The best published exposition of the parable of Dives and Lazarus. 15c.

*THE ADVENT MINSTREL; a choice collec-*tion of spiritual songs. Flexible cloth, 25c. $2.15 a dozen. Paper, 15c. $1.50 a dozen.

*HYMNS OF THE HARP; Cloth, 75c, Leath-*er $1.

HYMNS OF THE MORNING; A new and rich collection. Cloth 50c. Leather, 80c.

SCIENCE AND THE RESURRECTION; By D. T. Taylor. 5c.

PAULS EARNEST EXPECTATION and hope: (Phil. 1: 21: 26.) By O. R. Fassett. 5c.

EMPHATIC DIAGLOTT: containing the original Greek text of the New Testament with an interlineary word for word English translation and a new emphatic version. 884 pp. Cloth $4; leather back, $5. Postage, 16c.

New Works Just Published

And now in Press.

THE FAITH OF ST. PAUL:

BY ELD. L. C. COLLINS.

A book you want to read yourself; want your neighbor to read; that will silence opposition; will help those seeking light; will confirm those who have received the truth. Price post paid, 15 cents.

 Any book or tract treating upon the Destiny of man, the Soon coming of Christ. His Reign on the Renewed Earth, The Reward of the Righteous, and other kindred topics, can be had by addressing,

A. W. TUCKER, Business Agent,
25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

A BOOK ON SPIRITISM,

BY ELD. C. C. MARSTON.

"Modern Spiritism: an examination of its origin, character and tendency" will be read with interest and profit by all who desire an intelligent understanding of this subject. It shows the true nature and tendency of Spiritism by copious extracts and statements from its own most noted advocates, lecturers and mediums, and brings out in true and forcible colors the prominent features of Modern Spiritism. The work contains 56 pp. neatly bound in paper and will be sent post free for 12 cents; one dollar per dozen; six dollars per hundred.

 Any book or tract treating of the Destiny of man, Soon coming of Christ, His Reign on the Renewed Earth, the Reward of the Righteous, and kindred Bible topics, can be had by addressing,

A. W. TUCKER, Business Agent,
25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

HADES AND SHOEL,

AND THE

RICH MAN AND LAZARUS,

BY ELD. L. C. COLLINS.

This is the most complete and comprehensive exposition yet written, of the question involved in the Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus. It points out the teachings of Christ and his Apostles touching these disputed points in a manner that is at once convincing to the candid and unprejudiced mind seeking only the plain truths of the harmonized Scriptures.

It contains 48 pp. bound in paper, post paid for 15cts

 Any book or tract treating of the Destiny of man, Soon coming of Christ, His Reign on the Renewed Earth, the Reward of the Righteous, and kindred Bible topics, can be had by addressing,

A. W. TUCKER, Business Agent,
25 W. Lake St., Chicago.

Advent Christian Times.

CHICAGO, Tuesday, April 22, 1873.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN TIMES
is published by the
Western Advent Christian Publishing Association.
Business Office: 25 West Lake St., Chicago.
[Printing Presses located at Norwood Park.]

TERMS: { Two Dollars a Year. One Dollar for Six Months.
Sent Three Months on trial for Thirty-five cents.

The officers of the Association are as follows.
President—DARIUS MATHEWSON,
Vice President—DANIEL R. MANSFIELD,
Secretary—JOHN M. SNOOK,
Auditor—SIDNEY C. RAYMOND.
PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
L. C. COLLINS, L. H. DAVIS,
A. S. CALKINS.
EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.
M. W. SPENCER, H. G. McCULLOCH,
A. E. BABCOCK.

A. W. Tucker, Treasurer & Business Agent.

Don't Fail

To give your name and address full and complete every time you write.

Remember

That all Drafts, Money Orders, etc., payable to the Business Agent, A. W. Tucker.

☞ Address articles intended for publication in The Times to Eld. L. C. Collins, and all business communications to A. W. Tucker, 25 W. Lake Street, Chicago.

☞ Write Appointments, Notices, Communications for The Times, and business matters, each on separate pieces of paper.

☞ Do not fail to comply with the above suggestion.

Appointments, Notices, etc., must reach us by Thursday night to be in time for the next issue. Please remember this.

Business Department.

Association Meeting.

Whereas, at a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the W. A. C. P. Association held in Chicago, Ill., March 12, 1873, it was voted that an Association meeting be called to devise a plan for a change of basis of the Association, notice is hereby given that a special meeting of the Association for the above purpose will be held at Norwood Park, Cook county, Ill., June 10, 1873, commencing at 10 o'clock a. m.

D. R. Mansfield, } Committee
Frank Burr, } of
S. C. Raymond, } Appointment.

Notice is also hereby given that a General Conference will be held in connection with the above meeting at the same place. All conferences acting in harmony with the Association are requested to appoint delegates to this meeting. It is suggested that each conference be entitled to three delegates.

D. R. Mansfield, } Committee
Frank Burr, } of
S. C. Raymond, } Appointment.

The "Times" to Ministers.

We send The Times to ministers of any denomination for one dollar a year—half price. Those who wish to send the paper to preachers can take advantage of this fact.

Letters Received.

☞ All letters received at this office are acknowledged under this head. This acknowledgement is a receipt for whatever money the letter purports to contain. If the date on your paper is not changed within three weeks after your letter is thus receipted, write at once. See "Notes to Correspondents" for such answers to questions as may be given through the paper.

S C Welcome
C C Marston
G Moses
J P Besax
S Rosebrough
M E Ford
M C Aubel
J R Osgood
C B Church
C C Ramsay
A Bowerman
P L Wilson
R H Bateman
W Cowles
L Kerr
J F Nickerson
J R Carrell
S Overturf
D Clow
N Jewett
E D Hinman
J A Young
L N Snell
F G Williams
J Billings
J R Towle
J P Wilcox
J C Overstreet
M C Tice
M A Tibbetts
W West
W A Frazer
L Cole
D H Watkins
S W Bird
D O Bink
J Shuttleworth
T Bradley
J Pottle
J W Farrow
D V Burroughs
M Briggs
E W Tartt
M A Newcomb
G Lee
J H Drury
H Ingalls
P Holler
C Anderson
C C Stanbro
C C Marston 2
M R Harriman
P Hitchcock
D O Amos
M R Chandler
S K Gibson
C H Sawin
A E Knight
B F Workman
J Couch
M M Myers
E Cummings
L Z Lotspeich
J Raymond
T L Wright
N T Morse
H Hellems
D Clow
J M Snook
C L Ives
[illegible] T Adams
D T Taylor
T Gale
I C Welcome
W H Cleaveland
G Howard
R L Joiner
S Paine
J Lowry
E Lister
S S Walker
L D Brand
M Johnson
A S Cook
S B Mabey

Books and Tracts Sent by Mail.

J H Mills
O Smith
S T Whitney
M Walton
G Dawson
J Matts
H W B Myrick
S M Smith 2
T F Marshall
H A King
G T Adams
V Hunt
J Pennington
J H Mills
O Fields
J Hammel 2
Wm Geddis 2
V Hunt
R E B Curtis
G M Myres
M C Tice
W H Slack
F G Williams
O Kelley
O Combs
H H Tooker
H Palmer
E C Raymond
E A Smith
H Davis
W B Todd
E Anderson
A Farrow
J Bowers
H Kelley
Mrs D B Closman
J M May
J M Bliss
R C McLane
J Ellis
F M Sandusky
Philip Lintner
W E Hall
S C Baker
S R Bentley
Mrs M Newbury
Mrs L L Holmes
S J Dixon
A C Long
Mrs A Mead 2
L Belding
M Thompson
E S Burrell
M A Newman 4
S Rosebrough 2
A C Newley
N Morse
W West

The $3000 Fund.

To Free the Association from Debt.

CASH.

Previously Reported,	$142.00.
E K Chamberlain	2.00.
D V Burroughs	2.00.
Sam'l Tibbetts and Geo Wallace	5.00
J R Carrell	1.00.
A Bowerman	2.00.

PLEDGES.

Previously Reported,	$55.00.
Cyrus Adderson	100.00.

Post Office Address.

My P. O. Address will hereafter be Monticello, Wright Co., Minn. S. C. Welcome.

Publishing Fund.

Mrs Mary Brogg 50c; I. N. Grogan $1.00.

We can now fill all orders for Jubilee Harps. Our friends will not be troubled with delays occasioned by any neglect on our part. Please send in your orders.

Job Work.

We are now prepared to do all kinds of job work with despatch, and in a satisfactory manner. Envelopes, Letter-Heads, Note-Heads, Bill-Heads, Cards of all kinds, Circulars, etc., etc. Friends at a distance from printing offices, and often close to them, will do well to get our figures before ordering work elsewhere.

Book Notices, Etc.

A Valuable Work.

The Bible Doctrine of the soul. An answer to the question: Is the popular conception the soul that of Holy Scripture? By Chas. L. Ives, M. D., Professor of the theory and practice of Medicine in Yale College, 1873 For sale at this Office, 119 Pages, Price ——

